Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Four British passport holders were charged with treason—aiding a coup attempt—on 23 December in Freetown, and remain in custody there. Since 13 January this year a Sierra Leonean magistrate has been hearing evidence on the case in order to decide whether it should be referred to the High Court. The accused are being well treated: our high commission has full consular access.

Liberia

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about progress on disarmament and the establishment of a transitional Government in Liberia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We welcome the agreement of the signatories to the Cotonou agreement to establish a transitional national Government on 7 March and to commence the disarmament process.

We hope all aspects of the Cotonou agreement will now be fully implemented and that there will be no slippage in the timetable leading up to elections on 7 September.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if a date for elections has yet been set for Liberia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Under the terms of the Cotonou agreement, elections are planned for 7 September 1994.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much of the United Kingdom's contribution to the Liberia trust fund has now been spent; and on what.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Our contribution of $1 million is reserved for humanitarian purposes. None has yet been spent.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the strength of each of the national forces contributing to the Economic Community of West African States Monitoring Group initiative in Liberia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have no first-hand information but understand that the numbers are approximately as follows:

	Number
Nigeria	9,000
Ghana	1,000
Uganda	850
Tanzania	850
Sierra Leone	500
Gambia	[1]
Guinea	[1]

[1] Less than 100 each.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in the demobilisation of child soldiers in Liberia; and what contribution Britain is making to their rehabilitation.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The disarmament of Liberia's armed factions, to be followed by demobilisation, is now taking place. It is not yet possible to judge how many child soldiers there are in Liberia. We have this year provided £1·6 million, including £672,000 to the United Nations Trust Fund for Liberia, in humanitarian assistance for Liberia, principally in support of Save the Children Fund, UNICEF and Red Cross programmes. These programmes include provision for the tracing, demobilisation and rehabilitation of child soldiers.

TRANSPORT

Red Routes

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received covering the planned red routes in London.

Mr. Norris: We have received representations from Members of Parliament, London borough councillors, residents, businesses, community groups and others, mostly about the extent of the red route network and the detailed measures, which are the subject of consultation by the Traffic Director for London.

Ticket Purchase

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that passengers who are unable to buy a valid ticket on the London Underground are not unduly penalised or harassed by the authorities.

Mr. Norris: London Underground has introduced a range of measures to minimise instances in which a passenger wishing to buy a ticket cannot do so. On those occasions when a ticket cannot be obtained there will be no liability to pay a penalty fare. London Underground's revenue control officials will be able to check the status of the ticket machines at any station on the network at the relevant time. A clear and accessible appeal mechanism will be available for any passengers who feel they have been unfairly charged.

Penalty Fares

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the possible amount to be recovered by London Transport in penalty fares.

Mr. Norris: London Underground estimates that it will recover some £5 million in extra revenue in the first year after the introduction of penalty fares and some £8 million in each year thereafter.

Fare Evasion

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the loss of revenue to London Underground due to fraud and evasion of buying tickets in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Norris: London Underground estimates that, in the 1992-93 financial year, fraudulent travel cost it £30 million in lost revenue.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made regarding proposals to modify the Reading, Redhill, Tonbridge railway line to carry freight to the channel tunnel.

Mr. Freeman: The stretch between Redhill and Tonbridge has already been upgraded. Railtrack will be commencing its study of the route between Reading and Redhill next month.

Lorries (Emissions)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce measures requiring lorries to be fitted with devices to trap PM10 emissions.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 21 March 1994 at column 100, and to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside to a question from the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) at column 114.

The need for any further action will be judged in the light of the advice of the expert bodies referred to in my hon. Friend's reply.

Pollution

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce measures to provide for localised traffic bans to be imposed at times of high pollution incidence.

Mr. Key: The Government are not yet convinced of the cost-effectiveness of such measures. The introduction of catalytic converters on new petrol-engined cars through directive 91/441/EEC has resulted in overall reductions in regulated emissions of up to 80 per cent. from these vehicles. The next stage of emission reductions is now agreed for 1996-97 with a further enhanced package of measures under consideration for the year 2000. There are new emission limits for heavy-duty vehicles already agreed for the year 1996 with further requirements being considered for the year 2000. The result of these measures will be a considerable reduction in transport-related emissions until well into the next century.

Other measures that will benefit local air quality include encouraging the use of public transport, cycling and walking and, for the longer term, considering the possible benefits of congestion charging and the use of the planning system to reduce the need to travel by car. That last is addressed in the Government's recently published planning policy guidance note 13 on transport and land use planning.

Catalytic Converters

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to promote more widespread usage of catalytic converters on motor vehicles.

Mr. Key: None. Regulations are already in place which effectively require all new petrol-engined passenger cars to be fitted with catalytic converters, and which extend the requirement to new car-derived vans from 1 October 1994. An estimated 2.5 million cars are already fitted with the devices and, as the decade advances, there will be a natural progression towards an almost total catalyst-equipped fleet by the year 2003.

Diesel

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce measures to discourage the use of diesel as a motor engine fuel.

Mr. Key: A study on diesel vehicle emissions and urban air quality by the quality of urban air review group has recently reported and the Government have commissioned research from the energy technology support unit on the possible effects of increased diesel use. We are studying that research carefully. The Department of Health's Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants is expected to report on the possible health effects of particulates later this year.

We have already agreed tighter emissions limits for future diesel vehicles and we will consider whether further action is necessary in the light of expert advice.

Rail Privatisation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give a detailed breakdown of amounts and the recipients of the £1·6 million which will be spent by the Office of the Rail Regulator in the financial year 1994-95 on external consultants for rail privatisation.

Mr. Freeman: The regulator informs me that he expects to incur the majority of his planned expenditure on external consultants in obtaining advice on questions of economics, accounting, business efficiency and legal advice in connection with the exercise of his statutory functions relating to the approval of access agreements and the monitoring of licences. It is his intention to let contracts on the basis of fair and open competitive tendering.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give a detailed breakdown of the amounts and recipients of the £5·9 milion he estimates will be spent by the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising in the financial year 1994-95 on external consultants for rail privatisation.

Mr. Freeman: The Office of Passenger Rail Franchising will require a range of consultancy services in 1994-95, including legal, financial and accountancy advice. The expenditure required in respect of specific consultancy services will depend on the precise amount of work commissioned.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give a breakdown of amounts and recipients of the £12 million he estimates will be spent by his Department in the financial year 1994-95 on external consultants for rail privatisation.

Mr. Freeman: The £12 million expenditure for which the Department has made provision in the financial year 1994-95 is expected to cover advice on legal issues, merchant banking, accountancy and taxation, marketing, access charges, freight issues and information systems. The detailed breakdown will depend on how much work is commissioned in each area.

Goods Vehicle Operating Licences

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether local residents will continue to have the opportunity to object to the granting of a goods vehicle operating licence under the proposals set out in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill.

Mr. Norris: Yes.

Engine Emissions

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what evidence he has received about the impact of vehicle emissions on air quality in London.

Mr. Atkins: I have been asked to reply.

The London energy study carried out by the London Research Centre was published on 15 September 1993; it was funded by the European Commission, London Electricity plc and the Department of the Environment. One of the principal outputs of the study was a very detailed inventory of energy use, and the resultant emissions of pollutants to the London atmosphere covering almost 2,000 sq km in and around London. The table illustrates the contribution from road transport for each pollutant in 1991.

London 1991, road transport

	Percentage of total emissions
Carbon dioxide (as carbon)	33
Sulphur dioxide	22
Black smoke	96
Carbon monoxide	99
Nitrogen oxides	76
Volatile organic compounds	97

Rail Equipment Orders

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many orders were placed by British Rail in each financial year since 1990-91; what are the projections for 1994-95 and 1995-96 for (a) mainline passenger and freight locomotives, (b) mainline passenger coaches, (c) regional multiple units and (d) freight and goods wagons of all descriptions.

Mr. Freeman: Orders of traction and rolling stock by British Rail since 1990-91 were as follows:—

Financial year and description	Number
1990-91
Locomotives (Class 92)	30
Electric multiple units	111
Container wagons	700
1991-92
Locomotives (Class 92)	7
Electric multiple units	104
Diesel multiple units	63
Channel tunnel trainsets for North of London services	7
Automotive wagons	300
1992-93
Locomotives (Class 92)	9
Electric multiple units	188
Channel tunnel night stock	139
Intermodal wagons	450
1993-94
Electric multiple units	164

BR orders for subsequent years will be a matter for the new rolling stock leasing companies to be established on 1 April.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Disabled Employees

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many registered disabled people are employed in his Department; and what percentage this is of the total.

Sir John Wheeler: At 14 March 1994 there were 1,316 staff in the Northern Ireland civil service—4·4 per cent. of the service—who self reported a disability. Of these 470 —1·6 per cent. of the service—were, or had been, registered as disabled. In addition, 77 registered disabled people are working in the Northern Ireland civil service under the sheltered placement scheme.

There were no self-reported disabled in the home civil service.

European Funding

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funds have been allocated to Belfast Harbour Commissioners from the European regional development fund in each year since 1980.

Mr. Tim Smith: The information is as follows:

Year	Amount (£)
1980	1,770,000
1981	1,100,000
1982	630,000
1983	450,000
1984	1,425,000
1985	750,000
1986	3,100,000
1987	5,462,500
1988	1,812,500
1989	1,500,000
1990	7,434,843
1991	30,584,700
1992	3,532,000
1993	6,787,500

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funds have been allocated to Belfast airport from the European regional development fund in each year since 1980.

Mr. Tim Smith: The following European regional development fund grants have been committed to Belfast international airport since 1980:

1982	2·108
1988	0·999
1990	7·610
1992	3·524

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funds have been allocated to Belfast Harbour Commissioners by the European Commission from sources other than the European regional development fund in each year since 1980.

Mr. Tim Smith: No funds have been allocated to Belfast Harbour Commissioners by the European Commission from sources other than the European regional development fund.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what grants have been allocated to Belfast airport by the European Commission from sources other than the European regional development fund in each year since 1980.

Mr. Tim Smith: Since 1980, Belfast international airport has not received grants from any European Commission source other than the European regional development fund.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what proportion of capital projects is eligible for grant aid to public sector bodies in Northern Ireland under the European regional development fund;

(2) what proportion of a capital project is eligible for grant aid to private sector bodies in Northern Ireland under the European regional development fund.

Mr. Tim Smith: Public sector bodies may receive assistance of up to 75 per cent. of the total eligible expenditure for projects assisted by the European regional development fund. Private sector bodies may receive up to 50 per cent.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what study he has made on the impact of the privatisation of Belfast airport on the airport's eligibility for EU regional development grants.

Sir John Wheeler: Following the privatisation of Northern Ireland Airports Ltd. Belfast international airport will continue in principle to be eligible for assistance from the European regional development fund under Council Regulations 2082/93 article 17.

Police Complaints

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, when he will make available the report of the triennial review by the Independent Commission for Police Complaints for Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The report has been laid today. It reviews the working of articles 4 to 16 of the Police (Northern Ireland) Order 1987 during the period 1991-1994.

This is the second such report from the commission, which was established in 1988. I am glad to note that it is satisfied with the statutory procedures in the order for the handling of complaints from the public against individual police officers. However, it has made six recommendations which it considers will further enhance these procedures and, before reaching any decision on them, I intend consulting with the various interested bodies. I shall report to the House further in due course.

I am grateful to the commission for the considerable effort that has been put into the preparation of the report. The commission, by its fair and thorough handling of individual complaints, has already done much to improve the relationship between the police and the public it serves. Its triennial review is further evidence that it is concerned to ensure that the complaints system operates efficiently, effectively and impartially for all the parties involved and, most important, that it is seen to do so.

Security Statistics

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the security statistics, together with details of persons charged with terrorist-type offences and convictions for scheduled offences, for the period January to June 1993 will be available.

Sir John Wheeler: Security statistics for January to June 1993 are as shown. Statistics for earlier years can be obtained from the Library.

2. Breach of suspended sentences are included where the orders were made on scheduled offences. They are also included where the breach of conditions for non-scheduled offences are heard along with other scheduled offences.
3. Where a person has been convicted of more than one offence, only that offence which received the longest sentence is recorded in the statistics.
4. Unless where specifically stated (e.g. attempted murder or conspiracy to murder) attempts, conspiracy, aiding and abetting and involvement are included in the main offence.

Gaelic

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the total sums spent on promoting Irish Gaelic in each of the last 15 years.

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 21 March 1994]: Government funding for projects which involve the promotion of Irish is provided from a variety of sources. Figures prior to the year 1985-86 are not available. Total Government spending in each of the years from 1985-86 was as follows:

	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93

[1] From April 1990 responsibility for the origin of placenames project was transferred from the Department of the Environment to CCRU. Expenditure from 1990-91 is included in the CCRU figure.

These figures exclude Department of Education funding for the teaching of or through Irish.

Freephone and Freepost

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the use of freephone and freepost facilities currently being operated by his Department; how much these facilities are costing; for what purposes these facilities are being used; and how much his Department has spent on operating freephone and freepost facilities in each financial year since 1979.

Sir John Wheeler: Within the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments, freephone facilities are currently used for:

the confidential telephone, the purpose of which is to provide a means for those with information about terrorism to pass on what they know to the police;

the freeline social security service which provides information and advice on social security benefits; the benefit inquiry line which provides specific information about disability benefits and assistance with forms completion to disabled people.

Freephone facilities are also operated: by the citizens charter unit for providing information on the charter; by the industrial relations division for general inquiries or claims from members of the public concerning redundancy and employees' rights on the insolvency of an employer; by the industrial research and technology unit to provide an innovation inquiry point for Northern Ireland industry and the public and to provide an environmental inquiry point to assist local industry in seeking professional advice on a broad spectrum of environmental issues affecting their business; and by the Training and Employment Agency to increase awareness among people with disabilities of the support which the disablement advisory service of T and EA can offer.

The information requested regarding operating costs for freephone facilities is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, from information available the estimated cost of freephone facilities for the financial year 1992-93 was £41,112 and for 1993-94 to date is £46,455.

Freepost including the business reply service is currently used for the return of transfer procedure tests, inspectorate papers and statistical information on schools and teachers, for vehicle tax enforcement procedures, for licensing of taxi drivers, and to assist and encourage the return of information required in connection with the processing of claims, benefits and surveys.

The cost of operating freepost including the business reply service is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, from information available the estimated cost for 1992-93 was £426,302 and for 1993-94 to date is £360,359.

HEALTH

Hospitals, Liverpool

14. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she last visited Liverpool to discuss hospital provisions; and if she has plans for a further visit in the near future.

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State last visited Liverpool on 26 July last year, as part of her Mersey regional tour, and will be visiting the region again on 25 June 1994.

I visited Liverpool on 14 March.

GP Fundholders

15. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GP practices are now participating in the fundholding initiative in Trent region; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: There are 159 general practitioner practices in Trent covering 31 per cent. of the population.

27. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has received on the effect of the general practitioners fundholding initiative on patient care.

Dr. Mawhinney: Fundholders are leading the way in improving services for patients. Improvements include shorter waiting times, out-patient clinics in general practitioner surgeries, better discharge arrangements and more cost-effective prescribing.

Cottage Hospitals

16. Dr. Liam Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what priority she attaches to the role of cottage hospitals.

Mr. Sackville: Community hospitals have an important role to play in providing health services to meet certain local needs.

NHS Expenditure

17. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the gross domestic product was spent on the national health service in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what was the percentage in 1978.

Mr. Sackville: Total national health service expenditure in the United Kingdom was equivalent to 5·9 per cent. of the gross domestic product in 1993-94, compared with 4·7 per cent. in 1978-79.

Grimsby Health Trust

18. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how she proposes to ensure that the Grimsby health trust does not give priority to the patients of fundholding GPs.

Dr. Mawhinney: Joint guidance issued by the Department of Health and the medical profession in June 1991 clearly states that hospitals should not offer contracts to one purchaser that disadvantage the patients of another. However, hospitals may offer spare capacity to any purchaser who wishes to buy it, including fundholders.

Hospital Trusts

19. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will seek to improve the methods by which hospital trusts consult the public about planned or contemplated closures and reductions in hospitals and their related services.

Dr. Mawhinney: No, because it is district health authorities which are required to consult the relevant community health council not trusts.

Charing Cross Hospital

20. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to make a statement about the future of Charing Cross hospital.

Dr. Mawhinney: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State yesterday announced that she has approved the application by Hammersmith, Charing Cross, Queen Charlotte's and Acton hospitals to become a single national health service trust. The new trust will come into being from 1 April.

Health Education Authority

21. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received regarding the Health Education Authority.

Mr. Sackville: Representations are received from time to time about various aspects of the Health Education Authority's work. Recently these have included an early-day motion tabled by my hon. Friend and others about "The Best Sex Guide".

Pharmacists

22. Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received regarding the funding settlement with pharmacists.

Dr. Mawhinney: A remuneration offer for 1994-95 was made to the pharmacists' representatives on 14 March. This took account of their recent representations to us.

Prescriptions

23. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescriptions were issued last year; and what was their total cost to the NHS.

Dr. Mawhinney: In 1992-93, general practitioners in England wrote 432 million prescriptions at a cost, including dispensing fees, of £3,303 million.

Elderly People (Health Care)

24. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the provision of health care under the NHS for elderly people who have suffered a stroke and are incontinent.

Mr. Bowis: The national health service is responsible for the provision of health care for all who are clinically assessed as needing it.

GP Drug Purchases

25. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the current guidelines laid down by her Department on the purchase of drugs used by general practitioners in the NHS.

Dr. Mawhinney: The vast majority of drugs prescribed by general practitioners are purchased and dispensed by community pharmacists. In those cases where GPs purchase drugs to dispense or administer themselves they do so as independent contractors. They are reimbursed for these at discounted rates against the national drug tariff.

NHS Trusts

26. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS trusts are now in operation in the Wessex region; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: From 1 April 1994 there will be 26 national health service trusts operational in the Wessex region. All hospitals in the Wessex region will operate as trusts from 1 April 1994.

Paediatric Nurses

28. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paediatric nurses there are in England; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: In September 1992 there were 11,190 whole-time equivalent nurses working within paediatrics, compared with 9,660 in 1989, an increase of 15·8 per cent.

Site and Services Review, Sunderland

29. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ask the Sunderland health authority to make available the Ceri Davis site and services review; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The work undertaken in Sunderland by the independent team led by Ceri Davis was at the invitation of the Sunderland city hospitals unit. It is therefore for that authority to decide whether and to whom to make the report available. The district health authority will consult widely on any substantial proposed changes in service.

Acute Psychiatric Beds

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to review the provision and geographical spread of acute psychiatric beds in the NHS.

Mr. Bowis: The provision of psychiatric services is a matter for each district health authority. The health advisory service is currently reviewing district purchasing plans. The mental health task force has started work on the position in London.

Consultants

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the members of the organisation which recommends merit awards for consultants; and if she will place in the Library the detailed criteria underlying these awards and the remuneration which follows for each category.

Dr. Mawhinney: The members of the Advisory Committee on Distinction Awards are as listed. The criteria for awards are set out in the leaflet "Consultants' Distinction Awards", a copy of which is available in the Library. The value of each of the four levels of awards effective from 1 April 1994 is as follows: A+-£48,605, A-£35,815, B-£20,465, C-£10,235.

Epilepsy

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice her Department gives on the long-term care of people suffering from different types of epilepsy.

Mr. Bowis: The long-term care of people with epilepsy is a professional matter for individual clinicians. The level of service available to meet the needs of sufferers is for determination by health authorities in the light of local priorities and available resources.

In 1993, the journal "Seizure" published a document on "Epilepsy Needs" drawn up by specialists in this field. This contains a helpful overview and epidemiology and describes the range of services available.

We have made funding available to the British Epilepsy Association/David Lewis centre to set up a model epilepsy clinic.

Brain Tumours

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many brain tumours have been diagnosed in children aged (a) five years or younger, (b) between five and 10 years, and (c) aged between 10 and 15 years within each regional health authority area in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Sackville: The available information will be placed in the Library.

Community Care

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the total increase in overall public expenditure on community care in each year since 1991.

Mr. Bowis: Total figures for public expenditure on community care for years since 1991 are not yet available.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will outline her Department's policy on the care and treatment of drug users under the community care programme.

Mr. Bowis: The Government attach a high priority to the establishment of effective community-based care services for those who misuse drugs, for which local authorities were given responsibility from April 1993.

Independent monitoring of these new arrangements shows that services are becoming more diverse and responsive to local needs. The Government will continue to keep the provision of such services under review, within general arrangements for monitoring community care.

Marriages

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people who divorced in each of the last three years got married at (a) 16, (b) 17 and (c) 18 years of age.

Mr. Sackville: The numbers of men and women who divorced in the last three years for which information is available, and who were aged 16, 17 and 18 when they married, are shown in the table.

England and Wales

Age at marriage	Year of divorce (obtaining decree absolute) 1989	1990	1991
Husbands
16	171	167	158
17	1,029	970	931
18	4,029	3,780	3,853
Wives
16	2,596	2,363	2,244
17	6,606	6,165	6,121
18	14,766	14,321	14,190

Schizophrenia

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what effect she takes of research into the targeting of mental health services in respect of people with schizophrenia in developing her policies; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: Assuming the hon. Lady means "account" rather than "effect" in her question, I can assure her that research studies commissioned by the Department or drawn to its attention are taken into account when formulating policy.

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by her and her ministerial colleagues in February.

Mr. Sackville: Some 1,813 letters were received and 1,652 responses sent.

Drugs

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what requirements for secure storage of drugs and equipment form part of her Department's agreements with pharmacists; what discussions she has had with pharmacists on pharmacy stores security in the last 12 months; and what allowance is taken in the payment structure for pharmacy services of either local or general security problems.

Dr. Mawhinney: The requirements for the handling and storage of controlled drugs are contained in the Misuse of Drugs (Safe Custody) Regulations 1973, as amended, which are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department. For community pharmacists these regulations mean that, so far as circumstances permit, controlled drugs, with certain exceptions, must be kept in a locked safe or container. For non-controlled drugs, there are no statutory requirements. However, the code of ethics of the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain sets out the practice standards with which pharmacists must comply. These include exercising a proper degree of professional care and control over the drugs and equipment in pharmacists' possession. Practice expenses are reflected in the global sum of money available for pharmacists' pay.

Contractual Incentives

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contractual incentives Doncaster royal infirmary, Mexborough Montagu NHS trust hospital, and Doncaster Healthcare NHS trust offer to general practitioner fundholders within Trent regional health authority and Doncaster health authority to secure contracts for treating their patients; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions in the last five years she has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. Sackville: None. The Department answers parliamentary questions on the basis set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers".

Dentistry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she takes to monitor variations in quality between private dental treatments and those dental treatments offered under the national health service; and what are her findings;

(2) what plans she has to eliminate differences in quality between the national health service dental service and the services of the private sector.

Dr. Mawhinney: Private dental treatment is a matter for the dentist and the patient. The Department does not monitor standards in the private sector but there is no reason to believe they are below those generally achieved in the national health service. The national health service general dental service provides registered patients with all the care and treatment necessary to secure and maintain their oral health. The dental reference service ensures that the quality of general dental services is maintained.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which areas of Sir Kenneth Bloomfield's review of the dental remuneration system she has implemented since its publication in 1992;

(2) what plans she has to eliminate the inefficiencies of the NHS dental service.

Dr. Mawhinney: In line with his terms of reference, Sir Kenneth Bloomfield's report identified options for reform of the dental remuneration system rather than specific recommendations. Our proposals will be announced shortly.

Orthopaedics

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has had from orthopaedic surgeons about the provision of bone-related tissue from (a) living patients undergoing hip replacement and other operations and (b) cadavers, for operations involving the build-up of the skeletal structure in patients undergoing knee replacement and other operations.

Mr. Sackville: None recently.

THORP

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what calculation she has made of the additional resources that will be required by the national health service as a consequence of the operation of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield.

Mr. Sackville: None. The annual risk attributable to individuals from radiation from Sellafield has been estimated as "vanishingly small". This was set out in the reply I gave the hon. Member on 11 January, Official Report, column 117. We have not attempted to quantify the costs which might occur as a result of conventional industrial accidents occurring on site; this assessment is not normally made for industrial operations at any site.

Special Transitional Grant

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to monitor the local impact of variations in levels of special transitional grant; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: We have in hand a wide-ranging programme of monitoring and evaluation looking at all aspects of the new community care arrangements. Resources for community care came from the personal social services/standard spending assessment, from the special transitional grant and from various specific grants.

Performance Pay

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much performance-related pay has been paid to health service employees in each year since it was introduced, by region and district.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally.

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made towards the abolition of regional health authorities; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: As a first step towards the new structure announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 21 October last year, the number of regional health authorities will be reduced from 14 to eight on 1 April 1994. From the same date eight regional offices of the management executive will be established, sharing common boundaries with the new regional health authorities. Legislation to abolish regional health authorities altogether will be introduced at the earliest opportunity.

Asthma

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is her estimate of the prevalence of asthma in school children;

(2) what steps she intends to take to increase awareness and reporting of childhood asthma.

Mr. Sackville: The recently published "Health Care Needs Assessment No. 5, Lower Respiratory Disease Research Review", a copy of which will be placed in the Library, and which is funded by the Department of Health, states that the prevalence of asthma in children aged nought to 14 is 12 to 15 per cent.

The Department plans to include questions on asthma in children, from the age of two upwards, in the health survey for England in 1995. Last July, the Department launched the chronic disease management programme, which is an organised programme of care run by general practitioners for people with asthma. General practitioner practices are collecting information on asthma. This information will in time show both the incidence and prevalence of asthma.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice she gives to parents of asthmatic children living in urban areas regarding (a) air quality and (b) passive smoking.

Mr. Sackville: Information on air quality and relevant general advice to those suffering from respiratory conditions is available continuously to the public on the freephone helpline: 0800 556677. Any individual can obtain medical advice specific to his condition from his general practitioner.

The links between passive smoking and asthmatic children were discussed in the reply I gave the hon. Member on 18 March, Official Report, columns 886-87. Our advice for parents of asthmatic children is to protect their children by not allowing them to breathe in tobacco smoke.

Accident and Emergency Statistics

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list, by region, the number of new accident and emergency cases for each month since November 1992.

Mr. Sackville: Information is not collected on a monthly basis for new accident and emergency attendances. The most recent annual figures are shown in the table.

New accident and emergency cases, NHS hospitals, England—by region 1992-93

Out-patients

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will publish a table showing for each region the percentage of patients entering accident and emergency departments who were seen and assessed for treatment within five minutes of their arrival in the last period for which figures are available;

(2) what proportion of patients in each English health region were seen within 30 minutes of their out-patient appointment in the last period for which figures are available.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is shown in the table.

Regional performance as at 31 December 1993

	Immediate assessment in accident and emergency departments Percentage	30 minutes waiting time in outpatient clinics Percentage
Northern	86	87

Prostate Cancer Screening

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to improve prostate cancer screening for men.

Mr. Sackville: We have no plans currently to introduce a national NHS screening programme for prostate cancer. The key aim of any screening programme must be to secure a demonstrable improvement in health by increasing length of life and enhancing quality of life. There is, as yet, no evidence that this would be achieved in relation to prostate cancer. The Department is aware of the need to assess the value of available techniques for the early detection of prostate cancer. Several research projects are currently being undertaken locally.

Pollution

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will estimate the number of premature deaths through lung disease caused annually by pollution from vehicle emissions;

(2) what assessment she has made of the impact of vehicle emissions on incidence of (a) leukaemia, (b) kidney cancer, (c) brain tumours, (d) chronic bronchitis, (e) emphysema, (f) asthma, (g) atherosclerosis and (h) heart failure.

Mr. Sackville: A number of estimates of deaths related to vehicle emissions have been made. Many assumptions are implicit in these and some use data from abroad. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) on 21 March, Official Report, c. 71-72 which sets out the action taken to assess the health effects of vehicle emissions.

Abortion

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by regional health authority the number of pregnancies that have been terminated by request by ethnicity for each of the last four years for which she has figures available.

Mr. Sackville: A pregnancy may be terminated only if two registered medical practitioners are of the opinion, formed in good faith, that an abortion is justified under one or more of the grounds specified in the Abortion Act 1967, as amended. The abortion notification sent to the chief medical officer does not include ethnic information.

Head Injuries (Treatment)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospitals in London employ multi-disciplinary rehabilitation teams for treating local patients who have suffered severe head injuries.

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) on 8 March, Official Report, c. 161.

Luton and Dunstable Trust Hospital

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement regarding the resignation of Mrs. Avril Dongworth, chief executive at Luton and Dunstable trust hospital.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for the Luton and Dunstable trust. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. David Young, the chairman, for details.

Consultant Clinics

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to prohibit consultants being paid for taking clinics in general practitioner fundholders' surgeries.

Dr. Mawhinney: No.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number and proportion of (i) men and (ii) women who will see improvements in their pension entitlements as a result of home responsibilities protection in (1) 2000, (2) 2010, (3) 2025 and (4) 2035.

Mr. Hague: The number of women, as estimated by the Government Actuary's Department, who would benefit from extending home responsibilities protection to the state earnings-related pension is shown in the table. Also shown is the percentage of female pensioners who would be affected. Data are not held which would allow reliable similar figures to be produced for men; however, the numbers are likely to be small.

2000	0·1	1
2010	1·0	15
2025	3·0	50
2035	4·0	55

Note:
The above figures for 2025 and 2035 assume state pension age of 65 for women.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will ensure that increases in pensions are made concurrently with increases in VAT charges at the beginning of the financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: In compliance with the statutory obligation imposed by section 150 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992, pensions will be increased in the week beginning with the first Monday in the new tax year.

Housing Benefit

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by year for the last four years how much has been paid in housing benefit in London; and to how many households in Lewisham this benefit was paid.

Mr. Hague: The information is in the table.

Expenditure in London (£000)[1]	821,400	1,061,950	1,468,250	1,686,370
Housing benefit caseload in Lewisham[2]	28,700	31,400	34,400	33,000

Data sources:
Housing benefit, benefit subsidy claims and the housing revenue account claims and the housing benefit management information system quarterly caseload counts.
[1] The information has been rounded to the nearest £10,000.
[2] The numbers of households are averages of the four quarters and are rounded to the nearest hundred.

Netherlands Report

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 9 March, Official Report, columns 217-18, if he will obtain a copy of the Netherlands report on social security and poverty as global issues, already published in preparation for the world summit on social developments planned to take place in Copenhagen in March 1995; and if he will consider preparing a similar contribution for the world summit to add to the contributions of other members of the European Union.

Mr. Hague: No such report has been prepared by the Dutch Government. However, I understand that the Netherlands National Advisory Council on Development Co-operation held a conference on this issue as part of its 30th anniversary celebrations. The report of the conference is not due to be available until May 1994. Information on all relevant issues has already been provided to the United Nations in preparation for the world summit on social development.

Statutory Maternity Pay

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes are planned to the system of statutory maternity pay.

Mr. Hague: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Erewash (Mrs. Knight) on 8 March at columns 139-40.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of whether the weather station at Finningley used to assess cold weather payments covers too wide an area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: All weather station coverage for the cold weather payments scheme is founded on the expert advice of the meteorological office. This is kept under regular review and refinements made. Current advice from the meteorological office is that the Finningley coverage is sensible and meteorologically sound.

Income Support

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate, on the basis of the case 2 assumptions used in "The Growth of Social Security" and the projections of expenditure on different benefits derived from these assumptions, the proportion of (a) all and (b) newly retired pensioners who will be in receipt of income support in 1999-2000, in 2020 and in 2035.

Mr. Hague: On the basis of case 2 assumptions used in "The Growth of Social Security", approximately 13 per cent. of all pensioners in 1999-2000 would be expected to be in receipt of income support. Similar estimates for newly retired pensioners and for 2020 and 2035 are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Sources: The 1994 social security departmental report and the social security publication "The Growth of Social Security 1993".

Benefit Tourism

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the outcome of the representations he has received from the Government of the Irish Republic on benefit tourism.

Mr. Hague: Proposals to tackle benefit tourism are currently before the Social Security Advisory Committee. Its representations, and all others, will be taken into account before regulations are laid before Parliament.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals have been lodged with the Child Support Agency, Falkirk against assessments of parental contributions since October 1993; how many have been heard; how many have been successful; and what is the average time in having an appeal determined.

Mr. Scott: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on how many occasions in the last five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. Lilley: My team of Ministers and I answer parliamentary questions on the basis set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers", as have our predecessors. We also seek to comply with the Speaker's guidance on the need for brief answers to oral questions.

Child Benefit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place the range of most up-to-date application forms and guidance notes for child benefit in the Library, together with the application forms for that benefit that are being piloted for future general use, and the previous application forms and guidance notes that have been in use generally, or experimentally, within the last 12 months.

Mr. Hague: They have been placed in the Library.

Service Widows (Pensions)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what considerations underlie the decision to restrict the pensions of widows of service men who died from smoking or drink-related diseases.

Mr. Hague: A war widow's pension is paid when the death of a service man or former service man is due to or hastened by service. It has been the long-standing policy of successive Governments that only where a severely disabling mental condition, which is itself due to service, renders the individual incapable of exercising personal choice should the effects of tobacco or alcohol be regarded as due to service. Amending legislation, which comes into force on 28 March, is intended to clarify the law in this respect. It will not affect the entitlement of any existing pensioner.

Pensioner Income

Mr. Deva: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much pensioners' real average income has risen since 1979.

Mr. Hague: The information is in the table:

Percentage increase in pensioners' total average real income between 1979 and 1990-91

All pensioners	42	54
Pensioner couples	39	53
Single pensioners	39	49

Notes:

1. Estimates derive from the Family Expenditure Survey. 1990-91 is the latest year for which information is available.
2. "All pensioners" includes single people over pension age and couples where the husband is over pension age.

Pension Entitlements

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has of the number of women who fail to claim or receive a retirement pension to which they are entitled at the age of 60 years; what estimate he has of the total amount of money unclaimed by such women; and what plans he has to enable women to make backdated claims for the entire period for which they have a pension entitlement.

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested.

The only available information relates to the number of women who, on claiming retirement pension, receive increments because they deferred, either intentionally or unintentionally, claiming a pension based on their own contributions, to which they would have been entitled at age 60.

It is estimated that at March 1993 approximately 29,000 women aged 60 to 63 were receiving increments to a pension based on their own contributions. Estimates for women aged 64 or over receiving pension increments are not relevant because the increments may relate to periods prior to October 1989 when pension entitlement was precluded by the earnings rule rather than by a failure to claim.

We have no plans to change the existing provisions governing the time limit for claiming retirement pension and the maximum period for which arrears can be paid.

Malaysian Airline

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the dates Ministers, or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to his Department.

Mr. Hague: Since April 1993 no Minister or official has travelled on MAS. Prior to that date information is not available.

Prosecutions

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many prosecutions were instigated by his Department in the financial years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93 by nature of offence; by the number of convictions; by the number of custodial sentences; and by the financial penalties involved.

Mr. Hague: The available information is as follows:

Number of prosecutions

	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93
Fraud prosecutions instituted by Benefits Agency	7,917	[1]4,385	5,821
Prosecutions instituted by the Contributions Agency	419	233	81
Total	8,330	4,612	5,895

[1] Figures for organised fraud prosecutions are not available for this year.

Notes:

1. Prosecutions for liable relatives sections, the predecessor of the Child Support Agency, were as follows:
   a. 11 people were prosecuted in 1990.
   b. 4 people were prosecuted in 1991.
   No figures are available for 1992.
2. We do not record prosecutions by nature of the offence.

In 1992-93, 98 per cent. of benefit fraud prosecutions instigated by the Benefits Agency were successful. No similar record of convictions is held for the years 1990-91 or for 1991-92. No records are held for the Contributions Agency.

The figures for convictions by the liable relatives section are:

a. 1 person was convicted in 1990:
b. 4 people were convicted in 1991.

The figures available for custodial sentences are for benefit fraud in 1992-93. There were 33 custodial sentences for benefit fraud prosecutions instituted by the Benefits Agency in this year. Figures are not available for previous years. No records are held for the Contributions Agency or for liable relative sections.

Statistics for financial penalties are not available for 1990-91 or 1991-92. The only statistics available are for Benefits Agency fraud in the year 1992-93:

Compensation awarded	1,084,974

Destruction of Records

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how long after a benefit case goes dormant clerical records, cashed girocheques and order book foils are kept before they are destroyed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: The administration of benefit records is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. he will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from M. Bichard to Mr. David Porter, dated 21 March 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the storage times for clerical records, cashed girocheques and order book foils prior to destruction.

Clerical records are normally kept for a minimum of eighteen months after the cessation of the claim before they are destroyed.

Girocheques are destroyed six months after encashment. Since November 1992 they have been put onto microfilm before destruction, and the microfilms are kept for between six and seven years.

Order book foils are stored for twelve months after encashment before they are destroyed.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wheelchairs

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee if he has any new proposals to provide access for wheelchair-bound strangers to observe debates in the House.

Mr. Ray Powell: The question of access by wheelchair-bound visitors to proceedings in the Chamber and Committees will be included in the Committee's forthcoming inquiry into access arrangements for the disabled. If the hon. Member has any suggestion to make in this respect he is invited to write to the Committee.

Upper Waiting Hall Exhibitions

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he will review the system of allocating the Upper Waiting Hall for exhibitions so that hon. Members who win in the ballot cannot enter again in the life of that Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The arrangements for exhibitions in the Upper Waiting Hall were last considered by the Administration Committee on 10 March 1993.

I will ensure that the hon. Member's proposal is considered by the Committee at a future meeting.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the National Infertility Awareness Campaign to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 20 June to Friday 24 June.

Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the work of the Samaritans to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 18 July to Friday 22 July.

Sir George Gardiner: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to ICSTIS—the Independent Committee of the Supervision of Standards of Telephone Information Services—to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition on the work of the Independent Committee for the Supervision of Standards for Telecommunications and Information Systems to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 4 July to Friday 8 July.

Foyer Exhibitions

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee how many hon. Members have (a) entered and (b) been successful in ballots for foyer exhibitions in each of the last five years.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The information requested is as follows:

	Number of hon. Members entered ballot	Number of hon. Members successful in ballot
1990	69	35
1991	76	33
1992	57	29
1993	89	33
[1]1994	83	22

EMPLOYMENT

Training

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the numbers of accidents on employment training/training for work, broken down by fatal, major and minor for the latest available three-month period, shown by region; and how many ET/training for work providers had contracts terminated (a) in that period and (b) in the three preceding months for reasons of inadequate health and safety.

Miss Widdecombe: The following table gives the latest available training for work accident figures for the quarter October to December 1993.

Region	Fatal	Major	Minor
South-East	0	2	9
London	0	0	3
Eastern	0	0	4
South-West	0	1	7
West Midlands	0	1	9
East Midlands	0	0	7
Yorkshire and Humberside	0	1	23
North-West	0	3	16
Northern	0	1	11
Scottish Enterprise	0	2	14
Welsh Office	0	2	4
National Totals	0	13	107

Notes:

1. Employment Department figures for training for work participants have been compiled on a similar basis to those for employees by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE). However, the Employment Department's figures also include a number of accidents to trainees in educational establishments, and road traffic accidents, which would not have been reportable to HSE for employees.
2. Major and minor injuries are classified according to the severity criteria laid down in the Reporting of Injuries Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985.

Information on training for work provider contracts terminated by training and enterprise councils and local enterprise companies for reasons of inadequate health and safety is not held centrally.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest number of people who are in training but are not included in figures for people in work.

Miss Widdecombe: In Great Britain in December 1993, there were estimated to be 7,600 participants on Government training programmes who were not included in the count of the work force in employment.

Unemployment, Westbury

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current rate of unemployment in the Westbury travel-to-work area.

Miss Widdecombe: Westbury is part of the Trowbridge and Frome travel-to-work area. In February 1994 the rate of claimant unemployment was 8·1 per cent. —a fall of 1·5 percentage points on a year ago.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time jobs there were in the economy in (i) the latest quarter for which figures are available, (ii) the equivalent quarter 12 months previously and (iii) two years ago.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is shown in the following table:

Workforce in employment: Great Britain (seasonally adjusted)

	Thousands
	Full-time	Part-time
December 1991	18,405	6,640
December 1992	17,538	6,779
December 1993	17,438	6,940

Tourism

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the latest figures for the number of people employed in the tourism industry; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: In December 1993, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 1,436,400 employees in employment in tourism-related industries in Great Britain.

Youth Unemployment

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what new initiatives he plans to reduce youth unemployment in London.

Miss Widdecombe: The local Employment Service and training and enterprise councils deliver a wide range of employment, enterprise and training programmes to help young people in the area find the best and quickest route to employment. The Government intend to improve the range of opportunities available to school leavers still further in London and elsewhere by introducing modern apprenticeships in 1995.

Working Hours

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many hours were worked in the economy in each of the last four quarters.

Miss Widdecombe: Estimates from the Labour Force Survey of the total number of hours worked by employees and the self-employed, in each of the last four quarters, are given in the following table:

Total hours worked by all employees and self-employed Great Britain—not seasonally adjusted

Quarter	Total hours (billions)
Winter 1992-93	10·1
Spring 1993	10·6
Summer 1993	10·3
Autumn 1993	10·8

Source: Labour Force Survey.

Hotels and Catering

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the latest figures for the number of people employed in (a) the hotel industry and (b) the catering industry.

Miss Widdecombe: In December 1993, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 231,000 employees in employment in the hotel industry, Standard Industrial Classification 665, and 895,000 in the catering industry, Standard Industrial Classification 661-664, in Great Britain.

Skill Centres

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the record of the skill centres in London since privatisation.

Miss Widdecombe: The Department has not contracted with the former skill centres since privatisation. Former skill centres which deliver Government training programmes under contract to training and enterprise councils are subject to the same financial and quality assurance checks as other providers. Therefore, no specific assessment of their record in London has been undertaken.

DEFENCE

Arms Sales

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether any representative of his Department has met Mr. Gerald James, Mr. Michael Cruddas or Mr. Tim Laxton to discuss the sale of armaments;

(2) what information he has as to the involvement of Mr. Gerald James, Mr. Michael Cruddas or Mr. Tim Laxton in the sale of arms to countries overseas.

Mr. Hanley: My officials had routine contacts with Mr. James in his capacity as chairman of the defence manufacturing company Astra. These contacts may have involved discussions relating to the possible export of equipment manufactured by Astra, but there is no record of this. As we made clear in evidence to the Trade and Industry Select Committee in 1992, meetings were also held to discuss contracts assumed by Astra, following the company's acquisition of the Belgian firm PRB. My Department has no information about Mr. Cruddas or Mr. Laxton and I have no knowledge of any contact between them and MOD officials.

Radiation Tests

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the involvement of the United Kingdom in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and United States Department of Defence-sponsored radiation tests on United States citizens from 1964 to the mid-1970s.

Mr. Hanley: To the best of our knowledge the United Kingdom has not participated in any radiation tests involving United States citizens.

Open Government

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the implications for the operation of his Department of the code of practice on open government.

Mr. Hanley: The code of practice on Government information will further improve and reinforce my Department's existing arrangements for the provision of information to the public. Details of the code's implementation will be available at the time of the launch.

World Meteorological Day

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to mark World Meteorological Day on 23 March.

Mr. Hanley: To mark World Meteorological Day I shall be opening a special exhibition at the science museum in South Kensington where I will announce recent developments in meteorology and climatology.

Asbestos

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those organisations that have written to him over the last year regarding asbestosis and members of the armed forces.

Mr. Hanley: My Department has no record of having received any correspondence from organisations regarding the general issue of asbestosis and the armed forces over the last year. It has, however, received letters in that time relating to individual cases from solicitors' offices, coroners' offices and the Department of Social Security.

Britannia Beagles Association

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the type and number of animals killed by the Britannia Beagles Association, for each year since 1989.

Mr. Hanley: The Britannia Beagles Association is a private club and therefore information of the type requested is not held by my Department.

Armed Forces (Tasks)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is standard practice for records to be kept of the tasks undertaken by members of Her Majesty's armed forces during duty hours and compulsory activities.

Mr. Hanley: In the main, service personnel fill posts with recognised duties attached to them, and records of tasks undertaken are not therefore required. However, for security, administrative, accounting and health and safety reasons certain duties require that records are maintained of work performed.

Hunts

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 7 February, Official Report, column 588, if he will list the occasions in each of the past three years when hunts from his Department's establishments have led to the kill of live quarry.

Mr. Hanley: Hunts are privately funded events and participation in them is a private matter for the individuals concerned. My Department does not therefore hold records of the information requested.

Performance Pay

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 9 February, Official Report, column 363, what plans he has to consider the introduction of performance-related pay for service personnel.

Mr. Hanley: The Government have asked the Armed Forces Pay Review Body and the Senior Salaries Review Body to consider whether the concept of performance pay could be applied to the armed forces. The AFPRB has decided to appoint management consultants to assist with its work in this area. We envisage that performance pay will also be among the issues which will be addressed by the major independent review of service career and manpower structures and terms and conditions of service, described in my answer of 9 February, Official Report, columns 362-63.

Mines

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to purchase new types of mines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: We are currently considering procuring three new types of anti-tank mine: mines in the new century—MINX—vehicle launched scatterable mine system—VLSMS—and aimed controlled effect anti-tank mine—ACEATM. We are also reviewing our future requirement for anti-tank mines generally and for anti-personnel land mines. We will continue to ensure that any land mine capability we have fully meets the requirements of the international laws of armed conflict.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what current research is being conducted into the future of mine warfare; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: My Department conducts research into many aspects of mine warfare, including methods of mine location, methods of neutralisation of mines, remote control of mines, limited life mines and self-neutralisation of mines.

These efforts are fully consistent with the international laws of armed conflict, including the 1981 United Nations weaponry convention, protocol 2 of which contains strict rules governing the use of land mines.

Ministerial Directions

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney (Mr. Rowlands) of 10 March, Official Report, column 401, if he will set out the reasons for the issuing of formal directions on each of the occasions listed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The directions listed in my answer of 10 March were made because the Secretary of State for Defence at the time, or another Defence Minister, had decided, after considering all the factors involved including the advice of the accounting officer, that a particular course of action should be followed. The decisions were:

D Day 40th Anniversary celebrations: To provide transport on Defence Votes for a representative group of veterans to attend the celebrations.

Type 22 Frigate: To place an order for one Type 22 frigate with Cammell Laird and an order for a second with Swan Hunter.

Auxiliary Oiler Replenishment: To place the order for the second Auxiliary Oiler Replenishment on a single tender basis.

HMS Endurance replacement: To acquire Polar Circle (already on charter in this role) as the replacement ice patrol ship without a further survey of the market.

Chieftain replacement: To place an order for Challenger 2 as the replacement for the remaining two regiments of Chieftain tanks.

RNSD Copenacre: To close the depot in part rather than fully.

Image Intensifiers: To place an order for image intensifiers with English Electric Valves.

United Nations (Rations)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Warley, West (Mr. Spellar) of 2 March, Official Report, columns 783-84, and his answer of 18 February, Official Report, column 1054, what changes have taken place relating to the length of time of the proposed trial of the United Nations ration supply system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The proposed two-month trial of the United Nations ration supply system which was due to commence on 1 April has been delayed as a result of the United Kingdom troops at Tomislavgrad being re-deployed elsewhere in central Bosnia. The trial is now scheduled to commence on 1 May and will last for three months.

Ceremonial Uniforms

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 483, if he will list the non-Ministry of Defence sources that have been used to purchase special items of ceremonial uniforms.

Mr. Aitken: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Landing Platform Dock Replacement

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 4 March, Official Report, column 943, if he will make it his policy to make a statement about the embarked force capability of the landing platform dock replacement once the project definition studies have been completed.

Mr. Aitken: Yes.

Accommodation Charges

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he intends to change the current arrangements that determine accommodation charges in (a) 1995, (b) 1996, or (c) 1997; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The accommodation charges paid by service personnel for both married and single accommodation are set on the basis of recommendations made by the Armed Forces Pay Review Body. There are no plans to change this arrangement.

Redundancies

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to make any members of the Ministry of Defence police force redundant.

Mr. Hanley: None, although a study is in hand into the role, aims, objectives, structure and pay of the MOD police. It is too early to say whether redundancies will result from this study.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to utilise the services of those serving in the armed forces who will be made redundant as a result of the forthcoming cuts in the spending of his Department.

Mr. Hanley: At this stage it is too early to speculate about the need for further redundancies.

Search and Rescue Helicopters

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the operational reasons for transferring search and rescue Sea King helicopters from RAF Brawdy to RAF Chivenor in July.

Mr. Hanley: I will write to the hon. Member.

EDUCATION

Mature Women Students

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many mature women students were taking degree courses at British universities in each of the last 15 years.

Mr. Boswell: Information on the number of home-domiciled mature entrants to first degree courses at institutions in Great Britain is given in the table below.

Academic year	Men	Women
1979-80	14,600	10,800
1980-81	14,000	10,300
1981-82	14,800	11,000
1982-83	14,100	10,800
1983-84	14,000	10,700
1984-85	13,600	11,200
1985-86	14,800	12,900
1986-87	15,600	13,100
1987-88	16,600	15,300
1988-89	18,700	17,700
1989-90	21,000	21,500
1990-91	24,300	25,000
1991-92	35,900	35,500
1992-93	47,126	45,894

Further Education Funding Council

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the names of the interviewers who appointed Philip Head to the Further Education Funding Council.

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Coventry, North-East (Mr. Ainsworth) on 18 February, Official Report, column 1019. In addition to Mr. Roger McClure, the council's director of finance who acted as chairman, the panel which interviewed short-listed candidates for the post of head of property services consisted of Ms Di Hill, the council's personnel manager, and Mr. Christopher Jonas, a member of the council with relevant property expertise. The actual appointment was made in the light of subsequent discussions which were conducted by Mr. McClure.

Charter Costs

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what has been the total cost to his Department of (a) the higher education charter, (b) the further education charter and (c) the parents charter since their inception; and what are the estimated costs for 1993-94 and the budgeted costs for 1994-95.

Mr. Robin Squire: The cost of the parents charter campaign which was launched in September 1991 was £2·1 million. The further and higher education charters were jointly produced, printed, distributed and advertised in 1993-94. While it is not possible to attribute separate costs to either charter, the total cost of this campaign was £1·4 million.

The cost of the revised parents charter, to be launched later in the spring, is £2·2 million, falling in 1993-94, while the budgeted cost of distribution in 1994-95 is estimated at some £500,000 although contracts have yet to be let.

Hazardous Sports Courses

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what minimum level of training and qualifications he proposes to be necessary for a teacher or leader to possess when involved in canoeing and other hazardous sports courses.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has no general power to prescribe by regulation requirements of this kind. However, relevant advice is given with respect to a wide range of outdoor activities in the Department's publication "Safety in Outdoor Education". That advice will shortly be supplemented by further guidance on procedures which should be observed by schools and others in the education service in arranging outdoor activities, which takes into account lessons learned from the Lyme bay tragedy.

School Repairs

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the estimated amount of outstanding repairs required to schools in each local education authority area in London.

Mr. Forth: Such information is not held centrally, either for individual LEAs or for LEAs in a particular region.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much was spent on the repair and maintenance of school buildings by local education authorities in London in each financial year since 1989-90.

Mr. Forth: The total amount spent on the repair and maintenance of school buildings by inner and outer London LEAs since 1989-90 was as shown in the table. The figures include the costs of materials, charges and recharges by external agencies on the upkeep of buildings, fixed plant, grounds and sites.

Year	Expenditure (Actual, £ million)
1989-90	88·5
1990-91	78·3
1991-92	81·0
[1]1992-93	84·0

Books

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much was spent by each local education authority in London on books in 1993 prices in (a) 1979-80, (b) 1984-85, (c) 1989-90 and (d) 1992-93.

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on total expenditure on books and equipment by each local education authority in London is given in the following table. The table shows combined figures for books and equipment because not all authorities' returns identify spending on books separately.

Total Expenditure on Books and Equipment by Inner and Outer London LEAs, in 1992-93 prices

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education on how many occasions in the last five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. Patten: I answer parliamentary questions on the basis set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". I also do my best to take account of the need for brevity in answering oral questions.

Schools (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total budget for each grant-maintained (a) primary and (b) secondary school in south Yorkshire for 1993-94; and what is his estimate for 1994-95.

Mr. Robin Squire: The total budgets for each grant-maintained school in south Yorkshire for 1993-94 and the estimates for 1994-95 are as follows:

	1993-94 £	1994-95 £
Primary
Clifford CE GM school	142,728	139,644
Handsworth St. Joseph's RC primary school	102,235	275,536

Secondary
All Saints RC school	1,526,786	2,255,473
Notre Dame school	1,226,379	2,019,747

The amount shown for the total budget in 1993-94 includes annual maintenance grant, special purpose grants for restructuring development, premises, VAT, transitional grant and capital grants payable to the schools.

The amounts shown for the estimated total budget in 1994-95 include annual maintenance grant, special purpose grants for restructuring, development, premises, transitional grant and capital grants likely to be payable to the schools. Special purpose grants for VAT are not included as they will not be calculated until annual maintenance grants are finalised.

Further Education Funding Council

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many employees of the Further Education Funding Council have worked in further education either as academic or administrative staff; and what proportion this number is of the total staff.

Mr. Boswell: Of the total 338 staff currently employed by the Further Education Funding Council, 137—42 per cent.—previously worked within the education sector, 82—25 per cent.—of whom were directly employed in further education, including 51 of the council's 70 inspectors.

Higher Education Funding Council

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many employees of the Higher Education Funding Council have worked in higher education as either academic or administrative staff; and what proportion this number is of the total staff.

Mr. Boswell: Nine employees of the Higher Education Funding Council for England have previously worked in higher education institutions either as academic or administrative staff. This is about 5 per cent. of the total staff. A further 10 have worked in organisation closely linked with higher education. These figures exclude council members and contract and specialist quality assessors.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Overseas Aid

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how his Department's use of overseas aid helps reduce political instability in the countries to which it is awarded, as asserted at paragraph 34 of his Department's annual report 1994, Cm. 2502.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The promotion of good government—including democracy and the rule of law—is one of the ODA's priority objectives. This contributes directly to political stability by strengthening legal channels for the resolution of political differences. More generally, the main purpose of ODA's assistance is to promote economic and social development, thus addressing some of the causes of political instability. We have paid particular attention to helping to improve the economy and civil society in countries which have experienced periods of civil unrest such as Uganda and Mozambique.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs between what dates the section on aid and trade provision review within the chapter on the overseas aid budget at pages 56-58 of his departmental annual report and expenditure plans 1994-95 to 1997-98 Cm. 2502 was written.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The ODA section of the report, including the section on the aid and trade provision, was compiled and edited during the period September 1993 to January 1994. The text on the aid and trade provision was first drawn up in November 1993.

Indonesia

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) current aid projects and (b) current Government contracts with Indonesia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The current bilateral aid projects in Indonesia are as follows:

Aid and Trade Provision

1. Steel Bridging—Phase 1—Bailey-type bridges for the Ministry of Public Works.
2. Marine Navigational Aids—for the Directorate of Sea Communications.
3. Scattered Diesel Generators—for the Indonesian Electricity Authority (PLN).

58. Assessing the present and future economic feasibility of True Potato Seed (TPS) in developing country agriculture.
59. Dipterocarp manual for foresters.
60. Evaluation of the content, composition and toxicity of Polycyclic Aromatic Hydrocarbons (PAHs) in copra and derived products.
61. Biology of salt tolerance in Chrysomya megacephala (Diptera: Calliphoridae) and other species of blowflies which are pests of salted-dried fish in tropical developing countries.
62. Psocid ecology in relation to pest management in milled riced stores.
63. Characterisation and evaluation of key seed-borne fungal pathogens of rice.
64. Detection and identification of mycoplasmalike organisms (MLO) associated with little leaf disease of sweet potato (Ipomoea batatas).
65. Identification and epidemiology of insect vectors of mycoplasma-like organisms associated with little leaf disease of sweet potato (Ipomoea batatas).
66. Post-harvest processing of sweet potato in South-east Asia.
67. Tourism, Conservation and Sustainable Development.

In addition, there are 25 small projects and schemes—largest £14,200, smallest £19—covering essentially community-based activities in such sectors as water, agriculture, food, health and education.

Non-Governmental Organisations

Under the joint funding scheme with British NGOs, we are supporting some 21 schemes in sectors such as health, agriculture, horticulture, water, education, women's and community development.

We also provide support to VSO who have some 60 volunteers in Indonesia; about half are teachers and the remainder in natural resources, health and technical areas.

Commonwealth Development Corporation

The CDC, for which the principal source of external finance is the British aid programme, has investments totalling some £71 million covering 12 projects in sectors such as textiles, cement production power and plantation crops.

The Government have no contracts as such with Indonesia.

Commonwealth Institute

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many members of the Commonwealth Institute staff have now been made redundant or have received notice of redundancy; and what arrangements the Government have made for funding those redundancies.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Some 28 staff have been made redundant this year; a further 16 members of staff have recently received notice of redundancy; three employees on fixed-term contracts have not had them renewed.

An FCO grant of £2·4 million is being made available over the next two years to meet redundancy costs.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Secretary-General of the Commonwealth about the future of the Commonwealth Institute.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Commonwealth Secretary-General serves, ex officio, as a governor on the institute's board. The assessors on the board, appointed by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to represent Government Departments in the United Kingdom, maintain a continuing dialogue with all governors, including the Secretary-General.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who are the leaseholders for the Commonwealth Institute site in Kensington.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Under the Commonwealth Institute Act 1958, the Commonwealth Institute trustees are the leaseholders.

United Nations Specialised Agencies

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made, following UNCT resolution 44/211, of the balance of resources and effect between strengthening the role of the United Nations specialised agencies as centres of excellence and as aid agencies in the field.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Since the adoption of United Nations General Assembly resolution 44/211, and the subsequent triennial review of progress embodied in resolution 47/199, we have been supporting efforts, through our membership of the agencies' governing bodies, to ensure that the specialised agencies concentrate on effective performance of their traditional functions. These include identifying global issues, analysing options and mobilising actions, rather than routine project implementation. Our assessment is that to date the agencies are responding satisfactorily to the pressure for reform, although we shall continue to monitor the situation closely.

SCOTLAND

Open Government

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what will be the implications for the operation of his Department of the code of practice on open government.

Mr. Lang: The code of practice will reinforce and build on my Department's existing arrangements for the provision of information. In addition, my Department is considering the early release of blocks of records less than 30 years old and re-reviewing previously withheld material over 30 years old.

Dental Services

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many dental practitioners within the Highland health board area have left the national health service over the last 18 months; and how many now restrict dental treatment within the national health service to children.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 16 March 1994]: Every general dental practitioner who intends to provide NHS treatment must join a health board dental list. Highland health board advises that 10 general dental practitioners have left its dental list in the past 18 months. The health board is not aware of any general dental practitioners in its area who restrict national health service dental treatment to children only.

Self-financing Regulatory Authorities

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many self-financing regulatory authorities his Department has set up since 1979; what was the annual running cost of each of the self-financing regulatory authorities in each of the last three years; what is the current staffing establishment; and what it was last year and two years ago.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 16 March 1994]: My Department has not set up any self-financing regulatory authorities since 1979.

Northern Ireland

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on co-operation with departments of the Northern Ireland Office on trade, industry and transport between Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 21 March 1994]: My officials regularly meet those from Northern Ireland on matters of mutual interest, including those subjects mentioned by the hon. Member.

Drug-related Deaths

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many drug-related deaths there have been in Scotland in each of the last five years and in the current year to date; and if he will make a statement regarding the trend in drug usage and his plans to deal with the problem.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 March 1994]: In his annual report the Registrar General for Scotland gives a statistical summary of information, obtained during the death certification process, about deaths arising from the use of various drugs. However, it is known from special exercises that information derived in this way does not give a complete picture of the deaths which occur as a result of the misuse of controlled drugs, and efforts are in hand to improve the reliability of the statistics. The Scottish Office has estimated that, in the year beginning 1 November 1991, between 80 and 120 habitual drug misusers died as a direct result of drug misuse.

The misuse of drugs is a serious and continuing problem in Scotland. The drugs task force, chaired by my noble and learned Friend the Minister of State, is presently conducting a wide-ranging review of the current arrangements for tackling drug misuse in Scotland and considering ways in which the response might be enhanced.

Abortions

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many abortions were performed on women who were less than 13 weeks pregnant in each health board area for each year from 1990 to 1993; and how many of these operations involved admission and discharge of the patient on the same day.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 18 March 1994]: The figures for 1993 are not yet available. The information for 1990-92 is as follows:

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many NHS-funded abortions were performed in non-NHS premises on women resident in each health board in Scotland for each year from 1990 to 1993.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 18 March 1994]: None.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many fee-paying, private bed abortions were performed in national health service hospitals in each health board in Scotland for each year from 1990 to 1993.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 18 March 1994]: This information is not collected centrally.

Liver Biopsies

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is (a) the minimum and (b) the average number of days a patient stays in hospital after undergoing a liver biopsy operation.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 18 March 1994]: Patients undergoing a liver biopsy in Scotland have an average length of stay in hospital of four days. The procedure can be carried out on a day case basis.

Nurses

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the whole-time equivalent number of student, pupil and Project 2000 nurses in each health board and in Scotland as a whole in 1989, 1990, 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 18 March 1994]: The information requested, expressed in headcount terms, is set out in the table.

Health Care International

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many medical, nursing and other professional staff currently holding contracts of any type with Greater Glasgow health board or its previously associated trust hospitals, currently or at any time in the past, have simultaneously been contracted to work with Health Care International, Clydebank.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 17 March 1994]: No information is held centrally on medical, nursing and other professional staff of Greater Glasgow health board or of NHS trust hospitals in Glasgow contracting to work with Health Care International, Clydebank. NHS staff are entitled to contract with outside employers subject to the conditions set out in their NHS contract of employment.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will seek assurances from Health Care International that all medical, nursing, and other professional staff are on NHS terms and conditions of service in accordance with the conditions of authorisation.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 17 March 1994]: Since the statutory authorisation of the building of the Health Care International hospital at Clydebank was granted in 1987, NHS trusts have been introduced which have freedom to determine the terms and conditions of service for the majority of their staff. In keeping with the objectives of the authorisation, HCI is seeking to provide remuneration and benefits packages for its staff which reflect current NHS terms and conditions of service. In determining such packages for medical staff, HCI takes account of the opportunities which exist for NHS staff to earn additional income from private practice and to qualify for distinction awards, neither of which are available to HCI staff.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements have been made for Health Care International to reimburse to the NHS reasonable nurse training costs as set out in the letter of authorisation.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 17 March 1994]: HCI has agreed to contribute in kind to the cost to the NHS of nurse education and training by providing a significant local contribution in relation to clinical placements for student nurses in both general and specialty nursing units and by contributing to the preparation of post-registration nurses in specialty areas.

In addition, HCI has agreed to purchase specific post-registration education from colleges of nursing and to offer continuing nursing and education courses and seminars for its staff on a variety of topics.

These proposals will be subject to a review of progress within two years of the opening of the hospital. It is still too early in the hospital's development for any of the recommendations on the provision of placements to be put into practice, but my right hon. Friend intends to ensure that HCI fulfils its obligations.

Christmas Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by (a) Her Majesty's prison and (b) Her Majesty's remand prison the number of prisoners who applied for Christmas leave and the number of those who were granted Christmas leave; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 17 March 1994]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Scottish Prison Service under its chief executive Mr. E. W. Frizzell. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 22 March 1994:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of prisoners who applied for and were granted Christmas leave in 1993. You asked for these to be listed by (a) HM Prison and (b) HM Remand Prison. The information you requested is as follows:

(a) HM Prison	Applied	Granted
Open Establishments
Noranside	119	119
Penninghame	59	59
Cornton Vale (Women)	4	3
Castle Huntly Young Offenders Institution	86	74
Polmont Young Offenders (Enhanced Regime)	20	8

Aberdeen	2	2
Cornton Vale (Women)	1	1
Edinburgh	19	19
Perth	9	9
Polmont Young Offenders Institution	7	7
Total	326	301

(b) No remand prisoner in Scotland is eligible for Christmas leave.

Surplus Places (Cost)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated cost of a surplus place in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 18 March 1994]: This information is not held centrally.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the dates Ministers, or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985 including this year to date on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to his Department.

Mr. Lang: No Scottish Office Minister or official from my Department, or its agencies, has travelled on the Malaysian airline MAS on official business.

Bird Killing

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the reasons for the decision not to prosecute in the case arising from the shooting of a short-eared owl on Dougarie estate, Isle of Arran.

Sir Hector Monro: It is not the policy of the Crown to give details of the reasons for decisions taken in individual cases. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate is, however, aware of the circumstances of this case and is satisfied that the procurator fiscal's decision not to proceed to trial was a proper one in the circumstances as then known to him.

Teachers

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many supply teachers are registered with each local authority.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest information available is set out in the table. Differences between individual education authorities in the criteria employed for compilation of their reserve or supply lists mean that the information is not suitable for regional comparison.

Teachers on reserve supply list as at 30 September 1993

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what analysis has been undertaken by the Scottish Office Education Department into the number of teaching days lost due to stress-related illnesses since April 1993.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None, as information on teacher absences is not held centrally.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for how many days supply teachers have been employed in the last year in (a) Scotland and (b) each regional council area.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally.

Education Working Groups

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has in respect of the retention of copyright for publications produced by the regional working groups in education, following local government reform.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Under clause 15 of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Bill, property vested in one or more existing local authorities immediately before 1 April 1996 shall on that date be transferred to, and vest in, such new authority or authorities as may be specified in, or determined by, order by the Secretary of State. For the purposes of this clause, the definition of property includes copyright.

Pupil-teacher Ratios

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current pupil-teacher ratio in (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) special schools, by regional council area.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Provisional information for September 1993 is given in the table.

Pupil-teacher ratios in education authority schools, September 1993

Dornoch Academy

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the dates on which his officials have met members of the school board of the Dornoch academy, and the matters discussed.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Officials from the Scottish Office Education Department have met members of the school board of Dornoch academy on three occasions. On 27 October 1993 and 14 February 1994 officials met the full board and on 8 March 1994 they attended a meeting at which the chairperson and officials from Highland regional council were also present. In each case, the matters discussed have been directly related to the arrangements for the incorporation of Dornoch academy as a self-governing school from 1 April 1994.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what funds he has made available to the Dornoch academy school board for secured buildings and public liability insurance from 1 April.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None. After Dornoch academy becomes incorporated as a self-governing school on 1 April 1994, the board of management may apply for special purpose grant for premises insurance. The details of such arrangements are contained in the Self-Governing Schools Grant and Recovery (Scotland) Regulations 1994, laid before Parliament on 10 March 1994.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library a copy of the correspondence which has passed between his officials and members of the Dornoch academy school board since 1 January 1993.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is not normal practice for copies of correspondence between the Secretary of State, or his officials, and third parties to be made public.

However, in order to clarify the Secretary of State's position with regard to the possible upgrading of Dornoch academy, I am arranging exceptionally to place in the Library a copy of a letter from my officials to the school board on this matter dated 11 March 1994.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans his Education Minister has to visit Dornoch academy, Sutherland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I look forward to visiting Dornoch academy in due course, subject to my other commitments, when next I am in the area.

Training

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give the latest available results from the employment training leavers survey for each local enterprise company area in Scotland broken down to show the number and proportion of employment training leavers who were (a) in a full-time job with their work experience employer, (b) in a full-time job with another employer, (c) employed in their own business, (d) in a part-time job, (e) in voluntary work, (f) on another Government training programme, (g) on a full-time education or training course, (h) unemployed and claiming benefit, (i) unemployed and not claiming benefit, (j) in a job club and (k) doing something else;

(2) if he will publish tables showing the latest available results from the youth training leavers survey for each LEC area in Scotland broken down to show the number and proportion of youth training leavers who were (a) in full-time work with the same employer, (b) in full-time work with a different employer, (c) in part-time work, (d) on a full-time course at a college/training centre, (e) on another youth training scheme, (f) doing something else, (g) who were unemployed, (h) who had obtained a vocational qualification; and if he will also indicate (i) the number of questionnaires issued, (ii) the usable percentage response rate and (iii) the percentage of respondents who were early leavers;

(3) if he will give the latest available results from the employment training leavers survey for each LEC area in Scotland broken down to show the number and proportion of leavers who had (a) been entered for a vocational qualification, (b) obtained a vocational qualification, (c) had failed to obtain a vocational qualification and (d) were awaiting their results; and how many of the employment training leavers in the relevant period had completed the training agreed in their initial action plan.

Mr. Stewart: Responsibility for the ET and YT leavers follow-up survey was transferred from the Training Agency to Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise on 1 April 1991. The Department of Employment was contracted to deliver the service on their behalf until 1 April 1993 when the enterprise bodies introduced their own follow-up systems.

I have asked the chairmen of the enterprise bodies to write to the hon. Member.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for the last 12 months how many parliamentary questions he has referred to one of his Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to his Department this represents.

Mr. Lang: In the 12 months from 1 March 1993 to 28 February 1994 I referred 20 parliamentary questions to my Department's agencies for answer. This represents less than 1 per cent. of the 3,112 written parliamentary questions which I received in that period.

WALES

Wind Turbines

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the gross output of electricity produced from wind turbines in Wales in 1993.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Data on the electricity produced in Wales from wind turbines are only available for companies operating under the non-fossil fuel obligation.

According to data obtained from the Non-fossil Purchasing Agency Ltd. in the first nine months of 1993, Welsh wind projects under the non-fossil fuel obligation produced 72·2 GWh of electricity. Output for the final quarter of 1993 is not yet available.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions in the last five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. Redwood: None. I answer parliamentary questions on the basis set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" which states that Ministers have a duty

"to give Parliament including its Select Committees, and the public as full information as possible about the policies, decisions and actions of the Government."

Unemployment, Newport

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current rate of unemployment in the Newport travel-to-work area.

Mr. Redwood: In February 1994 the unadjusted work-force-based unemployment rate in the Newport travel-to-work area was 10·7 per cent.

Wild Birds

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list details of all current licences issued to kill wild bird species, including the premises and the wild bird species concerned.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Licences to kill protected bird species are normally only valid for a specific, limited period. No such licences are currently in force in Wales. As regards pest bird species, five general licences are currently in force which authorise pest control contractors to kill or take house sparrows or feral pigeons on a county basis.

Community Psychiatric Nurses

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each district health authority the number of community psychiatric nurses employed in each of the last five years.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Detailed breakdowns of the numbers of nursing staff employed by health authorities and NHS trusts into occupational groups such as that requested are not considered reliable.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what provisions there are in the grant-maintained regulations to pay a special purpose grant for staff restructuring after the first 12 months of a grant-maintained school's existence;

(2) what additional financial assistance he has provided to Cwmcarn grant-maintained school, in order to facilitate the departure of the former head teacher.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Under schedule 6 of the Education (Grant-maintained Schools) (Finance) Regulations 1990, the Secretary of State is empowered to make grants to the governing bodies of grant-maintained schools in respect of the premature retirement of any person who is or was a member of the staff of the school. In the case of the former head of Cwmcarn grant-maintained school, my right hon. Friend was prepared to contribute £9,191 towards the costs associated with his early retirement.

Local Government (Wales) Bill [Lords]

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received from voluntary organisations in Wales on the Local Government (Wales) Bill [Lords]; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Since publication of the Bill, my right hon. Friend has received nine representations from voluntary organisations.

Public Bodies

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy that the addresses of members of non-departmental public bodies be published.

Mr. Redwood: The town and county of residence of each appointee is given in "Appointments by the Secretary of State for Wales" and the address of each executive non-departmental public body is given in the respective annual reports. These publications are available in the Library of the House.

It would be an invasion of privacy to publish full details of individual appointees' addresses.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make available in public libraries and local government offices in Wales the publication "Public Bodies—Appointments by the Secretary of State for Wales".

Mr. Redwood: The quarterly list of appointments is available in the Library of the House and the Welsh Office, Cathays Park, Cardiff. The Department makes arrangements for individuals to consult the Welsh Office library copy on request. The costs of making the publication available in public libraries and local government offices are not justified.

Environmental Research

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what research the Welsh Office has undertaken into water quality in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

(2) what research the Welsh Office has undertaken into the problem of upland acidification in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the environmental chapter of "Research, Wales—20th Report 1992-93" a copy of which is held in the science and environment section of the Library of the House.

Agricultural Tenants

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to ensure that agricultural tenants are ensured minimum tenancy agreements of 15 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: A statutory minimum term has never featured in our proposals for agricultural tenancy reforms; nor is it included in the common position agreed by the majority of farming organisations and announced by the Government on 8 December. In the light of that agreement, we are now finalising details so that legislation can be introduced as soon as parliamentary time permits.

Highways Directorate

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, what consideration he has given to granting executive agency status to the highways directorate of the Welsh Office.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Under the "next steps" initiative, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has decided that the highways directorate of the Welsh Office should be considered as a candidate for executive agency status. A prior options review is being undertaken to establish whether agency status or some other option would be appropriate. Those undertaking the review will be consulting local authorities in Wales. My right hon. Friend and I would welcome comments from other interested parties. These should be sent, by 31 May 1994, to: The Under Secretary, Transport, Planning and Environment Group, The Welsh Office, Cathays Park, Cardiff, CF1 3NQ.

Arts Council of Wales

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will announce the membership of the Arts Council of Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The membership of the Arts Council of Wales will be:

Ms Jane Davidson, Mr. Meirion Edwards, Mr. Frank Evans, Mr. Keith Evans, Ms Katrina Gass, Mr. Peter Griffiths, Ms Caroline Ireland, Mr. Geralt Jones, Mr. Geraint Stanley Jones CBE, Mr. Myles Pepper, Mr. David Richards, Mr. Alwyn Roberts, Mr. Eurig Thomas, Professor Gwyn Thomas and Ms Moira Vincentelli.

The members have been appointed for three years, apart from Mr. Frank Evans, Mr. Keith Evans and Mr. Eurig Thomas, who have been appointed for two years.

The council will have a wide range of experience in arts matters and expertise in many fields. Under the chairmanship of Sir Richard Lloyd Jones, the council will build on the work of the existing Welsh Arts Council to achieve its main aims of encouraging artistic excellence and increasing accessibility to the arts through Welsh and English.

I would also pay tribute to the members of the Welsh Arts Council who are not being re-appointed. They have played an important role in the development of the arts in Wales.

Cancer Treatment

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with Clatterbridge Centre for Oncology concerning its proposals for the establishment of two satellite cancer treatment units in north Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones [holding answer 18 March 1994]: The decision to develop a cancer treatment centre in north Wales was taken following extensive examination and consultation with interested and affected organisations and included consideration of the proposals for satellite cancer treatment units put forward by the Clatterbridge Centre for Oncology. In the course of this, my right hon. Friend's predecessor discussed the proposals with the Clatterbridge Centre for Oncology and officials had extensive discussions with the centre and others.

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the National Audit Office concerning the viability of the establishment of a new cancer treatment centre at Glan Clwyd NHS trust hospital as against the development of networked radiotherapy facilities located in two centres in north Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones [holding answer 18 March 1994]: Officials are discussing a range of issues associated with the establishment of a cancer treatment centre at ysbyty Glan Clwyd with the National Audit Office.

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research his Department has carried out on the viability of establishing a cancer treatment centre at Glan Clwyd NHS trust hospital; and what research his Department has carried out on alternative proposals for the provision of cancer treatment facilities in north Wales, including those of Clatterbridge Centre for Oncology.

Mr. Gwilym Jones [holding answer 18 March 1994]: In addition to its own investigations, the Welsh Office commissioned a number of independent appraisals of all the available options for improving cancer services for north Wales patients prior to the decision to develop a cancer treatment centre at Glan Clwyd Hospital NHS trust. The appraisals covered proposals put forward by the Clatterbridge Centre for Oncology.

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Clwyd, North-West (Mr. Richards) of 14 March, Official Report, column 604, what form the new cancer treatment facility in north Wales will take; and what is the estimated cost of the new cancer treatment centre.

Mr. Gwilym Jones [holding answer 18 March 1994]: The project team established to manage the development of a cancer treatment centre at ysbyty Glan Clwyd is undertaking the detailed planning process which will identify the exact form that the new centre will take and its associated costs.

Recycling

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will issue guidelines to local authorities in Wales based on the report to the President of the Board of Trade and the Secretary of State for the Environment, submitted by the packaging industry producer responsibility group entitled, "Real Value from Packaging Waste—A Way Forward".

Mr. Redwood: No. The plans are still out to consultation.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to earmark specific grants for demonstration schemes in recycling municipal waste by Welsh local authorities; what representations he has had from Cardiff city council in relation to the costs and benefits already achieved from its green bag recycling, and its possible extension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Authorities may be eligible for support under the EC LIFE programme, and may apply for help under the strategic development scheme run by the Welsh Office.

Cardiff city council has made a number of representations seeking additional revenue support for recycling schemes. As the arrangements for distributing resources are agreed with the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance, the city council has been advised to pursue the matter with Council of Welsh Districts representatives on that body.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he proposes to ensure that Welsh local authorities are not omitted from any general Government initiatives to support existing recycling schemes or new recycling initiatives, with particular reference to those initiatives based on the Valpak scheme proposed by the packaging industry producer responsibility group.

Mr. Redwood: Local authorities themselves take steps to ensure that they take advantage of existing and new initiatives, including any opportunities to increase recycling activity in their area that may be presented by the producer responsibility group's proposals for packaging waste. I am keen to see local authorities in Wales hit the target for recycling one quarter of all household waste.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Ministerial Receptions

Mr. Boyes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of receptions held by Ministers in his Department in 1993-94.

Mr. Heseltine: The cost of such receptions is included in the entertainment expenditure for my Department which is published in the annual report.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Boyes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many bottles of (a) whisky and gin and (b) sherry and port were consumed by his private offices in 1993-94.

Mr. Heseltine: An accurate assessment of the quantity of these drinks actually consumed is not possible as stock levels on 1 April 1993 are not known.

The cost of purchases are included in the entertainment expenditure for my Department which is published in the annual report.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of new furniture for his private office during the year 1993-94.

Mr. Heseltine: Such purchases are included within my Department's overall administration expenditure which is published every year in the annual report.

ETIS Programme

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the expenditure committed on the ETIS —environment technology innovation scheme—programme; how many projects were supported; what was the regional distribution of expenditure and projects; how many applications there were in total; how many such applications were rejected because the scheme had closed; and on which date the scheme was closed for new applications.

Mr. McLoughlin: The environmental technology innovation scheme, ETIS, jointly managed by the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department of the Environment, was launched on 2 October 1990 and closed to new applications on 30 September 1993.

The information requested is as follows:

Region/Country	Applications received	Applications received after closure date	Grants awarded	Expenditure committed £

Parcelforce

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many new regional Parcelforce depots he plans to create; and how he proposes to finance them.

Mr. McLoughlin: The development of Parcelforce's depot network is a matter for the Post Office and Parcelforce.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all Parcelforce depots as at 1 April 1993; when each depot was opened; whether each depot is proposed for closure or has already shut; and what were the total costs in expenditure and lost jobs in the closure programme so far.

Mr. McLoughlin: Parcelforce is in the process of converting its depot network so that each depot is capable of handling the business's entire product range, instead of being product-specific. This move is designed to help Parcelforce maintain and improve its service to customers. Details of the programme are a matter for the Post Office. The hon. Member's interest in this subject has been brought to the attention of the Post Office.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what differences exist in terms of (a) recording for public sector borrowing requirement plans, (b) capital programme accounting for public expenditure plans, (c) external financing limit controls, (d) powers to raise capital between the Post Office and British Nuclear Fuels plc; and what return there will be for the Exchequer from both enterprises in the current financial year.

Mr. Heseltine: The Post Office is a public corporation and its borrowing requirement is counted as part of the PSBR. Its capital expenditure is controlled through the external financing limit set in the annual public expenditure round. The EFL limits its ability to raise finance over and above that generated internally.

British Nuclear Fuels plc is a Companies Acts company classified to the private sector. It is not set an EFL, but the relevant objectives, including in relation to capital projects, are met through targets on profitability and the corporate plan cycle. The extent of guaranteed borrowing by BNFL is limited by the Nuclear Industry (Finance) Act 1977, as amended.

In 1993-94 the Post Office has been set a negative external financing limit of £181 million. A negative EFL represents a net cash payment to the Exchequer in the form of debt repayment and/or accumulation of financial assets.

BNFL makes outright payments to the Exchequer in the form of dividends which are recorded on the income side of the Government accounts. The dividend paid in 1993-94 was £16 million.

Iraq and Saudi Arabia

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers) of 9 March, Official Report, column 252, what was the share of defence in total over all Export Credits Guarantee Department project businesses in Iraq and Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Needham: The percentage of total ECGD support for capital goods and projects since 1980 which related to defence contracts in the named markets was as follows:

1981-82	0	0·44
1982-83	0·28	0·34
1984-85	0·39	0·08
1985-86	0	0
1988-89	21·77	0

Research and Development

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer given to the hon. Member for Milton Keynes, North-East (Mr. Butler), of 8 March, Official Report, column 204, if he will explain the original reasons for the suspension of the exceptional projects scheme and for the extension of the suspension to 30 June 1994; for how many years the scheme was in operation; and how many projects there were and with how much expenditure in each year of the scheme's existence.

Mr. Sainsbury: Regarding the suspension of the exceptional projects scheme, I refer the hon. Member to my announcement of 26 January 1993, Official Report, columns 973-74.

The scheme was open for applications in the five years 1988-89 to 1992-93. In that time, 60 projects were submitted, of which only three succeeded in meeting the criteria. Two offers of grant totalling £5 million were approved in 1989-90 and one of £20 million in 1992-93.

Market Testing

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will ensure that all companies and enterprises involved in Government contracts as a result of market testing or outsourcing programmes will observe the requirements of FRED 8, the Accounting Standards Board exposure draft on related party disclosure.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The Accounting Standards Board is currently seeking comments on FRED 8 and may amend the draft in the light of those comments. When it becomes a standard all companies and enterprises within its scope will have to comply with it.

Thermabond

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the dates on which companies containing the name Thermabond have gone into insolvency; and which of those insolvencies have resulted in a referral to his disqualification unit.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The liquidator, administrator or administrative receiver of any company which enters into formal insolvency is required to consider and make a report to my Department on the conduct of the directors.

Thermabond Ltd. and Thermabond Roofing Ltd. went into voluntary liquidation on 24 September 1991 and reports have been received from the liquidator of those companies. Thermabond Contracts Ltd. went into voluntary liquidation on 1 February 1994 and a report will be due by 1 August 1994.

Deregulation

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the members, occupations and present enterprise links of the chemicals and pharmaceuticals deregulation task force; and what regulations they have been examining.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The report "Deregulation Task Forces: Proposals for Reform" which was published on 19 January and placed in the Library of the House gives details of the membership of all the task forces and their recommendations. Working papers which give fuller details of the areas examined by each task force will be placed in the Library of the House shortly.

Environmental Technology

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all his schemes and services for the promotion of environmental technology that are current together with the expenditure on, and projects supported by, each scheme or service estimated up to 1 April.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced on 7 December 1993, Official Report, column 149, a joint programme with the Department of the Environment aimed at encouraging the adoption by industry of best practice in environmental technology and techniques. The Department, in association with the DoE, is currently developing this programme which will be launched later in 1994. The Department will be contributing £11 million to this £16 million programme which is due to run for five years. The programme will concentrate on the provision and delivery of information to industry rather than on grant assistance. It will build on the experience of grant schemes to support research and demonstration of innovative environmental technology which closed to new applications during 1993.

Petrol

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will bring forward measures requiring petrol producers to reformulate petrol by removing aromatics.

Mr. Eggar: I have no such plans at present.

Multilateral Trade Organisation

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the operation of the dispute settlement panel which will be invoked under the agreement establishing the Multilateral Trade Organisation where a member state fails to bring a measure found to be inconsistent with a covered agreement into compliance.

Mr. Needham: Dispute settlement panels in the proposed World Trade Organisation dispute settlement system will provide expert arbitration on disputed rights and obligations between members of the WTO. In circumstances where, following dispute settlement proceedings, a WTO member failed to bring a measure into conformity with its obligations, the member would be able to offer compensatory market access, or face retaliation by the aggrieved member. Both compensation and retaliation would be proportional to the impairment involved.

International Telephone Services

Mr. Madden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) under what provision Oftel may (a) regulate international call charges levied by United Kingdom telephone companies and (b) make representations to overseas telephone companies about false-answer defects; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans he has to ensure that the level of international telephone call charges and related matters are subject to regular scrutiny;

(3) what discussions he has had with United Kingdom telephone companies about appropriate action to warn their customers making calls to certain Asian and African countries of the charges arising from false-answer defects; and if he will encourage United Kingdom telephone companies to tell customers how to claim refunds when they are charged for international calls not made;

(4) which Asian and African countries have telephone systems which result in United Kingdom telephone companies charging customers for international calls not made because of false-answer defects; and with which Ministers of which of these countries he has held or proposes to hold talks about the problem.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has had no representations on this matter. The resolution of inaccurate billing resulting from calls that are not completed but that accrue charges because of a defect in equipment at the far end is a commercial matter for BT and Mercury. Customers should contact BT and Mercury in the first instance. Where customers are not satisfied with the redress they receive from companies they contact Oftel.

Oftel received less than a dozen complaints on this matter between October 1992 and June 1993, including calls to Nigeria and Pakistan. The problem does not affect more than a small proportion of the calls to the countries concerned. In the normal course of events United Kingdom telephone operators cannot detect the problem until alerted by customers, who are able to do so because of itemised billing. They have, however, made representations to telecommunications operators in the countries concerned.

Both companies have been quick to rectify genuine mistakes in bills resulting from these faults and have made good-will payments to customers. Oftel and my Department have not become involved in these commercial matters. In cases where customers have been refunded as a result of billing errors, BT and Mercury have nevertheless had to stand the loss resulting from having to make call delivery payments to operators at the far end.

Under condition 24 of its licence, BT is subject to restriction of prices for a range of services which includes international telephone calls. At present this restriction stands at retail prices index minus 7·5 per cent. This formula is next due for review in 1997. BT demonstrates to Oftel that it is complying with price restriction on the basis of a methodology agreed with Oftel.

Disabled Employees

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many registered disabled people are employed in his Department; and what percentage this is of the total.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the magazine "Independent", which published the annual disability report in its issue of Friday 18 March 1994, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Dry Cleaning Fluids

Mr. Welsh: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what help his Department has given to Master Services Group (Leather Master) to develop hydro-carbon technology;

(2) what steps the Government have taken to encourage the development of safe substitutes for dry cleaning fluids.

Mr. McLoughlin: The DTI is supporting two projects to encourage the development of safe substitutes for dry cleaning fluids. These are:

(i) a project under the environmental management options scheme DEMOS lead by Master Services Group with a grant of £134,332 over 13 months to support the research and development of a hydrocarbon non-halogenated fluid; and

(ii) an award of £45,000 made under the small firms merit award for research and technology to assist a project lead by ECO Cleansing Products, aimed at combing the use of a new solvent with ultrasound and de-humidification chambers.

Property Purchases

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) whether Her Majesty's Government have been asked by the Commission of the European Communities to comment upon the principal report by Wilde Sapte and Maclay Murray and Spens, entitled "Information and Protection of Transactions concerning Immovable Property Purchased by Consumers", which it commissioned; and what his policy is on the conclusions of that report;

(2) what information he has concerning the conclusions of the report "Information and Protection of Transactions concerning Immovable Property Purchased by Consumers" which was commissioned by the Commission of the European Communities and received by the Commission in August 1993; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what consultations with industry have been undertaken by his Department in connection with the report "Information and Protection of Transactions concerning Immovable Property Purchased by Consumers" commissioned by the Commission of the European Communities; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what recent representations he has received from (a) the House Builders Federation, (b) the Manufacturing and Construction Industries Alliance and (c) other bodies concerning the report "Information and Protection of Transactions concerning Immovable Property Purchased by Consumers" which was commissioned by the Commission of the European Communities; and if he will make a statement;

(5) if he will make a statement indicating the position of Her Majesty's Government on those provisions of the report "Information and Protection of Transactions concerning Immovable Property Purchased by Consumers" which deal with (a) legal advice given to purchasers of property, (b) standard contracts used by developers, (c) the use of technical reports from surveyors, and (d) the time scale of property purchase and local authority searches; and to what extent in each case the proposals are consistent with his Department's deregulation initiative;

(6) if he will make a statement indicating the position of Her Majesty's Government on those provisions of the report "Information and Protection of Transactions concerning Immovable Property Purchased by Consumers" which deal with (a) financial advice on the purchase of property, (b) provision of information concerning planning issues, (c) taxation associated with property transfer, (d) secure deposit holding schemes, (e) arrangements for purchase of property off plan and prior to construction, (f) arrangements for land registration, (g) curbs on the ability of vendors to negotiate with more than one potential purchaser, (h) further regulation of estate agents and mortgage arrangers, (i) further requirements on the disclosure by advisers of their relationship with others and (j) further restrictions on the content of property advertising; and to what extent in each case the proposals are consistent with his Department's deregulation initiative;

(7) if he will make a statement indicating the position of Her Majesty's Government on those provisions of the report "Information and Protection of Transactions concerning Immovable Property purchased by Consumers" which deal with (a) further restrictions relating to guarantees of construction standard, (b) further regulation of joint ownership, leasehold and service charge arrangements, (c) creation of new pan-European bodies to regulate property purchase, (d) proposals to prevent market dominance by building societies and banks in lending for property purchase and (e) attempts to limit commission rates for sale of property; and to what extent in each case the proposals are consistent with his Department's deregulation initiative.

Mr. Needham [holding answers 21 March 1994]: My Department has received from a trade association a copy of this report to the European Commission. It has not been asked by the Commission to comment nor consulted industry, though representations have been received from the House Builders Federation. It is important that, if consideration is given to Community legislation on property transactions, full account is taken of the principles of subsidiarity and proportionality and of the need to avoid imposing unnecessary burdens on business. This view will be communicated to the Commission.

Textile Outputs

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) by what percentage output of worsted yarn changed between 1987 and 1992 in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany, (c) France and (d) Italy; if he will publish a table showing United Kingdom production, imports, exports and consumption of worsted yarn in 1970, 1979, 1987 and 1992, together with the numbers employed in the United Kingdom industry; and when he expects United Kingdom output to reach the 1987 level;

(2) what was the percentage change in the level of output of cotton cloth between 1988 and 1992 in the United Kingdom, Germany, France and Italy; if he will publish a table showing United Kingdom production, imports, exports and consumption of cotton cloth in 1970, 1979, 1988 and 1992, together with the numbers employed in the United Kingdom industry; and when he expects United Kingdom output to reach the 1988 level;

(3) what was the United Kingdom output of tufted carpets between 1988 and 1992 and the corresponding figure for Germany, France and Italy; if he will list United Kingdom production, imports, exports and consumption of tufted carpets in 1970, 1979, 1988 and 1992 together with the numbers employed in the United Kingdom industry; and when he expects United Kingdom output to equal the 1988 level;

(4) what was the United Kingdom output of weatherproof outerwear in each year since 1988 and the corresponding figure for Germany, France and Italy; if he will list United Kingdom production, imports, exports and consumption of waterproof outerwear in 1970, 1979, 1988 and 1992 together with the numbers employed in the United Kingdom industry; and when he expects United Kingdom output to equal the 1988 level;

(5) what were the percentage changes in the output of footwear between 1987 and 1991 in the United Kingdom, Germany, France and Italy; if he will publish a table showing United Kingdom production, imports, exports and consumption of footwear in 1970, 1979, 1987 and 1992, together with the numbers employed in the United Kingdom industry; and when he expects United Kingdom output to reach the 1987 level;

(6) what was the United Kingdom output of woven carpets with yarn containing 50 per cent. or more by weight of wool between 1989 and 1992; what were the corresponding figures for Germany, France and Italy; if he will publish a table showing United Kingdom production, imports, exports and consumption of such carpets in 1970, 1979, 1989 and 1992 together with the numbers employed in the United Kingdom industry; and when he expects United Kingdom output to reach the 1989 level;

(7) what was the percentage change in the output of worsted cloth between 1987 and 1992 in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany, (c) France and (d) Italy; if he will publish a table showing United Kingdom production, imports, exports and consumption of worsted cloth in 1970, 1979, 1987 and 1992, together with the numbers employed in the United Kingdom industry; and when he expects United Kingdom output to reach the 1987 level;

(8) what was the United Kingdom output of clothing, hats and gloves in each year since 1988; what were the corresponding figures for Germany, France and Italy; if he will list United Kingdom production, imports, exports and consumption of clothing, hats and gloves in 1970, 1979, 1988 and 1992 together with the numbers employed in the United Kingdom industry; and when he expects United Kingdom output to equal the 1988 level;

(9) what was the change in United Kingdom output of men's and boys' tailored outerwear between 1988 and 1992 with the corresponding figure for Germany, France and Italy; if he will list United Kingdom production, imports, exports and consumption of such outerwear in 1970, 1979, 1988 and 1992 together with the numbers employed in the United Kingdom industry; and when he expects United Kingdom output to equal the 1988 level;

(10) by how much output of cotton yarn other than waste yarn changed between 1988 and 1992 for the United Kingdom, Germany, France and Italy; if he will publish a table showing United Kingdom production, imports, exports and consumption of cotton yarn in 1970, 1979, 1988 and 1992, together with the numbers employed in the United Kingdom industry; and when he expects United Kingdom output to reach 1988 levels;

(11) what was the change in United Kingdom output of textiles between 1988 and 1992 with the corresponding figure for Germany, France and Italy; if he will list United Kingdom production, imports, exports and consumption of textile yarn in 1970, 1979, 1988 and 1992 together with the numbers employed; and when he expects United Kingdom output to equal the 1988 level;

(12) if he will make a statement on the scale of the output of wool cloth in the United Kingdom compared with the corresponding figures for Italy and France in 1993; and if he will publish a table showing the corresponding percentages for 1973 and 1979 together with, for each of the three years (i) production imports, exports and consumption of wool cloth by each of the three countries and (ii) United Kingdom imports from and exports of wool cloth to each of the other three countries.

Mr. Needham: The available information may be found in the "Annual Abstract of Statistics", the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics", publications in the Business Monitors series, the Employment Gazette, the United Nations "Industrial Statistics Yearbook" and "Monthly Bulletin of Statistics", and the "Textiles Bulletin". Data are also available from the Central Statistical Office's central shared database, and from Eurostat's CRONOS database. All of the above data sources are in the Library of the House.

Manufacturing Trade

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the change in the level of United Kingdom imports of semi-manufactures since 1970, and the change in the level of exports; what were the corresponding figures for imports and exports from the EEC Twelve; what was the corresponding increase in the United Kingdom output, in import penetration, and in the import content of United Kingdom output of finished manufactures; and how many manufacturing jobs were lost as a consequence.

Mr. Needham: Information on United Kingdom visible trade is regularly published in "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom". Copies of this publication are available in the Library of the House. Semi-manufactures are defined by sections 5 and 6 of the standard international trade classification.

Owing to major difference between the industrial and trade classifications, it is not possible to provide comparable information on United Kingdom production and employment.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a table showing the percentage change since United Kingdom entry into the EEC of the United Kingdom, French and Italian shares of exports of manufactures by the main manufacturing countries and the reasons for the difference in performance.

Mr. Needham: The information can be readily derived from table E2 of the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics", published by the Central Statistical Office, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. The Department has not undertaken a study of the reasons for the difference in manufactures export share between the United Kingdom, France and Italy since United Kingdom entry into the EEC.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a table showing the increase in each quarter since the third quarter of 1992, taking that quarter as a base equal to 100, in export unit values for finished manufacturers shipped to the rest of the EC and to the rest of the world together with the increase in the nominal exchange rate against the ecu and non-ecu currencies.

Mr. Needham: Unit values for exports to EC and non-EC countries, with 1990 as a base, are available from the Central Statistical Office central shared database, access to which is available in the Library of the House. Reweighting to a different base period would entail disproportionate cost.

The sterling exchange rate against the ecu is also available from the database. A single exchange rate of sterling against non-ecu currencies is not readily available. The International Monetary Fund publishes details of US dollar exchange rates against other currencies in "International Financial Statistics", which is available in the Library of the House.

Manufacturing Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the change in the United Kingdom share of the volume of exports of manufactures by the main manufacturing countries since 1990; and if he will publish the latest three months' figures for the change in value since 1970 for the United Kingdom and those countries.

Mr. Needham: The information can be readily derived from table E1 of the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics", published by the Central Statistical Office, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Information on the latest three months' change in the value of exports manufactures by the United Kingdom and the main manufacturing countries is not readily available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Intermediate Goods

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the change in United Kingdom output of intermediate goods since 1985; what is his estimate of the corresponding change in the volume of imports and exports; and what is the implied change in import penetration.

Mr. Needham: Information on United Kingdom output and trade for intermediate goods is available from the Central Statistical Office central shared database, access to which is available in the Library of the House. There are, however, significant differences between the output and trade classifications. A reliable measure of import penetration is therefore not available.

Car Market

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the import share of the United Kingdom car market in February; which countries gained most from the change compared to last year; what was the movement in the rate of exchange during those 12 months; and if he will make a statement indicating why the share changed.

Mr. Needham: The information regarding the import share of the United Kingdom car market is in the table:

Source: Monthly Registrations Press release published by The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders Limited.

Information on the rate of exchange is regularly published in table 7.1A of the Central Statistical Office's "Financial Statistics", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Trade in the motor industry is determined by market forces and consumer preference. New car sales in Europe as a whole are still depressed, and manufacturers are stepping up their efforts in the United Kingdom, which is currently one of the few expanding markets available. The number of United Kingdom-produced cars registered in February 1994 was still 5·4 per cent. higher than that of February 1993.

Overseas Trade

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will publish a table showing (a) the ratio of imports of textiles to home demand in 1968, 1973, 1979, 1988, 1992 and his estimate for 1993, (b) the corresponding ratios for imports from the EEC, (c) output and employment in the United Kingdom industry and (d) the change since 1988 in the value and volume of (i) United Kingdom output and (ii) imports of textiles from (1) the rest of the EEC and (2) all sources;

(2) if he will publish a table showing (a) the ratio of imports of footwear and clothing to home demand in 1968, 1973, 1979, 1988, 1992 and his estimate for 1993, (b) the corresponding ratios for imports from the rest of the EEC, (c) output and employment in the United Kingdom industry and (d) the change since 1988 in the value and volume of (i) United Kingdom output and (ii) imports of such products from (1) the EEC and (2) all sources;

(3) if he will publish a table showing (a) the ratio of imports of motor vehicles and parts to home demand in 1968, 1973, 1979, 1988, 1992 and his estimate for 1993, (b) the corresponding ratios for imports from the EEC, (c) output and employment in the United Kingdom industry and (d) the change since 1988 in the value and volume of (i) United Kingdom output and (ii) imports of such products from (1) the EEC and (2) all sources;

(4) if he will publish a table showing (a) the ratio of imports of chemicals to home demand in 1968, 1973, 1979, 1988, 1992 and his estimate for 1993, (b) the corresponding ratios for imports from the EEC, (c) output and employment in the United Kingdom industry and (d) the change since 1988 in the value and volume of (i) United Kingdom output and (ii) imports of such products from (1) the rest of the EEC and (2) all sources;

(5) if he will publish a table showing (a) the ratio of imports of electrical and electronic engineering products to home demand in 1968, 1973, 1979, 1988, 1992 and his estimate for 1993, (b) the corresponding ratios for imports from the EEC, (c) output and employment in the United Kingdom industry and (d) the change since 1988 in the value and volume of (i) United Kingdom output and (ii) imports of such products from (1) the rest of the EEC and (2) all sources;

(6) if he will publish a table showing (a) the ratio of imports of office machinery and automatic data processing equipment to home demand in 1968, 1973, 1979, 1988, 1992 and his estimate for 1993, (b) the corresponding ratios for imports from the EEC, (c) output and employment in the United Kingdom industry and (d) the change since 1988 in the value and volume of (i) United Kingdom output and (ii) imports of such products from (1) the rest of the EEC and (2) all sources;

(7) if he will publish a table showing (a) the ratio of imports of mechanical engineering products to home demand in 1968, 1973, 1979, 1988, 1992 and his estimate for 1993, (b) the corresponding ratios for imports from the EEC, (c) output and employment in the United Kingdom industry and (d) the change since 1988 in the value and volume of (i) United Kingdom output and (ii) imports of such products from (1) the rest of the EEC and (2) all sources.

Mr. Needham: No. The available information may be found in the "Annual Abstract of Statistics", the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics", publications in the Business Monitors series, the Employment Gazette, the "Engineering Sales and Orders Digest", and the "Textiles Bulletin". Data are also available from the Central Statistical Office's central shared database, from Eurostat's CRONOS database, and from the Chemical Industries Association's "Basic International Chemical Industry Statistics". All the above data sources are in the Library of the House.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) whether he will publish a table showing for trade with non-EEC countries the volume of imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the relative volume for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990, each quarter from the beginning of 1992 to mid-1993 on the basis of trade in 1985;

(2) if he will publish a table showing for trade with the rest of the EEC unit values for imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the terms of trade for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990 and each quarter from the beginning of 1992 to mid-1993 on the basis of trade in 1985;

(3) whether he will publish a table showing for trade with the rest of the EEC the volume of imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the relative volume for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990 and each quarter from the beginning of 1992 to mid-1993 on the basis of trade in 1985;

(4) whether he will publish a table showing unit values for imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the terms of trade for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990, each quarter from the beginning of 1992 to mid-1993 on the basis of trade in 1985;

(5) whether he will publish a table showing the volume of imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the relative volume for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990 and each quarter from the beginning of 1992 to mid-1993 on the basis of trade in 1985;

(6) if he will publish a table showing for trade with non-EEC countries the unit values for imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the terms of trade for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990 and each quarter from the beginning of 1992 to mid-1993 on the basis of trade in 1985.

Mr. Needham: Information on whole world trade on the basis of trade in 1985 was last published in "First Release, UK Balance of Payments—Current Account in December, CSO(92)11", by the Central Statistical Office on 28 January 1993. Information prior to 1991 for whole world data can be found from earlier press releases.

Information for non-EC countries was first published in "First Release, UK Balance of Trade with countries outside the European Community in January, CSO(93)27. Prior to this information on whole world data was not split into EC and non-EC data. Information on non-EC trade was last published in "First Release, Balance of Trade with countries outside the EC—June 1993, CSO(93)100". Press releases after this date used the 1990 basis.

Copies of all the above publications are available in the Library of the House.

Separate information on EC data is not available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will publish a table showing the volume of imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the relative volume for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990, each quarter from the beginning of 1992 and the latest three months on the basis of trade in 1990;

(2) whether he will publish a table showing for trade with the rest of the EEC unit values for imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the terms of trade for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990, each quarter from the beginning of 1992 and the latest three months on the basis of trade in 1990;

(3) if he will publish a table showing unit values for imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the terms of trade for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990, each quarter from the beginning of 1992 and the latest three months on the basis of trade in 1990;

(4) whether he will publish a table showing for trade with the rest of the EEC the volume of imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the relative volume for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990, each quarter from the beginning of 1992 and the latest three months on the basis of trade in 1990;

(5) whether he will publish a table showing for trade with non-EC countries the unit values for imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the terms of trade for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990, each quarter from the beginning of 1992 and the latest three months on the basis of trade in 1990;

(6) if he will publish a table showing for trade with non-EC countries the volume of imports and exports of semi-manufactures, finished manufactures and all manufactures together with the relative volume for each year from 1987, for the first quarter of 1987, the third quarter of 1990, each quarter from the beginning of 1992 and the latest three months on the basis of trade in 1990.

Mr. Needham: The information is available from the Central Statistical Office central shared database, access to which is available in the Library of the House. Information for whole world trade is available from 1970 onwards. Information for EC and non-EC trade is available from 1988 onwards.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what was the ratio of imports to exports for trade in manufactures with Taiwan in (a) 1970, (b) 1979, (c) 1985 and (d) 1993 to the latest date for which figures are available; what was the real exchange rate in each of these years; what was the surplus or deficit in each of those years; what were the principal (i) surpluses and (ii) deficits in 1993; and what were the reasons for them;

(2) what was the ratio of imports to exports for trade in manufactures less diamonds with Belgium in (a) 1970, (b) 1979, (c) 1985 and (d) 1993 to the latest date for which figures are available; what was the surplus or deficit in each of those years; what was the real exchange rate in each of these years; what were the principal (i) surpluses and (ii) deficits in 1993; and what were the reasons for them;

(3) what was the ratio of imports to exports for trade in manufactures with China in (a) 1970, (b) 1979, (c) 1985 and (d) 1993 to the latest date for which figures are available; what was the surplus or deficit in each of those years; what was the real exchange rate in each of these years; what were the principal (i) surpluses and (ii) deficits in 1993; and what were the reasons for them;

(4) what was the ratio of imports to exports for trade in manufactures with Germany in (a) 1970, (b) 1979, (c) 1985 and (d) 1993 to the latest date for which figures are available; what was the surplus or deficit in each of those years; what was the real exchange rate in each of these years; what were the principal (i) surpluses and (ii) deficits in 1993; and what were the reasons for them;

(5) what was the ratio of imports to exports for trade in manufactures with France in (a) 1970, (b) 1979, (c) 1985 and (d) 1993 to the latest date for which figures are available; what was the surplus or deficit in each of those years; what was the real exchange rate in each of these years; what were the principal (i) surpluses and (ii) deficits in 1993; and what were the reasons for them;

(6) what was the ratio of imports to exports for trade in manufactures with Indonesia in (a) 1970, (b) 1979, (c) 1985 and (d) 1993 to the latest date for which figures are available; what was the surplus or deficit in each of those years; what was the real exchange rate in each of these years; what were the principal (i) surpluses and (ii) deficits in 1993; and what were the reasons for them;

(7) what was the ratio of imports to exports for trade in manufactures with Italy in (a) 1970, (b) 1979, (c) 1985 and (d) 1993 to the latest date for which figures are available; what was the surplus or deficit in each of these years; what was the real exchange rate in each of those years; what were the principal (i) surpluses and (ii) deficits in 1993; and what were the reasons for them;

(8) what was the ratio of imports to exports for trade in manufactures with Russia in (a) 1970, (b) 1979, (c) 1985 and (d) 1993 to the latest date for which figures are available; what was the surplus or deficit in each of those years; what was the real exchange rate in each of those years; what were the principal (i) surpluses and (ii) deficits in 1993; and what were the reasons for them;

(9) what was the ratio of imports to exports for trade in manufactures with the Netherlands in (a) 1970, (b) 1979, (c) 1985 and (d) 1993 to the latest date for which figures are available; what was the surplus or deficit in each of these years; what was the real exchange rate in each of those years; what were the principal (i) surpluses and (ii) deficits in 1993; and what were the reasons for them;

(10) what was the import to export ratio for trade in manufactures with Germany in 1993 to the latest available date and what was the corresponding surplus or deficit; what were the figures for 1970, 1979 and 1985 and the corresponding level of the real exchange rate compared to 1993; and if he will list the principal surpluses and deficits in 1993 together with the reasons therefor:

(11) what was the ratio of imports to exports for trade in manufactures with Brunei in (a) 1970, (b) 1979, (c) 1985 and (d) 1993 to the latest date for which figures are available; what was the surplus or deficit in each of those years; what was the real exchange rate in each of these years; what were the principal (i) surpluses and (ii) deficits in 1993; and what were the reasons for them;

(12) what was the ratio of imports to exports for trade in manufactures with Singapore in (a) 1970, (b) 1979, (c) 1985 and (d) 1993 to the latest date for which figures are available; what was the surplus or deficit in each of those three years; what was the real exchange rate in each of these years; what were the principal (i) surpluses and (ii) deficits in 1993; and what were the reasons for them.

Mr. Needham: Information on United Kingdom trade in manufactures, defined in sections 5 to 8 of the standard international trade classification, is published regularly by the Central Statistical Office in the "Overseas Trade Statistics" of the United Kingdom.

Since the beginning of 1993, the publication appears in two parts: "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom with countries outside the European Community (Extra-EC Trade)", and "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom with countries within the European Community (Extra-EC Trade: Intrastat)". These publications are available from the Library of the House.

Belgium and Luxembourg are treated as a single economic unit; separate figures for the two are not available. Information on United Kingdom imports of diamonds from Belgium-Luxembourg is commercially confidential.

For statistical purposes, the former German Democratic Republic and the Federal Republic of Germany were combined, as Germany, since 1991.

Information on real exchange rates is not available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the export figures of manufactures in the three months to November 1993 and the corresponding figures for the same period in 1990 for the United Kingdom and the other main manufacturing countries.

Mr. Needham: Information on United Kingdom exports of manufactures in the three months to November 1993 is available via the Central Statistical Office database, which can be accessed from the Library of the House. The corresponding information for the main manufacturing countries is not readily available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost. The 1990 information is published by the CSO in "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics" February 1993, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the (a) United Kingdom, (b) German and (c) French share of 3Q1992 exports of manufactures by the main manufacturing countries in the third quarter of 1992.

Mr. Needham: The information requested can be found in table E2 of the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics" February 1993, published by the CSO, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made as to the extent to which the standstill since 1990 on the price of semi-manufactures imported from non-EC countries has contributed to the change of 6 per cent. in the United Kingdom of intermediate goods over the same period.

Mr. Needham: The Department has not undertaken such a study.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the levels of United Kingdom exports of commercial vehicles weighing over 7·5 tonnes between 1988 and 1992; what was the level of exports from Germany, Italy, Sweden, Spain and France in those years; and which countries accounted for the change in the level of United Kingdom exports.

Mr. Needham: Information on the level of United Kingdom exports by country of commercial vehicles weighing over 7·5 tonnes can be readily derived from information in table 62 of "Motor Industry of Great Britain —World Automotive Statistics", published by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders Ltd., a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

The information for Germany, Italy, Sweden, Spain and France could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the volume of semi-manufactures imported from non-EEC countries in the three months to the end of January and how this is affected by the change since 1990 of the nominal exchange rate for sterling against the currencies of those countries; what was the increase in the case of imported semi-manufactures (a) used in producing manufactures other than food, drink and tobacco and (b) which compete directly or indirectly with home-produced goods; and what was the consequential increase in the import content of goods manufactured in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Needham: Information on the volume of semi-manufactures imported for non-EC countries in the three months to January 1994 was published by the Central Statistical Office in "First Release CSO(94)38, Balance of Trade with Countries Outside the EC—January 1994". The release is available in the Library of the House.

An exchange rate for sterling against non-EC currencies is not readily available. Nominal exchange rates against the US dollar are published regularly by the International Monetary Fund in "International Financial Statistics". The publication is available in the Library of the House. It is not possible to isolate the effect of exchange rates on imports from other factors.

The increase in the volume of semi-manufactures used in producing manufactures other than food, drink and tobacco could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. All imports compete directly or indirectly with home-produced goods. The import content of goods manufactured in the United Kindom cannot be identified.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the United Kingdom output of passenger cars in 1991 in comparison with that of Spain; what was the balance of trade and the ratio of exports to imports in that year between Spain and the United Kingdom in (a) cars and (b) components; and what assessment he has made as to the local content of cars produced in (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) Spain.

Mr. Needham: The available data are published by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders Ltd. in "Motor Industry of Great Britain 1992—World Automotive Statistics". Data for United Kingdom and Spanish output of passenger cars can be found in table 12. United Kingdom exports of passenger cars and parts and accessories to Spain are in table 60. The corresponding table for imports is table 89. This publication is available in the Library of the House.

The Government have a long-standing practice of establishing understandings on local, European content with major inward investors in the vehicles sector, which are monitored regularly. The local content of cars produced in the United Kingdom by the major Japanese manufacturers is currently 70 per cent. or more. Information about the local content of cars produced in Spain is not available.

Motor Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the development of the British car industry in the Common Market since 1975 and the extent to which forecasts made at that time were fulfilled.

Mr. Sainsbury: Relevant statistics relating to the development of the British motor industry can be found in the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders' annual publication "Motor Industry of Great Britain—World Automotive Statistics" which is held in the Library of the House.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 23 February, Official Report, column 229, to what extent his Department is responsible for collecting information concerning the effect of the change in the terms of trade for manufactures on production and trade in motor cars; what steps had been taken by him or on his behalf to secure such information and with what result; what account will be taken of this matter in the following White Paper on competitiveness; what steps his Department has taken to obtain the information from trade organisations and academics specialising in the development of the car industry; and if he will now do so.

Mr. Sainsbury: Data relating to international trade by the United Kingdom are collected by Customs and Excise and published by the Central Statistical Office. The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders also publishes trade statistics calculated from the data collected by Customs and Excise. The CSO also compiles the producer price index for motor vehicles and parts thereof, but no separate index is published for motor cars alone. Data are not collected relating to the prices at which new cars are sold at retail distribution to final buyers within the United Kingdom.

The terms of trade of motor cars in international markets and their production are determined by market forces, including the competitiveness of individual car manufacturers.

The White Paper on competitiveness will be presented to Parliament later this year.

Auditors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he will take to ensure that the auditing firms that audit public limited companies will be required to file annual accounts and other information with the appropriate supervisory body.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I have no plans to introduce such a requirement.

An auditor which is a company or an unregistered company within the meaning of the Companies Act 1985 is already subject to the disclosure requirements of that Act. With the exception of certain partnerships which are subject to the Partnerships and Unlimited Companies (Accounts) Regulations 1993, unincorporated bodies are not required to publish accounts.

Liquidators' Fees

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what have been the total fees of the liquidators associated with (a) Polly Peck, (b) the Bank of Credit and Commerce International and (c) the Maxwell Group of companies.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: My Department does not have this information.

Time Zones

Dame Angela Rumbold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how he intends to proceed upon the deregulation task forces' recommendation that the United Kingdom should harmonise its time with that of Europe following his Department's decision not to use the procedures of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

We are taking the views of the transport and communications task force into account in our consideration of policy on future summer time arrangements, which we hope to bring to a conclusion soon.

Radio Spectrum Review Committee

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will publish the report of the stage 3 radio spectrum review committee; and if he will make a statement on the future management of the radio spectrum.

Mr. Heseltine: [pursuant to his reply, 10 March 1994, c. 336-37]. The consultative document has been published today and I have placed copies in the Library of the House.

The document seeks views on how to manage the spectrum to maximise the economic benefit derived from it while preserving access by the armed forces, the emergency services and the widest range of other users, such as the scientific community and hobbyists. It envisages an extended role for the private sector in planning the spectrum and assigning frequencies, with the Radiocommunications Agency retaining responsibility for a number of core functions that need to be performed by Government.

The document also proposes changes to the basis of charging for access to the spectrum to clarify the choices facing radio users. At present, the licence fees paid by radio users give little incentive to use spectrum efficiently. The development of a secondary market in spectrum access rights and selective auctions would enable the value of the spectrum to be better reflected in pricing and make it easier for new users to gain access to spectrum.

Indonesia

Mr. Hanson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to stop arms sales to Indonesia.

Mr. Needham: No. All applications for export licences for arms are subject to rigorous scrutiny on a case-by-case basis.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Attorney-General how many public interest immunity certificates were signed in each year since 1964.

The Attorney-General: I understand that no central records have been kept.

As to the signing of certificates by the Law Officers, I refer my hon. and learned Friend to the answer that I gave yesterday to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker), Official Report, column 13. We do not have any records for any earlier period.

Disabled Employees

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Attorney-General how many registered disabled people are employed in his Department; and what percentage this is of the total.

The Attorney-General: The number of registered disabled people employed by the departments for which I am responsible is set out in the table.

The Crown Prosecution Service, the Serious Fraud Office and the Treasury Solicitor's Department also employ people with disabilities who are not registered, but the numbers are not readily available.

Each of the Law Officers departments is an equal opportunities employer.

Department	Registered disabled people	Percentage of total workforce
Legal secretariat to the Law Officers	—	—
Crown Prosecution Service	38	0·6
Serious Fraud Office	—	—
Treasury Solicitor's Department	11	2·0

Open Government

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Attorney-General what will be the implications for the operation of his Department of the code of practice on open government.

The Attorney-General: In respect of the departments for which I have responsibility, the code of practice directly applies only to the Treasury Solicitor's Department. The Department is currently preparing a procedure for compliance with the code which will reinforce and build on existing arrangements for the provision of information. The Crown Prosecution Service and the Serious Fraud Office will seek voluntarily to comply with the code so far as possible.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Bail Digging

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he now expects to reply to Alnwick district council's representations to him about the proposed byelaw relating to bait digging.

Mr. Charles Wardle: We are carefully considering the legal issues relating to this matter and hope shortly to be in a position to send the council a substantive reply.

Police Register

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there will be a charge to organisations who wish to check the police register for the suitability of adults who will be working with children.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The possibility of charging for checks on criminal records is one of the issues being considered by the Home Office in its current review of arrangements for access to criminal records for vetting purposes. No decision on this matter has yet been reached.

Fire Safety

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of personnel engaged in fire safety enforcement in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: It is estimated that approximately 1,834 full-time equivalent specialist fire safety officers are engaged in the enforcement of fire safety throughout England and Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will visit Queensferry fire station to discuss aspects of fire safety responsibility with members of the Clwyd fire brigade.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so.

Police Officers, London

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of police officers per 100,000 population for each year since 1979 for London.

Mr. Charles: The available information is contained in the table.

Number of police officers per 100,000 population in the City of London and in the Metropolitan police district

Drinking Ban, Cleveland

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to give approval to the ban on drinking in public places in Yarm and Thornaby, Cleveland.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Home Office Officials wrote to Stockton-on-Tees borough council on 21 March giving agreement in principle to the proposal for byelaws prohibiting the consumption of intoxicating liquor in designated parts of Yarm and Thornaby. That letter asked for further essential information about the areas which the council wishes to designate. We expect to be able to give provisional approval to the byelaws once the necessary information has been obtained.

Political Asylum

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for political asylum there have been in each of the past three years by persons travelling from the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus; and how many of these applications have been refused.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This information is not available as such cases are not identified separately in our statistics.

Television Licences

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women were remanded into custody in (a) Great Britain and (b) the west midlands for each quarter for each of the last five years for non-payment of fines imposed for not possessing a television licence.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Lynne Jones, dated 23 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many (a) men and (b) women were remanded into custody in (a) Great Britain and (b) the West

Midlands for each quarter for each of the last five years for non-payment of fines imposed for not possessing a television licence.

There were none in England and Wales. When a court fine is unpaid the court considers a number of non-custodial options and only then can impose a custodial sentence. Information for Scotland should be obtained from the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by him and his ministerial colleagues in February.

Mr. Howard: My ministerial colleagues and I received approximately 2,300 letters from, and wrote just over 1,500 letters to, hon. Members in February.

Prisons

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average weekly cost of keeping (a) convicted prisoners and (b) prisoners on remand in prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from I. Dunbar to Ms Cheryl Gillan, dated 23 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent question about the average weekly cost of keeping (a) convicted prisoners and (b) prisoners on remand in prison.

Costs are collected for types of establishment rather than for types of prisoner. The figures for 1992-93 are:

Type of establishment	Net operating cost per prisoner place per week
Local Prisons and Remand Centres	561
Remand Prison	333
Dispersal prisons	705
Category B Training prisons	481
Category C Training prisons	357
Adult Male Open prisons	285
Young Offender Closed establishments	418
Young Offender Open establishments	392
Female establishments	505

During the year in question convicted prisoners were held in all types of prison except the remand prison and remand centres. Remand prisoners were held in the remand prison, remand centres and local prisons. It is not, therefore, possible to provide an average cost for convicted and remand prisoners separately.

Prison Officers

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in what circumstances under the "Conduct and Discipline in the Prison Service" it would be a disciplinary offence for a prison officer to contact an hon. Member regarding his own employment circumstances;

(2) what are the rules governing the political activities of members of HM Prison Service;

(3) in what circumstances under the "Conduct and Discipline in the Prison Service" a prison officer is prevented from raising with his own hon. Member concerns relating to (a) the handling of a grievance in his own case and (b) the operation of a particular prison establishment;

(4) if the rules of confidentiality covering prison officers extend beyond individual cases to the general standards of operation of the prison service.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from I. Dunbar to Mr. Kevin Hughes, dated 23 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the Office, to reply to your recent Questions about prison officers contacting honourable Members, and the rules about confidentiality and political activities in the Prison Service.

Like all civil servants, prison officers have always been subject to the rule that they should not attempt to enlist political or other outside influence to support their own personal claims as civil servants. An internal procedure enables any personal concern of a member of staff to be reviewed, with the ultimate right of appeal to the Permanent Head of the Home Office.

Members of the Prison Service are entitled to raise general matters with their Members of Parliament, but must have regard to their duty of confidentiality and loyal service to the Crown. They should avoid any action which might compromise the right of colleagues or inmates to privacy, and have a duty to protect official information which is held in confidence.

You asked about the circumstances in which it would be a disciplinary offence for a prison officer to raise, with an honourable Member, matters concerned with his own employment in the Prison Service. "Conduct and Discipline in the Prison Service", introduced in July 1993, specifies "attempting to enlist the assistance or support of outside individuals or organisations (including Members of Parliament) to secure advancement or improve one's personal position", and "disclosure of official information held in confidence, whether to inmates, the press or others" are examples of conduct which may attract disciplinary action.

It is not possible to state the precise circumstances in which disciplinary action might be taken in these areas, since this would depend on careful consideration of the circumstances of the particular case. The Prison Service Code of Conduct and Discipline specifically provides that disciplinary action against a member of staff who is alleged to have attempted to secure personal advancement by approaching an honourable Member can be taken only with the agreement of the personnel management division at Prison Service Headquarters.

As to the rules governing political activities of members of the Prison Service, the position is that civil servants, including members of the Prison Service, are required to discharge loyally the duties assigned to them by the government of the day of whatever political persuasion. Ministers and the public must have confidence that civil servants' personal views do not cut across the discharge of their official duties. The intent of the rules governing political activities by civil servants is to allow them the greatest possible freedom to participate in public affairs without infringing these fundamental principles. The rules are concerned with the public expression of political views, rather than privately-held opinions.

These rules are set out in detail in the Home Office Staff handbook and a Home Office Notice, copies of which are enclosed.

Voluntary Services Unit

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the projects, services and organisations which have received funding from the voluntary services unit for each year since 1981, listing the payments made in constant 1993 prices, and distinguishing between those projects whose scope is limited to (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland, (d) Northern Ireland, (e) England and Wales and (f) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: This question could be answered only at disproportionate cost.

Court Cases (Reporting)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to require that media reporting of cases to be brought before the courts in the Irish Republic shall be subject to the same restrictions as govern reporting of cases brought before United Kingdom courts.

Mr. Maclean: Where a warrant for arrest has been issued or granted in a criminal case in the United Kingdom, including a case where that warrant forms part of an extradition request, any person publishing material that creates a substantial risk that the course of justice in the proceedings in question will be seriously impeded or prejudiced is already liable to proceedings under the Contempt of Court Act 1981. There are no plans to extend the scope of the Contempt of Court Act to the period before proceedings are active, as defined by schedule 1 to the Contempt of Court Act 1981.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. William McGrath

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will institute a public inquiry into the length of time it took to bring to trial those accused of the death of Mr. William McGrath, of Morrison street, Bolton, and the access to drugs of the key witnesses in the case who were under police protection; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The listing of cases for trial is a matter for the courts.

The actions taken by police officers in the course of their duties are operational matters and entirely the responsibility of the police. I understand, however, that at no time during this case were any witnesses under police protection.

Safer Cities

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many safer cities programmes were running each year since 1 April 1989; what was the total cost of their budgets for each year from 1989-90; how many will be running on 1 April; and what will be the total of their budgets for 1994-95.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The number of safer cities projects operated and the total cost of their budgets since 1 April 1989 is as follows:

Year	Projects	Cost (£ million)
1989-90	16	3·3
1990-91	16	6·3
1991-92	20	7·2
1992-93	20	7·7
1993-94	[1]20	[2]6·0
[3]1 April 1994	14	[2]2·1

[1] The figure for 1993-94 excludes the 10 new areas which were announced in December 1993 and are currently being established.
[2] Estimated.
[3] Announcements on further projects are planned for 1994-95. As the bulk of the funding for safer cities is to be included in the single regeneration budget to be administered by the Department of the Environment from 1 April 1994, the precise timetable for later waves, together with associated costs, will be drawn up in conjunction with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. The costs quoted are therefore only those which remain funded by the Home Office.

The costs include some expenditure, such as project staff salaries and rent for office accommodation, which is incurred by the safer cities central team.

Crime Clear-up Rates

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the highest five clear-up rates for primary crime in police authorities in England and Wales in each of the past seven years.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 21 March 1994]: My Department does not use the term "primary crime". Instead, the figures provided are the percentage of all recorded offences which were cleared up by "primary" means: charged, summoned or cautioned—as opposed to "secondary" means: taken into consideration, interview of convicted offender and other. Police forces with the highest primary clear up rates on this basis are given in the table. The information is not yet available for 1993. Prior to 1989, information in this format is incomplete.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Cash Plans

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish an update table A—cash plans—of "Trade and Industry 1994"—Cm 2504—in constant 1993-94 prices.

Mr. Heseltine: The figures provided in table A of the Department of Trade and Industry's 1994 report are produced in cash terms, consistent with Treasury guidance. They may be adjusted to reflect constant 1992-93 prices, this being the current basis used for such analysis, by means of the GDP deflators which are shown in table 1.1 of the Statistical Supplement to the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1994-95 (Cm 2519). Table 5B.4 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1994-95 shows the DTI's overall expenditure for the period 1988-89 to 1996-97 adjusted in this way.

Staff Numbers

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will provide for each of his Department's laboratories and agencies (a) the number of whole-time equivalent staff in post now, (b) the number of WTE staff in post at 1 April 1993, (c) whether operational and management budgets for the 1994-95 year have been determined, (d) whether the agency is subject to review and the date on which that review began and (e) what financial target was set for 1993-94; whether it is expected to achieve it; and what target has been set for 1994-95.

Mr. Heseltine: The information requested in (a), (b) and (d) is set out in the table. Budgets and targets for 1994-95 have not yet been confirmed. Achievements against the 1993-94 financial targets will be published in the agencies' annual reports and accounts: these will be laid before Parliament and placed in the Library of the House.

Agency	Number of permanent staff (whole time equivalent) 1 March 1994	1 April 1993	Review of agency announced	Financial target 1993-94

Technology Transfer

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all his Department's schemes and services to promote technology transfer together with the date on which they were opened; what was the expenditure committed; and if he will list the projects supported in each scheme or service in expected outturns up to 1 April.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Department's innovation and technology budget covers a number of schemes to promote technology transfer. The major ones are listed in the table, together with the date on which they were opened and, where available, the expenditure committed. DTI activity for which technology transfer is not the main objective is not included.

In addition, the Department continues to seek to raise awareness in the benefits of participating in EC research and development programmes, many of which incorporate elements of technology transfer.

The additional information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Open Government

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what will be the implications for the operation of his Department of the code of practice on open government.

Mr. Eggar: The code of practice will reinforce and build upon my Department's existing arrangements for the provision of information.

We will be establishing a central contact point to deal with requests for information under the code. Requests for information which can be dealt with simply and quickly will not attract a charge. More complex requests, requiring a significant diversion of resources, will attract a charge in line with the amount of work involved. We will keep our charging arrangements under review at all times. Details of charges and other administrative matters will be made available when the code comes into force.

Phone Calls (Asia and Africa)

Mr. Madden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received concerning telephone customers in the United Kingdom being charged for telephone calls not made to Asia and Africa because of false-answers defects; what estimate he has as to the numbers of United Kingdom customers so charged; and how much revenue accrues to British telephone companies as a result.

Mr. McLoughlin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 22 March 1994, Official Report, column 202.

Bestwood and Atlanta Fund Managers

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total cost of the inspectors' report on Bestwood and Atlanta Fund Managers; how it has been disbursed to each inspector; what are the business connections of the inspectors; when the inspectors were appointed; and on what date the report was published.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The inspectors, Mr. Gabriel Moss QC and Mr. John Venning FCA of Robson Rhodes, chartered accountants, were appointed on 23 June 1989. Their report was published on 20 January 1994. The total cost of the inspection was £2,684,000, £202,370 being paid to Mr. Moss and the remainder to Mr. Venning's firm.

Company Returns

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many incorporated companies have failed to file accounts at Companies House for each year since 1985;

(2) what action he takes when a company fails to file its annual return within the prescribed period;

(3) if he will provide a list of the number of companies which have been fined or have been disincorporated as a result of failure to file annual returns for each or any of the years since 1985.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: These matters are for Companies House. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive, David Durham, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from D. Durham to Mr. Austin Mitchell, dated 18 March 1994:

Mr. Hamilton, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs, has asked me as Registrar and Chief Executive of Companies House Executive Agency, to reply to the following Parliamentary Questions which you tabled:

*How many incorporated companies have failed to file accounts at Companies House for each of the years since 1985.

*What action is taken when a company fails to file its annual return within the prescribed period.

*How many companies have been fined or have been disincorporated as a result of failure to file annual return for each or any of the years since 1985.

The statistical information which you have requested is published by the President of the Board of Trade in the general annual report of matters within the Companies Act, which is laid before both Houses of Parliament pursuant to section 729 of the Companies Act 1985. However, for your convenience, I have extracted the relevant figures from the reports for each of the years in question. I shall now attempt to clarify the remaining points which you have raised.

Companies House tries very hard to ensure that each individual company is reminded of its obligation to deliver annual returns and accounts. On average, some two million letters are issued each year, as a timely reminder before documents become due and, if needs be, in an attempt to secure compliance of the law where documents are found to be outstanding.

Where it is established, having issued reminders, that a defaulting company remains in business or in operation, every effort is made to encourage the company to file with the minimum of delay. Regrettably, however, it is sometimes necessary to institute criminal proceedings in order to secure delivery of the required documentation. Failure to file annual returns or accounts is a criminal offence and, on conviction, a fine of up to a maximum of £5,000 can be imposed upon directors personally by the Court for each separate offence.

In addition, where annual accounts are delivered outside the statutory time provided by the Companies Act, the company itself is liable to a civil penalty of up to £1,000 for private companies and £5,000 for public companies, depending on the lateness of the accounts. I must stress, however, that the system of late filing penalties is designed to encourge timely filing, with the ultimate aim being that no penalties are levied because all companies file on time. There is no late filing penalty payable in respect of the late delivery of annual returns.

With regards to disincorporation, or dissolution of companies. Section 652 of the Companies Act 1985 provides me with authority to strike off and dissolve a company where I have reason to believe that it is no longer in business or in operation. Before dissolving a company, I am required to issue a number of notices to the company at its registeredd office address, inquiring if it remains in business or in operation. In the absence of any response, a notice is published in the London Gazette warning of my intention to strike the name of the company off the register. A copy of this notice, which is also sent to the company, is placed on the company's record. I must emphasise, that dissolution action is not intended to be a punishment for failing to comply with the disclosure requirements of the Companies Act.

Finally, I can assure you that Companies House is committed in everything it does to balance the interests of limited companies who have a statutory duty to provide information, with the interests of the public who have a right by law to such information. If records at Companies House are up-to-date, companies can be investigated and assessed before any dealings take place and a great deal of financial uncertainty and, as is so often the case today, the loss of hard earned money may be avoided.

I hope that I have correctly interpreted the questions which you have tabled and that I have covered the points raised. Should you, however, require any additional information please do not hesitate to contact me.

Pennine Commercial Holdings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the inspectors to inquire into the affairs of Pennine Commercial Holdings were appointed; when the inquiry was completed; what are the business connections of the inspectors; whether any of them came from the accountancy firms criticised in any DTI inspectors' reports; what is the cost of the investigation and how it has been disbursed to each inspector; what reports so far have been published; and when he will publish the final reports.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Elizabeth Appleby QC and Peter Wilfred Foss FCA of Moores Rowland were appointed inspectors of Pennine Commercial Holdings plc on 4 October 1983 under the provisions of Section 165(1)(b) of the Companies Act 1948 (now section 432 of the Companies Act 1985). The inspectors have not been criticised in any DTI inspection report. The inspectors are reviewing their interim report on Pennine Commercial Holdings with a view to submitting a final report following the conclusion of criminal proceedings. When the completed report is submitted, publication will be considered. The cost of the investigation to date is £384,000 of which £35,000 relates to the legal inspector, and the balance to Mr. Foss's firm.

Inspectors' Reports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when his Department started sending copies of the DTI inspectors' reports to the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England; and what were the reasons for the decision to do so.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to my letter to him of 28 October 1992. It has long been the practice to send copies of published reports to the institute in appropriate cases. Section 449(1)(L) of the Companies Act 1985 introduced the ability to pass to the Institute copies of reports prior to publication. The first such disclosure was in 1988.

Auditors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if partners from the auditing firm criticised in the DTI inspectors' reports on Sound Diffusion, Rotaprint, Alexander Howden, Edencorp, Milbury and WMD Underwriting agencies are present on the Auditing Practices Board or its working parties.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The constitution of the Auditing Practices Board is a matter for the Consultative Committee of Accountancy Bodies.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will introduce legislation under which auditors would owe a duty of care to individual creditors;

(2) if he will introduce legislation under which auditors would owe a duty of care to individual shareholders.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I have no plans to do so.

Al Saudi Banque

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what legislative proposals he has for the reversal of the 1989 Al Saudi Banque judgment.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I have no such proposals.

Chile (Alcohol Trade)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what details are available of the annual value of Chilean wine imported into the United Kingdom; and what is the annual value of the Scotch whisky exported to Chile.

Mr. Needham: Information on the annual value of wine imported into the United Kingdom from Chile is available from 1988 onwards. The annual 1993 value of imports into the United Kingdom was £7·4 million. Information on the annual value of Scotch whisky exported to Chile is not identified separately from exports of Irish whiskey in the United Kingdom trade classification.

HEALTH

Temazepam

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total net ingredient cost of the drug temazepam in each NHS region and family health services authority area in 1991-92 and 1992-93, and for the six-month period 1 April 1993 to 1 October 1993; and if she will express these figures as an expenditure per head of population.

Dr. Mawhinney: The available information will be placed in the Library.

Information prior to October 1991 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 8 March, Official Report, column 165, if she will list by region hospital closures which have been contested by community health councils in each year since 1988.

Mr. Sackville: The following known hospital closures were initially contested by community health councils and remained contested throughout the consultation period. More detailed information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Hospital closures which have been contested in this way since 1988 are as:

Region

Northern:
Ponteland and Lemington Hospitals, Newcastle

Yorkshire:
Grove Hospital, Ilkley
Brandesburton Long Stay, Hull

Trent:
Balderton Hospital, Newark
Scarsdale Hospital, Chesterfield

East Anglian:
Newmarket Hospital, Suffolk

North West Thames:
Clapham Hospital
South Middlesex Hospital
Westminster Hospital
West London Hospital
Westminster Children's Hospital
St. Mary Abbots Hospital
St. Stephens Hospital

North East Thames:
Rush Green Hospital

South East Thames:
Sydenham Children's Hospital

South West Thames:
St. James' Hospital

Wessex:
None

Oxford:
Iver Cottage Hospital, Berkshire

South Western:
Almondsbury Hospital, Almondsbury
Standish Hospital, Stonehouse

West Midlands:
Mill Street Hospital, Kidderminster
Birmingham Accident Hospital

Mersey:
St. Paul's Eye Hospital, Liverpool

North Western:
Whittingham Hospital, Preston

Drugs

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in respect of which named drugs she has asked in the period since 1 April 1993 family health services authorities, general practitioners fundholders and general practitioners generally to review their prescription practices.

Dr. Mawhinney: Family health services authorities are responsible for working with general practitioners to improve the cost effectiveness of prescribing. It is for local decision whether the use of particular categories of drugs is targeted for review depending on local prescribing patterns.

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) first or second in line managers and (b) medical consultants who were employed by regional health authorities at the time she announced her decision to reduce the number of regions from 14 to eight have been moved, or will move later this year, to other posts in the NHS on protected salaries;

(2) for each of the 14 regional health authorities, how many (a) first and second in line managers and (b) medical consultants have (i) been appointed to a post in one of the eight merged regions, (ii) been appointed to a newly created post with a district health authority, (iii) been appointed to a previously established but vacant post with a district health authority, (iv) obtained employment outside the NHS and (v) become or expect in April 1994 to become unemployed.

Dr. Mawhinney: All employees of the 12 existing regional health authorities which are affected by mergers on 1 April 1994 will transfer to six new regional health authorities with effect from that date. Employees' employment rights will be protected by the application of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations (TUPE).

Appointments to posts in the new regional health authorities and in district health authorities, and the terms of those appointments, are matters for the employing authority.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for each of the 14 regional health authorities, how much money has been set aside for (a) redundancy or severance pay and for paying for early retirements and (b) for paying protected salaries in the forthcoming year, to employees who will lose their job as a result of the merger of regional health authorities.

Dr. Mawhinney: Questions of redundancy will be determined by the level of staffing identified as being needed to carry out the functions of national health service central management. This will depend upon the analysis of functions carried out in the NHS and the allocation of functions across the new structure. It is not therefore possible at this stage to estimate the cost of implementing the proposals to streamline NHS central management.

Cognex

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made to make available Cognex —Tacrine—to United Kingdom patients.

Mr. Sackville: Cognex—Tacrine—is not currently licensed to the United Kingdom. However, under the Medicines Act doctors have clinical freedom to treat particular named patients with unlicensed medicines.

Emphysema

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has conducted or commissioned into the number of work-related incidences of chronic emphysema that have occurred since 1979.

Dr. Mawhinney: None. However, the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant-in-aid from my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, spent £1,097,000 in 1992-93 on research into the respiratory system, some of which may be of relevance to emphysema.

Generic Prescribing

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her policy towards generic prescribing.

Dr. Mawhinney: Successive Governments have encouraged the use of generic drugs where these are available and clinically appropriate.

Nurses and Midwives

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish details of the whole-time equivalent numbers of (a) agency and (b) bank nursing and midwifery staff employed in the NHS for each year since 1987.

Mr. Sackville: The information available is shown in the table.

Bank and agency nursing and midwifery staff—England at 30 September each year

Whole-time equivalents

Year	Bank	Agency
1987	4,920	6,130
1988	5,830	6,240
1989	5,910	7,230
1990	6,230	6,710
1991	8,540	3,930
1992	10,020	3,230

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

The increase in bank nurses and midwives together with the corresponding decrease in agency nurses and midwives reflects the more widespread flexible working arrangements in the NHS for nurses and midwives.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the dates Ministers, or officials from her Department, including her Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985 including this year to date on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to her Department.

Mr. Sackville: Since 1 April 1993 no Minister or official from the Department of Health has used the Malaysia airline MAS on official business. Prior to that date information is not available.

Oral Health Strategy

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department is expecting to produce an oral health strategy; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) on 18 February at column 1042.

Prescription Medicines

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley) of 4 March, Official Report, column 917, what has been the annual rate of growth of the price index for national health service medicines since 1978.

Dr. Mawhinney: A single price index is not available for all national health service medicines. The annual rate of growth of the price index for family health services medicines since 1977-78 has been about 2·5 per cent.

Pollution

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of known environmental carcinogens she estimates result from vehicle emissions.

Mr. Sackville: The known environmental carcinogens produced by vehicle exhaust emissions are benzene; 1, 3-butadiene; and some polyaromatic hydrocarbons—PAHs—.

The expert panel on air quality standards—EPAQS—which advises my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has reported estimates that 87 per cent. of benzene emissions to the atmosphere are derived from vehicle exhausts. Benzene is classified by the International Agency for Research in Cancer—IARC—as a known human carcinogen. There are other sources of benzene to which people are exposed such as the diet, water and cigarette smoke. The panel has estimated that an urban non-smoker would take in between 61 per cent. and 80 per cent. of daily exposure from inhaled air.

Other than local leaks from industrial plants, vehicle exhaust emissions are the only source of 1, 3-butadiene in the atmosphere. IARC has classified this compound as a probable human carcinogen.

The quality of urban air review group—QUARG—which advises my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has estimated that 14 per cent. of the emissions to the atmosphere of PAHs derive from vehicle exhausts. IARC has classified some PAHs as probable human carcinogens, some as possible human carcinogens, and others, it has not classified.

The classification of carcinogens by IARC is widely accepted and is based on an assessment of the available research findings. Only where this includes human studies are chemicals classified as a known human carcinogen.

The reports of EPAQS and QUARG are available in the Library.

NHS Supplies Authority

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage target the NHS Supplies Authority has set for annual purchasing saving.

Mr. Sackville: At least 4 per cent. of the total aggregate value of all contracts negotiated for national health service customers within the year.

Inward Investment

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much public money has been spent to date on the commissioning of a management consultancy to draw up a strategic plan to attract inward investment from United States and Japanese pharmaceutical and biotechnology companies; and what is the total budget allocation for the project.

Mr. Sackville: Consultancy support in drawing up an inward investment strategy has been commissioned at a cost of £25,000. The budget for implementing the strategy will be determined when the initial stage has been completed.

High Blood Pressure

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to enable patients who require treatment for high blood pressure to use public swimming pools free of charge.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Drugs Companies

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the annual saving to the NHS arising from drug companies supplying certain drugs free to hospitals for each of the last five years; what assessment she has made of this practice for the health service; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: We are aware that some drug companies supply drugs free of charge to hospitals either as samples or where clinical trials are in progress. Information on the extent of these supplies is not available centrally.

Hotel Use

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of the use of private hotels for management, training and conference purposes by NHS staff and executive and non-executive members of (a) regional health authorities, (b) trusts, (c) district health authorities and (d) family health service authorities, by region and district in each of the last five years; and what are the reasons for the use of this accommodation.

Dr. Mawhinney: Use of private hotels is for each national health service body to determine on the basis of value for money, and costs cannot be separately identified from financial returns and accounts.

Funding Allocation

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library a copy of the guidance issued to NHS managers on how funds released by the closure or reduction of acute units are to be transferred to the primary health care sector.

Dr. Mawhinney: The "Priorities and planning guidance 1994-95", EL(93)54, identifies this as a matter for regional health authorities to address, in conjunction with other national health service authorities and purchasers, in developing their investment strategies. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the Government's objective of transferring resources from the acute to the primary health sector is reflected (a) in the regional and national training plans for community nursing services and (b) in the regional and national plans for staff in post within community nursing services.

Mr. Sackville: Regional commission training places for non-medical staff, including community nurses, are based on provider unit forecasts for qualified staff in post required in five years' time.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each purchasing health authority in England, the figures for revenue funding in 1992-93,1993-94 and 1994-95, and the estimated figures for 1995-96 and 1996-97; and if she will identify the changes for each health authority's revenue budget resulting from the replacement of the regional allocation working party system of determining funding allocation.

Mr. Sackville: Information will be placed in the Library showing 1992-93 expenditure for each district health authority. It is the responsibility of regional health authorities to allocate resources to districts. Information on the total resources allocated to DHAs in 1993-94 and 1994-95 or assumptions about future allocations is not available centrally.

The use of resource allocation working party (RAWP) targets was discontinued in 1990 when weighted capitation was introduced. Consequently, no RAWP targets are currently available for comparison with weighted capitation shares. Comparisons would not be meaningful. Under the old system authorities were funded for their "catchment population", whereas now they are purchasers of services for their resident population, with cross-boundary flows of patients being covered by payments under the national health service contracts.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contracts her Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The Department of Health has spent the following amounts from running costs on consultancy since its establishment as a separate Department:

1990-91	18,398,000
1991-92	24,258,000
1992-93	18,399,000

Information on the number of contracts is not available.

Infant Mortality

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the infant mortality rates by region for the last available year and by sex.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Infant mortality rates[1] by regional health authority for 1992

Regional Health Authority of usual residence	Males	Females
Northern	8·1	6·2
Yorkshire	7·5	5·9

South Western	7·0	4·0
West Midlands	8·9	7·4
Mersey	6·4	5·0
North Western	8·1	7·3
Wales	6·3	5·7

[1] Infant mortality deaths under one year per 1,000 livebirths.

Disabled Children

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of children suffer from a permanent disability.

Mr. Bowis: The 1985 survey of disability conducted by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys estimated that 3·2 per cent. of children under 16 in Great Britain had disabilities.

Breast Milk

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she takes to monitor regularly dioxins and similar substances in breast milk; what are her most recent findings; and what further plans she has.

Mr. Sackville: Two monitoring exercises have been carried out for dioxins in human milk in the United Kingdom, both as part of a World Health Organisation (WHO) Regional Office for Europe initiative. The results of the first exercise were reported in pollution paper No. 27: Dioxins in the Environment (HMSO: London, 1989). The second exercise is nearing completion and the results will be published in due course.

Results of the most recent analyses of human milk for total polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) and organochlorine pesticides were published in Food Surveillance Paper No. 34: Report of the Working Party on Pesticides Residues: 1988-1990 (HMSO: London, 1992). Further analysis of specific PCB compounds is under way as part of the second WHO exercise, referred to above.

The need for monitoring of human milk for these contaminants is kept under review by the relevant working parties of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's steering group on chemical aspects of food surveillance, on which the Department of Health is represented.

Copies of both papers are available in the Library.

Homeless Children

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the number of homeless children for the last available year by region.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Lead Contamination

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had or will have with colleagues in other Departments regarding the phasing-out of leaded petrol and lead water pipes in homes and schools.

Mr. Sackville: The Department is in regular contact with the Department of the Environment which is responsible for matters relating to lead in the environment. As part of the Government's policy of reducing public exposure to lead, we cut wherever possible, the permitted amount of lead in petrol from 0·4 to 0·15 grammes per litre in 1985. We have also encouraged the widespread use of unleaded petrol which now accounts for 55 per cent. of the United Kingdom market. All new cars must now be built to run on unleaded petrol and have catalytic converters fitted; these do not operate effectively if used with leaded petrol. This action should raise the market share of unleaded petrol to at least 90 per cent. by the year 2000.

The Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989, as amended, require that drinking water at the point where the water is supplied contains no more than 50 mcg of lead per litre. This standard is more rigorous than the requirements of the European Community Drinking Water Directive. The Commission is currently drafting a new directive. When the position on the new directive is clearer, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will be discussing with us any further action on levels of lead in drinking water.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were not on waiting lists for treatment but were waiting to see a specialist in the national health service in each region for each quarter for the last two years.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information on waiting times to first out-patient appointment is not collected. This year regional health authorities have set targets for first out-patient appointments and are aiming to reduce those that are unacceptably long. Most people who attend out-patient clinics are not placed on an in-patient or day case waiting list as they are either treated immediately or do not require any treatment.

Child Protection Register

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) boys and (b) girls were on a child protection register for the latest available year for each age cohort.

Mr. Bowis: The information is shown in the table.

Estimated numbers of children and young people on child protection registers in England at 31 March 1993, by age and sex

Age Group	All children	Boys	Girls
All Ages	32,500	16,000	16,400
Under 1	2,300	1,200	1,200
1-4	9,900	5,100	4,800
5-9	10,000	5,200	4,700
10-15	9,100	4,100	5,000
16 and over	1,100	400	700

Notes:—Figures are rounded to the nearest 100 and may not add up due to rounding.
The figure for "all ages, all children" includes unborn children.

Disabled Children

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many disabled children are in residential care for each age cohort, by sex and by region.

Mr. Bowis: The information available centrally, about the number of disabled children in residential care, relates to children looked after because their parents need relief from problems or stresses of caring for them. Information for 31 March 1992 is shown in the table.

Estimated number of children looked after in residential accommodation because parents need relief from the stresses of caring for a child with disabilities at 31 March 1992

2. Separate estimation procedures have been used for each region and figures rounded to the nearest 10. They will not necessarily add to totals.
3. * Indicates less than 5 children.
4. Short term placements covered by a single agreement are excluded.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she takes to monitor local authorities' duties under the Children Act 1989 to identify children with disabilities and provide or make available services which might benefit them.

Mr. Bowis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health publishes annual reports on the operations and achievements of the Children Act 1989. The 1993 report will be available shortly and will include a commentary on the services provided by local authorities for children with disabilities. In February 1994, the social services inspectorate pulished a report of a national inspection of local authority services to disabled children and their families, copies of which are available in the Library.

Haemodialysis

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements are made by health authorities to pay the extra cost of water and heating bills for patients requiring haemodialysis treatment at home; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Health authorities are responsible for meeting costs connected with home haemodialysis including the cost of maintaining the dialysis room at the appropriate temperature. From 1 April 1994 health authorities will also be responsible for meeting the cost of water used in the course of home haemodialysis by patients whose water supply is metered by their local water company.

Psychiatric Problems (Children)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the number of children in the United Kingdom who have a psychiatric/psychological problem which handicaps them for a year or more.

Mr. Bowis: Information on duration of handicap is not collected by the Department. It is estimated that at any point, between 10 per cent. and 20 per cent. of children and teenagers have worries or problems severe enough to need help in overcoming them.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the number of hospital admissions for mental illness for the latest available year for each age cohort for children by sex and by region.

Mr. Bowis: Information relating to the admission of children into hospitals is not available in the precise form requested. Provisional information available centrally on the number of finished consultants episodes in the mental illness specialties in 1990-91 is shown in the table.

Notes:
1. It should be noted that the figures in the table relate to finished consultant episodes and not to individuals, as a patient may be admitted more than once during the year.
2. The total figures do not always match the separate figures for males and females due to rounding.

Allergies

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the number of (a) boys and (b) girls in the United Kingdom having chemical and food intolerance allergies for each age cohort and by sex.

Mr. Sackville: Such estimates are not available.

Uganda Treasury (Debt)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will encourage the International Monetary Fund to sell off part of its gold stocks to generate the resources to write off debt owed to the fund by Uganda.

(2) if he will consider establishing a debt relief fund for Uganda, additional to the existing aid budget, to help Uganda meet its repayment obligations to multilateral lending agencies.

Mr. Nelson: Although Uganda is severely indebted, net transfers from the international financial institutions—IFIs—remain substantially in Uganda's favour. Most IFI support for Uganda is on highly concessional terms, thus reducing the debt service burden.

Debt to the IMF does not account for a high proportion of Uganda's debt stock. Uganda has benefited from highly concessional IMF assistance under the enhanced structural adjustment facility—ESAF—and, subject to continuing to pursue appropriate economic policies, is expected to receive further assistance under the enlarged ESAF. The United Kingdom was a prime mover in the establishment of ESAF in 1987 and has just agreed a further contribution of £50 million to enlarge the facility to help the poorest countries such as Uganda. The United Kingdom will over time contribute one ninth of the subsidy required by the enlarged ESAF. Uganda also benefits from highly concessional credits from the World Bank's International Development Association, which concentrates on lending to the poorest countries. The United Kingdom contributed £620 million to the IDA at the last replenishment. In addition, Uganda has help meeting its repayments on non-concessional loans to the bank through the bank's fifth dimension facility.

While the United Kingdom has advocated sales of IMF gold in the past, this has been to fund targeted concessional facilities such as ESAF rather than debt write-off. The United Kingdom believes that continued targeted concessional financial assistance is the best response by the IFIs to the debt problem of the poorest countries such as Uganda. Debt write-offs even if financed by gold sales would, by running down these institutions' assets and increasing their financing costs, weaken their financial standing and hence their ability to assist all developing countries. Both the IMF's and the World bank's funds are finite and revolving and intended to be available for use by members when and where they are most needed.

Uganda also has help in meeting its debt service obligations through concessional terms for its official debt. The United Kingdom has been a prime mover for this. The existing Trinidad terms which have the effect of halving payments due to creditor Governments over the period of an IMF agreement and give a commitment to consider reducing the stock of a country's reschedulable debt after three to four years of economic reform, are based on an initiative by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister when he was Chancellor. The United Kingdom continues to press other official creditors to agree to immediate stock of debt reduction, with reductions up to 80 per cent. for the most needy, for countries which have a one to two year track record of economic reform and are up to date with their debt servicing.

The United Kingdom believes that the approach outlined above is the most effective response to Ugandan debt and that a debt relief fund would not be a cost-effective or necessary use of the United Kingdom aid programme for Uganda.

Disabled Employees

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many registered disabled people are employed in his Department; and what percentage this is of the total.

Mr. Nelson: The information requested is set out in the publication "Independent", which was published on 18 March 1994, copies of which have been placed in the House Libraries.

Manufacturing Trade

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect the increase in the exchange rate against the ecu since February 1993 has had on the profitability of United Kingdom exports to the rest of the EC of manufactured goods; and what is his assessment of the part that played in the sale of Rover cars to BMW.

Mr. Nelson: The profitability of United Kingdom exports of manufactures to the rest of the EC depends on a number of factors. No estimate is available of the effect on such profitability of the exchange rate against the ecu. The sale of Rover to BMW is a matter for the firms themselves.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the visible balance of trade in manufactures on a balance of payments basis as a percentage of gross domestic product in 1971, 1979, 1989 and estimated for 1993: what assessment he has made of the reason for the changes; and whether he will publish the change in the (i) nominal and (ii) real rate of exchange which the treasury model of the economy shows would be required to restore the balance in terms of gross domestic product to what it was in (iii) 1978 and (iv) 1971.

Mr. Nelson: Figures for the visible balance of trade in manufactures and for gross domestic product are available on the CSO database, which can be accessed through the House of Commons Library. The identifiers are BPJF and CAOB. A country's visible trade balance depends on the strength of its own domestic demand and that of its trading partners, and on the level of its competitiveness.

All members have access to the Treasury model through the House of Commons Library. It is Treasury practice not to provide the results of model simulations in answer to parliamentary questions. This is due both to the excessive cost involved and the difficulty in making appropriate assumptions without knowing the context in which the figures will be used.

Economic Indicators

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the changes in (a) the real exchange rate, (b) the balance of trade in manufactures and (c) the rate of economic growth since 1964; and what assessment he has made of the extent of correlation between these indicators.

Mr. Nelson: There is no unambiguous definition of the real exchange rate. A variety of indicators is available. These are published in "Economic Trends", table 28. These, along with the balance of trade in manufacturers and GDP are also available on the CSO database, which can be accessed through the House of Commons Library. Some useful identifiers include:

FLAA—relative export prices;
FLAC—relative unit labour costs;
BPJF—the manufactures balance;
CAOP—GDP at factor costs.

Correlation coefficients, calculated from these data, are set out in table 1.

Table 1: Estimated Correlation Matrix of Variables (1964-91)

	FLAA	BPJF	CAOP	FLAC
FLAA	1.0000	—	—	—
BPJF	.21237	1.0000	—	—
CAOP	−.17787	−.71785	1.0000	—
FLAC	.96217	.19706	−.23963	1.0000

Annual data for the competitiveness measures are not yet available for 1992 and 1993 on the CSO database.

Interest Rates

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what part the deputy governor of the Bank of England plays in the formulation of interest rate policy; and whether the views he has recently expressed on the prospects for inflation represent those of the Government.

Mr. Nelson: Decisions on interest rates are a matter for Ministers, advised by Treasury officials and the Bank of England. In his speech to the Institute of Credit Management on 9 March, the deputy governor warned of the dangers of relaxing the fight against inflation. The Government will continue to set interest rates to meet their objectives for low inflation.

Diesel Fuel

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce fiscal measures to discourage the use of diesel as a motor engine fuel.

Sir John Cope: There are no plans at present to introduce such measures.

Gas Fuel

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce fiscal incentives to encourage buses and taxis to run on gas fuel.

Sir John Cope: There are no plans at present to introduce further measures.

Petrol Aromatics

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce fiscal incentives to petrol producers to reformulate petrol by removing aromatics.

Sir John Cope: There are no plans at present to introduce such incentives.

Food Exports

Mr.Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what instructions have been received by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise from Commission auditors in respect of the examining of food exports by the offloading of containers at any particular port.

Sir John Cope: Following a visit to the United Kingdom Customs in 1993, Commission auditors expressed dissatisfaction with the depth and rigour of examination of exports where common agricultural policy refunds were claimed. As a result, Customs issued more detailed guidance to staff on the standards to be observed.

Betting Duty

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 9 March, Official Report, column 222, how much general betting duty the Exchequer collected between November 1993 and January 1994.

Sir John Cope: Receipts from general betting duty in the three months November 1993 to January 1994 totalled £108 million. General betting duty is paid in the month following that in which the duty accrues. Thus the receipts for November 1993 to January 1994 relate to races run the months of October to December 1993.

Finance Bill

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he received asking for the deletion of clause 241 of the Finance Bill or to have it amended following consultation between the Treasury and the Institute of Chartered Accountants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Following representations made before and during the Committee stage debate on 17 March, the clause has been withdrawn. The Government have given a commitment to bring the matter back before the House in the next Finance Bill, which will allow the Inland Revenue and professional institutes an opportunity for consultations.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the correlation coefficient, lagged or otherwise, between the rate of exchange and (a) the percentage of adult males of working age in work and (b) the rate of unemployment since 1964.

Mr. Nelson: The correlation coefficients can be calculated from information available in the House of Commons Library. Population, employment, and unemployment figures from 1981 are available on the NOMIS database. Employment and unemployment figures before 1981 are published in the Employment Gazette. Population figures before 1981 are available from the population estimates unit of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. Figures for sterling exchange rates index are published, for example, in Economic Trends.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the correlation coefficient, lagged or otherwise, between the rate of inflation and (a) the percentage of adult males of working age in work and (b) the rate of unemployment since 1964.

Mr. Nelson: The correlation coefficients can be calculated from information available in the House of Commons Library. Population, employment, and unemployment figures from 1981 are available on the NOMIS database. Employment and unemployment figures before 1981 are published in the Employment Gazette. Population figures before 1981 are available from the population estimates unit of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. Figures for the Retail Prices Index are published in Economic Trends.

National Insurance

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer at what level the national insurance upper earnings limit would now be set had it increased at the same rate as the average earnings index since 1989; and what additional amounts in each year that would have raised.

Mr. Hague: I have been asked to reply.

The upper earnings limit is statutorily linked to the level of the basic pension. If the limit had been raised instead in line with the increase in average earnings since 1989, and rounded to the nearest pound, it would now be £442. The additional amounts that would have been raised in each year are in the table:

Additional national insurance contributions raised

Year	(£ million)
1990-91	45
1991-92	[1]0
1992-93	100
1993-94	140

[1]In the year to September 1990 prices rose more than earnings, and the upper earnings limit would not have been higher in 1991-92.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Balfour Beatty

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the number of cases in which Balfour Beatty has received aid moneys, otherwise than in connection with the Pergau dam project, from (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the World bank or (c) other multilateral organisations in respect of work in developing countries with which the United Kingdom has significant aid ties, which the company has subsequently had to return following failure to complete the work.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Under (a) we know of only one aid and trade provision case involving Balfour Beatty in which a project has had to be terminated and aid moneys returned. The project in question was the mini-hydros project in Peru, which was approved in July 1982 involving an ATP grant of £4,843,000. The project was frustrated because the local institution, Electroperu, failed to meet its contractual obligations, did not complete associated civil works and defaulted on its bank loan. The project was also hampered by the local security situation. At no point during the contract did any United Kingdom party fail to fulfil its obligations.

For projects under (b) the World bank and (c) other multilateral organisations, the ODA does not hold details of contracts placed with United Kingdom firms by these institutions and such information could be assembled only at disproportionate cost. The Pergau dam project is 60 per cent. complete and is on schedule for completion in August 1996.

Biodiversity

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation regarding its expertise in biodiversity, particularly in respect of discussions on the global environment facility; and what action the Government are taking to discourage unnecessary duplication in the United Nations system.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have had no consultations with UNESCO in this area. In relation to the global environment facility the instrument establishing the restructured GEF, agreed in Geneva on 16 March, is designed to encourage co-operation in the United Nations system.

Pergau Dam

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the environmental impact report from the consultant sent to assess the Pergau dam project in early February 1991.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I have placed a copy of the report entitled "Pergau Hydro-Electric Project: Environmental and Socio-Economic Issues" in the Library today.

Earth-scanning Radar

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether consideration has been given to the provision of earth-scanning radar equipment similar to that in use in the Gloucester murder inquiry for use in de-mining operations supported under the United Kingdom overseas aid budget.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Our role in humanitarian mine clearance operations continues to be one of funding organisations with suitable programmes. We have not to date received any proposals using advanced technology, but would consider funding the use of any appropriate technology which would speed up mine eradication.

Peru

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much aid is to be given to Peru in the coming year; and for what it has been allocated.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Bilateral aid to Peru during the coming year will be largely technical co-operation. Expenditure is likely to amount to approximately £3 million in 1994-95 financial year. This involves agreed activities in animal health, renewable energy generation, teacher training, scholarships for technical training for Peruvians in the United Kingdom, and small development projects managed through the British embassy.

Further projects either under development or planned will be directed mainly to support for health service reform, family planning and reproductive health services, renewable natural resources and water conservation. Assistance will also be provided through funds made available to United Kingdom non-governmental organisations under the joint funding scheme. In 1994-95 this support is likely to amount to over £1 million for activities in a wide variety of sectors.

South Africa

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he will take to ensure that the Government of South Africa after the elections of 27 April will promote educational opportunities for all; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Currently more than half of our bilateral aid to South Africa is spent on increasing access to, and improving the quality of, education and training for those disadvantaged by past policies. Education will continue to feature prominently in our growing aid programme, now running at some £15 million a year.

We will discuss with the new South African Government how best to support their efforts to reconstruct the education system on a professional, equitable and affordable basis.

International Military Services Ltd.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, in which aid and trade provision agreements since 1979 International Military Services Ltd. has played a role; and if he will give details of the company's involvement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: International Military Services Ltd. has not been lead contractor on any ATP projects. The names of subcontractors on ATP projects are not held centrally by either ODA or DTI and could be collected only at disproportionate cost. We are not aware of any role played by International Military Services Ltd. in any ATP agreement since 1979.

Banana Producers

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current United Kingdom position on the European Community proposal for aid to traditional African, Caribbean and Pacific banana-producing countries.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have proposed to the Commission amendments to the proposal which link assistance to restructuring and diversification. We will support the proposal if these amendments are agreed.

TRANSPORT

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions in the last five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. MacGregor: I answer parliamentary questions on the basis set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers".

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for the last 12 months how many parliamentary questions he has referred to one of his Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to his Department this represents.

Mr. Norris: The information required is not held in the form requested.

There have been 14 questions this parliamentary session which were referred to the chief executives of the Department's executive agencies. This represents 0·84 per cent.

Red Routes, London

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of fuel pollution resulting from the introduction of red routes in London.

Mr. Norris: Estimates of the reductions in vehicle emissions are set out in section 13 of the Transport Research Laboratory report on the pilot red route scheme (project report 31, 1993), a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact on traffic volumes on the roads involved resulting from the introduction of red routes in London.

Mr. Norris: The Transport Research Laboratory's assessment of the pilot red route scheme in north and east London concluded that many vehicles had rerouted from inappropriate roads onto the red route, but that there was not a large volume of new traffic.

Airport Security

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in ensuring tighter security for passengers at United Kingdom airports.

Mr. Norris: Since the Lockerbie tragedy there have been substantial improvements in aviation security in the United Kingdom both for passengers and for staff. Further improvements are being made in baggage screening and in acounting and authorising for carriage of all hold baggage on international flights.

The Department of Transport sets training standards for staff working in civil aviation who receive terrorist warnings, and for the national aviation security programme which covers, among other things, airport authorities' contingency plans, staff instructions, training programme and exercises.

Public Transport (Gas Guel)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to promote research and development of gas fuelling for buses and taxis.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington) on 21 March at col 9.

Bus Lanes, London

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to extend the number of designated bus lanes in London.

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) on 15 March at column 652.

Newly Qualified Drivers

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce a probationary period for newly qualified drivers.

Mr. Key: My right hon. Friend announced on 9 February at columns 270-71 the steps we are proposing to take following the consultation on "New Driver Safety". We are considering the practicalities of a scheme requiring drivers convicted of certain traffic offences within a specified period of qualifying to pass a further driving test; this might involve issuing licences on a probationary basis.

We also considered the case for introducing probationary plates, but are not yet convinced of its merits; we are prepared to consider this further when full results are available of a study into "restricted" plates in Northern Ireland.

Exclusion Zones, London

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce more traffic exclusion zones in central London.

Mr. Norris: This is a matter for local highway authorities, who are responsible for local roads in central London.

Air Pollution

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of pollution caused by diesel engines relative to other forms of fuel used in transportation.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Public Transport gave to the hon. Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) on 21 October 1993 at column 298 and the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington) on 21 March at column 9.

British Rail Pension Funds

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement on the future of British Rail pension funds.

Mr. Freeman: Soon.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the figure Q for the elasticity of journey time for the channel tunnel rail link for (a) international passengers and (b) domestic commuters.

Mr. Freeman: Union Railways has used several models when forecasting demand for domestic and international services. The information contained in these models is commercially confidential, given its relationship with marketing and pricing strategies.

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he intends to seek powers in the legislation for the proposed channel tunnel rail link to enable the new crossings of the Medway, for the rail link and for the M2 motorway, to be built at the same time.

Mr. Freeman: I intend that the legislation for the new channel tunnel rail link, which the Government aim to have ready for introduction as soon as parliamentary time allows, should include powers for a scheme to improve the M2 motorway from junction 1 to junction 4, enabling the two new bridges across the Medway to be built concurrently.

Light Dues

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on light dues.

Mr. Norris: I am pleased to announce that light dues for 1994-95 will be frozen at the levels set in March 1993. I am able to do so largely because the three general lighthouse authorities are to contain their expenditure proposals for 1994-95 broadly within the levels set for 1993-94. This has been made possible by further savings from the automation of lighthouses and by the authorities entering into co-operative arrangements which will enable a reduction to be made of one ship in the lighthouse tender fleet.

I commend the general lighthouse authorities for taking this initiative.

Shipping (Hazardous Cargoes)

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to keep shipping with hazardous cargoes away from areas of environmental sensitivity.

Mr. Norris: Measures are in place to keep ships carrying hazardous cargoes away from environmentally sensitive areas. These include "areas to be avoided" off the islands of Orkney and Shetland, around Fair Isle, and between the Smalls lighthouse and Grossholme island. In addition, there is a defined deep water route to the west of the Hebrides. Further measures to protect the coast will take account of any recommendations made by the inquiry announced to the House by the Secretary of State on 11 January 1993 under the chairmanship of Lord Donaldson of Lymington.

Greater Manchester Buses North Ltd.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from Corporate Finance Services on behalf of the employee buyout team of Greater Manchester Buses North Ltd.; what reply he is sending; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I have received a number of representations about the sale of both Greater Manchester Buses North and Greater Manchester Buses South recently. Amongst these was a letter about the sale of the North company from Coopers and Lybrand, Corporate Finance Services dated 15 March, to which an acknowledgement was sent on 17 March.

The Secretary of State's consent to both sales will eventually be required. In view of his quasi-judicial function in these sales it would not be appropriate for me to comment further or make a statement.

Westlink

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, when he expects Stanwell Buses Ltd., trading as Westlink, to be sold.

Mr. Norris: London Buses Ltd. sold Stanwell Buses Ltd., trading as Westlink, to a management buy-out team for £1·937 million on 19 January.

M1

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that a public explanation is offered for the confusion and delay which severely affected traffic on the northbound carriageway of the M1 north of junction 29 on 13 and 14 March; what action is being taken to avoid a recurrence of such an experience; and what redress those affected have available under the terms of the citizens charter.

Mr. Key [holding answer 18 March 1994]: During the night of 13 and 14 March, changes were being made to the traffic management on the major maintenance scheme to the north of junction 30 on the M1. These changes were agreed between the resident engineer, the contractor and the police and were planned to occur during a period of light traffic flow to minimise the delays and confusion to traffic. On Sunday 13 March heavy rain and gales threatened to make the work more difficult and, with the agreement of the police, work started at 2030—earlier than planned. This decision was taken to ensure that the changes were completed before the Monday morning rush hour.

Unfortunately some inconvenience is inevitable during essential changes in traffic management. Clearly every effort was made to minimise inconvenience and delay during essential maintenance work and therefore there is no redress under the citizens charter. I am sorry that members of the public suffered delay and confusion on this scheme, which has now been completed ahead of schedule.

Driving Tests

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what percentage of people taking their driving test in March 199330 had waited more than six weeks for their test.

Mr. Key: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Driving Standards Agency under its chief executive Dr. S. J. Ford. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Dr. S. J. Ford to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 7 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about the percentage of people taking their driving test in March 1993 who had waited more than six weeks for their test.

The Agency measures the waiting time for tests on the basis of the size of the queue waiting for a test in relation to the examiner resource available to conduct tests. It does not have statistics that measure precisely the wait experienced by individual customers. Instead we use our annual, independent customer surveys to provide insight into the experiences of customers.

The last such survey was conducted in May 1993. The sample of candidates surveyed was selected from those who had taken a test in the previous two months. The response, from nearly 2,000 driving test candidates across the country, indicated that 90 per cent. waited 6 weeks or less between the date of making the appointment and the date the test was conducted.

During January and February 1993, when customers would generally have been seeking test appointments in March, appointments were available at over 90 per cent. of our permanent centres within 6 weeks and at all permanent centres within 10 weeks, with an average of 3 to 4 weeks ahead of the date of application.

Vehicle Inspections

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) in which vehicle inspectorate testing stations the operating costs of the station exceeds the amount of revenue generated through test fees;

(2) if he will list his Department's vehicle inspectorate testing stations; in which parliamentary constituency each testing station lies; how many people are employed at each testing station; how many vehicles were tested at each testing station during the last year; and how much revenue was collected at each testing station in testing fees.

Mr. Key: I have asked the vehicle inspectorate chief executive to write to the hon. Member with this detailed information.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 4 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Questions about the Vehicle Inspectorate's test station network, income from testing, and costs.

The Inspectorate's accounts and management information for 1992-93 were sufficiently detailed to provide information on test volumes and income from testing down to district level. This is shown on the attached table.

Unfortunately information relating to the operating costs and staff at each station cannot be provided in a form that will help answer your questions. In 1992-93 VI had a district based organisation and recorded information on costs accordingly. This information was aggregated at agency level and then divided between the individual schemes, including HGV and PSV testing, for accounting purposes. This means that detailed information on costs for individual test stations is unavailable. More importantly the costs of enforcement staff based in the districts would be included in the figures and could not be separated out. For these reasons a simple list of district costs, against income generated from testing activities, would give a false impression.

VI reorganised its operational structure on 1 November 1993. The Inspectorate now has two operational divisions, Vehicle Testing and Road Transport Enforcement. The costs of each division are separately accounted for from 1 November 1993. Although VI may have interim figures for each station later this year, the new financial structure will not be fully reflected until the Inspectorate's 1994-95 accounts are published.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful at present, but if you have any additional questions please write to me.

PRIME MINISTER

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Prime Minister how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

The Prime Minister: There has been no expenditure by my office on contracts with consultants in the last five years.

Security

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the security of Government information and other assets.

The Prime Minister: In recent years, the nature of the threats to Government security has changed. While some of the traditional threats to national security may have somewhat reduced, others have not. The security of Government is also increasingly threatened by, for example, theft, copying and electronic surveillance, as well as by terrorism.

To ensure that their approach to security reflects current threats, the Government have recently completed a review of their arrangements for the management of protective security in Departments and agencies. This has recommended a new protective marking system for documents which will help identify more precisely those which need protecting, enabling them to be protected more effectively according to their value. The new system will also be more closely related to the code of practice on Government information announced in the Government's White Paper on openness.

In addition, the review has concluded that existing security measures should be examined closely to ensure they are necessary in relation to today's threats; that commercially available security equipment should be more widely used; and that personnel vetting enquiries should be streamlined particularly in routine cases. Overall, the aim is to give Departments and agencies, and management units within them, greater responsibility for assessing the nature of the risks they face and for making decisions, within a framework of common standards of protection, about the security measures they need to put in place. Substantial cost savings will result.

The first stage of the implementation of the proposals of this review will be the introduction of a new protective marking system with effect from 4 April 1994 alongside the code of practice on access to Government information. The new definitions, which will allow fewer Government documents to be classified, particularly at the higher levels, are set out. The other elements of the new approach to protective security will be put in place in due course.

The four categories of protective marking: Definitions

The markings to be allocated to any asset, including information, will be determined primarily by reference to the practical consequences that are likely to result from the compromise of that asset or information. The levels in the new protective marking system are defined as follows:

TOP SECRET: the compromise of this information or material would be likely: to threaten directly the internal stability of the United Kingdom or friendly countries; to lead directly to widespread loss of life; to cause exceptionally grave damage to the effectiveness or security of United Kingdom or allied forces or to the continuing effectiveness of extremely valuable security or intelligence operations; to cause exceptionally grave damage to relations with friendly governments; to cause severe long-term damage to the United Kingdom economy.

SECRET: the compromise of this information or material would be likely: to raise international tension; to damage seriously relations with friendly governments; to threaten life directly, or seriously prejudice public order, or individual security or liberty; to cause serious damage to the operational effectiveness or security of United Kingdom or allied forces or the continuing effectiveness of highly valuable security or intelligence operations; to cause substantial material damage to national finances or economic and commercial interests.

CONFIDENTIAL: the compromise of this information or material would be likely: materially to damage diplomatic relations (ie cause formal protest or other sanction); to prejudice individual security or liberty; to cause damage to the operational effectiveness or security of United Kingdom or allied forces or the effectiveness of valuable security or intelligence operations; to work substantially against national finances or economic and commercial interests; substantially to undermine the financial viability of major organisations; to impede the investigation or facilitate the commission of serious crime; to impede seriously the development or operation of major government policies; to shut down or otherwise substantially disrupt significant national operations.

RESTRICTED: the compromise of this information or material would be likely: to affect diplomatic relations adversely; to cause substantial distress to individuals; to make it more difficult to maintain the operational effectiveness or security of United Kingdom or allied forces; to cause financial loss or loss of earning potential to or facilitate improper gain or advantage for individuals or companies; to prejudice the investigation or facilitate the commission of crime; to breach proper undertakings to maintain the confidence of information provided by third parties; to impede the effective development or operation of government policies; to breach statutory restrictions on disclosure of information; to disadvantage government in commercial or policy negotiations with others; to undermine the proper management of the public sector and its operations.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of Tuesday 8 March, Official Report, column 148, if he has now considered, following his meeting of 3 March with the hon. Member for Linlithgow, the provision of water filtering and water pumping equipment to Iraq; and what action he has taken to respond to the list of pharmaceuticals required in the valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris for infants with diseases related to malnutrition in the summer.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 March 1994]: I have now written to the hon. Member following our recent meeting.

EDUCATION

Special Needs

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what statutory provisions apply to appellants' access to the minutes of special educational needs appeal hearings.

Mr. Forth: There are no statutory provisions relating to appellants' access to the minutes of special educational needs appeals hearings held by committees constituted by local education authorities in accordance with paragraph 1 of part I of schedule 2 to the Education Act 1980. There is no statutory requirement for my right hon. Friend to convene hearings before resolving appeals made to him under the Education Act 1981.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many special educational needs appeals he is currently considering; to what extent delays have been caused by the case currently before the Court of Appeal; when he expects this case to be heard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend is currently considering 330 appeals under the Education Act 1981. In compliance with the recent court judgment in the case of Regina v. Secretary of State for Education ex parte S my right hon. Friend now copies to the parties to each appeal any independent evaluations he receives from one of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools, and invites the parties to comment. He then gives careful consideration to any comments subsequently submitted to him. This process has added several weeks to the time taken to decide appeals. My right hon. Friend is appealing against the court judgment in question. The appeal will be heard on 27 June.

Higher National Diploma

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether students who are entitled to a mandatory grant for a higher national diploma and complete each year of the course at different institutions may receive a supplementary mandatory grant for a related degree at the second institution.

Mr. Boswell: A student who has already received a mandatory award for an HND course will normally be eligible for a further, modified mandatory award for the final year or years of a designated first degree course, depending upon its duration. Local education authorities can make discretionary payments in respect of any other year of the course. A student's entitlement to a further award would not be affected if his HND course involved study at more than one institution.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what were the budgets of grant-maintained schools in London on a borough basis since 1992; and what this was as a percentage of each borough's schools budget.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information is given in the table.

Notes:

1. For schools that became GM in 1993-94 only the budget for that year is shown.
2. The amounts shown for total budget include annual maintenance grant, special purpose grants for restructuring, development, premises, VAT, transitional grant, section 11 grant and capital grant payable to the schools in the respective years.
3. The amounts shown as total budget for 1992-93 also include special purpose grant for travellers and displaced persons payable to the schools.
4. GM schools receive support for expenditure on items such as VAT and the transition to GM status, which form no part of an LEAs overall budget. The percentage of an LEAs total schools budget that GM schools' budgets represent do not, therefore, fall for true comparison.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the past five years.

Mr. Forth: Over the last five years, this Department has awarded 244 contracts to consultants. The total cost in each of the last five years is:

Year	£
1993	1,629,000
1992	1,994,000
1991	1,517,000
1990	974,000
1989	555,000

Bullying

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will estimate the number of children making complaints about bullying at school.

Mr. Forth: This information is not collected centrally.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of state for Education what assessment there has been of the success of the "Action against Bullying" packs issued to schools in 1992.

Mr. Forth: Head teachers are responsible in law for maintaining standards of discipline and behaviour in their schools. The "Action against Bullying" packs were issued to assist them in that task. Registered inspectors carrying out inspections under the Education (Schools) Act 1992 are required to inspect and report on disciplinary arrangements within schools, including action taken against bullying.

Physical Education

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the average amount of time spent in schools on physical education per week for children aged under 17 years for each year since 1979-80.

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is not available in the form requested. However, recent secondary school staffing surveys have provided information regarding the proportion of pupil periods spent on PE in maintained secondary schools in 1984, 1988 and 1992.

In junior classes in maintained primary schools in England in 1986-87, 10 per cent. of class time was spent on PE, games or swimming. Comparable data for other years is not available.

Special Educational Needs

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many (a) boys and (b) girls aged five to 16 years had a statement of special educational need for the latest available year.

Mr. Forth: A total of 171,784 pupils aged 5 to 19 had statements as at January 1993. Data for 17 to 19-year-olds is not collected separately. Figures by gender are not available.

Schools (Re-organisation and Closure)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education which local education authorities have school re-organisation or closure proposals under consideration by his Department; how many surplus places will be removed by each authority as a result of their proposals; and which authorities, since the submission of their proposal to his Department, have been waiting for a decision (a) up to three months, (b) three to six months, (c) six to nine months, (d) nine to 12 months and (e) in excess of 12 months.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 21 March 1994]: The table lists proposals under consideration by the Department as at 18 March 1994 for the closure, alteration or establishment of county and voluntary schools, the number of places that it is proposed will be removed as a result of the proposals —where relevant and known—and the length of time the proposals have been under consideration.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department why applicants for the magistrates bench are invited to disclose their political leanings or affiliations.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I refer the hon. Member to a reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 17 March at column. 758.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to ensure the political affiliations of the magistrates bench more closely reflect the views of the population in the areas in which they sit.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor, with his advisory committees, seeks to encourage applications from suitable people of all walks of life and political affiliations through press notices and articles, posters and leaflets and contact with employers and other organisations. Appointments are made from those considered to be suitable having proper regard to the various balancing factors such as age, gender and political affiliation so that each bench broadly reflects the community it serves. Appointments can, however, be made only from those who put themselves forward for consideration.

Liverpool County Court

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what backlog of cases are awaiting trial in the Liverpool county court; what is the average period for a case coming to trial; what were the waiting periods compared with five years ago; and what assessment he has made of the value for money provided by the system.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Liverpool county court operates a special listing system, under the control of the judiciary, which was introduced following consultation with the legal profession. The system is designed to ensure that the majority of defended civil cases proceed to trial within 35 weeks of a defence being filed. On 16 March 1994 trials were being listed 32 weeks ahead and the number of cases where a defence had been filed and the trial was due to take place within that period was approximately 5,120. In addition there were some 420 cases of a specialist nature, which fall outside the scope of the special listing system, listed for trial within the next 70 weeks, and some 200 cases awaiting entry into the system.

The earliest available information on waiting times is from 1990 when, based only on cases disposed of by trial during the months of March and September, the average waiting time was 29 weeks compared to 32 weeks in 1993. Although no specific assessment has been made of the value for money it provides, the system was last reviewed and revised in January 1992 at which time it was considered that it continued to meet its primary objective: that of minimising delay, which the report of the Reviewing Body on Civil Justice—June 1988—identified as one of the main deficiencies in civil justice.

Court Fees

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will publish a table of court fees in the county court and the Crown court in the years since 1964, showing the percentage increase and showing the corresponding increase in the cost of living index.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Tables of sample fees chargeable in the county courts and the Supreme Court—fees are not chargeable in the Crown court—in the years 1964, 1982 and 1994 follow. The number of fees, the number of amendments, and alterations in fee structures over the period make a direct comparison of all fees impractical. The sample of fees shown includes those which are most significant for general court users and by volume of business. All fees orders are made and published as statutory instruments.

Comparisons are shown with 1982 because until then no attempt was made to recover 'allied service' costs falling on other Departments' votes—accommodation, stationery and superannuation. From that year, following observations by the Committee of Public Accounts on this policy of limited cost recovery, the policy adopted was that fees should recover full costs except for judicial costs. The policy has now been further modified to include judicial costs among those which should be covered by fee income taken as a whole.

The rise in the cost of living index—the retail prices index—between 1964 and 1982 was 862 per cent., and between 1964 and 1994 was 1,567 per cent.

In 1964, the County Court Fees Order in force was that of 1959 (SI 1959/1262) as amended in 1961 (twice) and 1963, the first of those amendments (SI 1961/355) affecting the sample fees above. There was a fees Order in 1982 (SI 1982/1706). That order has been further amended six times since, most recently in 1992 (SI 1992/2762).

The County Court Fees Order 1959 contained 157 separate fees, and the 1980 order 33 fees; there were 20 orders and amending orders between 1964 and 1994.

In 1964, the Supreme Court Fees Order in force was that of 1961 (SI 1961/2307) as amended in 1962 and 1963, though neither amendment affected the sample fees above. In 1982, the Order in force was that of 1980 (SI 1980/821) as amended in 1982 (SI 1982/1707). That order has been further amended five times since, most recently in 1993 (SI 1993/3191).

The Supreme Court Fees Order 1961 contained 146 separate fees, and the 1980 order 57 fees; there were 16 orders and amending orders between 1964 and 1994.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

Mr. John M. Taylor: On the best information currently available, 74 external consultancy projects were completed in 1992-93 and the total expenditure was £3·455 million. Comparable figures for earlier years are not available.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many cases of assessment for child maintenance have been dealt with in court since April 1993 in (a) the London borough of Newham and (b) Great Britain.

Mr. John M. Taylor: This information is readily available only for the county courts and the High Court in England and Wales. During the period April to December 1993, the number of children made subject to orders for child maintenance was:

(a) 253 in the London borough of Newham
(b) 23,235 in England and Wales.

These figures do not include lump sum and property orders which benefited children, as no separate categorisation of these cases is available.

Information relating to the magistrates courts for 1993 will not be available until May 1994.

Jurors

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many potential jurors have been discharged from jury service because of a disability in the last five years; what those disabilities were; what equipment was available to enable them to fulfil a juror's duties; and in which Crown courts these discharges occurred.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Section 10 of the Juries Act 1974 provides that if it appears to a member of the court staff that there is doubt as to the capacity of a person who attends for jury service to serve effectively, on the ground of physical disability, the person may be brought before a judge. The judge shall then determine whether or not the person should serve as a juror and, if not, shall discharge the summons. It is the policy of the Lord Chancellor's Department that any disabled person summoned for jury service should be given every assistance within reason to enable him/her to serve as a juror. However, the decision is ultimately one for the judge.

My Department does not collate data on the number of discharges from jury service under section 10 and such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

As to the facilities available at Crown court centres the Lord Chancellor's Department has produced a digest, "Facilities for Disabled People in the Crown and County Courts" which includes information on facilities for disabled jurors. I have arranged for a copy of that digest to be placed in the Library. Courts will also make special arrangements, if possible.

ENVIRONMENT

Dampness and Condensation

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what research his Department is currently undertaking to eliminate dampness and condensation in the public sector housing stock in (a) London and (b) England;

(2) what extra resources he proposes to allow local authority departments to spend in order to eradicate dampness and condensation in the public sector housing stock in (a) England and Wales and (b) London;

(3) if he will consult statutory housing authorities in England and Wales in order to agree an action plan to eliminate dampness and condensation in the public sector housing stock.

Sir George Young: As part of the annual housing investment programme round, local authorities are required to produce housing strategies setting out their proposed programmes over a three-year period. In support of this process, authorities may carry out surveys of their stock, which may include establishing the prevalence of dampness and condensation. My Department takes these strategies into account when allocating HIP resources each year. £1·5 billion was allocated to local authorities under the programme for 1994-95. It is for individual authorities to decide how to use these and other resources to which they have access, including how much to dedicate to dealing with the problems of dampness and condensation. Matters affecting the public sector housing stock in Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will undertake a survey of statutory housing authority areas to determine the prevalence of dampness and condensation in the public sector housing stock in (a) London and (b) England.

Sir George Young: The 1991 English House Condition Survey—EHCS—included an assessment of dampness and condensation in the public sector housing stock. The findings will be reported in the EHCS energy report due to be published later this year.

Council Tax

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many appeals against valuation have resulted in a movement in the valuation of a property by two bands or more (a) in total in England and (b) in each standard region since the introduction of the council tax;

(2) how many successful appeals against valuation there have been in terms of changing the banding of a property (a) in England and (b) in each standard region of England since the introduction of the council tax.

Mr. Baldry: This information is currently being collected by the Valuation Office Agency for the 12-month period to the end of March 1994. A copy of the information will be placed in the Library as soon as possible thereafter.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many appeals there have been against council tax valuations since the council tax was introduced (a) in total for England, (b) in each standard region of England and (c) in each local authority area in England;

(2) how many appeals against council tax valuations are still waiting to be heard (a) in total for England, (b) in total for each standard region and (c) in each local authority area in England.

Mr. Baldry: I am placing in the Library a table which sets out, by valuation office region, and by billing authority, the number of proposals to alter the valuation list which were received by the end of the initial appeal period, the number that had been settled by the end of February and the number outstanding.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table setting out for each local authority in England which submits a claim for transitional relief for 1994-95, (a) the estimated amount of transitional relief each such authority has claimed, (b) the percentage of the total sum of transitional relief for England which each individual claim represents and (c) the estimated amount of transitional relief per dwelling in each authority which has submitted a claim.

Mr. Baldry: I will arrange for this information to be placed in the Library of the House once it is available.

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by him and his ministerial colleagues in February.

Mr. Gummer: My Department's records show that 1,574 letters were received by me and Ministers in my Department during February 1994, while 2,199 were written to hon. Members.

Limehouse Tunnel Road Link

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many and what proportion of the dwellings on the St. Vincent estate, Limehouse, were demolished solely for the purpose of facilitating the construction of the Limehouse tunnel road link; and how many and what proportion of dwellings on the estate were demolished for other purposes; with whose agreement and with whose authority demolition took place; what was the cost of rehousing those displaced and who funded that expenditure; and what plans there are for the future use of the land now vacant consequent on demolition.

Mr. Baldry: A total of 92 dwellings were demolished for the purpose of constructing the Limehouse link, representing 36 per cent. of the units on the estate. A further 164 units were demolished for other reasons.

A total of 314 households were rehoused at a cost to the London Docklands Development Corporation of £45 million.

Demolition was carried out by the LDDC with the agreement of the London borough of Tower Hamlets.

It is intended that the land will be redeveloped largely for residential use with some commercial and retail units.

Pollution

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's assessment of safe or acceptable pollution levels; and what are those adopted by (a) the World Health Organisation and (b) the European Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: As set out in the 1990 Environment White Paper it is the aim of the Government's pollution policy to minimise the risk of harm to human health and the environment. The World Health Organisation publishes guideline values, but not standards, for non-carcinogenic pollutants in drinking-water and air quality which are based on minimising health effects alone. There is no single principle by which pollution level standards have been adopted in the European Community.

Environmental Bulletin

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to publish a periodic environment bulletin similar to those published by the Irish Department of the Environment.

Mr. Robert Atkins: My Department publishes annual reports of progress on commitments made under the Environment White Paper, "This Common Inheritance" which include detailed commitments to further action. The next report is currently at the printers.

Ecolabelling

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the United Kingdom ecolabelling board will be self-financing at its current rate of progress.

Mr. Atkins: The United Kingdom Ecolabelling Board has set a target to become self financing by 1997-98. The board reviews its targets annually in the context of its corporate plan and will be discussing these with Ministers later in the year.

Dishwashers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many companies have applied to the competent bodies of other EC member states for ecolabels for dishwashers and washing machines.

Mr. Atkins: As yet, no EC ecolabels have been awarded by competent bodies in other member states. All applications for ecolabels are treated in confidence until an award is made.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many companies have applied to the United Kingdom Ecolabelling Board for ecolabels for dishwashers and washing machines.

Mr. Atkins: In November, the United Kingdom Ecolabelling Board awarded the EC ecolabel to three washing machines in Hoover Limited's "New Wave" range. All applications for ecolabels are treated in confidence until an award is made and as yet no further awards have been made.

Integrated Regional Offices

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the 10 new integrated regional offices will be established; where they will be located; and who in each region will be responsible for their activities.

Sir George Young: The new Government offices in the regions will open for business in April. For the foreseeable future, the functions of the new offices will continue to be carried out from the offices occupied by existing departmental regional offices. The names of nine of the 10 regional directors were detailed in the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment in his reply on 8 February at columns 145-46.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is not held centrally by my Department and is obtainable only at disproportionate cost.

Local Authority Debt

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current level of debt for each local authority in Greater Manchester; and what was the figure for each of the previous 10 years.

Mr. Baldry: The information is given in the table. Figures before 1987-88 are not readily available.

Temporary Accommodation

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many families with children are living in temporary accommodation for the last available year.

Sir George Young: The information requested is not available centrally and my Department has no estimates.

Unfit Housing

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of homes occupied by families with children are deemed to be (a) damp and (b) unfit for use for the last available year.

Sir George Young: The 1991 English House Condition Survey found 1 per cent. of homes occupied by families with children in England so seriously damp that the dwelling was considered unfit for habitation in this respect. The same survey found 5·8 per cent. of homes occupied by families with children unfit on any grounds.

Bathing Water

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of United Kingdom bathing waters failed to comply with EU standards for sewage contamination for the latest available year.

Mr. Atkins: The latest bathing water results were announced on 1 December last year. They showed that in 1993 20 per cent. of United Kingdom bathing waters did not yet comply with the mandatory coliform standards of the Bathing Water Directive (76/160/EEC).

Refrigerant Bank

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans there are to establish a United Kingdom refrigerant bank.

Mr. Atkins: I am pleased to announce that a United Kingdom refrigerant bank, the Refrigerant Users Group is being launched tomorrow. RUG is being set up by the refrigeration industry with the support of Government to manage the existing stocks of refrigerants efficiently and environmentally. It is being set up as part of Halon Users National Consortium Ltd. and will have the same role for refrigerants that HUNC has performed in relation to halons. It will act as a clearing house putting those who need to continue using recycled chlorofluorocarbons in touch with those who have spare CFCs for sale. This is the first refrigerant bank to be set up in Europe.

The establishment of RUG is a vital step in allowing us to phase out CFC production by the end of this year. It will enable existing equipment to be serviced using recycled material and allow an orderly phaseout. It shows United Kingdom Government and United Kingdom industry commitment to phase out ozone-depleting substances as quickly and as safely as possible. RUG is a very good example of industry's willingness to support Government in achieving a common environmental goal.

Biotechnology

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government will be replying to the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology's report on Regulation of the United Kingdom Biotechnology Industry and Global Competitiveness.

Mr. Atkins: I am pleased to announce that we have today made a full response to the Select Committee report and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

EMPLOYMENT

Disabled Employees

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many registered disabled people are employed in his Department; and what percentage this is of the total.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to "Independent" of 18 March. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by him and his ministerial colleagues in February.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: During February, the Department received 684 letters from hon. Members. In the same period, 526 replies were issued.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list for the last 12 months how many parliamentary questions he has referred to one of his Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to his Department this represents.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: During the period 16 March 1993 to 15 March 1994, 202 parliamentary questions were referred for answer to the Employment Service, the only agency in the Department with responsibility for replying to parliamentary questions on operational matters. This figure represents 10·1 per cent. of all parliamentary questions replied to by the Department.

North Norfolk Action

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 3 March, Official Report, columns 867-68, what was the expected expenditure on each place on North Norfolk Action and the actual expenditure in the first six months of operation; and if he will break down the expenditure to date into (a) provider fee, (b) allowances, (c) fares to interview, (d) publicity, (e) evaluation and (f) Employment Service running costs, including staff costs and payment of allowances.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. Fogden to Sir Ralph Howell, dated 23 March 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to answer your Parliamentary Question about the expected expenditure on each place on North Norfolk Action and the actual expenditure in the first six months of operation; and a breakdown of expenditure incurred to date.

The expected expenditure for North Norfolk Action was £3,263 per place. The actual expenditure for the first six months of North Norfolk Action was approximately £2,850 per place.

The expenditure to date broken down as you requested, is as follows:

(a) Provider fees	187,950
(b) Allowances	85,178
(c) Fares to interview	5,632
(d) Publicity	1,500
(e) Evaluation	—[1]
(f) Running costs	58,000

[1] External evaluation starts on 22 March and is expected to cost in the region of £25,250.

I hope this is helpful.

Training

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the organisations within the Greater London area which provide training to unemployed people in workshop and craft skills and are funded from Government programmes.

Miss Widdecombe: The following is a list of the organisations requested. Training and Enterprise Councils (TECS) are responsible for planning and arranging Government funded training programmes. London TECS are currently negotiating contracts with their training providers for 1994-95.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the dates Ministers, or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to his Department.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Emphysema

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many claims have been received for compensation arising from employment-related emphysema in each year since 1979; and how many were successful.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department has no arrangements for paying compensation to people who have developed emphysema as a result of their employment. Claims for compensation against employers under civil law are a matter for the employer concerned.

Claims for industrial injuries disablement benefit in respect of emphysema are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

Jobplan Workshops

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what guidance is given to the Employment Service Agency when trying to match the skills of an unemployed person attending a jobplan workshop with the employment available;

(2) what action is taken in respect of an unemployed person who refuses to accept a job or training place offered in a jobplan workshop.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. Fogden to Mrs. Ann Clwyd, dated 23 March 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about Jobplan. You have asked how Jobplan can help an unemployed person match their skills with those required in the local labour market and whether any action is taken when someone refuses a job or a training place offered to them while on the Workshop.

It may help if I explain that Jobplan aims to help people who have been unemployed for a year or more to compete for jobs and opportunities. About 80 per cent. of the people who first become unemployed leave the unemployment register within a year. For those who remain unemployed, confidence and the intensity of job search can decrease. People often believe that they have few options open to them. It is therefore important that at this stage people take a fresh look at their situation and have the chance to review their strengths and skills and set themselves clear, achievable job goals that take advantage of the help available. This can be achieved on Jobplan.

Whilst on the Workshop, people are encouraged and helped to identify the skills and strengths they have demonstrated in both work and non-work situations. One of the sessions on the Workshop is devoted to examining the local labour market. The purpose of this is to tell the group about the types and numbers of jobs that are available in the area and the changing nature of work. They are then asked to consider which of their skills may be transferable and whether they might need to acquire new ones. Following this session each person has an individual guidance interview which in some cases can lead to them applying for further training.

Jobplan is run on the Employment Service's behalf by organisations from the private, public and voluntary sectors. Every Workshop leader is provided with a copy of the Jobplan Leaders manual which provides guidance on running each session.

At the end of the Workshop, everyone should be able to agree an Action Plan which sets out the steps they need to take to get back into work. This may be making one or more job applications or applying for a training place or other opportunity. If someone is offered a job or a training place on the Workshop and turns down the opportunity to start, no action will be taken. However, we would want to discuss with the person the factors that led to their decision and see what further help we could offer. Arrangements are made for all those completing the Workshop to be interviewed at the Jobcentre when they next sign. If at that time they refuse offers of suitable employment, we would refer their case to independent adjudication authorities.

I hope this is helpful.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) men and (b) women have participated in jobplan workshops in the Cynon Valley and in all other Welsh constituencies since their inception.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. Fogden to Mrs. Ann Clwyd, dated 23 March 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of men and women who have started on Jobplan in Wales and in the Cynon Valley since the programme started.

Jobplan Workshops are for people unemployed for a year who decline or fail to take up a job or a place on an Employment Department programme at the Restart interview. They aim to help people compete more successfully for jobs and opportunities by allowing them to review their strengths and skills, establish clear job goals and draw up an Action Plan, mapping out the steps they need to take to get them back to work. Jobplan started nationally in April 1993.

It is possible to give the information asked for the Cynon Valley, as people who live in this valley are served by two Jobcentres, Mountain Ash and Aberdare. The details for the rest of Wales are not collected on a constituency basis and therefore the figures given are for the Principality as a whole.

From April 1993 to February 1994, 406 men and 45 women have started on Workshops in the Cynon Valley. In Wales in total 9,873 people have started the Workshops, 8,402 men and 1,471 women.

I hope this is helpful.

Young People (Benefits)

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is (a) the youth training scheme allowance and (b) the income support level on severe hardship grounds for 17-year-olds and what were the equivalent figures in (i) 1990-91, (ii) 1991-92 and (iii) 1992-93.

Miss Widdecombe: The figures for the youth training (YT) allowance and the income support level on severe hardship grounds for 17-year-olds for the years requested are given in the following table:

£	YT allowance	Income support level
1990-91	35·00	28·80
1991-92	35·00	[1]31·15
1992-93	35·00	33·60
1993-94	35·00	34·80

[1] 31·40 from 1 October 1991.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people stopped claiming unemployment benefit in 1993-94; and of those, how many entered full-time or part-time employment.

Miss Widdecombe: Detailed information is not available on the destinations of the 4·4 million claimants who left unemployment during the year ended February 1994. However, past survey evidence indicates that the majority of people who leave claimant unemployment go into jobs.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Youth Training

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to increase youth training scheme allowances for 17-year-olds.

Miss Widdecombe: We have no plans to increase minimum youth training allowances. Minimum YT allowances are set at levels which reflect the fact that trainees are involved in the learning process.

Employers and training providers benefit from considerable Government investment in the training of young people. Because of this, they are encouraged to pay trainees more than the specified minimum rates of allowance wherever possible and many do so.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many public interest immunity certificates he has signed in each year since 1990.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 15 March 1994]: None.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Divisions

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council (1) what consideration he is giving to the difficulties experienced by hon. Members at 7 Millbank in reaching the Lobbies within the eight minutes allowed before Divisions;

(2) if he will bring forward an amendment to Standing Order No. 37 to extend the time allowed to hon. Members to reach Division Lobbies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The situation is being carefully monitored, but I have at present no plans to bring forward an amendment to Standing Order No. 37. As the hon. Member may be aware, Madam Speaker has discretion to extend Division times in the event of any difficulties in reaching the Lobbies.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Mr. Lorrain Osman

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations were made to the British Government by the Malaysian Government about the case of Lorrain Osman;

(2) on what occasions the case of Lorrain Osman was discussed with the Malaysian Government.

Mr. Goodlad: It is established practice that details of our relations with other Governments are confidential.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether Her Majesty's Government received representations between 1983 and 1993 from the Government of or Ministers in Malaysia in relation to Mr. Lorrain Osman; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether representations were made to Her Majesty's Governmment by the Malaysian authorities concerning the murder in Hong Kong of Jalil Ibrahim; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad [holding answer 15 March 1994]: Yes. However, it is established practice that details of our relations with other Governments are confidential.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons documents concerning the murder of Jalil Ibrahim were adjudged by him to be irrelevant to the defence of Mr. Lorrain Osman; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad [holding answer 15 March 1994]: It was the divisional court, not the Secretary of State, who made this judgment in respect of the "Jalil Documents" in Lorrain Osman's seventh application for Habeas Corpus.

Non-Proliferation

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the reconciliation of Her Majesty's Government's policy on the exports of high-technology conventional weapons with its policy on non-proliferation.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We support the export of British equipment, including high technology conventional weapons, where this is compatible with our political, strategic and security interests. This is based on the right of all nations to self-defence, in accordance with article 51 of the UN charter. As part of our objective to prevent destabilising accumulations of arms, we observe strict responsibility and restraint in our exports of arms and actively encourage other suppliers to do likewise.

Missile Technology Control Regime

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent changes relating to the missile technology control regime.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: At the missile technology control regime plenary meeting in Interlaken, 29 November to 2 December 1993, member states agreed that export controls on sensitive items should be maintained, and introduced clarification of some listed export items. They undertook to redouble efforts to persuade potential exporter countries outside the regime to abide by MTCR guidelines. In recent months Russia, Brazil and South Africa have also made significant progress towards adoption of MTCR guidelines. The meeting welcomed Argentina and Hungary as new members.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those states that have indicated adherence to the terms of the missile technology control regime.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The following are member states of the missile technology control regime—MTCR.

Argentina
Austria
Australia Belgium
Canada
Denmark
Finland
France
Germany
Greece
Hungary
Iceland
Italy
Japan
Luxembourg
Portugal
Netherlands
New Zealand
Norway
Republic of Ireland
Spain
Sweden
Switzerland
United Kingdom
United States

Several other states have declared their adherence to the MTCR guidelines, or are making progress towards meeting them, including:

Brazil
China
Czech Republic
Indonesia
Romania
Russia
South Africa

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will abide by the opinion of the International Court of Justice on the legal status in international law of the United Kingdom nuclear weapons policy.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are not prepared to conjecture about what conclusions the International Court of Justice might reach on this issue.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to other Commonwealth countries in respect of their making submissions to the International Court of Justice on the legality of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We will be making our own submission to the International Court of Justice on this question, and the subject has been discussed with other states in the course of normal diplomatic exchanges.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will define the terms "strategic" and "sub-strategic" as currently used by his Department.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: These terms relate to the type of action to which a nuclear weapon would contribute. Sub-strategic weapons provide the ability to take action more limited than a strategic strike.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the referral to the International Court of Justice for clarification of international law as regards nuclear weapons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that I gave him on 1 February, at column 605.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what part Her Majesty's Government will play in European Union submissions to the International Court of Justice as to the legality of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The submission of statements to the International Court of Justice is a matter for individual member states.

European Union

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which countries where the European Union takes on the responsibility of representing individual countries of the European Union those countries do not have direct representation.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The European Union does not have a legal personality. In particular it does not represent individual member states. Under article J.5.1 of the Treaty on European Union the presidency is responsible for representing the European Union on issues of foreign and security policy where member states have an agreed policy. This sometimes involves the presidency taking action in a third country where not all the member states have diplomatic representation. In those countries where the presidency itself does not have a diplomatic mission, another member state acts on the presidency's behalf.

The presidency also represents the European Union where necessary in business under the justice and home affairs pillar. In matters of Community competence—example trade—which require action in third countries, the European Commission can represent the member states. On 1 July 1993 consular guidelines agreed by member states came into effect. Subject to local circumstances nationals of a member state who require consular assistance in a country or place where that member state has no accessible consular or diplomatic representation may seek the help of a permanent diplomatic or consular post of another member state.

North Korea

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of the International Atomic Energy Agency visit to North Korea to conduct nuclear safeguards inspections on facilities, pursuant to resolutions of the United Nations Security Council; what consultations he has had with the United States Government over these nuclear inspections; and if he will make a statement on the application of United Kingdom non-proliferation policy to (a) the Koreas, (b) Taiwan and (c) Japan.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Despite a written agreement of 15 February, North Korea did not allow International Atomic Energy Agency inspectors to undertake some crucial parts of their inspection earlier this month. Consequently the agency was unable to verify that no diversion of nuclear material from the civil nuclear fuel cycle has taken place in the last year. We shall continue to work closely with the United States Administration on this issue. We expect all countries which are members of the non-proliferation treaty, or which have concluded safeguards agreements, to abide fully by their obligations not to develop nuclear weapons.

Food Prices

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the EC proposal for increasing the number of member states required to block a decision makes an exception in the case of decisions affecting the price of food.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The number of votes required for decisions taken by qualified majority voting in the Council is laid down in article 148 of the treaty of Rome. A decision on the amendment of article 148 in the context of enlargement is still under negotiation in the Council. Council decisions on prices under the common agricultural policy are decided by qualified majority voting under article 43. There has been no proposal to amend this practice.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his departmental policy on the use by Ministers of his Department of Foreign and Commonwealth Office letterheaded paper to correspond to hon. Members on the Conservative and Unionist party strategy for the forthcoming European elections; and if he has had any discussions with his departmental accounting officer on this issue.

Mr. Hurd: My special adviser's office recently used Foreign and Commonwealth Office paper by mistake for a letter on the Conservative approach to the European elections. I have assured the permanent Under-Secretary that this will not happen again.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

Mr. Goodlad: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Turkey

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in respect of how many Kurdish journalists and Kurds involved in the distribution of newspapers he has received representations that they have been unlawfully killed in the last three years.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We are aware of such unexplained killings, but have not received representations about specific cases. We hope that the Turkish authorities will vigorously investigate these crimes so that those responsible can be brought before the courts.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the use of the anti-terror department against elected members of the pro-Kurdish Democracy party in Turkey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We understand that Democracy party deputies were detained by anti-terrorist police after the National Assembly voted to remove their parliamentary immunities following a request by the public prosecutor that they be tried for alleged offences related to terrorism. The Turkish Prime Minister has said she will investigate allegations that the police acted improperly. We shall continue to make clear to the Turkish authorities the importance we attach to their permitting the non-violent expression of political beliefs.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to supplies of food and medical supplies to Kurdish areas of Turkey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We have no information about this, which is a matter for the Turkish authorities.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions the Council of Ministers has held recently on allegations of abuse of the human rights of Kurds committed by Turkey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Council of Ministers has not recently discussed allegations of human rights abuse in Turkey. European Union Foreign Ministers raised human rights with the Turkish Foreign Minister on 8 November 1993. At the Human Rights Commission in Geneva recently the European Union expressed concern at the situation in Turkey. I stressed our concerns when I met the Turkish Minister for Human Rights in London earlier this month.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have been held in the Council of Europe regarding the possibility of the expulsion of Turkey from that body, in respect of abuse of human rights; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Council of Europe regularly discusses human rights in a number of countries including Turkey. There has been no discussion of Turkey's expulsion.

China

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what complaints he has received recently regarding the detention of foreign visitors on religious grounds by the Chinese Government.

Mr. Goodlad: A number of non-governmental organisations and others have brought to our attention the detention last month of ten religious believers, including seven foreigners, in Henan province in China. We understand that all the detainees have now been released.

Norway

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of the terms agreed between the EU and Norway on the latters proposed accession to the Community with particular reference to their effect on the common fisheries policy and access by EU members to the North sea.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Norway agreed its terms of accession with the European Union at the 15-16 March Foreign Affairs Council. On the details of the terms, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to my hon. Friend the Member for Hertford and Stortford (Mr. Wells) on 21 March at col. 11. The agreement reached on Norwegian accession does not change the existing rules of the common fisheries policy. European Union countries' access to waters, including the North sea, is unaffected. Reciprocal arrangements for access to resources fully respect the principle known as relative stability, that is, the agreed allocation of fishing opportunities according to historical patterns.

Yugoslavia

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much money has been received from the United Nations to pay for (a) Operation Hanwood, (b) Operation Cheshire and (c) Operation Grapple; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The names "Hanwood, Cheshire and Grapple" are national terms to describe participation by British armed forces in UN operations in the former Yugoslavia. The terms are not used by the UN. The UN has made payments to cover United Kingdom troop costs for both Operation Hanwood—the field ambulance which withdrew from Croatia in September—and Operation Grapple—The United Kingdom operation in Bosnia—as one payment for the total United Kingdom troop contribution to UNPROFOR.

Operation Cheshire describes RAF participation in the Sarajevo airlift. The United Nations does not refund costs to any of the participants who are carrying in humanitarian supplies on behalf of UNHCR.

UNPROFOR Croatia—UNPROFOR I—began in February 1992. In the first six months United Kingdom's participation in UNPROFOR II was at no additional cost to the United Nations; the operation was placed on United Nations assessed contributions on 1 April 1993.

Reimbursements from the United Nations to date are as follows:

FY 1992-93

UNPROFOR I payments for troop costs for the period to 31 July 1992
Total £191,663·25

FY 1993-94 to date

UNPROFOR I payments for troop costs March 1992 to March 1993
£1,667,909·09

UNPROFOR I and II payments for troop costs April-November 1993
£13,439,501·66

£2,013,288·19

UNPROFOR II payment for helicopter services April-September

1993
Total £18,099,972·64

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the meeting between United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Serbian President in Belgrade on 15 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 21 March 1994]: Mrs. Ogata received assurances from President Milosevic that he would use his influence with the Bosnian Serbs over access to Maglaj. The situation has now improved and the first United Nations aid convoy to reach the town since October arrived on 20 March. Mrs. Ogata also expressed her concern at the continued human rights abuses in Banja Luka. We look to the Serb authorities to act on these concerns.

EC Accession Treaty

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by what dates he expects (a) the deliberations of the formal Council of Ministers of the European Community concerning an accession treaty to be completed, (b) publication of the draft text and (c) introduction of the relevant treaty for treaty ratifications.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 22 March 1994]: The draft treaty is due to be published in early April. If the European Parliament gives its assent to accession during their session of the week beginning 2 May, the treaty will be signed in that month. It will then be open for ratification by member states and applicant states.

Palestine

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Palestine.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 22 March 1994]: Some of the precautionary measures enforced by the Israelis in the occupied territories following the Hebron massacre are still in place, including a curfew in the Hebron area and the closure of the occupied territories. We supported United Nations Security Council Resolution 904 which called for protection of Palestinian civilians in the occupied territories. The resolution also calls for the implementation without delay of the declaration of principles signed last year by Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organisation.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by him and his ministerial colleagues in February.

Sir John Wheeler: Two hundred and twenty letters were received of which 161 were replied to.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions in the past five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on the ground of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I answer parliamentary questions on the basis set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers." I also seek to comply with Madam Speaker's guidance on the need for brief answers to oral questions.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for the past 12 months how many parliamentary questions he has referred to one of his Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to his Department this represents.

Sir John Wheeler: During the period 1 January 1993 to 31 December 1993 71 questions were referred for answer by a Departmental agency. This represents 4·7 per cent. of parliamentary questions asked.

Wild Birds

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list details of all current licences issued to kill wild bird species, including the premises and the wild bird species concerned.

Mr. Tim Smith: The details of all current licences issued by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland to kill wild bird species, including the premises and the wild bird species are as follows:

Licence and expiry date of licence	Wild bird species and maximum number permitted to be killed under the licence	Premise of licence and location covered by licence
Belfast International Airport 30 April 1994	Lapwing (20)	Preserving air safety within the perimeter of Aldergrove Airport
Belfast International Airport 30 April 1994	Black Headed gull (20)	Preserving air safety within the perimeter of Aldergrove Airport
Belfast International Airport 30 April 1994	Golden Plover (20)	Preserving air safety within the perimeter of Aldergrove Airport
River Faughan Anglers 30 June 1994	Cormorant (10)	Protection of migratory fish smolts at the River Faughan, County Londonderry
River Faughan Anglers 30 June 1994	Cormorant (5)	Protection of salmon smolts at the River Bundennett, County Tyrone and County Londonderry

Licence and expiry date of licence	Wild bird species and maximum number permitted to be killed under the licence	Premise of licence and location covered by licence
Bann System Ltd. 30 June 1994	Cormorant (10)	Protection of salmon smolts at the Lower Bann and tributary rivers
Shanes Castle Estates Co. Ltd. 30 June 1994	Cormorant (10)	Protection of salmon smolts at Shanes Castle, Antrim
J. T. Lawrence 2 April 1994	Cormorant (5)	Preserving fish stocks at Lough Doo Fishery, Portaferry, County Down

Castlewellan and Annsborough Angling Club 5 April 1994	Cormorant (5)	Protection of fish farm (stocking of trout) at Ballylough Lough and Ballywillwill Lough, County Down
T/A Alpha Pest Control/Services March 1995	Starling	Preventing the spread of disease or preserving public health—all of Northern Ireland
T/A Alpha Pest Control/Services 23 March 1995	Sparrow and Feral Pigeon	For the purposes of preventing the spread of disease or preserving public health—all of Northern Ireland

Fair Employment

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total number of legally qualified staff employed by the Northern Ireland office and the Northern Ireland Departments, listing the branches in which such staff are employed and the number in each; how many people there are in each case whose perceived religious affiliation is (i) Protestant, (ii) Roman Catholic, (iii) not determined; how many came from outside Northern Ireland; and how many of the latter were born (1) in the rest of the United Kingdom and (2) in the Republic of Ireland.

Sir John Wheeler: The total number of qualified legal staff currently employed by the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland departments is 147. The table lists the branches in which such staff are employed and the number in each.

Branch	Number of Staff
Northern Ireland Office, London	1
Northern Ireland Office, Belfast	4
Crown Solicitors Office	42
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	37
Northern Ireland Compensation Agency	10
Police Authority for Northern Ireland	3
Department of Finance and Personnel Solicitor's Office	35
Office of Law Reform	2
Legislative Counsel	7
Northern Ireland Land Registry	5
Equal Opportunities Unit	1

The use of community background monitoring information in the Northern Ireland civil service is governed by a code of practice, agreed with staff representatives, under which such information can be used only for the purposes of monitoring the effectiveness of the Northern Ireland civil service policy on equality of opportunity and to meet statutory requirements under fair employment legislation.

Disaggregation in the detail sought would be contrary to the code of practice, and could contravene the confidentiality requirements contained in regulations made under the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989. However, of the 147 staff currently employed in a legal capacity 83 are perceived as Protestant and 52 as Roman Catholic. The perceived religious affiliation of 12 cannot be determined. Of these, eight are assessed as being from outside Northern Ireland including five from the United Kingdom and one from the Republic of Ireland.

Purchasing Health Boards

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each purchasing health board in Northern Ireland, the figures for revenue funding in 1992-93, 1993-94 and 1994-95, and the estimated figures for 1995-96 and 1996-97; and if he will indentify the changes for each health board's revenue budget resulting from the replacement of the resource allocation working party system of determining funding allocation.

Mr. Ancram: The revenue resources—exclusive of capital charges—allocated to health and social services boards for the purchase of health and social care for the years 1992-93, 1993-94 and 1994-95 are shown in table 1. The figures for 1993-94 and 1994-95 are provisional and as funding for subsequent years is dependent upon the outcome of future public expenditure surveys, no estimates can be provided for 1995-96 and 1996-97.

Board	1992-93 £000	1993-94 £000	1994-95 £000
Northern	188,159	200,204	223,093
Southern	148,705	162,906	170,601
Eastern	409,657	390,289	395,372
Western	137,825	148,927	155,453

Following the discontinuance of provider-based funding from April 1992, boards are now funded as purchasers of services for their resident populations. Under the new funding approach, the resource adjustments effected to determine the allocations in table 1, are as follows:

Table 2

Board	1992-93 £000	1993-94 £000	1994-95 £000
Northern	38,654	1,832	16,970
Southern	14,533	3,871	4,218
Eastern	[1]53,318	[1]8,856	[1]4,741
Western	4,392	3,153	4,331

[1] Figures denote a reduction in Eastern Boards share of resources.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Dr. Wright) on 31 January, Official Report, columns 491-92.

NHS Specialists (Waiting Lists)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were not on waiting lists for treatment but waiting to see a specialist in the national health service for each quarter in the last two years.

Mr. Ancram: The number of people waiting for first out-patient appointment in Northern Ireland at the end of December 1993 was 79,813. This information is available only from the last quarter of 1993.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will publish Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary report on the RUC.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Copies of the 1993 inspection report, which is the first RUC inspection report to be published, have today been placed in the Library. I welcome the report and will be considering its recommendations carefully. I am grateful to Her Majesty's inspectorate for the report and am pleased to note that overall he regards the force as efficient.

HMIC's inspections offer the opportunity of professional examination of policing policies and priorities and this inspection focused specifically on areas selected for their contribution to efficient and effective operational policing.

The publication, for the first time, of this report is entirely in line with both the Government's and the Chief Constable's clear commitment to more openness.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the administrative costs of the electricity share offer and the trade sale of the generating stations in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: The costs to the Government of the electricity share offer and sale of the generating stations in Northern Ireland are estimated as follows:

	£ million
Underwriting	2·9
Selling and broking commission	1·5
Advisers fees	14·5
Marketing	1·4
Receiving bank	1·7
Share information office, printing and other logistical costs	2·0
Total	24·0

These costs represent about 3 per cent. of the total proceeds due from the sale of the generating stations, the sale of shares in the electricity share offer and the repayment of debt which together are estimated at £780 million. The costs exclude stamp duty and VAT on services provided to the Government which are not net costs to the Exchequer, and incentives on employee and individual shareholdings. The figures include expenditure incurred from April 1991 to the end of January 1994, but do not include costs incurred in previous years primarily on the restructuring of the industry which amounted to about £3·1 million.

Self-financing Regulatory Authorities

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many self-financing regulatory authorities his Department has set up since 1979; what was the annual running cost of each of the self-financing regulatory authorities in each of the last three years; what is the current staffing establishment; and what it was last year and two years ago.

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 16 March 1994]: While there are a number of regulatory authorities in Northern Ireland, none of them are self-financing.

However, the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency—DVTA—of the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland has a regulatory function and is required to recover total costs through fees and charges. The agency was established on 1 April 1992. Running cost for 1992-93 was £5·4 million and it is estimated to be £5·8 million for 1993-94. The staffing complement at the date of its establishment was 257 and is currently 253.

Civil Servants

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department (a) the total number of persons employed and (b) the percentage of this figure that are women.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for council districts of (a) Coleraine, (b) Magherafelt and (c) Limavady the number of Housing Executive dwellings let in each of the last three years and the current year to the latest available date to each category of applicant; and how many applicants housed in each category were resident outside the council area in which they were housed.

Mr. Tim Smith [holding answer 21 March 1994]: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. I have, however, been advised by its chief executive that the number of dwellings let over the past three years and up to September 1993 in the current year is as follows:

Housing executive dwellings let by category

Period	A	B	PT	C
	Coleraine district council area
1990-91	143	236	83	103
1991-92	146	190	88	62

1992-93	90	26	17	44
1993-94[1]	45	10	7	10

[1] To September 1993. Collated by the Housing Executive on a 6-monthly basis and are the latest available.

A—priority applications.
B—based on points.
PT—priority transfers.
C—Non priority transfers.

The information on the number of applicants in each category in a particular district council area who were resident outside the area, is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by him and his ministerial colleagues during February.

Mr. Redwood: The number of letters received from hon. Members by myself and my ministerial colleagues during February was 320. The number of responses sent to hon. Members in the same period was 396.

Prostate Cancer Screening

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to improve prostate cancer screening for men.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There are no plans to introduce a national screening programme for prostate cancer. Current evidence does not suggest that any such programme would achieve a demonstrable improvement in health by increasing the length and quality of life.

The value of available techniques for the early detection of prostate cancer is kept under review. We are aware of some local research into this issue.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the total of capital allocations (a) in total, (b) for education, (c) transport, (d) social services and (e) for other services, to each county council in Wales and in total for (i) 1979-80, (ii) 1982-83, (iii) 1985-86 and (iv) each year since 1988-89;

(2) what was the total of capital expenditure on other services for each Welsh local authority, and in total for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89; and if he will give the breakdown between (i) county councils and (ii) district councils in Wales;

(3) what was the capital allocation for each local authority in Wales, and in total, for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89;

(4) what was the total capital allocation for housing to each Welsh district council and in total for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89.

Mr. Redwood: The hon. Member has requested a large volume of statistical information. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what advertising his Department has initiated of the process of schools in Wales opting out of local authority control;

(2) how much money has been spent on advertising costs of the process of schools becoming grant-maintained in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Department has not been involved in any advertising campaigns in respect of grant-maintained status.

Eisteddfod

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what evaluation there has been of the attraction to tourists of the annual international eisteddfod at Llangollen; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Llangollen international eisteddfod is an important annual event which benefits tourism. In 1993 the international eisteddfod achieved ticket sales of 115,600.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what evaluation there has been of the attraction to tourists of the annual Urdd national eisteddfod; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Urdd eisteddfod is an important annual event which attracts upwards of 80,000 visitors each year. While most of these come from within Wales, the Urdd eisteddfod plays a significant part in attracting tourists to the particular locality that it visits each year.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what evaluation there has been of the attraction to tourists of the annual national eisteddfod; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The national eisteddfod is an important annual event which attracts upwards of 135,000 visitors each year. Figures for 1993 suggest that some 5 per cent. travelled from outside Wales.

Drws-y-Nant Improvement Scheme

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when work will commence on the Drws-y-Nant area of the Bala to Dolgellau road; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 3 February 1994, Official Report, column 863.

Tai Cymru

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the capital expenditure of Tai Cymru and housing associations in Wales on administration in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In 1992-93 Housing for Wales incurred capital expenditure on administration of £98,800. Information on individual housing associations is not readily available.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received on the subject of reductions in the hill livestock compensatory allowances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Since the announcement of the 1994 HLCA rates on 30 November, nine organisations and individuals have made representations to me on this subject.

Police

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received during the last six months on the question of amalgamation of Welsh police forces; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: This is a matter for the Home Office, but I have received one representation from Cwmbran community council.

Hospitals

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospitals are currently managed by health boards in Wales; what percentage of total bed provision these hospitals represent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In Wales, 76 hospitals, 50 per cent. of total beds, are managed by health authorities, 81 hospitals, 50 per cent. of total beds, by NHS trusts. On 1 April 1994, 10 further NHS trusts will be established taking the total of NHS trust-managed hospitals to 127, 73 per cent. of total beds.

Council Tax

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the average waiting time for appeals against valuation to be heard since the introduction of the council tax.

Mr. Redwood: A figure cannot yet be given because many appeals are being cleared by the Valuation Office without a valuation tribunal hearing.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many appeals there have been against council tax valuations since the council tax was introduced.

Mr. Redwood: Some 55,855 at 28 February.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many successful appeals against valuation have resulted in a change in the banding of a property since the introduction of the council tax.

Mr. Redwood: Some 13,088 appeals have so far led to property banding changes.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many appeals against council tax valuations are still waiting to be heard.

Mr. Redwood: At 28 February, 39,545 banding proposals awaited resolution

Further Education

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish guidelines for the development of further education in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Wales wrote to the chairman of the Further Education Funding Council for Wales on 27 May 1992 to provide broad guidance on the functions of the council—on Government policies which are relevant to the exercise of those functions and on particular matters to which the council should have regard. That guidance has been supplemented by further indications of the Government's policies for the further education sector in the annual letter sent to the council notifying it of expenditure provision for the following financial year. Copies of the letters have been placed in the Library of the House.

Sheep Scab

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from those involved in agriculture in Wales on the designation of sheep scab as a non-notifiable disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: A number of representations have been made for the Government to impose statutory controls in respect of sheep scab. However, this is a disease which can be controlled readily by individual farmers, who are well aware of the preventive measures and procedures needed to deal with it. Most of the detailed measures on the control of sheep scab were removed in July 1992. The Government have already announced that they will complete this process, and have no other plans to require the notification of sheep scab.

South Glamorgan County Council

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when his office received a copy of the report prepared by the auditors Coopers and Lybrand on the debts owed to and outstanding insurance claims of South Glamorgan county council; if he will place a copy of the report in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: This is a matter for South Glamorgan county council and its auditors. My Department has not been sent a copy of the report.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the dates Ministers, or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to his Department.

Mr. Redwood: Since 1985 there have been no official visits by Welsh Office Ministers or officials using the Malaysian airline MAS.

Agricultural Diversification

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives the Welsh Office has set up to assist diversification for those engaged in agriculture in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Farmers wishing to diversify may qualify for assistance from a number of sources. The Wales tourist board provides assistance for farm tourism developments in Wales under the provisions of section 4 of the Development of Tourism Act 1969. The Welsh Development Agency and the Development Board for Rural Wales operate the rural conversion grant scheme which assists with the conversion of redundant buildings in rural areas with the aim of bringing them back into productive use.

Financial assistance is also available under the DRIVE scheme—development of rural initiative, venture and enterprise—which is designed to stimulate private sector activity in deprived rural areas.

Osteoporosis

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what funding has been made available in each of the past five years to health boards for screening of osteoporosis; how many women in Wales have been screened for osteoporosis in each of the past five years; how many clinics in health boards and trust board areas exist for the specific purpose of screening for osteoporosis; how many women have been diagnosed as suffering from osteoporosis in the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There is no national population screening programme for osteoporosis, and therefore no central funding, as there is not yet evidence to show that such a programme would be effective. Health authorities are responsible for assessing need and for ensuring that suitable diagnostic services for individual women are made available.

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations relating to future funding provision he has received from voluntary organisations in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have received 28 representations from voluntary organisations in Wales regarding future funding provision.

F. L. Steelcraft

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what grants were made to F. L. Steelcraft and F. L. Steelcraft Ltd. of Borth, Aberystwyth, Wales from public funds; and on what dates payments were made to these companies.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on Wednesday 16 March 1994, Official Report, column 695.

Head Teachers, Clwyd

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet the Federation of Clwyd Primary Headteachers to discuss the allocation of rate support grant to Clwyd county council.

Mr. Redwood: Under long-standing arrangements the formula for distributing revenue support grant is agreed with the local authority associations and ratified by the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance. A meeting would not be appropriate.

Beaches (Sellafield Discharges)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the implications for his plans to encourage greater tourism in Wales of contamination of north Wales beaches from radioactive pollution discharges from Sellafield.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Details of the latest recorded levels of radioactivity on the north Wales coast can be found in the "Aquatic Environment Monitoring Report", No. 38, 1992, published by the Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food. A copy of the report is available in the Library of the House. The report indicates that the levels of radioactivity on north Wales beaches are not significant and are well within internationally agreed limits. It is not expected that this will have a detrimental effect on the tourist industry.

Water Pollution

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his response to the publication on 17 March of the Welsh region National Rivers Authority reports on ferriginous minewater impacts in Welsh coalfields.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the press release I issued on 15 March, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Revenue Funding Figures

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each purchasing health authority in Wales, the figures for revenue funding in 1992-93, 1993-94 and 1994-95, and the estimated figures for 1995-96 and 1996-97; and if he will identify the changes for each health authority's revenue budget resulting from the replacement of the resource allocation working party system of determining funding allocation.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested in respect of the revenue funding of each purchasing authority in the period 1992-93 to 1994-95 together with projections of allocations in the years 1995-96 and 1996-97 is as follows:

Revenue allocation[1]

	1992-93	[2]1993-94	[2]1994-95	Projected [2][3]1995-96	Projected [2][3]1996-97

[1]Allocations prior to deduction of the hospital and community health element of GP Fundholder budgets.
[2]Allocations from 1992-93 onwards reflect reductions in respect of the costs of education and training when responsibility for the purchase of education and training from education providers pass to central control.
[3]Projected allocations based on latest resource planning assumption which, for planning purposes only, reflect 0·5 per cent. per annum real terms growth.

Collection and processing of cross-boundary data used for the revenue formula assessment by the resource allocation working group was discontinued when the weighted capitation formula for allocating health authority revenue funding was introduced in 1991-92. The identification of differences between notional allocations under the previous methodology and allocations made to authorities under the current methodology therefore cannot be provided other than at disproportionate cost.

Avian Piscivores

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many licence applications he has received for the killing of cormorants or goosanders to prevent serious damage to fisheries in the last year; how many have been granted; how many are still to be determined; and which river or locality is involved in each case.

Mr. Redwood: The Department has received two applications relating to the river Usk, and one each for the river Wye, the river Dovey and Llyn Cefni on Anglesey. All five applications have been rejected. Two applications for the Usk have yet to be determined.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consideration he has given to the report on the basis for policy relating to avian piscivores which was commissioned by the National Rivers Authority and its subsequent position statement on cormorants and sawbill ducks, dated 1 March.

Mr. Redwood: The report provides a valuable contribution to the debate on the controversial issue of the effect of bird predation on freshwater fisheries, and identifies the need for further research in this field. The report has only recently been published, and interested parties will be considering its recommendations and the National Rivers Authority's position statement.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the past five years.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd) on 22 February 1994, Official Report, columns 144-45.

Specialist Appointments

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were not on waiting lists for treatment but were waiting to see a specialist in the national health service for each quarter in the last two years.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Carmarthen on 15 March, Official Report, column 632.

Particulate Emissions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he plans to take to reduce levels of PM10 particulate emissions from exhaust fumes in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for roads and traffic, 21 March, Official Report, column 100.

Accounting Officer Directions

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 24 February, Official Report, column 417, if he will make a statement on the circumstances which led to the final directions, the sums of public money involved, and in what ways his Department informed hon. Members and the Committee of Public Accounts of these directions.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 3 March 1994]: I understand that on both occasions urgent decisions were required in respect of the Welsh development agency's investment in the Parrot Corporation.

In 1985 Treasury approval for a £750,000 guarantee from the Welsh development agency to the Parrot Corporation was given on condition that it would be used as a facility of last resort. In October 1985 an immediate decision was required in order to ensure that refinancing negotiations which were under way at the time did not collapse and the then Secretary of State authorised the accounting officer to waive the condition.

In April 1988 another immediate decision was required and the then Secretary of State authorised the accounting officer, in the absence of Treasury authority, to approve funding of £58,500 by the WDA to enable the agency to take up its share of a rights issue in order to allow the agency to maintain its shareholding and to remove a contingent liability.

On both occasions the circumstances described were considered to fall within the provisions of paragraph 11 of the then accounting officer memorandum, that is, issues not of formal propriety or regularity but more widely of prudent and economical administration. This did not require notification to the Comptroller and Auditor General. The Department drew the circumstances to the attention of the National Audit Office in the course of a subsequent inquiry.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cocoa

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much financial assistance has been given by the Government to (a) the international cocoa gene bank in Trinidad, (b) by the CATIE cocoa gene bank in Costa Rica, (c) the international cocoa germplasm database at Reading, Berkshire and (d) the international cocoa quarantine station at Reading, Berkshire in each of the last five years.

Mr. Jack: MAFF has not provided financial assistance to any of those bodies. I refer the hon. Member, however, to the answer given on 21 March by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, at column 26.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will ensure that the Forestry Commission will maintain its position in Yorkshire and Humberside.

Mr. Jack: The Forestry Commission manages over 24,000 hectares of woodland in Yorkshire and Humberside; it expects to sell about 10 per cent. of this under the current disposals programme.

Less-favoured Area Farms

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many livestock units on average are considered necessary for a less-favoured area farm in England to be classified as a full-time commercial farm in 1964, 1973, 1979 and according to the most recent information available.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Livestock units are not used as a means of classifying farm size.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many less-favoured area farms in England of fewer than eight, eight to 16, 16 to 28, 28 to 40, 40 to 60, 60 to 100, 100 to 200 and 200 livestock units and over draw more than 25 per cent., 50 per cent., 75 per cent. or the full 100 per cent. of their total income from the farm business; how many farmers in total, for each of the size brackets, have secondary employment; and how many have secondary employment which contributes over 50 per cent. of their total income.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is not available in the form requested. Some information on the incomes of farmers from both farm and non-farm sources is published in "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom".

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many contracts her Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the past five years.

Mr. Jack: As far as the annual cost of consultants is concerned I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 10 February 1994 to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher), Official Report, columns 429-30.

There is no central record of the numbers of contracts prior to 1990-91. For the remaining years the approximate numbers are as follows:

Financial year	Approximate number of contracts
1990-91	34
1991-92	71
1992-93	111

Avian Piscivores

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will place in the Library a copy of the advice note dated 12 October 1993, issued by her Department to the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service, on the consultation procedures for the licensed killing of birds under section 16 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Mr. Soames: No. It has never been the practice to disclose internal memoranda issued within the Department.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what effect the Government expects any maternal or horizontal transmission of BSE to have on the epidemic itself.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: There is no unequivocal scientific evidence so far of the occurrence of either maternal or horizontal transmission of BSE. If either is occurring it is happening so infrequently that it is undetectable against the current background level of disease caused by contaminated feed. It is clear that although maternal transmission, if it is occurring, would increase the cumulative total of BSE cases, on its own it would be insufficient to perpetuate the epidemic under British farming conditions. The effect of horizontal transmission on the BSE epidemic would depend on the frequency and circumstances of its occurrence.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by him and his ministerial colleagues in February.

Mr. Waldegrave: We received 116 letters from hon. Members during February; 92 of these have been answered and we are in the process of responding to the remaining 24.

Market Testing

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what evidence he has as to the effect on the quality of service to the public of market-testing and privatisation of civil service activities since November 1991.

Mr. Waldegrave: Departments estimate that quality of service will improve in over a third of activities which have been included in the competing for quality programme for 1992-93 and will be maintained in the remainder.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish the evidence which led to his estimate of the savings from the market testing of civil service activities.

Mr. Waldegrave: The estimate of savings made on 4 November 1993 and published in the citizens charter second report on 16 March was based on reports made by Departments on their expectation of future performance of a service, and set against costs currently incurred.

Contracting Out

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when the decision was taken to allow direct contracting out of civil service activities without an opportunity for an in-house bid to be considered.

Mr. Waldegrave: Contracting out for strategic or policy reasons has always been an option, as the White Paper, "Competing for Quality" (Cm 1730), made clear.

Government Publications

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what role he has in monitoring Government public relations, advertising, press releases and publicity for accuracy and honesty and to ensure that it is not knowingly misleading.

Mr. Waldegrave: None. Responsibility for these matters rests with the appropriate departmental Minister.

Departmental Property

Mr. Enright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what property, leased or owned for the purposes of his Department, is not currently occupied.

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 18 March, Official Report, column 868-69.

In addition to the information provided by Property Holdings in respect of the common user estate, the Cabinet Office also occupies property on its own departmental estate. The Cabinet Office has no departmental property which is not currently occupied. The Civil Service college, an agency of the Office of Public Service and Science, has one students accommodation block vacant, undergoing refurbishment.

Her Majesty's Stationery Office has two warehouse properties surplus to its requirement. One is currently for sale, the other is being prepared for sale.

The Central Office of Information has no property which is currently unoccupied.

Disabled People

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many registered disabled people are employed in his Department; and what percentage this is of the total.

Mr. Waldegrave: The most recent figures are:

	Registered disabled	Percentage of total staff
Cabinet Office (including OPSS and agencies)	23·5	1·0
Her Majesty's Stationery Office	50·5	1·7
Central Office of Information	5·0	1·0

Part-time staff are counted as half units.

SCOTLAND

Maritime Borders

16. Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has made to the European Commission with regard to the impact of the maritime borders aspect of Interreg 2; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: We have already responded positively to the proposals in the European Commission's Green Paper to extend Interreg to include maritime boundaries. I am currently considering the more detailed proposals announced recently for an Interreg 2, and their implications for Scotland.

A90

17. Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent upgrading the A90 Aberdeen to Perth road to dual carriageway in (a) 1980 to 1989 and (b) in each of the past five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The sums spent since 1979 on upgrading the A90 between Perth and Aberdeen amount to £138 million. The details are as follows:

Details of sums spent on upgrading the A90

	£ million
1979-80 to 1988-89	87·5
1989-90	13·9
1990-91	8·0
1991-92	3·4
1992-93	11·1
1993-94 (to December 1993)	14·8

Forestry Commission

18. Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the Forestry Commission review group has now reported to Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: The forestry review group submitted its report to Ministers on 28 February, and we are now considering it carefully.

Local Government Reform

19. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends next to meet the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss his proposed local government reforms.

Mr. Lang: The Convention of Scottish Local Authorities continues to have a policy of not co-operating with the Government on local government reform. Until that policy is revoked, meetings between Ministers and COSLA on the subject are unfortunately not possible.

20. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what opinion polling he has commissioned to test the acceptability among the Scottish electorate of his proposals to re-organise local government.

Mr. Stewart: Extensive public consultation over the past two and a half years has demonstrated strong support for a single-tier structure of local government in Scotland.

Off-licences

21. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had on the proposals to allow off-licences in Scotland to open on Sunday; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Over the last year, my right hon. Friend has received 30 representations from organisations and individuals concerning off-licenses in Scotland. Seven organisations and nine individuals have expressed support for the proposal to open on Sundays while two organisations and four individuals wish the existing prohibition retained.

Smoking

22. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effects of smoking on the health of Scots.

Mr. Stewart: It is estimated that each year some 10,600 Scots die as a result of smoking and around 33,500 people are admitted to national health service hospitals in Scotland because they have an illness attributable to smoking. It is the major cause of lung cancer. It is also a major risk factor for cardiovascular and respiratory diseases and other illnesses.

Monklands District Council

23. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives from Monklands district council to discuss local government employment practices.

Mr. Stewart: Monklands district council has made no request to my right hon. Friend for a meeting on the subject of local government employment practices.

Bail

24. Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps are being taken to stop perceived abuse of bail in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Reducing bail abuse is a high priority for us. We have commissioned major research into bail decision making and the report of the research should be available in the next few weeks. We have also taken steps to improve statistical information on bail abuse so that we have a better understanding of both the nature and the scale of the problem.

We are considering with the Crown office, the police and the courts what further legislative and administrative action may be necessary for Scotland.

Health Care, Glasgow

25. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will next be meeting the Greater Glasgow health board to discuss health care in Glasgow.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend and my noble and learned Friend the Minister of State regularly meet representatives from all health boards to discuss health provision issues. There are no immediate plans for further meetings at present.

A77

26. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of progress of discussions with Strathclyde regional council regarding the upgrading of the A77 Ayr to Glasgow route.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have been able to make available to Strathclyde regional council sums totalling £28·7 million over the next three years, to enable them to proceed with the Ayr road route project. Strathclyde regional council will now be able to enter into a joint contract with the Scottish Office to undertake this project.

Local Government Reorganisation

27. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of the cost of local government reorganisation.

Mr. Stewart: The transitional cost of local government reorganisation is estimated at between £120 million and £194 million for a 30 council structure. These costs will be offset by ongoing annual savings of between £16 million and £60 million. Costs will be fully recouped within three to six years.

School Buildings, Grampian

28. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received for additional capital grants for school buildings in Grampian.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In the current financial year, four representations have been received from the hon. Member, and one each from my hon. Friend the Member for Kincardine and Deeside (Mr. Kynoch) and from the Member for Aberdeen, North (Mr. Hughes), concerning the need for additional capital consent allocations for school building work in Grampian region.

Electronics Industry

29. Dr. Bray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take further steps to encourage the growth of new locally owned software and electronics firms in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: Yes. The Government are actively working to put in place the infrastructure and to encourage the investment needed to ensure growth in the software and electronics sectors in Scotland.

The Scottish Office Industry Department, the Enterprise Network and educational institutions are working in partnership with industry-led bodies such as the Scottish Electronics Forum on a number of programmes which will improve competitiveness. Within that overall framework particular attention is given to the needs of new and growing businesses.

Countryside (Access)

30. Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to promote access to the countryside.

Sir Hector Monro: The responsibility for promoting access to the countryside lies with Scottish Natural Heritage and the local authorities. The former is conducting a general review of access to the countryside and has undertaken a public consultation exercise on this. I look forward to receiving its report and recommendations in due course.

Inward Investment

31. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his plans for the encouragement of investment from north America and south-east Asia to Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: On the Government's behalf, Locate in Scotland is continually promoting Scotland as a location for inward investment. Through its field organisations in north America and south-east Asia, Locate in Scotland undertakes a continuous programme of contacts with appropriate companies in targeted industrial sectors.

Economy

32. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the Scottish Trades Union Congress to discuss the Scottish economy.

Mr. Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's reply to the hon. Member for Cumnock, Carrick and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 23 February at column 289.

Labour Statistics

33. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many men were in full-time jobs in Scotland in 1979; and how many there are in such jobs at the present time.

Mr. Stewart: Information on male full-time employment is not available for 1979. The total number of male employees, in December 1979, was 1,196,900. In December 1993, the latest date for which information is available, there were 982,900 male employees, of whom 882,100 were full-time.

Community Care

34. Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of community care arrangements in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: Considerable progress has been made in developing procedures to ensure that the needs of vulnerable people and their carers are identified and that assistance is arranged where appropriate taking account of the choice of the individual. Local authorities, health boards and housing agencies were working together in all areas to deliver the objectives of the policy.

Steel Industry

35. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the steel industry.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations about the steel industry over the past few years. Most of these have concerned the closure of the Ravenscraig steel plant in 1992.

Inshore Fishing Fleet

36. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he proposes to provide further assistance to the Scottish inshore fishing fleet; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: The fishing industry in Scotland benefits from a range of public support, including financial support from the European Union. Consideration is being given to future arrangements for such support, by preparation of a United Kingdom sectoral plan for fisheries.

Secondary Schools

37. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many secondary pupils are currently being educated in (a) comprehensive schools, (b) independent schools, (c) special schools and (d) other schools; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Provisional information on the numbers of secondary pupils in Scotland at September 1993 is given in the table. All education authority and grant-aided secondary schools in Scotland are non-selective.

	Numbers
Education authority and grant-aided secondary schools	311,898
Independent schools	19,979
Education authority and grant-aided special schools and departments (pupils aged 12 and over)	4,450
TOTAL	334,450

Health Service

38. Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairmen of the health boards in Scotland to discuss the health service in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: My noble and learned Friend the Minister of State met health board chairmen on 25 February 1994.

Council Tax

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average cost of each appeal against council tax evaluations in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not available centrally.

Renewables Obligation

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many projects bidding for support under the Scottish renewables obligation came under each of the five technology bands specified in the SRO order; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I understand that the Office of Electricity Regulation has received 190 applications across all types of renewable energy technology expected to be supported under the Scottish renewables obligation. Further information about these applications is a commercially confidential matter for the Office of Electricity Regulation.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria he will apply to projects which pass the technical and economic appraisals, in determining which ones will be awarded contracts under the Scottish renewables obligation order; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: This is a matter for the two Scottish public electricity suppliers on which the obligation will be placed by the order which I expect to make in the autumn. However, I understand that they expect to contract with the projects offering the cheapest price per unit of electricity generated to the required level of capacity in each technology band as defined in the order.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

Mr. Lang: My Department has commissioned a total of 339 consultancy assignments since the start of the 1989-90 financial year. The total cost in each of the last five years was given in my reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 21 February 1994, at columns 51-52.

Ferry Services

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he intends to set targets for Caledonian MacBrayne for 1994-95.

Mr. Lang: I have decided to set the following targets for Caledonian MacBrayne for the year 1994-95. The company will be required to achieve as a financial target that fares income should meet at least 60 per cent. of operating costs including depreciation charged on a replacement cost basis and provision for an 8 per cent. foregone rate of return on capital. As an efficiency target, the company will be asked not to exceed a maximum unit cost of £0·86 million per passenger car unit capacity kilometre. As a quality of service target the company will be asked to achieve a figure of 96·5 per cent. of sailings arriving on time, excluding sailings which are delayed or cancelled for safety reasons, for example, adverse weather conditions. I consider that the setting of these targets will provide a clear framework for the operation of the company in 1994-95, consistent with the objectives of securing continued improvement in operational efficiency and standards of service.

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has for shipping subsidies for sea transport services in the Highlands and Islands in 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Subject to parliamentary approval of the estimates, I propose to make available in 1994-95 total subsidy provision of £15·673 million. The deficit subsidy for Caledonian MacBrayne will be £5·742 million. For services to Orkney and Shetland, tariff rebate subsidies of up to £8·557 million will be made available. Up to £1·374 million will be available for other coastal shippers operating on the West Coast of Scotland.

The level of provision proposed for Caledonian MacBrayne for 1994-95 reflects a reduced requirement for revenue deficit subsidy from the 1993-94 level, following the introduction of new financial arrangements for the company and an expected improvement in trading performance and operational efficiency. Capital grants of up to £7·3 million will also be made available to the company in 1994-95 for expenditure on the new vessel currently under construction for the Ullapool-Stornoway route.

The increased level of financial support for services to Orkney and Shetland which I made available in 1993-94 is maintained.

Prisoners (Christmas Leave)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria he uses when deciding which prisoners may be granted Christmas leave; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 17 March 1994]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Scottish Prison Service under its Chief Executive Mr. E. W. Frizzell. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 March 1994:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question on the criteria he uses when deciding which prisoners are to be granted Christmas leave.

Prisoners and Young Offenders who have been allocated Security Category D, the lowest category, and are detained at open establishments or Training for Freedom Hostels attached to prisons are eligible for consideration for Christmas leave. Decisions on individual cases are a matter for Governors of each establishment who take into account the following:

1. The nature of the offence.
2. The prisoner's attitude to the offence.
3. The prisoner's conduct and industry during the preceding 6 months.
4. The home conditions and stability of the prisoner's relationship with his family.
5. The views and likely effect on known victims and the community.

Egg Consumption

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the figures for egg consumption in Scotland for each year since 1988.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 22 March 1994]: Estimates of household consumption of eggs are provided by the national food survey. The estimates exclude eggs used in manufacturing or catering and institutions.

Number per person per week

	Per cent.
1988	3·62
1989	2·82
1990	2·61
1991	2·17
1992	2·28

Poultry

Mr. Martin Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many poultry birds were slaughtered in each year since 1988 in Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 22 March 1994]: Estimates of the number of poultry slaughtered in Scotland each year are:

	Thousands
1988	68,002
1989	66,056
1990	68,258
1991	67,301
1992	70,208
1993	77,899

Freight

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all instances where a freight flow has been transferred from road to rail transport in Scotland during the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 March 1994]: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give details of all awards made by his Department under the freight facilities grant scheme over the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will give details of the total amount spent by his Department on awards under the freight facilities grant scheme over the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will give details of the number of applications for awards under the freight facilities grant scheme that have been rejected over the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 March 1994]: The Scottish Office has made awards to four new projects totalling £3,455,034 under the freight facilities grant scheme since March 1984. The details of the projects are as follows:

Company	Location	Facilities
Deanside Transit Ltd.	Hillington, Glasgow	Warehousing and bulk handling facilities
John G. Russell	Gartcosh, Glasgow	Coal containers and handling equipment
British Alcan	Fort William	Rail facilities and averages for the handling of alumina
Caledonian Paper plc	Irvine	Siding, track and handling facilties for timber and china clay

Over the past 10 years a total of £3,627,704 has been paid out under the FFG scheme. This includes the awards of to the four projects detailed and the balance of awards made prior to 1984. During this period three applications, which did not meet the schemes' criteria for eligibility, have been rejected.

The Government recognise that the carriage of freight by rail usually offers environmental advantages over other transport modes, and it is our policy that freight should use rail wherever it makes good economic sense to do so. To give rail a competitive edge the Government are enhancing the freight facilities grant scheme from 1 April 1994. These enhancements include the extension of the areas of capital expenditure which may be eligible for grant, and the simplification and improvement of procedures for applicants. We hope that the revisions will lead to renewed interest in the scheme in Scotland.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incapacity Certificates

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security under which Act of Parliament or regulation a person against whom a certificate of permanent incapacity is issued is refused access to the reason for the granting of such a certificate.

Mr. Scott: The legislation governing the issue of medical evidence of incapacity for work by general practitioners to people claiming social security benefits is contained in the Social Security (Medical Evidence) Regulations 1976.

Self-employed Persons

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate, on the same basis as the answer given on 3 November 1983, Official Report, column 452, to the hon. Member for Warwickshire, North (Mr. O'Brien), on self-employed persons, what would be the class 2 national insurance constribution necessary to meet the cost of extending unemployment benefit to self-employed people.

Mr. Hague: If title to unemployment benefit were to be extended to the self-employed, the class 2 contribution rate for 1994-95 would have to rise to £7·75, an increase of £2·10 over the proposed rate of £5·65 a week.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reasons Mrs. Netta Black of Ardoch crescent, Stevenson, Ayrshire received a request from the Child Support Agency that her late husband pay for the upkeep of his daughter.

Mr. Scott: Owing to a clerical error, the Child Support Agency wrote to Mrs. Black on 17 February 1994. An apology was made to her on 7 March and the case was closed. There has been no further contact between the agency and Mrs. Black.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list to-date the number of letters his Department's Child Support Agency has sent apologising to widows for inadvertently sending letters to them demanding money from their late husbands to pay for the upkeep of their children; and how many apologies are still on file waiting to be sent.

Mr. Scott: The Child Support Agency does not maintain statistics of such cases.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the reasons for a letter from the Child Support Agency being sent to Miss Hayley Lidster of Godlys, Mid Glamorgan concerning child support.

Mr. Scott: A letter from the Child Support Agency to a client with a similar name was delivered in error to Miss Lidster. The agency subsequently sent letters of apology to both the people involved.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases pursued by the Child Support Agency have resulted in the payment of maintenance to the parent with care in (a) Newham and (b) Great Britain.

Mr. Scott: Figures are not available for the number of maintenance assessments made in Newham. National figures were given by Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive of the Child Support Agency in her reply to the hon. Member for Warrington, South (Mr. Hall) on 4 March, Official Report, column 38.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many lone parents previously in receipt of benefits have had their income raised above entitlement to benefit as a result of a maintenance assessment by the Child Support Agency in (a) Newham and (b) Great Britain.

Mr. Scott: Information is not collected separately for Newham. National figures are being collected but are not yet available.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many lone parents in receipt of benefits have had their benefit reduced due to their failure to provide the Child Support Agency with the required information about the absent parent in (a) the London borough of Newham and (b) Great Britain.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases dealt with by the Child Support Agency resulting in the assessment of a minimum award this assessment has not been pursued because the absent parent is exempt from payment.

Mr. Scott: Such information is not collected.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what provision the Child Support Agency has for the use of interpreters during CSA interviews where one or both parents does not have English as a first language; and in how many instances interpreters have been used.

Mr. Scott: Child Support Agency local offices are co-located with Benefits Agency offices. There is an inter-agency agreement which provides for CSA clients to have the same access to interpreters during interviews as BA customers. BA policy is to provide a linguistic service to customers for whom English is not their first language. Guidance, including a code of practice, has been issued to all district managers. The service may be provided by BA interpreters, BA bilingual staff, community interpreters or other commercial interpreters. No records are kept to show in how many instances interpreters have been used.

National Insurance

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the combined rate of employer/employee national insurance contributions necessary to achieve balance in the national insurance fund in 1994-95.

Mr. Hague: It is estimated[1] that a treasury grant equivalent to 16 per cent. of expected benefit expenditure will be needed to balance the national insurance fund in 1994-95[2]. If the grant was not available a combined employer/employee contribution rate of between 23·2 and 23·9 per cent.[3] would be needed to raise the same level of income.

[1] Estimates are based on the November 1993 FSBR assumptions.

[2] The Government Actuary recommends planning for an end year balance equivalent to 2 months' benefit expenditure.

[3] The contribution percentages vary according to whether there was an increase in the main primary or main secondary percentage rate, or a combination of both.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing how many claimants of invalidity benefit had the cases reviewed between 1 April 1993 and 1 October 1993; and in each year prviously to 1990; what number of such cases for each period had either (a) a reduction or (b) a withdrawal of invalidity benefit; and how many new claims of invalidity benefit were accepted for each period.

Mr. Scott: Detailed information about adjudication officers' decisions which review entitlement to invalidity benefit is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. We estimate that between 1 April 1993 and 30 September 1993, across all benefits for incapacity[1], some 35,000 disallowances[2] were made on the ground that the claimant was not incapable for work. Estimates for earlier years are not available. Available information about new spells of invalidity benefit entitlement is in the table.

[1] Sickness benefit, invalidity benefit, severe disablement allowance, and people claiming these benefits but receiving only national insurance credits with or without income support.

[2] Based on a 5 per cent. sample of cases referred to the Benefits Agency Medical Service, rounded to the nearest thousand.

Spells of invalidity benefit entitlement commencing

Period	Number
2 April 1990 to 30 March 1991	288,000
1 April 1991 to 4 April 1992	323,000

Note: Based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants in Great Britain, rounded to the nearest thousand.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of existing recipients of invalidity benefit in (a) London and (b) Lewisham who will be disqualified under the new capacity test.

Mr. Scott: Numbers cannot be reliably estimated at this stage, but our current estimate is that around 200,000 of the people who initially transfer to incapacity benefit from invalidity benefit may fail to satisfy the test within the first two years. This estimate cannot be broken down by district.

Some of these people would have been excluded from benefit by existing medical controls but will be excluded at an earlier stage by the new medical test. Around 100,000 people a year are found capable of their own or an alternative occupation by the existing medical controls. This includes people claiming sickness benefit, severe disablement allowance and income support because of incapacity for work, as well as invalidity benefit.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of people in receipt of invalidity benefit in (a) London and (b) Lewisham for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Scott: This is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mrs. Bridget Prentice, dated 22 March 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about Invalidity Benefit (IVB) recipients in London and Lewisham.

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because Benefits Agency (BA) district boundaries do not correspond with county or borough boundaries.

The Agency's Lewisham and Brixton District is not only responsible for Lewisham postal addresses but also for some adjacent areas. Information about those customers resident in the Lewisham postal area could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. I have, therefore, provided at Appendix 1 the number of people claiming IVB in the Lewisham and Brixton District.

Information relating to the numbers of IVB customers is collected by each District. However, separate statistics for IVB customers were not maintained by Districts until May 1991. I am, therefore, only able to provide information for the Lewisham and Brixton District from that date.

In addition, the figures include some customers who have claimed but are not actually receiving IVB. This is because there are circumstances in which although there is an underlying entitlement to IVB, because a higher overlapping benefit is in payment no IVB is actually paid. The figures were obtained from a 100 per cent. clerical count of cases in the District Office.

BA District generally comprise of a District Office and one or more Branch Offices. Although a number of BA Districts deal only with London postal addresses, others consist of offices both inside and outside the London postal area. I am, therefore, unable to provide the information in the exact format requested.

However, I have provided at Appendix 2 a table showing the number of customers in receipt of IVB in respect of the former Greater London Council geographical area. These figures are based on a 1 per cent. sample of customers. The figure given for 4 April 1992 is the latest date for which figures are available.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Social Fund

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the 1994-95 gross budget for the discretionary parts of the social fund will be.

Mr. Scott: The social fund gross discretionary budget for 1994-95 will be £353 million. Some £97 million will be allocated to grants, £255 million to loans and £1 million will be held as a contingency reserve. The new allocations represent an overall increase of £7 million over the gross budget set at April 1993.

Details of individual district budget allocations have been placed in the Library.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

Mr. Hague: The information is in the table.

	Number of Contracts	Cost (£ million)
1988-89	746	49·5
1989-90	683	43·3
1990-91	952	83·2
1991-92	933	69·7
1992-93	1,025	100·9

Domestic Fuel (VAT)

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what calculations he has made of (a) the amount that value added tax at 8 per cent. on fuel will add to the cost of each unit of electricity consumed and (b) the number of units on which 50p will pay the additional VAT.

Sir John Cope: I have been asked to reply.

The answers would depend on the particular electricity company, and factors such as whether standard tariff or economy 7 tariff is used.

The Government have made available a substantial package of help, which will cost up to £1,250 million a year from April 1996 onwards.

Pensioners and disabled people are likely to find, on average, that this extra help from the Government will broadly cover all changes in the price of fuel, including VAT, over the course of this Parliament.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Attorney-General how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

The Solicitor-General: The information is set out in the table.

Department	1989-90 £		1990-91 £		1991-92 £		1992-93 £		1993-94 £

Asbestos

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the outcome of his Department's case against Shipbreaking Industries Ltd. regarding asbestos pollution; if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: My Department's case against Shipbreaking Industries Ltd. regarding asbestos pollution was rejected by the court in January 1993. The recently reported out of court settlement between my Department and Shipbreaking Industries Ltd. related to a dilapidations claim and not asbestos pollution.

Malaysia

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value of the arms purchases by Malaysia from Britain following the agreement reached by the then Secretary of State for Defence, the former right hon. Member for Ayr, with the Malaysian Government in 1988.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers) on 21 February, Official Report, columns 69-70.

Nuclear Warheads (Transport)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if police chief constables are informed of the movement of nuclear warheads through their area of jurisdiction.

Mr. Hanley: Civil police forces are always notified at least 24 hours in advance of nuclear weapon convoy movements through their area of jurisdiction.

Common New Generation Frigate

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to ensure that all naval ship yards have the opportunity to submit tenders to build the common new generation frigate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Following competition, GEC with a consortium of BAe defence systems and services division and others have been selected as the United Kingdom member for the Franco/British/Italian joint venture company to design and build the three first of class ships, one for each participating nation. All United Kingdom shipyards with the capability will be offered the opportunity to compete for the build of follow-on ships of this class and, in order to assist them, we are seeking arrangements for them to be provided with progressive and timely access to design information.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the current progress of the Anglo-French-Italian common new generation frigate programme.

Mr. Aitken: Good progress continues to be made on Project Horizon, the common new generation frigate. We continue to seek a collaborative way forward for the anti-air warfare system for the ship. Following a competition, GEC with a consortium of BAe defence systems and services division and others have been selected as the United Kingdom member for the international joint venture company which will design and build the three first of class ships, one for each participating nation. We still intend to contract two competing international consortia to conduct competitive project definition for the frigate's combat management system later this year.

Conversion Units

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on future developments for (a) the Tornado operational conversion unit, (b) the Jaguar operational conversion unit at RAF Lossiemouth and (c) the operational conversion unit for Nimrods based at RAF Kinloss.

Mr. Hanley: There are no current plans to change the location or role of the Tornado, Jaguar and Nimrod operational conversion units.

Nuclear Weapons Co-operation (France)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards nuclear weapons co-operation with France following the recent publication by the French Government of a white paper on defence.

Mr. Aitken: We are already engaged in a very constructive dialogue with France on defence nuclear matters, and we welcome the French Government's commitment, as expressed in their recent white paper, to deepening these important exchanges.

Asia '94 Exhibition

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice he has given to United Kingdom defence manufacturers intending to visit the DSA '94 exhibition in Kuala Lumpur.

Mr. Aitken: The Defence Export Services Organisation has advised companies and the Defence Manufacturers Association that normal trade promotion with Malaysia should continue.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the past five years.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Dr. Wright) on 31 January 1994, Official Report, column 551.

Defence Costs Study

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 14 January, Official Report, columns 342-43, how many progress reports have been produced by the defence costs study teams; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: I have seen a total of 43 such reports to date.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether there will be any change to front-line capabilities resulting from the defence costs study; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what criteria will be used to assess the impact of the defence costs study on front-line capabilities; and if he will make a statement;

(3) which MoD personnel will be involved in assessing the impact of the defence costs study on front-line capabilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The aim of the defence costs study is to safeguard our front-line operational capability. All proposals emerging from the study will be assessed with this criteria in mind, drawing on the advice of the appropriate personnel, in the MOD and the services.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what detailed proposals to make radical changes in procurement policies and practices have been considered as part of the defence costs study; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what detailed proposals to achieve reductions in the costs of his Departments' estate and property have been considered as part of the defence costs study; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what detailed proposals for reducing the costs of third and fourth-line repair have been considered as part of the defence costs study; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Separate study teams have been established to examine each of these areas in detail. They have yet to report, but are considering a range of proposals relevant to their respective remits. Decisions on their final recommendations will be announced in due course.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made as to whether it is possible to achieve a significant reduction in the costs associated with spares, procurement and stock holding without having any impact on front-line capabilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: We shall make an assessment of this when we have received the final reports from the relevant defence costs study teams.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to include examination of (a) Army support infrastructure, and (b) Air Force support infrastructure as part of the defence costs study; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Both areas are being examined within the scope of existing studies.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the review of the programme for market testing and contracting out has been completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Work is continuing in this area as part of the defence costs study.

Repairs

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what sections of (a) the Army, (b) the Navy and (c) the Air Force are responsible for (i) third-line repairs and (ii) fourth-line repairs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Responsibility for third and fourth-line repairs within the services lies with the following:

(a) The Chief of Fleet Support is responsible overall within the Navy. Third line—generally docking and essential defect work—ship repair work is normally undertaken by the Fleet Maintenance and Repair Organisation at Portsmouth, the royal dockyards at Devonport and Rosyth, or sub-contractors. Fourth-line ship repair—refit work—is carried out by the royal dockyards or by the equipment manufacturers.

CFS is also responsible on a tri-service basis for third and fourth-line repair work undertaken on helicopters either by the Department's own workshops or in industry. Work is also undertaken on equipment such as vehicles and armaments either within the Department's own workshops, third line, or by industry, fourth line.

(b) The director general of equipment support, Army, is responsible for advising on the allocation of work, normally through the Army Base Repair Organisation, a Defence agency which provides third and fourth-line support to the Army both through its own engineering workshops and through industry.

(c) The director general of support management, RAF, is responsible for the allocation of work, and the raising of requisitions for contracts with industry.

Third-line repair work is carried out by the Maintenance Group Defence Agency, whose chief executive is the AOC maintenance units, headquarters RAF support command. Fouth-line repair work is carried out by industry.

Yugoslavia

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the current funding situation for British military participation in UN operations in the former Yugoslavia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: In accordance with long-established inter-departmental arrangements, the MOD recovers the cost of United Kingdom participation for peacekeeping operations in the former Yugoslavia from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The cost of military participation in UN operations in the former Yugoslavia is currently estimated at £81,000,000 for financial year 1993-94. This expenditure is partly offset by reimbursement from the United Nations which so far total £18,100,000 in 1993-94.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will extend legal aid to those wishing to present appeals to (a) the employment appeals tribunal and (b) employment tribunals.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Civil legal aid is already available, subject to the normal means and merits tests, for those appearing before the employment appeals tribunal. There are no plans to extend civil legal aid to industrial tribunals. However, legal advice and assistance under the green form scheme is available to those who are financially eligible.

Mr. Justice Wood

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the basis of the Lord Chancellor's professional differences with Mr. Justice Wood.

Mr. John M. Taylor: No. It would not be right for me to comment on the relationship of the Lord Chancellor, as head of the judiciary, and any judicial officer.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who is the press spokeswoman who advised the press of the Lord Chancellor's views about Mr. Justice Wood's stewardship of employment appeal tribunal applications; and what was the basis on which this was done.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor's head of information advised those members of the press who approached her concerning Sir John Wood's stewardship of the employment appeals tribunal. In each case, she was asked to comment on correspondence between the Lord Chancellor and Sir John in 1993 in which the Lord Chancellor had drawn Sir John's attention to the rule 3 procedure by which the EAT was able to deal with the mounting backlog of cases in the employment appeals tribunal.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what reason was given by Mr. Justice Wood for his retirement as president of the employment appeals tribunal.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I am not aware of the reason for Mr. Justice Wood's retirement.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on what occasion and by what method the Lord Chancellor asked Mr. Justice Wood to reconsider his decision to permit appellants to the employment appeals tribunal the facility of advancing their cases at preliminary hearings; what were his reasons for doing so; and what response was made.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I am not in a position to comment on private communications between the Lord Chancellor and judges.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representation he has received from (a) Lord Justice Purchas, (b) other judges and (c) the judge's representative body about his relationship with Mr. Justice Wood, prior to the latter's retirement as president of the employment appeals tribunal; and what action he has taken.

Mr. John M. Taylor: None.

Judges

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on his powers and his practice in discussing with judges their stewardship of cases in relation to cost, conduct and the legal principles involved.

Mr. John M. Taylor: No; I have no such powers.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidance he gives to judges about dismissing employment appeals on the basis of written submissions only.

Mr. John M. Taylor: None; the procedure is prescribed in the statutory rules.

Land Registry

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what changes he proposes to make to Her Majesty's Land Registry trading fund's external financing limit for 1993-94.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The external financing limit for 1993-94 for Her Majesty's Land Registry trading fund will be reduced from £0 million to minus £29 million. This results from increases in fee income, efficiency and lower capital expenditure.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list for the last 12 months how many parliamentary questions he has referred to one of his Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to his Department this represents.

Mr. John M. Taylor: In the 12-month period 1 March 1993 to 28 February 1994 13 parliamentary questions to my Department were referred to one or other of the Department's agencies for answer. This figure represents 1·79 per cent. of the total number of parliamentary questions to my Department for answer in the same period.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on how many occasions he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I answer parliamentary questions on the basis set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". I also seek to comply with the Madam Speaker's guidance on the need for brief answers to oral questions.

Child Witnesses

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what measures are being taken by courts in Wales to protect child witnesses with particular reference to the use of screens, television link equipment and pre-recorded interviews; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: In Wales, TV links and video playback equipment are in place at the following crown court centres; Caernarfon, Cardiff, Mold, Newport, and Swansea. Arrangements can be made for screens to be available at all Crown court centres and county courts in Wales if required. All magistrates courts in Wales have access to screens and video playback equipment, and may use the TV links in place at Crown court centres.

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which courts in Wales have child liasion officers to protect child witnesses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: There is a designated child liaison officer for every crown court centre, including the following in Wales: Caernarfon; Cardiff; Carmarthen; Dolgellau; Haverfordwest; Merthyr Tydfil; Mold; Newport; Swansea, and Welshpool.

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by the Lord Chancellor and by him in February.

Mr. John M. Taylor: During the month of February 1994 the total number of letters received and dispatched to hon. Members by the Lord Chancellor and myself was as follows:

	Number
Total received	748
Total dispatched	423

PRIME MINISTER

Education Standards, Barnet

Q10. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to visit the London borough of Barnet to discuss education standards.

The Prime Minister: I have no immediate plans to do so, but I am aware of the improved GCSE results in all the secondary schools in my hon. Friend's constituency.

Seals

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 414, how the embassy in Moscow raises the issue of seal pup slaughter in Russia; and what action will be taken to raise the matter of the killing of seals on the shores of the Caspian sea.

The Prime Minister: The embassy in Moscow continues to raise the subject of public concern over seal hunting with the Russians during meetings with appropriate officials. The issue was most recently discussed with the chairman of the sub-committee on science in the Russian Parliament. The embassy is also seeking an early opportunity to raise the subject of hunting in the Caspian sea with officials at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 24 March.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 24 March.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 8 March, Official Report, column 148, what discussions Her Majesty's Government have had with water pump and water filter manufacturers and pharmaceutical companies about supplies of medicines and equipment to authorities in the valleys of the Tigris and Euphrates.

The Prime Minister: None. Our substantial aid to Iraq is organised through the United Nations agencies and non-governmental organisations, not through manufacturers directly.

Mr. Justice Wood

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received from (a) individual judges and (b) the judge's representative body about the Lord Chancellor's relationship with Mr. Justice Wood, prior to the latter's retirement as president of the employment appeals tribunal; and what action he will take.

The Prime Minister: None.

Security and Intelligence Agencies

Sir Peter Hordern: To ask the Prime Minister what provision is being sought in the 1994-95 supply estimates for the security and intelligence agencies.

The Prime Minister: The 1994-95 supply estimate for class XIX, vote 2 "Cabinet Office: security and intelligence services", published today, fulfils the commitment I gave on 24 November 1993, Official Report, column 52, to bring together the aggregate expenditure of the security and intelligence services into a single vote.

Total provision sought for 1994-95 is £881·486 million, around 8 per cent. below forecast outturn for 1993-94. Provision for these services is planned to decline by around a further 5 per cent. in cash terms by 1996-97.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the total numbers of prisoners in custody in England and Wales, on (a) 1 June 1979, (b) 1 June 1983, (c) 1 June 1987 and (d) 1 April 1992, and on the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. John Gunnell, dated 24 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what were the total number of prisoners in custody in England and Wales, on (a) 1st June 1979, (b) 1st June 1983, (c) 1st June 1987 and (d) 1st April 1992, and on the latest date for which figures are available.

The readily available information for the historical prison population is for the last day of each month. It is given in the attached table for the day preceding the date requested and for Tuesday 22 March 1994.

Campsfield Detention Centre

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visits have been made to the Campsfield detention centre by officials of his Department since 18 February; and what was discussed with the management of the centre.

Mr. Charles Wardle: There is a permanent team of seven Immigration Service staff at the Campsfield House detention centre responsible for local operational matters and monitoring the performance of the managing contractor, Group 4 Total Security Ltd. The team is supplemented if necessary. In addition, since 18 February 1994, weekly visits have been made to Campsfield House by senior Immigration Service officials to consider with Group 4 Total Security Ltd. all aspects of domestic and operational management of the centre.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many detainees have been moved from Campsfield detention centre since 18 February; and how many of them have been (a) released, (b) moved to other detention centres and (c) moved to prison.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Since 18 February a total of 82 detainees have been moved from the Campsfield House immigration detention centre.

Of these, 26 have been given temporary admission to the United Kingdom, 10 have been transferred to other immigration detention centres and 11 to prisons. The remaining 35 were removed from the United Kingdom.

Immigration Detainees

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training is given to Group 4 staff in the care and welfare of immigration detainees.

Mr. Charles Wardle: All Group 4 Total Security Ltd. staff employed under contract to provide detention management services receive a minimum of 15 days' initial training on all aspects of health and safety, race relations, domestic management and the duty of care towards immigration detainees. A refresher course is provided after one year's service and at yearly intervals thereafter.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration detainees were on hunger strike on 18 March; and how many in each centre were involved in this form of protest.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The numbers of immigration detainees refusing meals on 18 March 1994 were as follows:

Location	Number
Campsfield House detention centre	82
Haslar holding centre	37
Harmondsworth detention centre	16
HMP Canterbury	18
HMP High Down	6
HMP Birmingham	3
HMP Blakenhurst	3

Royal Family (Car Parking)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will issue guidance to chief constables that police officers should not work on car parking supervision duties for members of the royal family except in cases dealing with security; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: No. Chief officers are well able to deal with these matters sensibly without the need for central guidance.

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) spouses and (b) children have been allowed to enter the United Kingdom since he announced that couples who had been separated for five years and couples with children could apply for their cases to be reviewed; how many cases are currently awaiting decision; if he will reduce the current limits to cases being reviewed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the changes to the operation of the primary purpose rule in June 1992.

Information on total acceptances for settlement of spouses and children in the 12 months ending 30 June 1993 is published in table 3 of the Home Office statistical bulletin issue 33-93 "Control of Immigration: Statistics —First and Second Quarters 1993". It is planned to publish information for the second half of 1993 around the end of April.

The available information on cases awaiting a decision is for entry clearance applications in the Indian sub-continent. Information on such applications by spouses and children outstanding at 31 December 1992 is published in table 2.3 of Home Office command paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 1992" (Cm 2368). Summary information on such applications outstanding at 30 June 1993 is published in tables 8 and 9 of the bulletin. Corresponding information in respect of entry clearance applications outside the Indian sub-continent, or of applications made after entry, is not separately identified in available statistics.

We have no plans for further changes to the operation of the primary purpose rule.

Copies of the publications are in the Library.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a citizens charter applying to those who are subject to immigration control; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: A number of steps have already been taken to carry through the principles of the citizens charter in the immigration field, including the publication of the Immigration Service (ports) operating plan. The programme is founded on delivering a high quality public service which maintains firm controls on immigration.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, to the latest available date, the numbers in all queues who have applied to all British posts on the Indian sub-continent; what is the current average waiting time in each queue; and if he will list the comparable figures for the same period a year ago.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information is given in the following table.

Chelmsford Prison (Drugs)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many incidents of drug abuse were discovered in Chelmsford prison in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list the different types of drugs that have been found in Chelmsford prison in each year since 1990;

(3) how many visitors to Chelmsford prison have been found to be in possession of illegal drugs while visiting Chelmsford prison each year since 1990; and what subsequent action was taken against them;

(4) how often cells and other parts of Chelmsford prison are searched for drugs by staff and sniffer dogs; and if he will make a statement;

(5) what action is being taken to seek to reduce the incidence of drug abuse within Chelmsford prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 24 March 1994.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your five recent Questions about drugs at Chelmsford prison.

The number of unauthorised drug finds at Chelmsford, including materials used in connection with such drugs in each of the years since 1990 was 64, 61, 68, 66 respectively. So far this year there have been seven finds.

Details of the type of drugs found at Chelmsford were not recorded before 1991. Since then 156 finds have involved cannabis, five of cocaine, five of heroin and one each of mescaline, opium, LSD and amphetamine. There were seven finds in which the drugs were either unprescribed medication or discovered in the visits area and not tested.

Records of visitors to Chelmsford found in possession of controlled drugs were not kept before 1993. Since then 14 visitors were arrested by the Police and one was warned by staff. Details of the action subsequently taken by the police or courts are not readily available.

An average of 130 cells containing approximately 190 inmates, and all other areas such as workshops, are routinely searched every month. In addition special searches are carried out when it is suspected that a prisoner may be in possession of drugs. Searches using dogs were carried out in 1990, 1991 and 1993.

An x-ray machine was installed in 1993 to examine visitors baggage. The Police are called if anyone is found attempting to bring drugs into the prison. It is open to the Governor to then require that visits to the prisoner concerned will be restricted and allowed only under closely supervised conditions. He may also exclude such visitors from visiting the prison.

Any inmate with a drug addiction problem is offered a seven day detoxification programme and counselling by trained Health Care Staff, on being received at the prison. Counsellors from the National Children's Society run a "Drugwatch" group three times a week for an average of six inmates and appropriate treatment is offered by the Medical Officer.

Reducing drug misuse is one of the Prison Service's top priorities. We shall reduce the opportunities for prisoners to obtain drugs by improving detection. The use of x-ray machines has already helped and greater use of information has enabled resources to be targeted on potential offenders. The new clause being introduced in the Criminal Justice Bill will allow prisoners to be tested for drugs. We also aim to reduce the demand for drugs in prisons. Our new Drug Strategy will provide improved support and treatment for those misusing drugs, including drug support units to help prisoners who wish to break the habit.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken to reduce the number of asylum applicants held in custody; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Only a very small proportion of people who have sought asylum are detained. The available information shows that on 17 March 1994 a total of 654 people who had sought asylum at some stage, including those awaiting removal or the determination of an appeal, were held in detention. It is Immigration Service policy to grant temporary admission wherever possible, and detention is authorised only where there is no other alternative and where there are good grounds for believing that the person will not comply with the terms of temporary admission. Account is taken of all relevant circumstances, including the means by which the person arrived in this country, any past immigration history and the person's ties with the United Kingdom.

Detained cases are reviewed regularly and if there is any indication that asylum is likely to be granted then the person is released immediately.

One of the aims of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 is to ensure that asylum applications are resolved more quickly. The Act provides that anyone who is refused asylum may appeal against the decision, and that those who do appeal may seek bail from the independent appellate authorities.

Prison Places

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the total numbers of prison places in England and Wales on (a) 1 June 1979, (b) 1 June 1983, (c) 1 June 1987 and (d) 1 April 1992 and on the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Dunbar to Mr. John Gunnell, dated 23 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of prison places in England and Wales.

The readily available information on prison places before September 1990 was collected on the last day of each month. The table gives the certified normal accommodation (CNA), that is uncrowded capacity, for the days preceding those requested and for Tuesday 22 March 1994.

Date	CNA
31 May 1979	37,890
31 May 1983	38,775
31 May 1987	41,688
31 March 1992	45,469
22 March 1994	47,463

Bodies, Gloucestershire

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that Gloucestershire police have all the necessary resources to pursue inquiries relating to the identification of the nine bodies so far recovered in Gloucester, and the unearthing of any further bodies and the bringing to justice of the persons responsible.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Police grant, at the rate of 51 per cent. of final expenditure, will be paid on the costs of the investigation. It is open to Gloucestershire Police Authority to apply for a special payment of grant over and above this, if it considered that the financial burden would threaten the efficiency of the force.

Form RPF37

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many copies of form RPF37 his Department issued in 1993; and how many are held in stock.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information on the number of copies of form RPF37 issued to electors is not collected centrally. HMSO currently holds 135,000 copies of form RPF37 in stock. Additionally, copies of the form are held by local electoral registration officers and by British consulates abroad.

Casinos

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to alter the rules and regulations governing applications for casino licences.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have no plans to alter the rules governing how applications for casino licences are made. We have under review the Gaming Clubs (Permitted Areas) Regulations 1971 which prescribe the areas of England and Wales in which casinos are permitted.

Category A Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of category A prisoners, (a) men and (b) women being held in prisons in England and Wales as of 1 March; and if he will list the category of offence of which such inmates were convicted.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 24 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of category A prisoners, men and women, being held in prisons in England and Wales. You also requested information about the category of offence of which such inmates were convicted.

The following table gives the figures for sentenced and unsentenced category A prisoners as at 1 March 1994:

	Sentenced	Unsentenced	Total
Male	501	137	638
Female	2	1	3
Total	503	138	641

The offences of which these prisoners were convicted or stand charged include murder, attempted murder, manslaughter, serious sexual offences, robbery, firearms offences, offences involving explosions or explosives and serious drugs-related offences.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the dates Ministers, or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985 including this year to date on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to his Department.

Mr. Howard: The available record covers the period since 1991. It shows that two Home Office officials took MAS flights on three occasions between June and September 1991 at a total cost of £6,132.

Dianetics and Scientology Mission

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received about the recruitment of young people and their involvement in the activities of the Dianetics and Scientology Mission of Bournemouth; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have not been able to trace any recent representations on this matter.

Prison Escapes

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates have escaped from prison in England and Wales during each of the last five years; and how many of such escapees are still at large.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 24 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the Office, to reply to your recent Question asking for details of the number of inmates who have escaped from prison in England and Wales during each of the last 5 years and the number of such escapees still at large.

The following table lists the number of prisoners who have escaped and the number still unlawfully at large:

Year	Number of escapes	Number of inmates unlawfully at large
1989	161	7
1990	195	2
1991	303	10
1992	254	30
1993	204	21

Isle of Man Companies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what exemptions from the requirements to file are enjoyed by companies registered in the Isle of Man.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Companies registered in the Isle of Man are governed by Manx legislation. I understand that under Isle of Man company law the requirement that a copy of the balance sheet of public companies should be filed in the Isle of Man companies registry with each annual return does not extend to private companies.

Custodial Sentences

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners from (a) South Yorkshire, (b) North Yorkshire, (c) West Yorkshire and (d) Humberside are currently serving custodial sentences in prisons in Wales; and if he will give for each prisoner, the length of their sentence, when they were committed and the nature of their offence.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 24 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many prisoners from (a) South Yorkshire, (b) North Yorkshire, (c) West Yorkshire and (d) Humberside are currently serving custodial sentences in prisons in Wales; and if he will give for each prisoner, the length of their sentence, when they were committed and the nature of their offence.

The information available on where prisoners originate is for the county of the sentencing court. The latest provisional statistics are for 31 December 1993. On that date 3 inmates who had been sentenced by courts in South Yorkshire were held in Prison Service establishments in Wales. Of these, one was serving a life sentence for murder (sentenced in July 1983), one was serving a sentence of 5 years 6 months for indecent assault (sentenced in July 1993) and one was serving a sentence of 2 years 5 months for an offence which is not separately coded (sentenced in November 1992).

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for the last 12 months how many parliamentary questions he has referred to one of his Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to his Department this represents.

Mr. Howard: Records show that between 1 April 1993 and 21 March 1994, 492 parliamentary questions tabled to my Department were referred to the chief executive of an agency. This figure represents approximately 12 per cent. of the total number of parliamentary questions to the Home Office.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions in the last five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. Howard: I answer parliamentary questions on the basis set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". In replying to oral questions I seek to comply with Madam Speaker's guidance on the need for brief answers.

Legal Aid

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what account he has taken of the research evidence provided by Professor Lee Bridges and the University of Warwick on the projected cost to the legal aid budget of provisions in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill;

(2) if he will list all aspects of increased costs and reduced costs to public funds that his Department estimates will arise from his proposed changes to the right to silence;

(3) if he will publish a full breakdown of the cost implications in respect of legal aid that his Department estimates will arise from his proposed changes to the right to silence (a) at the police station and otherwise prior to court appearance and (b) in court.

Mr. Maclean [holding answers 22 and 23 March 1994]: I am aware of the article by Mr. Lee Bridges, which speculates on possible costs arising from implementation of the provisions in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill concerning the drawing of inferences from the silence of an accused person under police questioning or at court.

The Government do not expect these provisions to have any significant financial effects.

Child Care

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spends on child care provision for the under-fives and out-of-school provision for children aged over five either directly, excluding provision for departmental staff, or indirectly through resources made available to local authorities or other organisations; what form of provision is thereby provided; how many places are thereby provided; and if he will make a statement on child care.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 14 March 1994]: The information requested is not available centrally. The only information on child care provision held within the Home Office relates to provision made for departmental staff.

TREASURY

VAT on Fuel

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring forward proposals to end VAT avoidance by advance payment of fuel bills in the event of any further additions to the VAT rate in April 1995.

Sir John Cope: I have no plans to bring forward any such proposals.

Financial Services Act 1986

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many traders are monitored by each of the authorised bodies under the provisions of the Financial Services Act 1986.

Mr. Nelson: The numbers of entries recorded on the Securities and Investments Board central register on 18 March 1994 were:

	Numbers
Members of Self-Regulation Organisations
FIMBRA	5,752
IMRO	1,144
LAUTRO	613
SFA	1,306
(less double counting)[1]	(194)
Total regulated by SROs	8,621
Directly authorised by SIB	67
Certified by recognised professional bodies
Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales	5,172
Institute of Chartered Accountants of Scotland	476
Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland	197
Chartered Association of Certified Accountants	994
The Law Society	7,303
The Law Society of Scotland	908
The Law Society of Northern Ireland	452
Insurance Brokers Registration Council	1,404
Institute of Actuaries	35
Total authorised under s15	16,941
Other authorised persons
Authorised in other Member States[2]	3
Insurance companies[3]	217
Friendly Societies[4]	216
(less double counting)[5]	(446)
Totals of authorised persons and registered exempt firms	25,619

[1] Some firms are members of more than one SRO.
[2] Authorised by virtue of s31 of the FSA.
[3] Insurance companies authorised by virtue of s22 of the FSA.
[4] Friendly societies authorised by virtue of s23 of the FSA.
[5] Europersons, insurance companies and friendly societies are members of SROs and some firms moving between categories (eg RPB and SRO) may be temporarily authorised twice.

Exchange Rate Mechanism

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what part the United Kingdom is taking, directly or indirectly, in discussions on reconstituting the ERM or operating an informal ERM; what undertakings, assurances and understandings, express or implied, have been given by Her Majesty's Government to the European Commission or monetary authorities or other EEC Governments concerning the relationship between sterling and the ecu; and to what extent the change in the value of sterling against the ecu in the 11 months to January 1994 is a reflection of such undertakings, assurances and understandings.

Mr. Nelson: The United Kingdom will continue to play a full and active part in discussions on monetary co-operation in stage 2 of economic and monetary union. But our policy on the exchange rate mechanism is well-known. We cannot consider rejoining the ERM until there is greater convergence between the monetary policies appropriate for all Community economies and we should need to be satisfied that the system would be operated for the benefit of all its members. The Prime Minister and the Chancellor of the Exchequer have made clear that sterling will not rejoin the ERM in this Parliament.

The Government have given no undertakings, assurances or understandings express or implied concerning the relationship between sterling and the ecu to any person or institution. Sterling's exchange rate against the ecu reflects day-to-day market trading in all of the Community currencies.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Angling

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals he has to encourage young people to take up angling as a sport.

Mr. Brooke: This is a matter for angling's governing bodies. Most of my Department's funding for sport is made through the Sports Council. Its annual grant to angling's governing bodies is intended to enable the promotion of angling and to increase participation levels.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to use part of the proposed millennium fund to fund projects put forward by angling organisations; and what plans he has to inform such organisations of the availability of these funds.

Mr. Brooke: Decisions on funding projects to mark the year 2000 and the beginning of the third millennium will be the responsibility of the Millennium Commission. Angling organisations may also be eligible to apply for lottery funds from the four national sports councils. All distributors of national lottery funds are expected to publish guidelines for applicants during the summer.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the dates Ministers, or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1992, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to his Department.

Mr. Brooke: No Minister or official has travelled on MAS on official business since the Department was formed in April 1992.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list for the past 12 months how many parliamentary questions he has referred to one of his Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to his Department this represents.

Mr. Brooke: In the last 12 months my Department received 832 written questions. Of these, 20 were referred to agency chief executives for reply. This represents just over 2 per cent. of the total.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list for the last 12 months how many parliamentary questions he has referred to one of his Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to his Department this represents.

Mr. Waldegrave: None.

Technology Foresight

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what consideration the panels to be set up under the technology foresight programme will be giving to the potential environmental impacts of the areas of technology to be investigated.

Mr. David Davis: Each of the 15 sector panels established under the technology foresight programme will take account of environmental and other relevant factors in assessing market and technological opportunities over the next 10 to 20 years. In addition, one of the sector panels has the specific task of undertaking foresight into agriculture, natural resources and all aspects of environmental protection.

Campaigns

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to the answer of 2 March, Official Report, columns 767-68, regarding advertising campaigns by the Cabinet Office, what is (a) the budgeted and actual cost of each campaign listed for 1993-94 and (b) the budgeted cost of each campaign listed for 1994-95.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information requested for 1993-94 is set out in the following table. The budget for 1994-95 will be finalised shortly.

Campaign	Budgeted Cost	Actual Cost
OPSS
Publicity for 1993 Charter Mark Winners[1]	—	311,747
Promotion of the 1994 Charter Mark Scheme[1]	—	66,383
Charterline Advertising[1]	—	542,010
Civil Service College
Promotion of courses and other activities	352,000	342,000
HMSO
Promotion of publications, videos and IT product range	1,105,000	1,344,000
Promotion of HMSO's status as a British Standards Institution Agent	—	57,000
Strengthening of awareness of HMSO in central and local government, the health service and public utilities	125,000	101,000

Notes:

[1] There was no separate budget for advertising for the three OPSS campaigns. Advertising was included in the overall budget for each of the projects.

[2] HMSO's financial year ends on 31 December and the figures quoted relate to the calendar year 1993.

TRANSPORT

London Buses

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to offer the 10 London Buses' operating companies for sale.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to offer the 10 London Buses' operating companies for sale.

Mr. Norris: I am today announcing the launch of the sale of London Buses' operating companies. I am sure that the innovation and market responsiveness of the private sector will result in great improvements to our bus services. The quality of service and the cost-effectiveness of London's bus service has improved considerably since the private sector began to compete for contracts in London. Privatisation of the London Buses' operating companies will capitalise on those achievements and bring further benefits to both taxpayers and passengers.

I recognise the popularity of the traditional red bus. I have therefore decided that the purchasers of the London Buses' companies will be required to retain the red livery on the routes which they operate in Central London.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many different and distinct bus liveries he expects will be adopted in London subsequent to privatisation of bus routes; what requirement there is by him on London Transport that buses serving any one route will all be of the same livery; and whether the rules on code of practice concerning advertising on buses will be the same as, or similar to, those of London Buses Ltd. and its predecessors.

Mr. Norris: It is not possible to say at this stage how many different bus liveries there will be in London in the future. However, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the question from my hon. Friends, the Members for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley) and for Surbiton (Mr. Tracey), in which I gave the assurance that steps are being taken to ensure that the red bus will remain a familiar sight on London's streets after the privatisation of the London Buses Ltd. subsidiary companies. It would be for London Transport to consider whether there is a need to ensure that buses serving the same route have the same livery. The code of practice covering advertisements on buses after privatisation will be consistent with that which currently applies.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements are being made for lost property on privatised London bus routes; and how they will differ for the public from those now obtaining under London Transport.

Mr. Norris: The current arrangements for dealing with lost property on London's buses are set out in the route contracts under which bus operators, both public and private, run services on behalf of London Transport. There are no plans to alter those arrangements as a result of the privatisation of the London Buses Ltd. subsidiary companies.

Severance Payments

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the provisions he has made in the forthcoming financial year for severance payments; and if he will list the sums and the vote and subhead from which it will come.

Mr. Norris: The size of any provision needed for severance payments for the Department and its agencies for the financial year 1994-95 is still being considered.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by locations, agency or division the numbers of grades and costs of his staff who have been given severance pay-offs this financial year; and from which vote and subhead the money to finance such payments was made.

Mr. Norris: The severance payments made so far in this financial year for DOT(C) and its agencies are as follows:

	Number of staff	Grade	Total cost (£)	Location
Department of Transport (Central) (DOT(C))[1]	24	G3 and below	211,523	Mainly London
Transport Research Laboratory (TRL)[1]	78	G6 and below	560,024	Crowthorne
Driver Vehicle Operators Information Technology (DVOIT)[2]	25	SEO and below	1,170,914	South Wales
Driving Standards Agency (DSA)[3]	49	Senior Driving Examiner and below	344,291	All regions
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA)[4]	16	Grade 5 and below	431,641	South Wales
Vehicle Inspectorate Executive Agency (VI)[5]	9	SPTO and below	218,627	All regions

[1] The money to finance the DOT(C) and TRL payments will come from class IV vote 2 running costs subhead A1.
[2] The money to finance these payments will come from class VI vote 2 running costs subhead K1.
[3] The money to finance these payments will come from class VI vote 3 running costs subhead H2.
[4] The money to finance these payments will come from class VI vote 4 running costs subhead A1.
[5] VI is off vote. Money to finance these payments is subject to the provisions of the Trading Fund Act.

Heavy Goods Vehicle Operators

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the present enforcement regime to deal with heavy goods vehicle operators who do not hold a current heavy goods vehicle operator's licence.

Mr. Key: I am satisfied that enforcement against illegal HGV operators has a sufficiently high priority within the Department's enforcement programme. Also that enforcement resources are being directed against making it increasingly difficult for people who do not hold a goods vehicle operator's licence and show a disregard for the requirements of operator licensing to continue to operate outside the licensing system.

The Department is committed to dealing with the problem of illegally operated heavy goods vehicles and its enforcement resources are being co-ordinated and directed against the problem. The problem is also one of concern to other regulatory and enforcement authorities. Enforcement resources are therefore being co-ordinated and directed against it with some success through the work of the Department's illegal operations working group. The working group was formed in response to concerns expressed by the traffic commissioners about unlicensed operators and in particular a concern about drivers and operators who continue to operate having had their licences revoked.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bottles of (a) whisky and gin and (b) sherry and port were consumed by his private offices in 1993-94.

Mr. MacGregor: The information is not available in precisely this form. The entertainment budget for all Ministers offices in 1993-94 is £16,000 which covers the cost of all ministerial and departmental entertainment for official purposes.

Open Government

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what will be the implications for the operation of his Department of the code of practice on open government.

Mr. Norris: The code of practice will reinforce and build on my Department's existing arrangements for the provision of information.

Both the Department and its agencies already do much to keep the public informed, by way of publishing "popular" policy documents and background papers. They also aim to answer written inquiries from the public within 15 working days, a target which is within the 20 working day period set by the code.

Operational details concerning implementation of the code will be announced nearer to the time of the launch.

Staff Records

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the staff attendance records, including sickness absence, of his Department's staff, stored on computer, are covered by the Data Protection Act 1984; and if access to the information so stored is allowed to the individuals concerned.

Mr. Norris: Computerised attendance records relating to staff sick absences within the Department of Transport are registered under the Data Protection Act. The information is made available, on written request, to the individuals concerned.

London Traffic Emissions

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of traffic emission in central London he estimates comes from (a) buses, (b) licensed taxi cabs and (c) local authority service vehicles.

Mr. Norris: Figures on the performance of local authority service vehicles are not collected separately. For buses and taxis, we estimate the relative contributions to all central London traffic emissions to be as follows:

	Buses per cent.	Taxis per cent.
CO_2	14	11
CO	2	1
Hydrocarbons	7	5
NO_x	19	3
Particulates	33	11

Note: Figures are approximate only, but have not been rounded so that comparisons may be made.

Public Transport

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has commissioned on the use of London buses, licensed taxis and local authority service vehicles, examining such factors as average trip length, average daily mileage, time spent in taxi ranks, bus stops or equivalent and average fuel consumption.

Mr. Norris: The Department has conducted a number of surveys which provide information on the use of London buses and licensed taxis. These include the 1991 London area transport survey, the annual inquiry of public service vehicle operators, the London journey time survey and the national travel survey. Detailed data on taxi usage were also collected in a 1989 research project.

In addition, London Transport and London Buses Ltd. conducts surveys which provide estimates of bus use, average waiting times and fuel consumption. There is no information available on local authority service vehicles and no recent data on taxi fuel consumption.

Municipal Airports

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidelines or instructions have been issued to local authorities about the sale of municipal airports.

Mr. Norris: Sales of local authority airports are not subject to my right hon. Friend's consent, and no guidelines or instructions have been issued on the subject. Local authorities will be aware of the strong presumption in favour of disposing of public sector assets by open competition.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he now intends that the franchising director will publish his programme for franchising of rail passenger services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has instructed the franchising director to formulate and submit to him by 5 April a programme for franchising BR's passenger services consistent with meeting the Government's targets of commencing the competitive process for the first six franchises by the end of 1994, awarding the first six franchises by the end of 1995, and securing that 51 per cent. or more of the railway passenger services currently operated by BR are provided under franchise agreements by 1 April 1996. Subject to my right hon. Friend being satisfied with the franchising director's programme I expect it to be published shortly thereafter.

Central Line

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to make an announcement about the proposed closure of the Central line between Epping and Ongar; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Secretary of State for Transport will announce his decision on this proposal after the statutory procedures, which are currently under way, have been concluded.

Rail Privatisation

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what indications there are from previous privatisations of transport industries that passengers will benefit from the privatisation of British Rail.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 21 March 1994]: British Airways has been transformed into one of the world's leading airlines since privatisation, with passengers benefiting from its commitment to high standards of service. Privatisation of bus companies has resulted in greater efficiency for bus and coach services, more choice, more bus miles run, and lower cost to the taxpayers. The best way to achieve our objectives of improving the quality of the service for rail users is to provide similar approaches and opportunities for our railways.

Roads

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost per mile for (a) porous asphalt road surface material and (b) concrete surfaces for (i) single carriageway road, (ii) two lane dual carriageway roads, (iii) three lane dual carriageway roads and (iv) four lane carriageway roads.

Mr. Robert Key [pursuant to his reply, 7 March 1994, c. 1]: The cost information is as follows:

It should be noted that these costs are not comparable since the porous asphalt is basically a surfacing material and contributes little to the overall strength of the road whilst the concrete surfaced road provides both a running surface and the main vehicle carrying system. Because the use of porous asphalt has only recently been permitted on trunk roads, there is not a lot of cost data on which to base estimates for its use at the moment so the estimated costs given can only be taken as indicative. The concrete costs should also be regarded as indicative since they will vary according to site and choice of pavement design.

	Approximate cost/mile
	Porous asphalt £	Typical concrete road £
Single carriageway	90,000	450,000
2 lane dual—all purpose	180,000	900,000
—motorway	220,000	1,100,000
3 lane dual—all purpose	250,000	1,260,000
—motorway	275,000	1,380,000
4 lane dual—all purpose	—	—
—motorway	345,000	1,750,000

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by him and his ministerial colleagues in February.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My ministerial colleagues and I received 814 letters in February from hon. Members, to which we have replied.

EC Majority Voting

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what undertakings were given by the Government in 1973 on majority voting in the EC; and if he will make it his policy that the present blocking minority of two major and one minor member states will not be abandoned unless agreed by the British people in a new referendum.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In its White Paper entitled "The United Kingdom and the European Communities" —Cmnd 4715 of July 1971—which set out the terms of the United Kingdom's accession to the Community, the Government said:

"All the countries concerned recognise that an attempt to impose a majority view in a case where one or more member states considered their vital interests to be at stake would imperil the very fabric of the Community."

We have no intention of holding a referendum on the issue of qualified majority voting.

COCOM

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals Her Majesty's Government have put to the intergovernmental co-ordinating committee of western nations on technology transfer—COCOM—meetings to decide upon a successor regime to COCOM; with which non-governmental organisations his Department has discussed this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: British officials have participated in a series of intergovernmental meetings to discuss new multilateral arrangements to promote transparency and responsibility in the transfer of arms and sensitive dual-use goods. In the course of these meetings they have put forward a number of proposals designed to balance concerns about potential threats to security with the need to avoid unnecessary burdens on industry. Additionally, British officials have proposed, and partners have accepted, that existing controls on arms and related items should be maintained after the end of COCOM on 31 March if the new arrangements are not in place by then.

My Department has had no formal discussions on this issue with non-governmental organisations. However, my officials have discussed it informally with academics and representatives of other non-government bodies in the course of their regular contacts.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what major building projects valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1989 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

Mr. Goodlad: None.

Mrs. Timmreck

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the reasons for excluding Mrs. Timmreck from continued residence on St. Helena.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Immigration is a matter for the Government of St. Helena. On 19 Janaury 1994 the acting governor of St. Helena, exercising the power vested in him by section 10(1) of the Immigration Ordinance 1972, issued an exclusion order against Mrs. Timmreck, a Uruguayan citizen, because he was satisfied that it was not in the public interest that she should enter the island, on which she was not at the time resident.

Israr Ahmed

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the reasons for the disparity between his letter of 7 March concerning Israr Ahmed—ref. GV100/20467 and A515109—that Israr Ahmed's application had been referred by the post in Islamabad to the Home Office on 22 November and the letter from the Immigration and Nationality Department of the Home Office, dated 9 March, informing the sponsor in the United Kingdom that Israr Ahmed's application had been refused by the entry clearance officer in Islamabad.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The migration and visa correspondence unit's letter to the hon. Member dated 7 March said, correctly, that Mr., Israr Ahmed's application had been referred to the Home Office. The Home Office's subsequent letter to his sponsors, dated 9 March, said that the application was to be refused and that the ECO in Islamabad would so inform him. It did not say that the ECO had already done so. There was thus no discrepancy between the two.

General Affairs Council

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) of 14 March, Official Report, columns 474-77, on matters discussed and decisions taken at the General Affairs Council on 7 and 8 March, what formal votes were taken.

Mr. Heathcoat Amory: There were no formal votes on matters discussed in the Council. Details of "A" points approved by the Council, as published in the Council secretariat press release issued after the Council meeting, will be placed in the Library, for this and all future Council meetings.

South Africa (Mercury Waste)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have received regarding the local pollution effects of the processing of mercury wastes at the Thor recycling facility at Cato Ridge, South Africa, arising from the treatment of mercury-contaminated wastes imported from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have received representations from Greenpeace—as part of its "Wasting the World" campaign—and from Mr. Fred Kockott of Environmental Press Service, South Africa. In his letter of 8 November, Mr. Kockott referred to a petition being given to Her Majesty's Government but extensive inquiries have failed to locate such a document.

DEFENCE

Loan Guarantees

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will draw up proposals to offer small and medium-sized defence contractors loan guarantees for commercial ventures; and what co-ordination his Department has with the Department of Trade and Industry's loan guarantee scheme for the support of such contractors.

Mr. Aitken: We have no plans to draw up such proposals. The rules of the scheme operated by the Department of Trade and Industry draw no distinction between defence contractors and other eligible companies. The operation of that scheme is not a matter on which either my Department or the Department of Trade and Industry see a need for co-ordination between them.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. Hanley: My Department answers parliamentary questions on the basis set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". My ministerial colleagues and I also seek to comply with Madam Speaker's guidance on the need for brief answers to oral questions.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for the last 12 months how many parliamentary questions he has referred to one of his Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to his Department this represents.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is a matter of public record.

Ex-Service Men

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ex-service men remain unemployed after (a) three months, (b) six months and (c) one year following the end of their military service.

Mr. Hanley: Long-term statistics of this nature are not available. But data obtained from voluntary post-exit returns which ex-service personnel are encouraged to complete, indicates that some 80 per cent. of service leavers are employed or otherwise engaged in their chosen activity, such as further or higher education, within three months of discharge.

Low Flying

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list details of accidents involving low-flying military jets over Humberside and the three counties of Yorkshire in each year since 1990 and the current year to date in which the deaths of civilian pilots and/or passengers in other aircraft were involved; and if he will make a statement about the settlements made to the bereaved civilian families.

Mr. Hanley: There have been no low-flying military jet accidents involving the deaths of civilians in the area, and for the period, stated.

Nuclear Warheads (Transport)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what statutory provisions govern the applicability of speed limits to vehicles carrying nuclear warheads.

Mr. Aitken: Vehicles carrying nuclear warheads are subject to the same statutory provisions governing speed limits as other heavy goods vehicles.

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by him and his ministerial colleagues in February.

Mr. Hanley: My ministerial colleagues and I received 638 letters from, and wrote 629 letters to, hon. Members during February 1994.

Service Personnel (Social Functions)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the rules relating to attendance of serving members of the armed forces at social functions organised by hon. Members.

Mr. Hanley: Rules set out in Queen's regulations prohibit members of the armed forces from taking an active part in the affairs of any political organisation, party or movement. Provided that service personnel do not infringe these rules, they may attend social functions organised by hon. Members.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in the establishment of a nuclear weapons safety group by his Department as recommended in the Oxburgh report.

Mr. Hanley: The nuclear weapon safety group was established in January 1993.

Sir Peter Harding

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date he was first informed that the position of Sir Peter Harding as Chief of the Defence Staff might be compromised.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence first became aware of the circumstances which lead up to the resignation of Sir Peter Harding on Saturday 12 March.

Menwith Hill Station (Visits)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the numbers of (a) elected members of local authorities and (b) officials of local authorities who have been permitted to visit any part of the Menwith Hill station during the past five years.

Mr. Hanley: A number of elected representatives from local authorities in the vicinity of Menwith Hill, and their officials, have been to the station in the last five years, for social events or for local planning reasons. Detailed records of exact numbers are not, however, available for the period in question. Such visits have not included any briefing on the role of the station or any access to operation areas.

EMPLOYMENT

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many bottles of (a) whisky and gin and (b) sherry and port were consumed by his private offices in 1993-94.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is not available.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 14 February, Official Report, column 644, if (a) where applicable, he will place in the Library the results of any market research relating to the campaigns and (b) he will publish (i) the number of people attending the new horizons events, (ii) the number of responses from employers to the workstart campaign, (iii) the number of people who took up the jobfinders grant, (iv) the number of places offered by employers in the work trials and the take-up by unemployed people and (v) the number of people and voluntary organisations taking part in the community action programme during this financial year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: When the results of the market research are available, I will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library. The answers to the remaining questions are:

(i) To date the number of people who have attended the new horizons events is 7,800. (ii) As a result of the workstart campaign there have been in excess of 1,200 inquiries from employers. (iii) The jobfinder's grant was launched on 7 February 1994 in the east and west midlands. Up to 11 March 373 people had received grants. (iv) To the end of January 1994, the latest date for which figures are available, 11,319 unemployed people had taken part in a work trial. Figures on the number of work trials offered by employers are not collected. (v) To the end of February 1994, the latest date for which figures are available, 11,728 people had taken part in community action. Figures for the number of voluntary organisations taking part in community action are not available.

Mr. J. C. Shaw

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received from Mr. J. C. Shaw of Shaws, Master Bakers, Liverpool; what response he has made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I received a letter from Mr. Shaw yesterday and will reply shortly.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will place in the Library a copy of the new Inter-TEC comparison quartile tables for the year ending 12 September 1993.

Miss Widdecombe: Inter-TEC comparison tables for 1992-93 were published on 13 September 1993. A copy is available in the Library.

I intend to publish full-year comparisons for 1993-94 this summer. I do not plan to publish in-year tables because uneven flows of information during the year can distort comparisons of performance.

Careers Service

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by what date applicants to become providers in the careers service will be required to express an interest in order to be considered.

Miss Widdecombe: The Department has invited initial expressions of interest by 31 March regarding careers service provision in England from April 1995 onwards. We will continue to respond to any subsequent requests until mid-April. No organisation or individual will be prevented from submitting a bid to run a Careers Service through failure to express interest. Bids themselves are likely to be invited by the autumn.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he is inviting (a) private and (b) state schools to consider applying to become providers of the careers service.

Miss Widdecombe: Bids to provide careers service in England will be welcome from any organisation, including schools, that believes it can meet the high standards and other requirements set out by the Department.

Miners (Redeployment and Retraining)

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what financial assistance he has made available to training and enterprise councils to help with the redeployment and retraining of miners from (a) Colgrave, (b) Silverhill, (c) Bevercotes, (d) Cripstone, (e) Calverton, (f) Rufford, (g) Annersley/Bentink, (h) Manton and (i) Ollerton.

Miss Widdecombe: The amount of financial assistance being made available through training and enterprise councils and the Employment Service is given in the following table:

Collieries	Indicative budgets £ million
Cotgrave	1·7
Silverhill	2·2
Bevercotes	2·2
Clipstone	2·7
Calverton	2·0
Rufford	2·2
Annesley	1·9
Manton	1·4
Ollerton	1·9
Total	18·2

The budgets above were made available to TECs and the ES. They are also inclusive of training for work allowances.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Forestry Privatisation

15. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she next intends to meet employees of the Forestry Commission to discuss forestry privatisation in England and Wales.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have no plans to meet representatives of the Forestry Commission's employees.

The commission's senior staff regularly meet the trade unions representing its employees to discuss a range of issues.

Animal Transportation

16. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the current progress towards securing an improvement in the welfare of live animals in transit.

27. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps she has taken to persuade the EC properly to regulate the transport of live animals; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: There has been no resolution as yet of the differences that emerged at the Agriculture Council in December, when my right hon. Friend refused to accept measures which did not offer sufficient safeguards for animal welfare.

Farm Workers

17. Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she last met representatives of the rural, agricultural and allied workers group of the Transport and General Workers Union to discuss the welfare of farm workers.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I last met representatives of the TGWU in January 1994.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

18. Mr. Thomason: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will report on progress on the introduction of the new environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Jack: Six new environmentally senstive areas were launched last week. They are in the Blackdown hills, Cotswold hills, Dartmoor, Essex coast, Shropshire hills and the upper Thames tributaries.

Nutritional Requirements

19. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has for introducing an independent commission of experts to ensure that agricultural products reflect nutritional requirements.

Mr. Soames: I have no such plans.

Animal Welfare

20. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to improve the welfare of animals at slaughter.

Mr. Soames: We shall implement the new EC directive and remaining agreed Farm Animal Welfare Council recommendations as soon as possible.

Milk

21. Mr. Alexander: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals she has to ensure that major ex-farm purchasers of milk will be subject to regulation against uncompetitive practices.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: After the end of the milk marketing scheme, milk purchasers will be subject to normal competition rules.

The restriction on the powers of the Director General of Fair Trading to make monopoly references of the wholesale of milk will be removed.

Farm Incomes

22. Mr. Duncan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the change in farmers' income over the last year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Surrey, East (Mr. Ainsworth).

Fruit Farmers

23. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received about the problems facing British fruit farmers; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: I have received a number of representations from consumers, growers and hon. Members, principally about the future of our unique apples; especially the Cox. We believe that many of the difficulties faced by this sector are attributable to the current EC regime for fresh fruit and vegetables, which we believe should be reformed.

Moorland Scheme

24. Mr. Hicks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps are being taken to promote the new moorland scheme.

Mr. Jack: The new moorland scheme has not yet been approved by the European Commission. As such, the details of the scheme cannot yet be finalised. When Commission approval is received we will issue a press notice on the scheme and advise farmers how they can obtain further details.

Bananas

25. Mr. Wells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will announce her decision on the future of the single European market for bananas.

Mr. Jack: The European Community regime establishing the single market for bananas came into force on 1 July 1993. No decision on its future is called for from my right hon. Friend.

Common Agricultural Policy

26. Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions she has had concerning the unpublished European Commission report on the reform of the common agricultural policy; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: This internal European Commission study has yet to be completed and published. Publication is a matter for the Commission and if it decides to make the study available, I will read it with interest.

Wild Birds

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give specific details of all current licences issued to kill wild bird species including details of the premises and the wild bird species concerned.

Mr. Soames: The details requested are as follows:

Number of licences currently in force by MAFF region

Species	Type of premises	Northern	North East	North Mercia	South Mercia	East Midlands	Anglia	South East	South West	Wessex
Bullfinch[1]	Farm	—	—	—	1	—	—	1	—	—
Brent goose	Farm	—	—	—	—	14	5	30	—	—
Cormorant	Fishery	7	—	4	2	—	1	3	—	—
Heron	Fishery	—	—	—	—	—	—	5	—	—
Goosander	Fishery	—	—	—	1	—	—	—	—	—
Blackbird	Farm	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1
Canada goose[2,3]	Farm	—	3	7	4	6	4	8	—	1
Greylag goose[3]	Farm	—	2	—	—	—	—	1	—	—
Coot[3]	Farm	—	—	—	—	1	—	—	—	—
Wigeon[3]	Farm	—	—	—	—	1	—	—	—	—
Feral pigeon[4]	Factory	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1	—
House sparrow[4]	Factory	—	1	—	—	—	—	—	1	—

[1] Excludes the general licence issued to kill bullfinches in selected counties as the returns of action taken are not yet available.
[2] Includes the pricking of eggs.
[3] These birds all have an open season when they may be killed without a licence. The licences shown are to kill during the closed season.
[4] A general licence has been issued to kill these birds throughout the year. The licences shown are to use methods otherwise prohibited under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Fishery Protection

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether she will continue to use the Royal Navy to undertake fishery protection duties; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The Fishery Protection Squadron of the Royal Navy has provided a tried, trusted and highly professional service for many years. It commands a great respect from both our fishermen and those from other member states. The use of the Royal Navy to enforce fisheries legislation has none the less been one of several services subject to detailed scrutiny by the Ministry as part of its contribution to the Government's "Competing for Quality" programme. Significant changes have been made to improve further the cost-effectiveness of the Fishery Protection Squadron. Consequently, a further contract has been negotiated enabling the Royal Navy to continue to undertake surface surveillance and fisheries enforcement for the next five years. During that period, the cost-effectiveness and efficiency of the Royal Navy's execution of this task will continue to be subject to review.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the dates Ministers or officials from her Department, including her Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985 including this year to date on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to her Department.

Mr. Jack: Until a few years ago Ministry policy was to arrange all overseas travel for Ministers and officials on British airlines, or their reciprocal carriers, at commercial rates. We employ agents to place such bookings and, with the opening up of all Government activities to greater commercial exposure, they now have instructions to provide us, on each occasion, with the most suitable and economic route using the most appropriate airline.

No detailed records of airlines used are kept centrally, as outside agents are used to book seats using the most suitable and economic route with the appropriate airline.

Our agents are unable to provide us with the information required in the detail requested. Our overall impression is that the Malaysian airline MAS has been used very infrequently, if at all, for MAFF air travel in the period concerned.

Wine Standards Board

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the remit of the Wine Standards Board; and in what ways it has changed over the last 10 years.

Mr. Jack: The Wine Standards Board's remit is to enforce the European Community wine regulations at production, import, export and wholesale level within the United Kingdom. This function has not changed over the last 10 years.

Plant Health Campaign

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to her answer of 10 March, Official Report, column 384, if she will place in the Library copies of any report prepared by the plant health and seeds inspectorate on the effectiveness of the plant health campaign.

Mr. Jack: Some 121,000 leaflets, posters and newsletters, dealing with plant health issues have been distributed. The plant health and seeds inspectorate has not prepared a formal report on whether recipients found this material effective or not. Our inspectors gauge its effectiveness from their knowledge of the general awareness of growers and the public about plant health issues. For example, the position was reflected by the good attendance at growers' meetings to discuss the single market plant health regime.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many bottles of (a) whisky and gin and (b) sherry and port were consumed by her private offices in 1993-94.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The cost of purchases of alcoholic drinks for use in entertainment by Ministers and their private offices is included in the overall administrative costs for the Department which is published in the departmental report.

Deep-sea Fish

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research is being conducted into the habits of reproduction and spawning of the Grenadier and other very deep-sea fish; and what assessment has been made of over-fishing of vulnerable deep-sea species.

Mr. Jack: Scientific advice collected by the European Commission in June 1993 suggested that deep-water species have slow rates of reproduction, high ages at first maturity and slow growth rates. These characteristics make them particularly vulnerable to over-exploitation. Experience elsewhere has shown that fishing can quickly reduce deep-water stocks to a low level.

Other work on the subject includes a NATO advanced research workshop on deep water fisheries of the north Atlantic which took place earlier this month and an International Council for the Exploration of the Seas study group on the biology and assessment of deep-sea fishery resources which will meet in August this year. The work is expected to provide a basis for advice on the management of such resources.

Angling

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies her Department has initiated to investigate the causes of the decline of fish catches by anglers over the last two fishing seasons.

Mr. Jack: The regulation and management of salmon and freshwater fisheries in England and Wales is primarily the responsibility of the National Rivers Authority. I understand that it has undertaken a number of local studies in response to concerns expressed by anglers in particular areas about the perceived decline in catches of fish.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received from angling organisations and fishery proprietors concerning the incidence of cormorants eating up freshwater fish stocks; and what proposals she has to solve the problem.

Mr. Soames: The following bodies have expressed their concern to the Ministry about the predation of fish by cormorants:

Atlantic Salmon Association
British Field Sports Society
Kingfisher Angling and Preservation Society
Orpington and District Angling Association
Salmon and Trout Association
Wye Salmon Fishery Owners Association

Under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, the Ministry is a licensing authority for the killing of cormorants where evidence of serious damage to a fishery has been provided. The Ministry considers each application on its merits and is advised by the Agricultural Development Advisory Service, the Ministry's wildlife advisers. In addition, the Ministry consults English Nature. Together with other Government Departments and interested bodies, the Ministry is reviewing its research and development programme on piscivorous birds to inform policy better.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many confirmed cases of BSE cattle there have been on Ministry experimental farms in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 21 March 1994]: The information requested as at 22 March 1994 by year of report is as follows. For convenience, the animals involved in the study to determine whether maternal transmission of the disease takes place are shown separately.

	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993
Confirmed BSE cases in maternal transmission study[1]	0	0	2	8	11
Confirmed cases of BSE on other experimental farms[2]	4	1	0	9	7

[1] The number of cases of BSE in this group reflects the age of the animals and the peak age of onset of disease in the epidemic. Due to the nature of the study the role played by maternal transmission will not become clear until the study is complete.

[2] These herds are run as commercial herds and have a varying incidence of the disease according to the management practices used and, where applicable, the history of the animals before purchase.

Avian Piscivores

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will review her Department's policy on the licensed killing of fish-eating birds as a result of the report on the basis for policy on avian piscivores, commissioned by the National Rivers Authority.

Mr. Soames [holding answer 23 March 1994]: The Ministry's policy on the licensed killing of fish-eating birds is kept under continual review. The report commissioned by the National Rivers Authority on avian piscivores will be taken into account as part of the process. The Ministry is reviewing its research and development requirements on piscivorous birds and the NRA is being invited to participate.

Agricultural Tenancies

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she will make a detailed response to the proposals for agricultural tenancy reform.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I welcomed the agreements reached by the industry last December on proposed reforms.

We are now finalising details so as to be ready to introduce legislation along those lines as soon as parliamentary time is available.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Andrew Robathan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress she has made on reaching a conclusion on woodlands owned by the Forestry Commission in England; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The report of the Forestry Review Group was submitted to Ministers on 28 February.

Ministers are considering the Forestry Review Group's report carefully and will make an announcement in due course.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Aid and Trade Provision

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the guidelines used by his Department as to whether ATP should be paid directly to a foreign Government or a private firm.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: ODA grant aid goes to recipient Governments who then make it available both to public or private sector institutions on agreed terms. Guidelines on the terms on which aid funds are to be passed on—on-lent—by the central Government to such institutions are set out in a technical note. There are no specific guidelines for on-lending under the aid and trade provision scheme. Under ATP ODA has not routinely insisted that aid funds be on-lent on commercial terms to ensure the concessionality is captured by the recipient Government. Each project is considered individually. Account is taken of requests from the central Government for the concessionality to be captured by the central Government in some other way, or for it to be passed on to the institution concerned.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the occasions in the last 10 years on which ATP provision has been made directly to a private company and not to the foreign Government concerned.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: None.

Ukraine

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many management training projects are currently being supported by the know-how fund in the Ukraine.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Management training is an important element in many know-how fund projects in Ukraine. A list of all current know-how fund projects there is being placed in the Libraries of the House.

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the current budget is for the know-how fund in the Ukraine; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In 1993-94 the know-how fund is likely to spend about £3·5 million in Ukraine. We expect to continue to provide assistance, mainly but not exclusively, in the agricultural, financial services, small business, and energy sectors.

International Tropical Timber Agreement

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the reduction in the rate of tropical deforestation which is likely to result from the new international tropical timber agreement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: It is not possible to make such an estimate. The international timber trade is only one of many factors which influence the rate of tropical deforestation. The new international tropical timber agreement contains enhanced provisions for working towards the target of the year 2000 for all internationally traded tropical timber to come from sustainably managed forests.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much money from the United Kingdom Exchequer was spent on the renegotiation of the international tropical timber agreement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Overseas Development Administration contributed £64,280 towards the costs of the second preparatory conference for the renegotiation in Quito in January 1992. The travel and subsistence costs of ODA staff attending meetings related to the renegotiation were £34,681. Details of other administrative costs could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Sleeping Accommodation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what plans the Committee has to make bedrooms available to hon. Members on the occasion of all-night sittings following proceedings on Consolidated Fund Bills; and how many bedrooms could be made available in this way.

Mr. Ray Powell: The Committee has no such plans. As was stated in the reply given on behalf of the Commission to the hon. Member on 15 December 1993 at column 640, there is no intention to alter existing arrangements.

Westminster Gym

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, columns 512-13, if he will give details of space allocated and rent and other charges paid per annum by the Westminster gym.

Mr. Ray Powell: Some 350 sq m in the basement of 1 Canon row are allocated to the Westminster gymnasium. No rent or other charges are levied.

Disabled Visitors

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee, pursuant to the answer from the chairman of the Administration Committee to the hon. Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner) of 2 February, Official Report, column 61, if he will make a statement on his Committee's consideration of proposals relating to access to, and within, the Palace of Westminster for wheelchair-bound strangers.

Mr. Ray Powell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 22 March, Official Report, column 168, to a similar question.

Exhibitions (Upper Waiting Hall)

Mr. Keen: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to district nursing awareness to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 13 June 19 Friday 17 June.

Mr. Madel: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to Water Aid to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 27 June to Friday 1 July.

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to food-borne disease awareness to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 23 May to Friday 27 May.

Rooms (Allocation)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee how many rooms in the parliamentary estate for the use of (a) hon. Members and (b) hon. Members' staff are currently vacant; and what steps are taken to allow their short-term use by hon. Members in inadequate accommodation pending their long-term allocation.

Mr. Ray Powell: The Committee has delegated day-to-day management of accommodation for Members and their staff to the Accommodation Whips and the Serjeant at Arms respectively. They seek to allocate rooms and desks as they become available; and consider short-term use in that context. Such allocation is an ongoing process which makes difficult the estimation of the number of rooms vacant at any one time.

SCOTLAND

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions in the last five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. Lang: In answering parliamentary questions I follow the guidelines set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers".

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by him and his ministerial colleagues in February.

Mr. Lang: My ministerial colleagues and I received 646 letters from and sent 392 letters to hon. Members during February.

Cautions

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cautions were issued by police forces in Scotland in each of the past five years for which figures are available; and if he will list the categories of offences which are covered by such cautions.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Cautions are not issued by police forces in Scotland.

Fisheries Protection Agency

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about performance targets for the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency for 1994-95.

Mr. Lang: For the financial year 1994-95 I have set the following targets:

Aerial surveillance—per cent. of hours flown on task	85%
Aerial surveillance—cost per aircraft sighting	£90
Marine surveillance—number of boardings at sea	2,600
Marine surveillance—cost per boarding	£2,607
Sea Fisheries Inspectorate—cost per log sheet check	£63

50 per cent of cases for prosecution to be reported within 6 weeks of offence being detected and 90 per cent. within 8 weeks.

Number of cases where court proceedings are taken as percentage of offences reported to prosecuting authorities 75%

In order to ensure that the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency uses its resources efficiently, I have set it a target to achieve cash-releasing efficiency gains of 2·0 per cent. over 1993-94.

The chief executive will be directly accountable to me for the achievement of these targets, which will be reported in the agency's annual report.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest number of patients waiting for (a) in-patient and (b) day care treatment.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 March 1994]: At 30 September 1993 there were 55,518 on in-patient waiting lists and 26,728 on day case waiting lists.

National Health Service Trusts

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the annual sum paid to each chairman of an NHS trust; and what are the proposed payments for each chairman of trusts about to come into existence.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 March 1994]: The information requested is as follows:

National Health Service Staff

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff were employed in 1993 in the NYHS (a) in anciallary grades, (b) as nurses and midwives in training and (c) in administrator grades.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 March 1994]: The information requested is detailed in the table.

Selected NHSIS staff: at 30 September 1993

	Number	WTE
(a) Anciallary staff	20,583	13,286·4
(b) Nurses in training	8,690	8,681·4

	Number	WTE
Student midwife	301	301·0
Health visitor/district nurse	36	35·2
Other post registration/enrollment	885	882·5
Basic student	3,816	3,810·7
Pupil	35	35·0
P2000 students[1]	3,617	3,617·0
(c) Administrative Grades[3]	6,638	6,459·8
General and Senior Management	1,162	1151·6
A & C—Grade 7 and over[2]	983	912·4
A & C—Grades 4-6	4,543	4,395·8

[1] At 31 October 1993.
[2] Includes protected grades.
[3] Administrators per se are not identified in the occupational classification used in the NHS. The numbers of senior managers and higher A & C grades are shown but include many staff who are not administrators, such as computer programmers and systems analysts.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many in-patients have been waiting (a) six months or more and (b) one year or more for operations.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 March 1994]: At 30 September 1993 there were 13,412 patients who had waited more than six months and 4,347 patients who had waited more than one year on waiting lists for in-patient treatment.

NHS Management (Cars)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how much was spent on cars for senior management by each health board in Scotland and in total in each of the past five years for which figures are available;

(2) how much was spent on cars for senior management by each national health service trust in Scotland, in each year for which figures are available.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 March 1994]: This information is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Blood

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what quantity of blood donated through the Blood Transfusion Service in Scotland has gone to the private health sector in each of the past five years; and what proportion this forms of total donations;

(2) to what extent Scotland has been self-sufficient in blood supplies in each of the past five years; and how any surplus has been used or any deficit been met.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 16 March 1994]: The information available is as follows:

	Blood units issued	Percentage of total issues in Scotland
1988-89	3,301	0·97
1989-90	3,347	0·94
1990-91	3,361	0·90
1992-93	3,250	0·89

In each of the past five years Scotland has been self-sufficient in supplies of fresh blood, plasma and fresh blood components, meeting all clinical demand. A small quantity of blood products of types not produced in Scotland is obtained from other suppliers as and when required for special clinical purposes.

Red cell concentrate is the product most often in surplus and when requested in an emergency on humanitarian grounds any surplus available has been provided to blood transfusion services in other parts of the United Kingdom or to the World Health Organisation and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Fair Employment

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons are (a) qualified to act as a chairman of fair employment tribunals, (b) appointed to the panel of lay members of fair employment tribunals after consultation with organisations representative of employers and (c) appointed to the panel of lay members of fair employment tribunals after consultation with organisations representative of employed persons; how many there are in each category whose perceived religious affiliation is (i) Protestant, (ii) Roman Catholic and (iii) not determined; how many come from outside Northern Ireland; and how many of the latter were born in (1) the rest of the United Kingdom or (2) the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: All chairmen and panel members of the fair employment tribunal have addresses in Northern Ireland. Information relating to the country of birth is not held by the Department of Economic Development. The other information sought is given in the following table:

Fair employment tribunal members qualified to act as:	Total number	Perceived number of: Protestants	Roman Catholics
(a) Chairman	3	1	2
(b) Lay panel members representative of employers	27	18	9
(c) Lay panel members representative of employees	31	13	18

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the dates Ministers, or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to his Department.

Sir John Wheeler: No Minister has used the Malaysian airline MAS since 1985. Whilst some officials of the Industrial Development Board have, on a few occasions, used the airline, further details could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Nurses and Midwives

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the distribution of average gross weekly earnings per person for each of the national health service clinical nursing and midwifery grades, listing the percentages of each grade earning under £140, £150, £160, £170, £180, £190, £200, £210, £220, £230, £240, £250, £275, £300 and those earning £300 and over in each year since 1991.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is provided in the table.

Dairy Farms

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dairy farms there were in Northern Ireland in each year since 1985.

Mr. Ancram: In the Northern Ireland agricultural census, until 1992 a farm was classified as a specialist dairying farm if dairying accounted for over two-thirds of the farm's total standard gross margin and as a mainly dairying farm if the proportion was between half and two thirds and if dairying was the largest enterprise. The numbers of such farms are given in the table for each year between 1985 and 1992.

	Specialist Dairying	Mainly Dairying	All Dairying
1985	5,605	1,770	7,375
1986	5,465	1,674	7,139
1987	5,334	1,567	6,901
1988	5,079	1,609	6,688
1989	4,897	1,631	6,528
1990	4,733	1,718	6,451
1991	4,553	1,805	6,358
1992	4,319	1,854	6,173

A new system of farm typology was introduced in 1993 and under this 5,124 farms were classified as dairy farms. On that new basis the number of dairy farms in 1992 was 5,235.

Prison Places

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the total numbers of prison places in Northern Ireland on (a) 1 June 1979, (b) 1 June 1983, (c) 1 June 1987 and (d) 1 April 1992 and on the latest date for which figures are available.

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

	Optimum capacity[1]
1 June 1979	1,785
1 June 1983	1,881
1 June 1987[1]	2,253
1 April 1992	2,253
23 March 1994	2,253

[1] Optimum capacity is based on single cell occupancy and does not include compound—dormitory style—accommodation in use prior to 1987—mainly for special category prisoners.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the total numbers of prisoners in custody in Northern Ireland on (a) 1 June 1979, (b) 1 June 1983, (c) 1 June 1987 and (d) 1 April 1992, and on the latest date for which figures are available.

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

	Total prison population
1 January 1979[1]	[2]2,671
1 January 1983[1]	[2]2,348
1 April 1987[1]	[2]1,939
1 April 1992	1,844
23 March 1994	1,937

[1] Statistics are not available for the specific dates in question in 1979, 1983 or 1987 but the figures provided reflect the prisoner population on the closest available dates to those requested.
[2] Includes special category prisoners housed in compound (dormitory style) accommodation prior to, and including, 1987.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the total numbers of prisoners in custody in Northern Ireland on the first day of each month from May 1992 until the latest month for which figures are available.

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

	Total prison population
1 May 1992	1,860
1 June 1992	1,861
1 July 1992	1,853
1 August 1992	1,807

1 July 1993	1,948
1 August 1993	1,888
1 September 1993	1,866
1 October 1993	1,901
1 November 1993	1,886
1 December 1993	1,891
1 January 1994	1,786
1 February 1994	1,877
1 March 1994	1,947

Local Government Finance

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table to show for each of the last 10 years and the next year, the average, highest and lowest district rates struck in Northern Ireland and the average percentage increase each year in the regional rate and the total percentage increase in the average district rate and the percentage increase in the regional rate over the whole period or as much of such information as is readily available to him.

Mr. Tim Smith: The information requested is provided in the tables.

The total percentage increase in the average district rate since 1984-85 is 69.35 per cent.
The percentage increase in the regional rate over the whole period is:—
(a) Non-domestic regional rate 59 per cent.
(b) Domestic regional rate –8·2 per cent.

WALES

Tai Cymru

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of Tai Cymru's annual budget is spent on central administration.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In 1992-93 Housing for Wales's running costs equated to 1·01 per cent. of the total budget that it administered.

House Renovation

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will include in grants for the renovation of houses an allowance for value added tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Value added tax can already be covered by a home renovation grant.

Rented Housing

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the statistical database used by his Department in support of proposals made in his recent consultation paper on access to local authority and housing association tenancies.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office has available to it the range of local authority-provided information which is published annually in "Welsh Housing Statistics". It also has information on housing association activity provided by Housing for Wales's returns and by the Welsh Federation of Housing Associations.

Cash Limits

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has for changes to the cash limits for his Department in the current financial year.

Mr. Redwood: The cash limit for WO/LACAP will be reduced by £9,491,000 from £409,543,000 to £400,052,000 and the cash limit for WO/HFW will be increased correspondingly by £9,491,000 from £130,017,000 to £139,508,000.

These changes reflect a transfer of provision from local authorities to Housing for Wales which will enable housing associations to provide additional housing units.

ENVIRONMENT

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the benefit-cost ratio for the proposed extension of the docklands light railway to Lewisham (a) with a toll for the river crossing and (b) without a toll, indicating in each case (i) the total annual cost, including capital cost of construction, rolling stock costs, equivalent annual capital cost and annual operating costs and (ii) the total benefit including time savings, overcrowding relief, total public transport users' benefit and additional rail revenue.

Mr. Baldry: Provisional indications are that the project to build the Lewisham extension of the docklands light railway will be financially viable only with a revenue-maximising cross-river toll and with capital costs constrained to a figure around £100 million. In 1993 the benefit:cost ratio of the project on this basis was estimated to be 3·5:1. The forecast benefits included passenger time savings of £220 million and non-user benefits of £54 million. No similar analysis has been carried out for theoretical, non-financially viable, options.

Council Tax

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average cost of each appeal against council tax evaluations (a) in England as a whole and (b) in each standard region.

Mr. Baldry: The estimated cost of processing a council tax appeal in the current financial year is £115. This estimate includes costs incurred by the Valuation Office Agency and valuation tribunals at all stages of the appeal process, although the great majority of appeals are settled without the need for a full tribunal hearing. The figure is derived by adding the unit cost for registering and handling cases by the VOA and the average unit cost of dealing with all categories of appeals, including those relating to non-domestic valuations and community charge liability, at valuation tribunals. Estimates of the costs are not made for individual regions.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the total cost of the valuation exercise in England including the appeals process, since the introduction of the council tax.

Mr. Baldry: The cost of the original valuation exercise was £69·69 million. Voted provision for all work undertaken by the Valuation Office Agency in respect of council tax in 1993-94, including work on appeals, is £34·166 million.

In addition, the running costs of valuation tribunals amount to £10·2 million in 1993-94. Their jurisdiction includes council tax and community charge liability appeals and non-domestic rating appeals as well as appeals against council tax valuations.

PSA Building Management

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many companies expressed an interest in the purchase of the PSA's Building Management south-east division when its sale was announced in January.

Mr. Curry: A total of 170.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was his Department's estimate as to the sum which would accrue to the Government following the takeover of the PSA's Building Management South-East; and what assumptions underlay this estimate.

Mr. Curry: It would not be right for the vendor to make public the assumptions or estimates which led to the sale of Building Management South East, while discussions are continuing with the purchasers of the business with a view to agreeing a completion statement, in accordance with the sale agreement. As is usual in the case of major privatisations, the National Audit Office is conducting a study of the sales of the Building Management businesses the findings of which will be published in due course.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria, apart from price, were used to evaluate the bids for the purchase of the PSA's Building Management south-east division.

Mr. Curry: As the sale documentation made clear, regard would be had to the following factors, in addition to price, in selecting purchasers for the PSA Building Management businesses:

Purchasers' financial status;
The credibility of purchasers' long term future plans;
Purchasers' commitment to developing the BM business or businesses in the private sector;
Purchasers' intentions regarding staff and the prospects for staff;
Purchasers' responses to the proposed secondment and pension arrangements;
Purchasers' commitment to ensuring continuity of service to existing customers; and
A preference to sell the businesses to different purchasers in order to promote competitive private sector markets.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many staff transferred from the PSA's Building Management south-east division to AMEC plc and Pell Frischmann Consulting Engineers Ltd. when the sale of BMSE was completed.

Mr. Curry: A total of 438.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the value of the assets of the PSA Building Management south-east at the time of its sale to AMEC plc and Pell Frischmann Consulting Engineers Ltd.

Mr. Curry: As provided for in the sale agreement, the value of the assets transferred will be subject to a completion statement to be agreed between the vendor and purchaser. The outcome of this process will be announced to the House in due course.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which companies were shortlisted to bid for the purchase of the PSA's Building Management south-east division.

Mr. Curry: Four bids were shortlisted for the purchase of PSA Building Management south-east. Details of them are commercially confidential.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total Government spending in the London boroughs of (a) Lewisham, (b) Bromley, (c) Wandsworth, (d) Hammersmith and Fulham and (e) Kingston.

Mr. Baldry: The latest available information on central Government financial support for the London boroughs concerned is as follows:

Government grants: 1993-94 estimates

£ thousand

	Revenue grants[1]	Capital grants	Housing subsidies[2]	Total
Lewisham	214,560	10,004	73,923	298,486
Bromley	140,342	5,244	0	145,586
Wandsworth	260,200	6,031	42,531	308,762
Hammersmith and Fulham	170,834	3,887	43,362	218,083
Kingston-upon-Thames	69,797	2,237	7,389	79,423

[1]Revenue grants consist of Revenue Support Grant, Specific and Special Grants; redistributed non-domestic rates are excluded.
[2]This consists of Housing Revenue account Subsidies and contributions towards running costs of Approved Home Improvement Agencies.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average revenue support grant per capita awarded to local authorities which are (a) Conservative controlled, (b) Liberal Democrat controlled, (c) Labour controlled and (d) under no overall control.

Mr. Baldry: Revenue support grant is distributed so that, if all authorities spent at their standard spending assessment, all council tax payers could receive broadly a standard level of service while paying the same level of council tax as any other council tax payer in a given property band. The amount of revenue support grant which any local authority receives will thus depend on the services for which that authority is responsible, and on the social, demographic and physical characteristics of the area.

In most areas of England provision of local services is split between different classes of local authority. The average revenue support grant figures for 1994-95 in pounds per capita for the main classes of English local authorities are as follows:

	Conservative	Liberal Democrat	Labour	No overall control	Other	All
Inner London boroughs	573	1,166	756	777	—	741
Outer London boroughs	387	257	552	425	—	436
Metropolitan districts	310	—	424	391	—	414
Shire counties	298	232	299	250	—	262
Shire districts	28	34	51	36	38	38

Estate Action Bids

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the number and location of all unsuccessful estate action bids, giving the reasons for his Department's decision.

Sir George Young: Estate Action bids are considered by my Department and discussed with local authorities in the context of their overall housing requirements. Authorities are invited to work up bids that go furthest in meeting current Estate Action guidelines and offer the best value for money. Two hundred and seventy bids were received for schemes planned to start in 1994-95, of which 115 could be funded within available resources. Information on the regional split of the 155 unsuccessful schemes is as follows:

Number of 1994-95 unsuccessful Estate Action bids

DOE region	Number
Yorkshire and Humberside	8
Merseyside	26
North West	15
Northern	9
South West	21
London	37
East Midlands	10
West Midlands	16
South East	3
Eastern	10
Total	155

Information about previous years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Buildmark Scheme

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many complaints he has received concerning approved inspectors of the National House Building Council's buildmark scheme.

Mr. Baldry: Inspectors approved by the Secretary of State to carry out building control work, and who are employed by NHBC Building Control Services Ltd., carry out a separate function to those involved in the NHBC's role as provider of the Buildmark warranty. The operation of the Buildmark warranty is a matter for the NHBC which is an independent body and the Government have no general powers to intervene in its affairs.

Car Boot Sales

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received from (a) hon. Members, (b) members of the general public and (c) chambers of trade and other trade organisations requesting tighter controls and regulation of car boot sales.

Mr. Baldry: Since the start of this parliamentary Session on 18 November 1993, we have received 10 letters from hon. Members requesting tighter planning controls on car boot sales.

The Department and its regional offices receive numerous representations on a whole range of issues affecting car boot sales, but further information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Building Regulations

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions he has been asked to use his powers under A1 regulation 6(3) of the Building Regulations 1985 to withdraw his approval from a designated body, on the grounds that it had not operated responsibly in accordance with the Building Regulations 1985.

Mr. Baldry: Regulation 4 of the Building (Approved Inspectors etc) Regulations 1985 gives the Secretary of State power to designate a body for the approval of inspectors. As no such body has been approved, questions of withdrawal of approvals using the powers under regulation 6(3) do not arise.

District Audits

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the procedure for appeal against the district audit decision.

Mr. Baldry: Final decisions by a district auditor on an objection to accounts raised under section 17(3) of the Local Government Finance Act 1982 are subject to appeal. Both the objectors and respondents have the right of appeal to the courts.

Biodiversity Action Plan

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider the employment of additional staff in order to speed up the implementation of the United Kingdom biodiversity action plan.

Mr. Atkins: Implementation of the biodiversity action plan will require input from many Government Departments, public agencies and non-government organisations, co-ordinated through the action plan steering group. It is too early to assess the staffing implications.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many members of the public have sought a reference back to the Local Government Commission in (a) Gloucestershire and (b) Somerset.

Mr. Baldry: Seven members of the public wrote to my right hon. Friend asking for a further review of Gloucestershire and, to date, three have written in support of a further review of Somerset.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he received from (a) local authorities including local councils and (b) members of the public, concerning the Local Government Commission's recommendations for the future of local government in Gloucestershire; and how many of those two groups (i) supported the Local Government Commission's recommendations or (ii) supported reference back.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend received 67 representations from principal local authorities and local councils. Eight were opposed to the main recommendation. Three district councils asked for a further review, as did the Gloucestershire branch of the Association of District Councils. A total of 36 representations were received from members of the public. Twenty-one supported the main recommendation, while it was opposed by 15, seven of whom asked for a further review.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make public the letters from local authorities in Gloucestershire asking for a reference back to the Local Government Commission.

Mr. Baldry: I have arranged for copies of the relevant letters to be placed in the Library.

English Partnerships

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has for financing the expenditure of English Partnerships.

Sir George Young: The expenditure of English Partnerships—the urban regeneration agency—will be financed by grant-in-aid and receipts which include those from the sale of capital assets for reinvestment in its programmes. In 1994-95, capital receipts are expected to amount to £78 million. Any such receipts in excess of £86 million will be surrendered to the Consolidated Fund. This arrangement is set out in the introductory note to the supply estimate for class VII, vote 3—regeneration initiatives, England—from which the grant-in-aid will be paid.

Sizewell B

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he is making for ministerial decisions relating to Sizewell B power station.

Mr. Gummer: Sizewell is in my constituency, and I have accordingly delegated responsibility for all ministerial decisions to my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside.

Waste Management Licensing

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce a scheme of fees and charges for waste management licensing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Following consultation, and with the approval of the Treasury, my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment, for Wales and for Scotland have made a charging scheme for waste management licensing under section 41 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

The scheme comes into force on 1 May 1994 and prescribes the fees which are to be paid to waste regulation authorities for applications for waste management licences; the fees for applications for the modification, transfer or surrender of licences; and charges for the subsistence of licences. It also prescribes the amounts which waste regulation authorities are to pay out of those fees and charges to the National Rivers Authority in England and Wales, or to river purification authorities in Scotland, for consultation in relation to licences.

The fees and charges are set in bands of quantities and types of waste. Following consultation we have made a number of changes to the originally proposed scheme which will be of benefit to small businesses and the recycling industry. These changes include the introduction of additional lower bands set at 5,000 tonnes per annum for the treatment or keeping of waste and for the disposal of inert waste. The 1994-95 subsistence charges for these lower bands have also been set at 70 per cent. of our assessment of full recovery of waste regulation authorities' costs. This is a transitional provision which will ensure that the introduction of fees and charges does not have an immediate and adversely disproportionate impact on small businesses, particularly small businesses engaged in the recycling of waste.

In accordance with section 41(4) of the 1990 Act copies of the scheme are being laid before both Houses and placed in the libraries of both Houses. The scheme forms part of a document which also provides guidance on its operation.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many public interest immunity certificates he has signed in each year since 1990.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 15 March 1994]: Neither I nor my predecessors have produced a public interest immunity certificate in legal proceedings in any year since 1990.

Global Environmental Facility

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the negotiations over the funding of the global environmental facility held in Geneva from 14 March.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend, the Member for Brentford and Isleworth (Mr. Deva) on 21 March at column 19. I am pleased to add that the replenishment total of US$2,023 million exceeds the US$2 billion target set, and that the ODA played a major role in negotiating the agreement on the restructuring of the global environment facility.

European Parliament Elections

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what funds are being made available to electoral registration officers in (a) England and Wales and (b) London, to publicise information to EU citizens from outwith the United Kingdom on voter registration; and in which of the official languages of the European Union versions will be provided.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Truro (Mr. Taylor) on 15 March at column 588. No additional funds for publicity have been made available to electoral registration officers. The information sheets and application forms provided for citizens of the European Union are in English.

EDUCATION

Grant-maintained Schools

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools have had parental ballots (i) supporting and (ii) rejecting grant-maintained status during each calendar month since May 1992.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is set out in the table.

[1] Up to and including ballots closing on 22 March 1994.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list, for each school so far holding a ballot of parents on grant-maintained status in accordance with section 28 of the Education Act 1993, (a) the date the ballot was initiated, (b) whether this was by governors' resolution of parents' petition and (c) the date on which the ballot papers were dispatched to parents.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is set out below.

Note: This table is derived from information provided by Electoral Reform Ballot Services.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what applications have been received from grant-maintained schools for special purpose grant (restructuring); and, in each case (a) how many posts have been affected, (b) whether the post of (i) head teacher or (ii) deputy head teacher was affected and (c) what grant has been agreed.

Mr. Robin Squire: Applications for special purpose grant—restructuring—have to date been approved in respect of 923 posts at 414 schools at a total cost of £6,251,179,·42. A more detailed breakdown of the posts is not available.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the schools where a new head teacher has been appointed since the school became grant maintained.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is not collated centrally.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the grant-maintained schools which have published proposals to make a significant change in the character of the school giving, in each case, (a) the date of publication, (b) the nature of the proposed change and (d) his decision.

Mr. Robin Squire: Proposals published under section 89 of the Education Reform Act 1988 for a significant change of character in grant-maintained schools are as follows:

Change of age range: To add or extend sixth form

School	LEA	Proposal date	Nature of change	Decision	Decision date
Chalvedon School	Essex	5 June 1991	11-16 to 11-18	Approved	27 August 1991

City Technology Colleges Trust

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what annual grant is paid to the City Technology Colleges Trust; if he will list all (a) trustees and (b) council members of the City Technology Colleges Trust since its foundation giving the periods of service of each; and what payments have been made to council members of the City Technology Colleges Trust.

Mr. Robin Squire: The annual grant to be paid by the Department to the City Technology Colleges Trust for the 1994-95 financial year is £664,500. The charitable trustees of the trust, who are its council members, are listed below, together with their periods of service. No remuneration is paid to council members, although reasonable expenses incurred for attendance at council meetings are reimbursed if requested.

Grammar Schools

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what number and percentage of maintained secondary school pupils are educated in grammar schools in the latest year for which information is available; what were the comparable figures for the years in which general elections were held since 1964; and what were the percentage point changes between these dates.

Mr. Patten: The information is as follows:

Pupils in maintained grammar schools in England in January of each year: 1964 to 1993

Year	Number of pupils in maintained grammar schools (Thousands)	Percentage of maintained secondary school pupils educated in grammar schools (Percentage)	Changes between years (Percentage points)
1964	667	25·2	—
1970	569	19·9	−5·3
1974	400	11·4	−8·4
1979	163	4·2	−7·2
1983	117	3·1	−1·1
1987	100	3·1	−0·1
1992	109	3·8	+0·7
1993	112	[1]3·8	0·0

Note: The percentage of maintained secondary school pupils educated in grammar schools remains broadly constant between 1992 and 1993, despite a rise in the number of pupils in maintained grammar schools, because there was an increase of equal proportions, in the number of pupils in all maintained schools over this period.

Primary and Secondary Schools

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the four secondary schools in the maintained sector for which he has most recently approved significant capital expenditure and which are over 90 per cent. full and which occupy new, extended or modified buildings.

Mr. Forth: Whether schools are 90 per cent full or occupy new, extended or modified buildings are not criteria for capital support. Details of capital grants to voluntary aided and special agreement schools and of local education authorities' annual capital guidelines were placed in the Library following the reply of 17 December 1993 from my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire) to my hon. Friend the Member for Chelmsford, (Mr. Burns) Official Report, column 946. Copies of press notices of 16 December 1993 and 21 March 1994 announcing capital grants to self-governing, grant-maintained schools were placed in the Library.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 17 March, Official Report, column 848, concerning cost multipliers for new primary and secondary schools if he will state in arithmetic terms the teaching area standards which he regards as the minimum acceptable in respect of each place in (a) primary schools, (b) secondary schools already in operation and (c) new schools.

Mr. Forth: The Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981, as amended, prescribe the minimum overall teaching areas to be provided at maintained schools, according to the number of pupils at the school and their age range. Schools already in existence when the 1981 standards were introduced have until 1996 to comply with these standards.

Copies of the 1981 regulations and the previous 1972 regulations are available from the Library.

Special Schools

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he expects to be able to make a decision concerning the reorganisation of Bensham Manor and St. Nicholas special schools.

Mr. Forth: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 18 March to explain that my right hon. Friend is minded to approve the reorganisation of Bensham Manor and St. Nicholas schools proposed by Croydon LEA, subject to the satisfactory resolution of a few remaining issues. My officials wrote to Croydon's director of education on the same day to convey this information. The timing of my right hon. Friend's final decision will depend on the LEA's response to that letter.

Schools Reorganisation, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 8 March, Official Report, column 128, if he will send the hon. Member for Don Valley a copy of his decision on school reorganisation in the Doncaster area when he announces it.

Mr. Robin Squire: I have today sent the hon. Member a copy of the official letter to Doncaster local education authority setting out my right hon. Friend's decisions on those parts of Doncaster LEA's phase 3 reorganisation proposals which fall to him for determination. I have also sent the hon. Member a copy of my letter to him dated 14

March conveying my right hon. Friend's decision to approve that part of the reorganisation proposals which affect schools in his constituency.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of time for a claimant to receive invalidity benefit before being referred to the Benefits Agency medical service.

Mr. Scott: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Housing Benefit

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 479, if he will disclose such information as is readily available on the payment of housing benefit by local authority.

Mr. Hague: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Medical Examinations

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many referrals for a medical examination have been made where the claimant has successfully appealed against a decision that they are capable of work within (a) one month, (b) three months and (c) six months, of the appeal being heard, for each quarter of 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Scott: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Unemployment Benefit

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide the most recent statistics covering a full year of the number of disqualifications from unemployment benefit for voluntary unemployment under each of the various heads of section 28(1) of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992.

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the "Unemployment Benefit Statistics—Quarterly Analysis of Adjudication Officers' Decisions", copies of which are in the Library.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of whether he is satisfied that the Child Support Agency is acting in accordance with the Data Protection Act 1984 in revealing details of an individual's income.

Mr. Scott: The agency has devised its procedures to comply with the Data Protection Act, and is in regular discussion with the data protection registrar to ensure that it continues to meet its requirements.

Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications have been made to the Child Support Agency; and how many of those applications have actually been completed.

Mr. Scott: I refer my hon. Friend to the monthly report on the agency's performance in the Library.

Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what ethnic monitoring there is of the applications and assessments by the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Scott: The chief executive of the Child Support Agency, Ros Hepplewhite, informs me that the agency does not carry out such monitoring.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many assessments for payment of maintenance by the Child Support Agency have been made where the absent parent is in receipt of benefits in (a) the London borough of Newham and (b) Great Britain.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 24 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of assessments made by the Child Support Agency where the absent parent is receiving benefit.

You asked for figures for both the London Borough of Newham and Great Britain. Information is not available specifically for the London Borough of Newham, but national figures show that during the period from 5 April 1993 to 31 January 1994 the Agency assessed maintenance in 32,700 cases where the absent parent was on Income Support.

Figures are not available for other benefits.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases dealt with by the Child Support Agency the parent with care has not named the absent parent due to harm and undue distress; and in how many cases it has been accepted by the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 23 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of cases in which good cause has been an issue and the number of cases in which it has been accepted.

From 5 April 1993 to 31 January 1994, 44,600 parents with care were considered in relation to the requirement to cooperate. Of the cases so far completed, good cause was accepted in nearly 25,000; the absent parent was named in 8,900; and 330 were referred to the Beneifts Agency to consider implementation of a Reduced Benefit Direction.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if there is provision in the operation of the Child Support Agency for the parent with care to withdraw his or her authorisation to pursue the absent parent when such authorisation has resulted in violence towards the parent with care.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 24 March 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the provision for the parent with care to withdraw authorisation to pursue the absent parent.

After the parent with care has authorised the Secretary of State to recover maintenance, the requirement to cooperate in arranging maintenance may be withdrawn if it is considered that there would be a risk of harm or undue distress to the parent or any child living with her or him.

If a parent with care approaches the Child Support Agency about this, an officer acting for the Secretary of State will discuss the matter with her or him and will consider the basis for their concern. I should stress that the parent will be believed unless what is said is contradictory or improbable.

If the requirement to cooperate is subsequently withdrawn, the parent with care will be given the opportunity to request the Secretary of State to cease pursuing the absent parent for maintenance. The Agency will then cease all action on the case.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what procedure the Child Support Agency has in place to deal with complaints arising from the operation of the agency; and how this is publicised;

(2) how many complaints on the operation of the Child Support Agency have been (a) received and (b) dealt with.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 24 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of complaints received and cleared by the Child Support Agency and the Agency's complaints procedures.

The Agency has received a total of 15,479 written enquiries and complaints to the end of February 1994, of which 11,945 have been cleared. The Agency's clients are sent information about the complaints procedure as part of the maintenance application and enquiry packs.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases pursued by the Child Support Agency have not been successful in resulting in the payment of maintenance to the parent with care due to (a) failure to locate absent parent, (b) failure to obtain details of absent parent, (c) failure to enforce payment or (d) other reasons.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 24 March 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking about the effectiveness of the Child Support Agency in obtaining the payment of maintenance to the parent with care.

As at 31 January 1994 the Agency had successfully traced the absent parent in 19,000 cases where their whereabouts were not previously known. There were only 2,800 cases where the Agency was unable to trace the absent parent, and these cases may be re-opened if new information becomes available. Overall, the Agency has contacted 381,300 absent parents.

During the same period there were 37,400 cases where it was either accepted that the parent with care had "good cause" not to identify the absent parent, or where they declined to do so, and "good cause" was not accepted.

You also asked about enforcement. Activity in this area is at a relatively early stage, and the process can prove time consuming. However, so far out of 2,700 cases in which enforcement action had commenced, payment had been re-established in 280 cases.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Permanent Health Insurance Policies

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the estimated cost to his Department of extra-statutory concessions on benefits paid under permanent health insurance policies during 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Dorrell: I have been asked to reply.

Precise figures are not available centrally, but the estimated cost of the concession which exempted benefits from tax for the remainder of the tax year in which they commenced and the subsequent tax year was £10 million in 1991-92 and £15 million in 1992-93. The revenue cost of this concession will be lower in future years as a result of the changes in its operation which were announced on 30 November 1993.

War Pensions

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish in the Official Report the correspondence between the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Lord Henley, and the President of the war pensions appeal tribunal on the proposed changes in legislation for noise-induced hearing loss entitlement which were announced by the Government in 1992.

Mr. Hague: Lord Henley consulted the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions on the proposals to amend the war pensions legislation on noise-induced hearing loss. He did not consult the then president of the war pensions appeal tribunal on the proposed changes.

HEALTH

Health Service Administration

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the administration of each regional health authority cost in the last four years and in 1978, adjusted to 1993 prices.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information available is shown in the table. The figures for 1989-90 and 1990-91 are not directly comparable with the figures for 1991-92 and 1992-93 because of the introduction of capital charges and other changes to accounting procedures. Simple comparisons between authorities are misleading because regional health authorities devolved their non-core functions at varying times and bore different costs on their regional budgets. Administration expenditure figures are not held for individual health authorities in 1978.

Administration costs for Regional Health Authorities 1989-90—1992-93 at 1993 prices

Source Annual accounts of regional health authorities.

Notes:

1. The table shows expenditure adjusted to 1992-93 prices by use of the Gross Domestic Product deflator.
2. The figures represent expenditure on pay and accommodation costs of the staff at Regional Health Authority headquarters and exclude costs of emergency bed service, planning and setting up NHS Trusts, grants not related to purchase of health care, education and training, expenditure on Community Health Councils. They do not include the costs of purchasing healthcare.
3. The figures for the years vary between RHAs as regions were managed in an integrated way and the balance of management between RHAs and their respective district health authorities (DHAs) differed between regions. The figures were also affected by other factors including differences in the geographical size of regions and in the extent to which RHAs directly managed operational services. Following implementation of the NHS Reforms from April 1991, the role of RHAs changed. There were significant variations in the extent to which RHAs retained or devolved management, support and operational services functions and in the extent to which their costs are borne or recharged to users directly involved in the purchaser function.
4. The figures for 1992-93 are provisional.

Complaints Review

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if her review of national health service complaints procedures includes a right for patients to lodge complaints against employees of general practitioners.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the publication of the review of national health service procedures.

Dr. Mawhinney: The committee set up to review national health service complaints procedures has now made its report with a number of recommendations and we are considering our response to these.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice the review of national health service complaints took from the social service inspectorate.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Severance Payments

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 11 March, Official Report, column 438, on irregular severance payments, what action she has taken to recover the irregular payment of £78,000.

Dr. Mawhinney: Any ultra vires payment by a health authority is recoverable in principle, and it is obligatory for the authority in question to consider the feasibility of recovery and to take prompt action as appropriate. The Department of Health and Her Majesty's Treasury will be looking to ensure that this happens in the instance referred to.

DNase

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the hospitals which took part or are taking part in trials of the drug DNase; on whose behalf these trials were conducted; when the results of the trial will be published; and if she will be issuing guidance to health boards on the use of the drug if the trials are successful.

Mr. Sackville: Medicinal products for use in clinical trials are regulated under the Medicines Act 1968 and subsidiary legislation. The Medicines Control Agency acting on behalf of the licensing authority keeps confidential records of all applications to conduct clinical trials. Information from these records cannot be disclosed in accordance with section 118 of the Medicines Act. The question of guidance to health boards is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland. In England, it is for a local district health authority to decide priorities in the light of competing demands on finite resources. The Department of Health encourages the national health service to study the results of research into drugs.

Accident and Emergency Units

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current ratio of accident and emergency units to district general hospitals in London; and what the ratio was (a) two, (b) five and (c) 10 years ago.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Romford (Sir M. Neubert) on 22 February at columns 210-11.

General Practitioner Prescribing

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to commission a medical audit of the quality of treatment being received by patients of general practitioner practices whose annual prescribing costs are 20 per cent. below the average for practices in their family health service authority areas.

Dr. Mawhinney: Family health services authorities are responsible for working with general practitioner practices to make sure that their prescribing is both cost-effective and meets all the clinical needs of their patients.

Pre-school Child Care

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nursery places and (b) child minding places there were in England and Wales, (i) in total and (ii) in the private sector for 1987 and the last year that figures were available.

Mr. Bowis: Information on day nursery and child minder places in England for 1987 and the latest available year is contained in the publication "Children's day care facilities at 31 March 1992, England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Information about nursery schools is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education.

The number of nursery and child minding places in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Sheffield Community Health Trust

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent by Sheffield health authority in consultative fees for research, design or establishment costs for the logo to be adopted by the proposed Sheffield Community Health Trust operational from 1 April.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for Sheffield health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman, Mr. J. Neill, for details.

Pain Clinics

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pain clinics are available in the Doncaster area; on what sites; and how many people were treated at each in 1992, 1993, and 1994 to date.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the Doncaster health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman, Mr. J. G. Smith, for details.

Dental Services

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of patients being deregistered for NHS dentistry treatment in each of the health authority areas within the south-west region, and what is the proportion per head of population in each of those areas, for the latest available period.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information for the latest available period is shown in the table. At 31 January 1994, there were 2,178,566 patients registered in South Western region. Based on June 1992 estimates, this represents 62·2 per cent. of the population of the region. In England since July 1992 there has been a net increase of over 600,000 patients registered and a net increase of 264 dentists in contract with family health services authorities.

Number of patients and percentage of population deregistered, week ending 18 March 1994, by FHSA

FHSA	Number of patients deregistered during week ending 18 March 1994	Percentage of population deregistered
Avon	36	0·004
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly	22	0·005
Devon	79	0·008
Gloucestershire	206	0·038
Somerset	129	0·027

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much additional revenue would be raised in a full year by increasing the contributions to NHS dental treatment fees for patients not exempt from charges to 100 per cent.

Dr. Mawhinney: We estimate that an increase in contributions for patients liable to pay dental charges to 100 per cent. of the national health service dental fee would raise £90 million–£100 million additional revenue in a full year. This estimate is made on the assumption that there is no change in the demand for or supply of dental treatment under the general dental services. It also takes into account the maximum patient charge from 1 April 1994 of £275 for a course of NHS dental treatment.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists in England are offering private dental insurance schemes to their patients.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for individual dentists who are independent contractors, who themselves decide whether, and to what extent, to provide private treatment.

Press Conference Suite

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the planned uses for the new Department of Health press conference suite; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The new conference room in Richmond house will be used for conferences, meetings, training seminars and workshops by the Departments of Health and Social Security. The room has also been equipped for press conferences and interviews.

The conference facility is also being made available for other Government Departments.

NHS Trusts

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what freedom NHS trusts have to vary the terms and conditions for service for hospital medical and dental staff in relation to the freedom of practitioners to publish articles or to speak on any issue without the prior consent of their employer.

Dr. Mawhinney: Trusts have freedom to recruit staff on new terms and conditions and can negotiate new terms with existing staff.

NHS Employees

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has concerning the number of employees aged over 70 years who are currently allowed to continue to work within the national health service.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information available centrally suggests that there were about 200 direct care staff aged over 70 years as at 30 September 1992.

Complaints

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether it is her policy to apply different standards in relation to complaints by social service clients and NHS patients.

Dr. Mawhinney: There are separate procedures for complaints by social service clients and national health service patients.

GP Fundholders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was (a) the budget, (b) the outturn and (c) the amount retained by general practitioner fundholders in each family health service authority area for each of the last four years.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information about general practitioner fundholder budgets is available centrally only at regional health authority level.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) administrative staff, (b) practice nurses, (c) other nurses, (d) social workers or counsellors and (e) other staff are directly employed by general practitioners' fundholding practices.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information collected centrally covers all general practitioner-employed staff. It does not distinguish between fundholding and other GP practices.

Call-out Fees

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis general practitioners may charge a call-out fee to (a) an individual patient, (b) a voluntary organisation providing a community care service, (c) a family health service authority and (d) a district health authority.

Dr. Mawhinney: Under their terms of service general practitioners receive a fee from their family health services authority for making a visit to a patient between 10 pm and 8 am. GPs may not charge any call-out fee to patients.

Family Health Services Authorities

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much was paid over to family health services authorities by district health authorities in each of the last five years;

(2) what was the total amount of money paid over by family health services authorities to (a) district health authorities and (b) local authorities for services provided and joint projects for each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Sackville: The annual accounts and financial returns of family health services authorities and district health authorities do not analyse income and expenditure in a way which would permit the identification of all such payments to DHAs or local authorities by FHSAs or to FHSAs by DHAs.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the responsibility for a family health services authority to ensure that adequate general practitioner cover is available to respite centres for carers and day centres for elderly or disabled people.

Dr. Mawhinney: A family health services authority may require a general practitioner included in its medical list to provide treatment at any place in his practice area, provided that there is no other doctor who, at the time of the request, is under an obligation to give treatment to that person.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish in the Official Report details of the administrative costs of administering the family health service authorities for England for each year since 1989-90; and what has been the percentage change since then for the latest possible year.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 16 March 1994]: The revenue expenditure on family health services authorities —in 1989-90, family practitioner committees—in England on administration was £67 million in 1989-90, £104 million in 1990-91, £136 million in 1991-92 and £162 million in 1992-93. The percentage change from 1989-90 to 1992-93 was 142 per cent. FHSAs manage the introduction of general practitioner fundholding, the monitoring of prescribing and the development of clinical audit in primary care—all initiatives aimed at improving the effectiveness of patient care and value for money the national health service receives from its investment in primary care services. In 1992-93, FHSA administrative expenditure represented only 2·5 per cent. of the £6·5 billion of taxpayers' money spent on the family health service.

Community Care

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 24 February, Official Report, column 356, what steps a member of community care staff with concerns about fraud or client abuse by their employer can take.

Mr. Bowis: It is the responsibility of social care staff to raise such issues with their line managers and with any other authority as appropriate.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures her Department takes to ensure that voluntary organisations and private providers of community care services have suitable complaints procedures in place.

Mr. Bowis: Voluntary and private providers of community care services are responsible for their own complaints procedures. If the service is being provided under a contract from the local authority, the local authority's own complaints procedures are available.

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she intends to bring forward legislation to replace regional health authorities.

Dr. Mawhinney: As soon as parliamentary time allows.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will be the names of the regional health authorities after 1 April.

Dr. Mawhinney: The following is the information:

Northern and Yorkshire
Anglia and Oxford
South Thames
North West
Trent
North Thames
West Midlands
South and West

St. Bartholomew's Hospital

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she intends to transfer the freehold of St. Bartholomew's hospital at Smithfield to the new Royal Hospital of St. Bartholomew, the Royal London hospital and the London Chest hospital national health service trust.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter which is currently being discussed by the trust project team and the North Thames Outpost.

Midwifery Supervision

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her policy on which is the appropriate body or person to make local decisions on midwifery supervision; what guidance or circulars have been issued in relation to this question; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The policy for local supervision of midwifery practice is set out in the Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Act 1979. In section 16(1)(a) it is specified that in England the local supervising authorities shall be the regional health authorities.

Guidance on supervision of midwives has been issued by the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting and the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting to the regional health authorities, and by them to the supervisors of midwives in their areas of supervision.

Hospital Staff

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when paragraph 330 of the terms and conditions for service for hospital medical and dental staff was last revised; and what was the effect of that revision.

Dr. Mawhinney: In 1981, when a reference to "an administrative medical officer of a regional hospital board" was deleted as no longer relevant.

Water Births

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take further steps to draw the attention of all NHS providers of maternity services, in relation to water births, to the recommendations of her expert maternity group that where there are no proven risks in any procedure, priority should be given to the expressed wishes of the mother-to-be.

Mr. Sackville: Circular EL(94)9 already sets out action required by national health service purchasers and providers to implement the recommendations of the expert maternity group within the next five years. Copies of this circular are available in the Library.

Adoption Registration Data

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she plans to take to increase the confidentiality of adoption registration data and to guarantee a standard, controlled procedure through which birth relatives may seek to re-establish contact with adopted adults; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: The means already exist for adopted adults and their birth parents or relatives to make contact by using the Adoption Contact Register, established in May 1991 and operated by the registrar general. I am studying the judgment of the Court of Appeal of 21 March concerning disclosure of information from the index to the Adopted Children's Register and will consider with the registrar general how best to reconcile access to the register with the need to protect confidentiality.

Mersey Regional Health Authority

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 18 March, Official Report, column 890, if she will indicate the number of full days per week, month and year which Sir Donald Wilson is expected to commit to his responsibilities as chairman of the Mersey regional health authority; where information about Sir Donald's attendance record is held; if she will request copies of that attendance record, and those of all chairmen of regional health authorities; and if she will make it her policy in future to hold centrally such information.

Dr. Mawhinney: Sir Donald Wilson was recently appointed as chairman of North West regional health authority and non-executive regional policy board member for that region. We have every confidence that he will fulfil these responsibilities with distinction and we have no intention of requiring him, or other non-executive members of the policy board, to report their daily involvement upon national health service business.

Dental Services

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental patients have been de-registered in each family health services authority since July 1992.

Dr. Mawhinney [pursuant to his reply, 17 March, c. 836-38]: I regret that there was an omission in the second sentence of my previous reply. It should read "Since July 1992 there has been a net increase of over 600,000 patients registered and an increase of 264 dentists in contract with family health services authorities".

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Offices

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many proposals there are in each English region, Wales and Northern Ireland for conversion of Crown to agency status post offices; and if he will list the affected offices in each case.

Mr. McLoughlin: I understand from the Post Office that consultation on a proposal to convert the following Crown post offices had (a) been completed but the conversion had not taken place by 21 March 1994 or (b) is currently in progress. The information is provided on the basis of Post Office Counters regions, except in the case of data for Wales and Northern Ireland which has been produced separately.

Mail Interception

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if the Security Service has been consulted during the Post Office review about mail interception procedures;

(2) what consideration is being given in his review of the future of the Post Office to changes to mail interception procedures;

(3) what consultations he has had in the course of his review of the future of the Post Office about mail interception procedures.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government would not make any proposals which did not deal satisfactorily with all relevant issues.

Heavy Commercial Vehicles

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the number of commercial vehicles on British roads weighing more than 7·5 tonnes; what was the proportion of imported vehicles in each year; and what factors underlie the trend in this proportion.

Mr. Needham: The number of vehicles over 7·5 tonnes licensed in the United Kingdom in 1988 and 1992 were 305,000 and 266,000 respectively. Data for the earlier years are not available. Figures for the proportion of imported vehicles in the total stock are not available. Data showing the volume of United Kingdom imports of vehicles over 7·5 tonnes are published by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders in "Motor Industry of Great Britain, World Automotive Statistics". This publication is in the Library of the House.

Mechanical Engineering Products

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the change in the volume of orders on hand for United Kingdom mechanical engineering products for supply to the United Kingdom market since 1989; what the corresponding figures are for Germany, France and Italy; whether he will publish a table showing the value and volume of output, imports, exports and consumption of mechanical engineering products in the United Kingdom and each of these countries in 1970, 1979, 1989 and 1992 together with the numbers employed; and when he expects United Kingdom orders for supply to the United Kingdom market to regain the 1989 level.

Mr. Needham: The United Kingdom information on the volume of orders on hand is regularly published in "Engineering Sales and Orders," published by CSO, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Corresponding figures for Germany, France and Italy are not readily available.

Some comparable information on the value of output and employment for 1979 and 1989 is available on the Eurostat Cronos database, which can be assessed via the Library of the House. Corresponding information for 1970 and 1992 is not readily available. The information requested on trade and the volume of output is not readily available. Information on consumption of mechanical engineering products is not collected. The Department does not make industrial forecasts.

Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the reasons for the difference between the rate of change in the level of United Kingdom exports according to table 6.5 of "Eurostat Basic Statistics of the Community, 1993" in (a) 1978 to 1989 and (b) 1975 to 1979.

Mr. Needham: The Department has not undertaken such an assessment.

Overseas Trade

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what was the value of Austrian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of apparel in SITC 84 and of Austrian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(2) what was the value of Austrian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of electrical machinery not elsewhere specified in SITC 77 and of Austrian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(3) what was the value of Austrian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of iron and steel and of Austrian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(4) what was the value of Austrian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of manufacturers of metal in SITC 69 and of Austrian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(5) what was the value of Austrian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of telecommunications equipment and sound recording apparatus and of Austrian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(6) what was the value of Austrian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of specialised machinery in SITC 72 and of Austrian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the prinicpal United Kingdom user industries;

(7) what was the value of Austrian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of power generating machinery and equipment and of Austrian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(8) what was the value of Austrian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of textiles, and so on, in SITC 65 and of Austrian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries.

Mr. Needham: The 1992 information can be found in "Commodity Trade Statistics 1992 Series D" Vol. XLII, Nos. 1-09 and 1-12, published by the United Nations, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Information on United Kingdom trade with Austria during 1993 is published in "Business Monitor MM20 Overseas Trade Statistics of the UK with Countries outside the European Community", published by CSO, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Information on principal products can be obtained from the sources listed above. Information on United Kingdom user industries of goods imported from Austria is not collected.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what was the value of Belgian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of manufactures of metal in SITC 69 and that of Belgian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(2) what was the value of Belgian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of iron and steel in SITC 67 and that of Belgian imports from the United Kingdom; what were the corresponding figures based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(3) what was the value of Belgian exports to the United Kingdom of textiles in SITC 65 in 1992 and of Belgian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(4) what was the value of Belgian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of photographic apparatus, optical goods and clocks and watches and of Belgian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(5) what was the value of Belgian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of miscellaneous manufactured products in SITC89 and of Belgian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(6) what was the value of Belgian exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of other transport equipment in SITC79 and of Belgian imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries.

Mr. Needham: Detailed information on trade statistics for Belgium and Luxembourg is classified together. The 1992 information can be found in "Commodity Trade Statistics 1992 Series D" Vol. XLII, Nos. 1-09 and 1-04, published by the United Nations, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Information on United Kingdom trade with Belgium-Luxembourg during the first three quarters of 1993 is published in "Business Monitor MQ20 Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom with Countries within the European Community", published by CSO, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Owing to the introduction of Intrastat, data across the two years may not be comparable at the detailed product level. Information on principal products can be obtained from the sources listed above. Information on United Kingdom user industries of goods imported from Belgium-Luxembourg is not collected.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what was the value of French exports to the United Kingdom manufactures of metal SITC 69 in 1992, and of French imports from the United Kingdom; what were the corresponding figures based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992, and in 1993, to date; and what were the principal products in each case together with the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(2) what was the value of French exports to the United Kingdom of vehicles in 1992, and French imports from the United Kingdom, the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date and the principal products in each case;

(3) what was the value of French exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of electrical machinery in SITC 77 and of French imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(4) what was the value of French exports to the United Kingdom of power generating machinery and equipment in 1992 and that of French imports from the United Kingdom, the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and in 1993 to date, the principal products in each case and the principal United Kingdom user industries.

Mr. Needham: The 1992 information can be found in "Commodity Trade Statistics 1992 Series D" Vol. XLII, Nos. 1-01 and 1-09, published by the United Nations, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Information on United Kingdom trade with France during the first three quarters of 1993 is published in "Business Monitor MQ20 Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom with Countries within the European Community", published by CSO, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Owing to the introduction of Intrastat, data across the two years may not be comparable at the detailed product level. Information on principal products can be obtained from the sources listed above. Information on United Kingdom user industries of goods imported from France is not collected.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what was the value of Finnish exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of iron and steel and of Finnish imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(2) what was the value of Finnish exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of road vehicles and of Finnish imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries.

(3) what was the value of Finnish exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of office machines and automatic data processing equipment in SITC75 and of Finnish imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries;

(4) what was the value of Finnish exports to the United Kingdom in 1992 of telecommunications and sound recording apparatus in SITC76 and of Finnish imports from the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding figure based on the United Kingdom trade returns in 1992 and 1993 to date; what were the principal products in each case; and which were the principal United Kingdom user industries.

Mr. Needham: The 1992 information can be found in "Commodity Trade Statistics 1992 Series D" Vol. XLII, Nos. 1-09 and 1-11, published by the United Nations, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Information on United Kingdom trade with Finland during 1993 is published in "Business Monitor MM20 Overseas Trade Statistics of the UK with Countries outside the European Community", published by CSO, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Information on principal products can be obtained from the sources listed above. Information on United Kingdom user industries of goods imported from Finland is not collected.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the United Kingdom current-weighted share of the volume of exports of manufactures by the main manufacturing countries between 1973 and 1990; and if he will make a statement on the changes.

Mr. Needham: The information is not readily available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions in the last five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. Heseltine: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to my right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on Tuesday 15 March 1994, Official Report, column 645.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he will publish for 1970, 1973, 1979, 1985 and each year from 1989 exports by each of the main manufacturing countries of textiles, mechanical engineering products, and road motor vehicles on a comparable basis to that used in compiling the tables in the article published in the 18 November 1966 issue of the Board of Trade journal, entitled "United Kingdom and World Exports of Manufactures in the Past Decade."

Mr. Needham: No.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the changes since 1973 in (a) the United Kingdom share of the volume of exports of manufactures by the main manufacturing countries, (b) the United Kingdom share of manufacturing output by these countries, (c) the volume of imports of manufactures from the rest of the EC as a ratio against United Kingdom output, (d) the rest of the EEC import penetration of the United Kingdom market for motor cars, (e) United Kingdom manufacturing output and (f) manufacturing employment.

Mr. Needham: The information on the United Kingdom share of the volume of exports by the main manufacturing countries to 1991 can be readily derived from table E1 of "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics" annual supplement 1992, published by CSO, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. More timely information is not readily available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

The information on the United Kingdom share of manufacturing output by the main manufacturing countries can be readily derived from the information contained in the OECD "Main Economic Indicators" database which can be accessed from the Library of the House, and from the OECD publications "National Accounts Vol. II" and "Main Economic Indicators", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

The information on the United Kingdom volume of imports of manufactures as a ratio against United Kingdom output post-1987 can be readily derived from data available on the Central Statistical Office database, which can be accessed via the Library of the House. Comparable pre-1988 information is not readily available and could only be produced at disproportionate cost.

The information on European Union import penetration of United Kingdom motor car market can be readily derived from "Motor Industry of Great Britain—World Automotive Statistics", published by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

The information on United Kingdom manufacturing output and employment can be readily derived from data available on the Central Statistical Office database, which can be accessed via the Library of the House.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what awards, or other forms of recognition, are made by his Department to individuals and companies from manufacturing industry.

Mr. Heseltine: The Department of Trade and Industry does not give any specific awards to individuals and companies from manufacturing industry.

It does, however, run the annual competition, SMART, for small and medium-sized enterprises of fewer than 50 employees and provides 180 awards of up to £45,000 each in the form of grants to help develop new products and processes. A second phase of the competition is also open to SMART winners and offers each of them up to a further £60,000 of grant support.

In addition, the Department co-sponsors many awards managed by private sector organisations; most are also open to the service sector. Examples of these awards are the export award for smaller businesses, the United Kingdom quality award and the best factory award.

The Department is also responsible for the work of the Queen's Awards Office, though recommendations to the Palace are made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Japanese Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the difference between the price index for Japan on page 31 of the January edition of OECD "Series A Monthly Statistics of Foreign Trade" and the index of average values on page 23; and if he will make a statement as to the effect of each on calculations of the competitiveness of Japanese exports to Britain.

Mr. Needham: Definitional differences between the two indices are a matter for the OECD. The effect of each index will depend on the exact nature of the calculations performed.

Auditing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which sections of the Companies Act 1989 relate to the prevention of lobbying on behalf of the auditing industry by recognised supervisory bodies.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: None. The recognised supervisory bodies are free to bring to my attention any matters which they consider relevant to the conduct of audit.

Jammu and Kashmir

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he has taken to date with the Indian authorities in respect of Madam Speaker's statement of 21 February, Official Report, column 21, regarding the document from Jammu and Kashmir; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 16 March 1994, Official Report, column 701.

Exports (Macedonia)

Mr. Sims: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to assist United Kingdom exporters whose consignments have been blocked by the Greek authorities en route to the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

Mr. Needham: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has made our concerns known to the Greek Government. We and other European partners are working to encourage the Greeks to lift the block on goods being transported to the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia via the port of Salonika. We regard the blockade as illegal. Our embassy in Athens successfully assisted a British company soon after the imposition of the blockade. Since then no British companies have made representations to the Department or to the embassy.

Nuclear Facilities (Accident Insurance)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the reason for the proposed increase in publicly funded accident insurance coverage for nuclear facilities set out in the draft statutory instrument on the Atomic Energy and Radioactive Substances Nuclear Installations (Increase of Operators' Limits of Liability) Order 1994.

Mr. Eggar: The order increases the liability limit of nuclear operators under the Nuclear Installations Act for third party nuclear damage from £20 million to £140 million. In the case of licensees of prescribed sites, the limit will increase from £5 million to £10 million.

As set out in the explanatory memorandum to the order, the increase is in line with the recommendation made in 1990 by the steering committee for nuclear energy of the OECD for countries which are parties to the Paris convention. A copy of the memorandum will be placed in the Library of the House.

Subsidence

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has for preventing fraud in the handling of money paid by the Coal Authority to contractors in respect of subsidence; and what response he has made to the recent letter from Mr. Neil Clarke to his Department on this matter.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 18 March 1994]: The Coal Authority will want to ensure proper procedures and safeguards to minimise the risk of fraud for all their functions, whether carried out by their own staff or contractors. They will doubtless wish to take account of considerations referred to by Mr. Clarke.

Scotch Whisky

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will include in the agenda for the forthcoming EU/Bulgaria associations agreement meeting the tariff levels and excise tax rates facing Scotch whisky and other imported spirits in Bulgaria.

Mr. Needham: Following representations from my Department to the European Commission, this matter has been placed on the agenda for the agricultural sub-committee of the joint committee of the EU/Bulgaria interim agreement, which takes place in Sofia on 23-25 March.

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he has raised with the Hungarian Government the effect on Scotch whisky exporters of Hungary's restrictive quota system applied to imported spirits.

Mr. Needham: My Department has been aware of the difficulties which importers of spirits face in this market for some time, and has raised these with Hungarian counterparts when appropriate.

We have agreed with the Scotch Whisky Association that, over the next few months at least, we may be of greatest help in supporting the industry's representations to the Hungarian administration. This we are doing, although recognising that progress may be difficult to sustain over the period of the Hungarian general elections which are due to be held in May.

Liquor Tax (Japan)

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action Her Majesty's Government plans to take following the Japanese Government's failure to implement in full the requirements of a 1987 GATT panel in regard to liquor tax as part of its budget proposals for 1994-95.

Mr. Needham: It is disappointing that the proposals in the budget currently passing through the Japanese Diet would merely reduce, rather than remove, tax discrimination against imported liquors.

My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the President of the Board of Trade and I have all made clear to the Japanese Government on every possible occasion that we expect the recommendations of the GATT panel to be implemented as soon as possible. We will be considering with our EU partners what further action can be taken.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 23 March 1994]: The information requested is shown in the table.

Number and value (including amendments) of consultancy contracts awarded by the Department of Trade and Industry, 1989-1993

Calendar Year	Number of Contracts	Value (£)
1989	415	26,578,000
1990	517	27,620,000
1991	597	38,491,000
1992	543	36,612,000
1993	402	29,369,000

The above figures exclude consultancy contracts let independently by the Department's executive agencies.

Fire Safety

Mr. Mans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the conclusions and recommendations of the review of fire safety legislation and enforcement he announced on 17th January.

Mr. Nell Hamilton: The review of fire safety legislation and enforcement by a Government scrutiny team was announced on 17 January and is still in progress. It is taking representations from anyone with an interest.

I am aware that there are some concerns about the wording in an early draft of a report by the construction industry deregulation task force which suggested that the Government's position is already settled. That was a mistaken claim by the authors of the report and does not represent the Government's position. The scrutiny team is due to complete its work by the end of May and an announcement will be made in due course against the background of the Government's commitment not to compromise safety standards.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by (a) himself and (b) the Solicitor General in February.

The Solicitor-General: (a) 48 received, 30 written and (b) three received, two written.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions in the last five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers answer parliamentary questions in accordance with paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers".

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list for the last 12 months how many parliamentary questions he has referred to one of his Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to his Department this represents.

The Solicitor-General: None.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 25 March 1994

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Ministerial Receptions

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the cost of receptions held by Ministers in his Department in 1993-94.

Mr. Waldegrave: The cost of receptions held by the Parliamentary Secretary and myself in 1993-94 has been approximately £5,400. Four receptions were held: service for the citizen conference reception (£3,229); two receptions for the media—summer (£742) and Christmas (£1,122); and a Christmas reception for staff (£300).

Furniture

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the cost of new furniture for his private office during the year 1993-94.

Mr. Waldegrave: The cost of new furniture for my private office and that of the Parliamentary Secretary in 1993-94 was £1,558.

Alcohol Consumption

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many bottles of (a) whisky and gin and (b) sherry and port were consumed by his private offices in 1993-94.

Mr. Waldegrave: My guests and I have consumed less than two bottles of whisky and less than half a bottle of gin in 1993-94. No sherry or port has been consumed.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the dates on which Ministers or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost to his Department of each flight.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor, accompanied by his private secretary, used Malaysian Airlines on official business between 30 March and 8 April 1993. The total cost to the Department for the flights was £8,510.

In July 1990 the keeper of the Public Record Office travelled on Malaysian Airlines to attend the International Council on Archives. This flight was paid for by the event organisers.

EDUCATION

GEST Programme

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the specific courses, the numbers following them, and the numbers successfully completing them, funded in the 1993-94 grant for education support and training programme for teachers of people with (a) hearing impairment, (b) visual impairment, (c) severe learning difficulties, (d) dyslexia, (e) other language and communication difficulties, (f) emotional and behavioural difficulties, (g) moderate learning difficulties, (h) autism, (i) physical disabilities and (j) other learning difficulties and special educational needs.

Mr. Forth: This information is not currently held centrally. The Department does, however, monitor the provision of training and is currently conducting a survey of local education authorities' use of grant 12 of the GEST programme.

Henrietta Barnett School

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what capital payments have been made to Henrietta Barnett voluntary-aided school in the past 10 years in respect of building works and refurbishment.

Mr. Forth: The Department's records show that, since January 1984, the sum of £303,000 has been paid in capital grant to the Henrietta Barnett school. A further sum of £2,771,000 has been paid in repair grant.

Pupils with Problems

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education on what date the first draft circulars on pupils with problems were distributed; to which categories of people they were automatically distributed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Distribution of the draft circulars began on 4 January 1994. They were sent automatically to all local education authorities, self-governing (grant-maintained) schools representative bodies, teacher unions, the main subject representative bodies, some acknowledged experts in the field and all individuals who had expressed an interest or had been involved in discussions with the Department beforehand. Some 16,000 further copies of the package have been sent free, on demand. The consultation period, which lasted 10 weeks, ended on 11 March.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps have been taken to distribute the code of practice on pupils with problems to all schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Subject to its approval by Parliament, the code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs will be distributed to all maintained schools.

Liverpool City of Learning Campaign

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what encouragement and practical support he is giving to the Liverpool city of learning campaign; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend warmly applauds the initiative of the higher and further education institutions in Liverpool, and the many partners with whom they are working, to ensure that continuing education plays a vital part in the social, cultural and economic development of the city. This is a local initiative, to which local support is the key. No financial or other support has been sought from the Department; and I understand that Professor Peter Toyne, who is leading the initiative, has explicitly said that he does not seek such support.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement about teachers' pay in 1994-95.

Mr. Patten: On 3 February the Prime Minister announced that the Government proposed to implement, with modifications, the recommendations of the School Teachers' Review Body for teachers' pay in England and Wales for 1994-95. After careful consideration of the representations I have received from the local authorities, the teachers' associations and others, I am today laying before Parliament a pay and conditions order bringing into force the increases of 2·9 per cent. which will apply from 1 April. Copies of this order are being sent to all maintained schools, to all local education authorities and to the teachers' and employers' associations.

Drafts of the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document 1994, which will set out the details of the changes to the pay structure which I propose should apply from 1 September, will shortly be sent to the relevant teachers' and employers' associations and to representatives of the governors of voluntary schools and grant-maintained schools. I shall be inviting their comments on the detail of the draft document and on the Department's associated circular of guidance.

Mathematics and Science Undergraduates

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish a table giving for every year since 1979 the total number of undergraduates in (a) mathematics, (b) physics, (c) chemistry, (d) all science subjects and (e) all subjects.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish a table giving for every year since 1979, and for every London borough, the total number of undergraduates in (a) mathematics, (b) physics, (c) chemistry, (d) all science subjects and (e) all subjects.

Mr. Boswell: Information for England is shown in the table:

Full-time and part-time undergraduates

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Pergau Dam

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what considerations underlay the decision to pay the assistance under aid and trade provision for the Pergau dam to the Tenaga power company and not to the Malaysian Government.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Malaysian Government requested that the soft loan should be made direct to Tenaga Nasional Berhad (TNB). The Malaysian Government took the view that TNB was still a public body and therefore entitled to benefit from preferential loans. Her Majesty's Government considered that, in principle, the Malaysian Government would recoup the concessionality of the loan through an enhanced share price when TNB was privatised, and therefore agreed to its request for the soft loan to be made direct with TNB. There was no commitment by the Malaysian Government to float TNB shares at any particular level and none was requested by Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contracts for the Pergau dam project in Malaysia were awarded to Kris Heavy Engineering and Construction; what work was covered by sub-contracts; and if he will list (a) the dates on which the contracts were awarded and (b) their individual value.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: None.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the supply of information technology to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to help reunite child refugees in the former Yugoslavia with their families.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I welcome UNHCR's efforts to help reunite child refugees in the former Yugoslavia with their families. We give UNHCR substantial financial and practical support for its relief programme in the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has received on the medical situation in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, the availability of gas and oil for essential heating purposes, and the availability of medical precursors to health authorities.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 21 March 1994]: We receive frequent reports from all United Nations agencies and ODA staff who are working on the ground throughout the former Yugoslavia. We are doing what we can to ensure that all victims of this conflict are given access to essential humanitarian supplies, including heating and medical assistance. To date we have committed some £171 million towards the humanitarian relief effort for the former Yugoslavia, including Serbia and Montenegro. The bulk of our direct bilateral assistance, totalling some £92 million to date, is focused on central Bosnia where the needs are greatest.

Sanctions applied under United Nations Security Council resolutions Nos. 757, 787 and 820 specifically exclude humanitarian supplies, subject to notification procedures in the United Nations Sanctions Committee. We have worked hard in this committee to ensure that all genuine humanitarian shipments are expedited, including the monitored delivery of heating oil by UNHCR to humanitarian institutions in the former republic of Yugoslavia.

EMPLOYMENT

Earnings

Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish tables showing the average hourly rate, excluding overtime, for part-time employees who are (a) male, (b) female, and (c) male and female for each year since 1980 in (i) Durham, (ii) Cleveland, (iii) Tyne and Wear, (iv) Cumbria, and (v) Northumberland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information available from the New Earnings Survey for part-time female employees and part-time adult employees in the counties of Durham, Cleveland, Tyne and Wear, Cumbria, and Northumberland is shown in the following table. There were too few part-time male employees in the New Earnings Survey samples for reliable figures to be produced for them.

Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish tables showing the average weekly and hourly earnings, exclusive of overtime, for each year since 1980, of full-time employees in the categories (a) male manual employees, (b) male non-manual employees, (c) female manual employees, (d) female non-manual employees, (e) male and female manual employees and (f) male and female non-manual employees in each of (i) Durham, (ii) Cleveland, (iii) Tyne and Wear, (iv) Cumbria, and (v) Northumberland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Tables 108, 109, 111 and 112 of part E of the New Earnings Survey report contain average weekly earnings, the weekly overtime component, and hourly earnings excluding overtime, for manual and non-manual male and female employees in each county. Copies of the reports for each year since 1980 can be found in the Library.

The corresponding information for manual and non-manual adults is provided in the following tables:

Workstart

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to extend the workstart pilot scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: We have decided to extend the workstart pilots for a further six months.

There are four pilots, two run by the Employment Service in south London and east Kent, and two by training and enterprise councils in Tyneside and in Devon and Cornwall. Each offers a financial incentive to employers who recruit eligible unemployed people. All of those helped by the scheme have been unemployed for a very long time—over two years in the east Kent and Tyneside pilots, and over four years in south London and in Devon and Cornwall.

The pilots began last summer, each with funding to place up to 250 people into employment by the end of March 1994. The rate of take up was initially slow, but it has improved significantly as the pilots have worked to match individual long-term unemployed people to specific vacancies put forward by employers.

To date, more than 400 people have been placed in jobs supported by the scheme—more than half of them in the last two months. I believe this is a significant achievement. A great many people who have found jobs through workstart might otherwise have remained unemployed for a further long period of time.

Each pilot will continue until the end of September to work towards the one thousand opportunities originally planned. There are, however, evident difficulties despite all the efforts of the TEC in matching very long-term unemployed people to vacancies in a rural area as large as Devon and Cornwall, and we are therefore making some changes to this pilot. I have asked the Employment Service to operate the scheme in Devon and Cornwall for the next six months, with eligibility extended to those who have been unemployed for two years or more, to see whether its wider network of local offices and the enlargement of the eligible group can improve performance.

There are still lessons to be learnt from the extended operation of the pilots, and evaluation will continue.

PRIME MINISTER

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

The Prime Minister: Sixty-nine appointments were made to bodies under Cabinet Office auspices. One was Asian (1·4 per cent.). None was black. Information on the ethnic origin of individuals is provided on a confidential basis. Names cannot therefore be given.

D-day Celebrations

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Prime Minister what public relations advisers have been retained formally or informally by the Government to assist in the promotion of the D-day celebrations.

The Prime Minister: Lowe Bell Communications has been appointed by the Department of National Heritage to help organise its programme of civilian events to commemorate the 50th anniversary of D-day landings.

European Union (Voting)

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 22 March, to the hon. Member for Durham, North (Mr. Radice), Official Report, column 134, which two European Union member states are being particularly difficult in opposing the United Kingdom's position on qualified majority voting in the Council of Ministers after enlargement of the Union.

The Prime Minister: Belgium and the Netherlands have been particularly insistent that the United Kingdom must give way on the issue of qualified majority voting.

Nursery Education

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Prime Minister what his aims are for nursery education in the United Kingdom and the role he sees for the various organisations and agencies concerned.

The Prime Minister: More than 90 per cent. of three and four-year-olds already receive nursery education or other pre-school provision in the public or private sector.

The Government's policy is to promote diversity, choice, quality and cost-effectiveness. Our long-term ambition is availability for all those who want it, and we are exploring possible ways of extending opportunities for the under-fives as resources allow.

I regret that in my oral answer to the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) in the House on Tuesday 22 March, Official Report, column 132, I inadvertently referred to universal nursery education provided in Westminster, when I had instead intended to refer to Wandsworth and its policy of offering nursery class places to all pupils during the year before they reach compulsory school age. This contrasts with the Isle of Wight which provides a negligible number of maintained nursery school and class places.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Young Offender Units

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many private companies have expressed an interest in receiving from his Department the specifications on the design of, and the regime in, the proposed five secure training units for young offenders.

Mr. Maclean: A total of 25 United Kingdom registered companies have expressed an interest in tendering for the financing, designing, building/refurbishing, operating and maintaining of five secure training centres.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were seeking asylum in Britain at the latest available date; what were the comparable figures for (a) March 1992 and (b) March 1993; and how many current asylum seekers are (i) at liberty, (ii) in detention centres, (iii) in police cells and (iv) in prison.

Mr. Charles Wardle: At 28 February 1994—the latest date for which the information is available—an estimated 47,100 applications for asylum in the United Kingdom, excluding dependants, were outstanding. The corresponding estimates for 28 February 1992 and 28 February 1993 were 60,400 and 43,700 respectively.

On 21 March 1994 a total of 645 people who had sought asylum were detained. This figure includes people awaiting the setting of directions for removal following refusal of the application, as well as those whose application was under consideration or subject to appeal. Of this figure, 363 were in detention centres, 35 in police cells and 247 in prison.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers held at Campsfield house immigration detention centre have been transferred to Prison Service accommodation and for what reasons since 1 March; to which Prison Service establishments they were transferred; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Ten people who had sought asylum have been transferred from the immigration detention centre, Campsfield house to Prison Service accommodation since 1 March because of their disruptive behaviour.

Four were transferred to Birmingham prison, three to Blakenhurst, two to Bullingdon and one to Holloway.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are currently held in detention; and how many of them were in (a) Campsfield house immigration detention centre, (b) Harmondsworth immigration detention centre, (c) other immigration service accommodation, (d) Haslar Home Office holding centre, (e) Dover young offenders centre and (f) other Prison Service accommodation.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The available information shows that on 17 March 1994 a total of 654 people who had sought asylum at some stage, including those who are awaiting removal or the determination of an appeal, were held in detention. The numbers held in the establishments listed in the question were as follows:

	Number
(a) Campsfield house detention centre	174
(b) Harmondsworth detention centre	88
(c) Other immigration service accommodation	31
(d) Haslar holding centre	91
(e) Dover young offenders institution	23
(f) Other Prison Service accommodation	211
Total	618

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost of keeping asylum seekers in custody per head for each of the past three years; and what has been the total cost in each of those years.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The available information does not identify separately those detention costs which relate to people who have sought asylum.

Fire Service

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has had from the Fire Service concerning his proposals on fire safety requests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The review of the Fire Precautions Act 1971 was referred to in terms of reference of the current inter-departmental scrutiny on fire safety enforcement. Publication of the report of the review was intended to inform public debate on the options available and facilitate responses to the enforcement scrutiny. Interested parties have been sent copies of the report and I understand that a number of representations have been made by the Fire Service to the scrutiny team.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future responsibility of the Fire Service for all aspects of fire safety in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The fire safety enforcement scrutiny which began on 17 January is reviewing the operation and effectiveness of all fire safety legislation for which the Home Office, Department of the Environment and Health and Safety Executive have policy responsibility. The scrutiny is also examining the organisational arrangements of all bodies and agencies responsible for enforcing such legislation. Any decision about the need for changes to the legislation and those responsible for enforcing it must await the outcome of that scrutiny.

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Fire Service spent on information technology and communications in 1992-93 and 1993-94, by authority; and what are the spending plans for 1994-95.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Expenditure on information technology and communications is a matter for individual authorities and detailed information is not held centrally.

Mr. Ian Smalley

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has made to the United States Justice Department regarding the extradition of Mr. Ian Smalley from the United States.

Mr. Maclean: None. The offences for which Mr. Smalley is wanted in the United Kingdom are not covered by the US-UK extradition treaty of 1972.

Police Service

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the police service spent on information technology and communications in 1992-93 and 1993-94, by constabulary; and what are the spending plans for 1994-95.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Details of capital expenditure on information technology and communications in 1992-93 are set out in the table. Figures for 1993-94 are not yet available. Spending plans are not held centrally.

Miscarriages of Justice

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of alleged miscarriages of justice cases which were held by C3 division at his Department in 1993 or for the latest date available.

Mr. Maclean: At the beginning of 1993, 207 representations were under consideration; 663 new representations were received during the year, and 650 representations were concluded; 173 representations were under consideration at the end of the year.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average time taken to investigate an alleged miscarriage of justice by his Department during 1993 or for the latest year available; and how many cases which are currently being examined by the C3 division of his Department, at the latest date available, have been outstanding for more than 12 months.

Mr. Maclean: Excluding cases over 12 months old, the average time taken in 1993 to complete consideration of an allegation of wrongful conviction was 43 days. On 1 January 1994, there were 23 cases which had been under consideration for more than 12 months.

Court of Appeal (Referred Cases)

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases were referred to the Court of Appeal following investigation by his Department in each of the last five years.

Criminal Cases Review Authority

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made towards establishing the proposed criminal cases review authority recommended by the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice.

Mr. Howard: I have today published a discussion paper, "Criminal Appeals and the Establishment of a Criminal Cases Review Authority". The paper sets out the issues to be settled before any new arrangements for the investigation of alleged miscarriages of justice can be put in place, discusses how these might be resolved and asks those interested to comment by the end of May. I think the paper will be of considerable interest to a great many people and I look forward to hearing their views.

I have placed a copy of the paper in the Libraries of both Houses.

TREASURY

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 10 March, Official Report, column 330, what was the statistical basis for his statements that the advertisements increased public awareness of the circulating standard £5 coronation anniversary crown and that there were significant increases in the number of crowns issued after the advertisements appeared.

Mr. Nelson: The advertising campaign for the circulation standard £5 coronation anniversary crown sought to encourage sales.

The effectiveness of the advertising was measured by sample surveys. These showed that the numbers of people who knew about the coins increased from 10 per cent. to 43 per cent. after the advertisements had been shown. The surveys also showed that most people knew that the coins could be obtained from banks and post offices. Of those people who had seen the advertisements, 47 per cent. had seen them in the press, and 39 per cent. on television.

The coins were issued to the public by banks and post offices and sample information given to the mint showed a fourfold increase in the demand for the coins after the television advertisements were shown.

Bank of England

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff are employed by the economics division of the Bank of England; at what cost to the Exchequer directly or indirectly; and whether he will propose that that division should be contracted out to the private sector.

Mr. Nelson: The Bank of England employs around 75 people in the economics division including secretarial, clerical and information technology staff. The costs of these functions are in effect met by the bank's income from non-interest bearing deposits placed with the bank by the banking sector. There is no cost to the Exchequer.

I understand that the bank has no plans to contract out this function.

Economic Policies (Environmental Implications)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what matters in regard to the environmental implications of economic policies were discussed during his dinner with Vice-President Gore in Detroit on 14 March.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We discussed the environmental implications of a range of economic issues.

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the most recent Council meeting of European Economic and Finance Ministers.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Economic and Finance Council of the European Union (ECOFIN) met in Brussels on 21 March. I represented the United Kingdom.

The Council heard a report from the President of the Court of Auditors on the Community's 1992 budget. The Council agreed to recommend that the European Parliament grants a discharge to the Commission on the 1992 budget. The recommendation calls upon the Commission to report back on specific areas criticised by the Court of Auditors and on any follow-up action the Commission takes. I and others emphasised the importance the Council attached to improving financial management and tackling fraud in the Community budget. Later in the day the Commission trailed its forthcoming strategic programme for the fight against fraud in 1994. The Commission welcomed my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary's proposal for action under title VI.

The Council reached political agreement on the budget discipline decision. It will now go to the European Parliament for conciliation. The text of the decision makes clear that the guideline limit may only be increased or exceeded by unanimous decision of the Council and a 1997 deadline will be applied to the special arrangements for dealing with agrimonetary costs. The Council also agreed a declaration providing for a formula-based adjustment of the guideline to take account of enlargement.

The Council discussed the new own resources decision but agreement on this was not possible because Italy maintained a general political reserve.

The Council discussed balance of payments assistance to the countries of central and eastern Europe. The Council agreed to provide 110 million ecus in assistance to Bulgaria in support of the proposed International Monetary Fund programme. The Commission indicated that it would put forward proposals for a further 40 million ecus of support to Bulgaria and 125 million ecus for Romania. These proposals will be considered in due course.

The Council discussed the convergence programme of Denmark which covers the period 1994 to 2000. The Council applauded the aim of the Danish authorities to fulfil the convergence criteria outlined in the treaty on European union in 1996, although Denmark is not committed to participating in stage 3 of economic and monetary union. However, it raised questions on some elements of the programme. In particular, it considered the assumptions on the revival of private sector expenditure slightly optimistic. These assumptions play an important role in the achievement of the programme's main targets, which include a reduction in unemployment and a reduction in the fiscal deficit following an initial temporary loosening.

The council took note of reports on follow-up work by the Commission on the White Paper and agreed to require the Economic Policy Committee to report regularly on member states' progress in implementing labour market reforms.

As requested by the December ECOFIN the Commission presented an interim report on contacts with non-member states on the proposed withholding tax on savings in the EU. The Commission's final report is expected later this year but it was made clear to the Council that any proposals on this subject would be unlikely to secure United Kingdom agreement.

The Council took note of an appeal by the Commission to make faster progress on the proposed directive on withholding taxes on interest and royalties.

The Commission presented its recommendation on the taxation of non-residents, noting that it would evaluate the extent to which member states had followed the recommendation.

There were no formal votes on issues discussed in the Council.

Personal Investment Authority

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he proposes to meet Mr. Joe Palmer and Ms Colette Bowe of the Personal Investment Authority to discuss its future.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 24 March 1994]: My right hon. Friend and I meet members of the regulatory bodies from time to time.

Economic Forecasting

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider modifications to the Treasury's methods of economic forecasting in order to take into account the impact of environmental factors on the economy.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 24 March 1994]: The Treasury will continue to use the current system of national accounts as the basis for its economic forecast. However, the Central Statistical Office and Department of the Environment are engaged in the long term development of environmental accounts and indicators to provide information about the impact of environmental factors on the economy. This work is still in its early stages, but an illustrative set of accounts was published in Economic Trends in November 1992.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the dates on which occupants of his office or officials of the Council have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost to his Department of each flight.

Mr. Newton: No occupants of my office and no Privy Council officials have used the Malaysian airline MAS in the course of official business since 1985.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what proposals the Committee has to provide nappy changing facilities for the children of hon. Members and staff.

Mr. Ray Powell: The Committee has no proposals to meet this specific requirement.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what facilities exist in the House for child care.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: None. The matter is under consideration.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Committee of the Catering Committee what is the Committee's policy on special provision for children; and how many child high chairs are available in each catering outlet at the House.

Mr. Colin Shepherd: The Committee has not so far considered any specific policy on provision for children. I understand from the Director of Catering Services that the Refreshment Department has two high chairs which are available on request.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has to make provision in the current year for day care for the children of hon. Members and their staff.

Mr. Newton: I have no plans to make such provision. It is up to individual Members to make arrangements to suit them and their staff.

Newspapers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what is his Committee's policy in respect of the removal of newspapers from 7 Millbank; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: This is a matter for the Serjeant at Arms.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Soley: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, whether male staff of the House are eligible for paternity leave.

Mr. Beith: Heads of Department may grant special leave, with or without pay, to staff for domestic or compassionate reasons, including up to two days special paid leave to fathers on the birth of a child or within a few weeks of the birth.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Lord President of the Council on how many occasions in the past five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. Newton: I answer parliamentary questions on the basis set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". I also seek to comply with the Speaker's guidance on the need for brief answers to oral questions.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Lord President of the Council what were the costs attributed for answering written parliamentary questions tabled by the hon. Member for Teignbridge (Mr. Nicholls) on 16 December 1991 at columns 22-25, by the hon. Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) on 18 January 1990 at columns 382-89, by the former hon. Member for Pembroke, Mr. Bennett on 25 May 1989 at columns 695-719, by the hon. Member for Epping Forest (Mr. Norris) on 6 May 1988 at columns 628-44, and by the former hon. Member for Darlington, Mr. Fallon on 11 May 1987 at columns 4-14.

Mr. Newton: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister stated in answer to a question from the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 13 January 1992 at column 468, the answer to my hon. Friend, the Member for Teignbridge (Mr. Nicholls) of 16 December 1991 was estimated to have cost £1,520. Figures for the other answers are not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Social Security (Incapacity for Work) Bill

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the estimated savings to his Department arising from the provisions in the Social Security (Incapacity For Work) Bill to abolish payment to claimants with adult dependants under the age of 60 years and where there is no payment for children.

Mr. Scott: The information is in the table.

	£ million
1995-96	15
1996-97	40

Note:

Estimates are expressed in constant 1993-94 prices and are net of offsetting expenditure on income-related benefits. They are rounded to the nearest £5 million and take account of all other changes proposed in the Social Security (Incapacity for Work) Bill.

Sickness Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of sickness benefit now receive increases of benefit for adult dependants under the age of 60 years where there are no children in the household; how many people on sickness benefit in April 1995 he estimates will fail to receive an increase for an adult dependant after that time; and what are the estimated savings to his Department of abolishing increases for adult dependants to people on short-term incapacity benefit.

Mr. Scott: The information is as follows:

(i) it is estimated that around 10,000 adult dependency increases (ADIs) of sickness benefit (SB) are paid to people with a spouse under 60 with no dependent children[1];

(ii) no one receiving an SB ADI at the point of change in April 1995 who continues to meet the existing entitlement conditions for payment of SB ADIs will have that increase withdrawn unless or until they become entitled to long-term incapacity benefit (IB) after 52 weeks incapacity;

(iii) the proposals for payment of ADIs of short-term IB are expected to yield savings of around £10 million in 1995-96 and £15 million in 1996-97[2].

Notes:

[1] Estimate derived from 1 per cent. of SB recipients combined with information from the 1989, 1990 and 1991 Family Expenditure Surveys.

[2] Estimates are expressed in constant 1993-94 prices and are net of offsetting expenditure on income-related benefits. They are rounded to the nearest £5 million and take account of all other changes proposed in the Social Security (Incapacity for Work) Bill.

Benefits (Take-up)

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when benefit take-up figures for 1990 and 1991 will become available.

Mr. Hague: Estimates of income related benefit take-up for 1990 and 1991 have today been published by the Government statistical service. Copies of its report have been placed in the Library.

Invalidity Benefit

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have applied for invalidity benefit on grounds of the new disability provision within the invalidity benefit rules, by benefit agency area, since the rule change in September 1993; how many of these applications have been on grounds of bronchitis and emphysema; and, of these, how many applications have been (a) turned down and (b) accepted by benefit agency area.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were currently receiving housing benefit in (a) Durham, (b) Cleveland, (c) Tyne and Wear, (d) Cumbria, and (e) Northumberland, for each year from 1980; and if he will include the most recent figures for housing benefit claimants in these areas which are available.

Mr. Hague: The available information is in the table.

	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93	August 1993
Durham	57,000	56,000	56,000	55,000	56,000	58,000
Cleveland	55,000	54,000	53,000	54,000	55,000	57,000
Tyne and Wear	147,000	143,000	139,000	138,000	141,000	143,000
Cumbria	27,000	27,000	27,000	28,000	30,000	31,000
Northumberland	23,000	22,000	22,000	22,000	23,000	23,000

Source: The Housing Benefit Management Information System Quarterly caseload counts.
Notes:
1. No reliable information is available prior to 1988.
2. Estimates are included for non-responding authorities.
3. Housing Benefit has been defined as rent rebate and rent allowance.
4. All figures are rounded to the nearest 1,000 and are in benefit units, not individuals; couples are counted as one unit.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the financial target of the Child Support Agency for the current year; and to what extent it has been met.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Matthew Banks, dated 25 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security, about the financial target for the Child Support Agency in the current year.

The Secretary of State set the Agency a benefit savings target of £530 million for the year 1993-94.

We are not yet able to provide an assessment of the level of benefit savings that the Agency will achieve in the year because of uncertainties caused by the effect of the recent policy changes.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many absent parents have been traced by the Child Support Agency; how many are paying; and how much money has been collected.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Matthew Banks, dated 25 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of absent parents traced by the Child Support Agency, the number paying, and the money collected.

As at 31 January, the Agency had issued maintenance enquiry forms to 381,000 absent parents. These included 19,000 absent parents whose whereabouts were not known prior to the Agency's involvement in tracing them. Two thirds of the enquiry forms have been returned leading to the completion of over 170,000 maintenance assessments.

With regard to how many absent parents are paying, the Child Support Computer System records client's details on an individual case by case basis, and it is not currently configured to produce information on the total number of absent parents paying maintenance.

Information on the amount of money collected is, however, available. As at 31 January, £181 million had been collected. This includes money paid via the Agency, and also directly to the parent with care for the absent parent.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what percentage of those who have been contacted by the Child Support Agency have previously made no contribution to the maintenance of their first family;

(2) what percentage of those targeted by the Child Support Agency are subject to court orders and have already been contributing to the maintenance of their first families.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive, She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Matthew Banks, dated 25 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about absent parents and whether they were maintaining their children before the Child Support Agency assessed their cases.

Up to 31 January 1994, the latest date for which figures are available, the Agency issued maintenance enquiry forms to 381,300 absent parents, of which 170,700 have resulted in the assessment of maintenance. Figures are not kept on the number of cases in which a prior maintenance agreement existed. It is estimated however, that 56 per cent. of cases taken on will not have had an existing arrangement, and 44 per cent. will have had an existing maintenance agreement, a proportion of which would include court orders.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what money has been received as a result of the activities of the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. David Ashby, dated 25 March 1994:

I am repling to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the money collected by the Child Support Agency.

As at 31 January, £181 million had been collected. This includes money paid via the Agency, and also directly to the parent with care from the absent parent.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of the assessments carried out by the Child Support Agency are in respect of fathers who pay nothing towards the support of their children.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. David Ashby, dated 25 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of absent parents who were not maintaining their children before the Child Support Agency assessed their cases.

Up to 31 January 1994, the latest date for which figures are available, the Agency issued maintenance enquiry forms to 381,300 absent parents, of which 170,700 have resulted in the assessment of maintenance. Figures are not kept on the number of cases in which a prior maintenance agreement existed. It is estimated however, that 56 per cent. of cases taken on will not have had an existing arrangement.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Civil Rights (Disabled Persons) Bill

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will carry out a cost/benefit analysis of the proposals in the Civil Rights (Disabled Persons) Bill.

Mr. Portillo: I have been asked to reply.

No, but I understand that the Secretary of State for Social Security is in the process of preparing a compliance cost assessment.

WALES

Farmers (Suicides)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for the last five years (a) the number of suicides among farmers in Wales, (b) the proportion of suicide cases per 1,000 among farmers in Wales and (c) the average suicide rate for Wales.

Mr. Redwood: The information requested is given in the following table:

Residents of Wales

	1988	1989	1990	1991	1992
Number of suicides[1] of farmers	9	8	10	9	6
Suicides per 1,000 farmers	0·26	0·23	0·29	0·26	0·17
Suicides per 1,000 total residents	0·08	0·07	0·08	0·08	0·09

Council Tax

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total cost of the valuation exercise, including the appeals process, since the introduction of the council tax.

Mr. Redwood: The cost of the valuation banding exercise was £4·81 million. In 1993-94 the voted provision for the Valuation Office Agency for council tax, including the handling of appeals and new valuations, is £2·53 million. Valuation of tribunal costs for council tax appeals to date are small and cannot be separately identified.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average cost of each appeal against council tax evaluations.

Mr. Redwood: The estimated average cost of dealing with each council tax banding appeal is some £115.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Harrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the standard spending assessment for education for each Welsh education authority.

Mr. Redwood: There is no standard spending assessment for education for Welsh local authorities. The standard spending assessments for county councils in Wales include provision for education.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will consult (a) hon. Members and (b) local authorities during his review of the working of (i) the Welsh Development Agency and (ii) the Development Board for Rural Wales.

Mr. Redwood: I have no plans at present for a review of the Welsh Development Agency. I have already written to hon. Members about the review of the Development Board for Rural Wales. Local authorities will also be consulted.

Correspondence

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his practice to sign personally letters in reply to hon. Members which are written in the Welsh language.

Mr. Redwood: I sign all my replies to hon. Members' letters. However, I do not sign letters I do not understand. Therefore, when I reply in bilingual form to letters written in Welsh, I will sign the English version only.

Departmental Projects

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for each department within his office details of each project of less than £100,000 which has been contracted out to the private sector during 1992-93 and 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not available and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the dates on which Ministers or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost to his Department of each flight.

The Solicitor-General: No such flights have been made.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Management Systems

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much his Department's computer-aided facilities management systems cost; from whom they were purchased; how many person hours were required to commission them; what the estimated and actual saving has been from their operation; and to what extent the use of such systems accounts for the apparent rise in theft noted in his answer to the hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell) of 18 February, Official Report, columns 1012-14.

Mr. Eggar: The Department uses computerised databases to collect among other things information on the theft of equipment. They contributed some data in the answer of 18 February to the hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell). The Department's main asset register uses packaged software supplied by Britannia Software PLC and has been run by the Department's Accounts Services Agency in Newport since 1 April 1993. In 1993-94 the cost of operating the register is expected to be approximately £80,000. Three staff are employed on the work. The Department's executive agencies maintain their own computerised assets registers using mainly Britannia or Sun software. While it is too early to quantify the direct savings from these asset registers, availability of data is likely to highlight theft in the short term while helping to reduce it in the long term.

Time Zones

Dame Angela Rumbold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what estimate his Department has made of the cost to British business of the one-hour time difference between the United Kingdom and continental Europe;

(2) what studies his Department has commissioned on the advantages for British businesses of a harmonisation of the United Kingdom's time zone with that of the rest of continental Europe; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what representations his Department has received on the subject of Britain's time zone.

Mr. Sainsbury: My Department has made no estimate of the cost to British business of the one hour time difference and has commissioned no studies on the advantages of harmonising time zones. My Department has received a small number of representations.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial resources his Department commits to (a) nuclear safeguards and (b) nuclear safety.

Mr. Eggar: In 1993-94 my Department expects to spend £1·7 million on nuclear safeguards support programmes and £2 million on its nuclear safety and health programme.

Manufacturing Challenge

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the progress of the manufacturing challenge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I welcome the progress of this business-to-business programme in the north-east and my Department is fully supporting it. I am encouraged that a number of projects are being developed targeted on priorities identified by the regional business community and discussions are continuing between manufacturing challenge and programmes in other regions of the country.

Rolls-Royce Aeroengine

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will state the total expenditure on, and receipts expected from, Rolls-Royce in respect of launch aid estimated up to 1 April; and what expenditure and receipts are planned for 1994-95 to 1996-97 for Rolls-Royce.

Mr. Sainsbury: Rolls-Royce has received £505·5 million in launch aid (at current prices) and has paid receipts of approximately £292 million up to 1 April this year.

No launch aid expenditure for Rolls-Royce is currently planned for the years 1994-95 to 1996-97. Rolls-Royce currently estimates repayments of £82·5 million for these years.

Chemical Industry

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library the results of his study into the competitive success of the British chemical industry.

Mr. Sainsbury: I have placed a copy of Dr. Jon Bird's study, "Competitiveness in the United Kingdom Chemical Industry", from which commercially sensitive information has been deleted, in the Library of the House. The study was a preliminary investigation into this important area and is being circulated for consideration by experts in the industry and will be used as a basis for further discussion between my Department and the chemical industry.

Engineering Steel Industry

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will next be meeting the European Council of Ministers to discuss the engineering steel industry.

Mr. Sainsbury: The next meeting of the Council of Industry Ministers is due to take place on 22 April 1994. The agenda for the meeting is not yet available, but current steel issues will be discussed.

Radiocommunications Agency

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to increase the charge made by the Radiocommunications Agency in cases of interference to domestic broadcast reception where complainants ask the agency to inspect their equipment.

Mr. McLoughlin: I have decided that there should be a modest increase in the charge from £31 to £35. This charge is applicable when the private sector is unable to effect a cure and complainants ask for an inspection by the agency. It is the first rise in two years and is in line with rises in costs in the private sector.

The work of curing domestic interference, which is often due to poor immunity to unwanted signals in television and radio receiving equipment, should be done in the first instance by the private sector. This enables the Radiocommunications Agency to devote greater resources to investigating illegal radio use and to business radio users. In 1993 the agency received 556 requests for help with interference to broadcast reception.

There is still no charge for investigating a named source of interference.

Collieries (Ministerial Visits)

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list which collieries he has visited and those where he has made an underground visit (a) since taking his present office and (b) since the publication of "Prospects for Coal".

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has not visited any collieries since taking up his present office. However, as Minister for Energy, I have visited Ollerton, Rufford, Whitemoor, Ashfordby and Bilsthorpe. The visits to Ashfordby and Bilsthorpe took place after the publication of the coal review White Paper and all except Bilsthorpe included a visit underground.

Civil Servants

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department (a) the total number of persons employed and (b) the percentage of this figure who are women.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 17 March 1994]: The information requested in respect of permanent staff in post on 16 March 1994 is set out in the following table:

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Arts Council Membership

Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he will announce the membership of the Arts Council of England.

Mr. Brooke: In December I announced that Lord Gowrie would be the first chairman of the Arts Council of England. I have today appointed the following to the council:

Professor Christopher Frayling
Maggie Guillebaud
Peter Gummer
Sir Ernest Hall
Thelma Holt
Michael Holroyd
Clive Priestley
Stella Robinson
Prudence Skene
Robert Southgate

Announcements on the remaining members will be made in due course. I have also written to Lord Gowrie setting out the main tasks and objectives for the chairman and council, and a copy of that letter has been placed in the Library.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 March 1994]: Since it was established in April 1992, my Department and its two agencies have entered into 58 contracts with consultants. The cost has been £5·13 million in 1992-93 and £3·15 million in 1993-94.

HEALTH

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for the last 12 months how many parliamentary questions she has referred to one of her Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to her Department this represents.

Mr. Sackville: No such referrals have been made during the last 12 months.

Nurses and Midwives

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish details of the numbers of qualified NHS nurses and midwives, unqualified NHS nursing staff and nursing learners representing these as a percentage of the total NHS nursing and midwifery staff, including Project 2000 students for each year since 1989.

Mr. Sackville: The information available is shown in the table.

Whole time equivalent	1989	per cent.	1990	per cent.	1991	per cent.	1992	per cent.
Total nursing and midwifery staff plus project 2000	398,050	100·0	398,360	100·0	402,700	100·0	397,080	100·0
Qualified nursing and midwifery staff	242,190	60·8	242,340	60·8	243,250	60·4	246,570	62·1
Unqualified nursing and midwifery staff	90,880	22·8	90,450	22·7	90,550	22·5	90,850	22·9
Learners	63,310	15·9	58,840	14·8	47,340	11·8	34,740	8·7
Others	1,680	0·4	3,730	0·9	11,050	2·7	6,630	1·7
Project 2000	—	—	3,000	0·8	10,500	2·6	18,300	4·6

The number of qualified staff has gone up both as an absolute figure and as a proportion of the overall NHS work force.

London Ambulance Service

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the expenditure on the London ambulance service for each of the past five years; what is the budget for the current year and for the next financial year; what representations have been made to him by the London ambulance service about the adequacy of such expenditure; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Government are committed to providing sufficient revenue and capital to the London ambulance service to ensure an improving ambulance service in the capital.

The London ambulance service identifies revenue as:

Year	Including capital charges £ million	Excluding capital charges £million
Actual
1988-89	n/a	46.3
1989-90	n/a	[1]53.0
1990-91	n/a	51.3
1991-92	66.5	59.8
1992-93	72.2	64.0
Budget
1993-94	75.5	67.8
1994-95	78.3	71.0

[1] 1989-90 includes additional costs during the ambulance dispute.

The LAS received extra revenue of £6·8 million in 1993-94, and in this coming financial year (1994-95) an extra £14·8 million will be invested in the LAS, tied to specific improvements in performance. The extra resources will enable the LAS to recruit an additional 240 front-line staff and will also buy 120 new ambulances, replacing a third of its fleet.

Spongiform Encephalopathies

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many recorded human deaths from spongiform encephalopathies there have been in the United Kingdom in each year since 1964; and how many of each were diagnosed as being specifically Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease.

Mr. Sackville: Surveillance of human spongiform encephalopathies (SEs) in the United Kingdom is primarily concerned with the identification of cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (CJD). However, since 1990 when the UK CJD surveillance unit was established, there have been improvements in the methods of identification of Gerstmann-Strausser-Scheinker syndrome, an extremely rare familial form of human SE. There have also been considerable advances in the methods of identification of human SEs generally since the 1960s.

The tables show recorded cases of CJD and GSS from 1964-1993. During this period there have been five separate studies using differing methodologies. The figures are therefore not directly comparable.

Table 1: CJD by year of onset (Retrospective study: England and Wales)

[1] 12 from 1 January to 30 April. 18 from 1 May to 31 December.
[2] Provisional total.
[3] One of these patients is still alive.

The final figure for 1993 may show some increase over the provisional total as diagnoses of people dying in 1993 is confirmed restrospectively. It is most unlikely, however, to reach the 1992 figure.

Hospital and Community Services

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many written complaints have been made relating to hospital and community services by type of complaint and method of investigation in each year since 1979 to the latest available date.

Dr. Mawhinney: Details for England about written complaints for hospital and community services from 1981 to 1991-92 will be placed in the Library.

The increase over the last 10 years shows the impact of three factors. Firstly, the greater awareness of the complaints procedure; secondly, the reinforcement in the patients charter of the right to have a complaint dealt with thoroughly and quickly; thirdly, an increase in willingness on the part of the health service personnel to listen to the patient.

General Practitioners

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to commission a medical audit of the quality of treatment being received by (a) patients of fundholding general practitioner practices and (b) patients of non-fundholding general practitioner practices, and what studies have already been carried out.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have no plans to do so.

Limb Defects

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will widen the Government's examination of the incidence of babies born with missing hands in coastal areas to include evidence of similar defects in Germany; and if she will involve the Medical Research Council in this wider inquiry;

(2) when the inquiry announced by the Government into the incidence of babies born with deformed or missing hands in coastal areas will announce its findings; and what further action her Department has taken regarding this issue.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 1 March at column 678. In the light of the reports of similar limb defects in the German North sea coastal region, the Department is in contact with the relevant German authorities for further information.

Commercially Sponsored Posts

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what restrictions exist and what guidance has been issued regarding commercially sponsored posts in the national health service.

Dr. Mawhinney: Guidance about commercially sponsored posts in the national health service is contained in departmental circular HSG(93)5, copies of which are available in the Library.

National Continence Week

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what projects her Department instigated in respect of national continence week.

Mr. Bowis: The Department granted extra funding to the Continence Foundation to set up a full-time telephone helpline for members of the public. Nearly 2 million posters, leaflets and stickers advertising this helpline and encouraging sufferers to seek treatment were distributed. A national newspaper advertising campaign carried the same message. The Department also sponsored a national conference of women's organisations on "Women and Continence" and helped continence advisers and commercial organisations to run local events around the country.

Women Employees

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women returning to work in the NHS in each of the last five years following maternity leave or a career break returned to a job of similar status to that which they left; and what measures she has taken in that time to ensure that this takes place.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally.

General Whitley Council agreements (sections 6 and 10 of the council's handbook) provide for an employee who has taken maternity leave or a career break to return to a job of similar status. Copies of the handbook are available in the Library.

Ambulance Service

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the ambulance service spent on information technology and communications in 1992-93 and 1993-94, by authority; and what are the spending plans for 1994-95.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Hospital Closures, London

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by (a) health authority, (b) borough and (c) year all London hospitals closed since 1978.

Mr. Sackville: Information is available centrally only on hospital closures since 1988 which were initially contested by community health councils and remained contested throughout the consultation period. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 23 March at cols. 231-32.

Appointments (FHSAs)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give details of all individuals appointed to chair family health services authorities and serve as non-executive directors, listing their occupation and sex; and if she will list any known political affiliations of those appointed.

Dr. Mawhinney: The names of family health services authority chairmen and their occupations at the time of their appointment, where known, are listed. Regional health authorities are responsible for the appointment of the non-executive members. The political affiliation of chairmen and non-executive members of health authorities plays no part in their appointment and would be known at the time of appointment only if an appointee was pursuing a public career at that time. Current political affiliations are not known.

Directors

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give a breakdown, by health authority or NHS trust, of the numbers of directors, both executive and non-executive, and their chairmen who are currently aged over 70 years.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 24 March 1994]: Currently there are four chairmen and 12 non-executive directors of NHS trusts and four chairmen of national health service authorities who are aged 70 or over.

Regional Health Authority Headquarters

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the tenure of the North West regional health authority headquarters premises, Gateway house, Piccadilly, Manchester;

(2) what is the tenure of the Merseyside regional health authority headquarters premises, Hamilton house, Pall Mall, Liverpool.

Mr. Sackville [pursuant to his answer, 22 February, column 207]: I regret that my previous reply was incorrect. It should read

"Hamilton house is the freehold property of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health. Gateway house is held on lease until February 2010."

DEFENCE

AWE Aldermaston

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current total estimated cost of the new capital works projects at AWE Aldermaston.

Mr. Aitken: The current total estimated cost of the major programme of capital works at AWE Aldermaston is £1·2 billion.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the plutonium processing laboratories in the A90 complex at AWE Aldermaston are expected to become operational.

Mr. Aitken: The radioactive commissioning of the plutonium processing laboratories in the A90 complex commenced on 15 March 1994. This activity will be phased over some two years during which time plutonium processing will progressively transfer from existing facilities.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest estimated total cost of rectifying the problems in the A91 building at AWE Aldermaston.

Mr. Aitken: The cost of rectifying the problems in the A91 building at AWE Aldermaston is in the region of £15 million exclusive of value added tax.

It is not our normal practice to disclose commercially confidential information, which is given in this instance with the agreement of the contractor.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long the A1 building at AWE Aldermaston is to remain operational under current plans.

Mr. Aitken: Under current plans it is expected that the A1 building at AWE Aldermaston will remain operational until early 1996.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long the A45 building at AWE Aldermaston is to remain operational under current plans.

Mr. Aitken: The majority of work currently in progress at A45 will progressively transfer to A90, as it becomes operational over the next two years. Under these plans A45 will remain in operation for the foreseeable future.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the A91 building at AWE Aldermaston to become fully operational.

Mr. Aitken: The A91 building at AWE Aldermaston is expected to become fully operational in 1997.

PINDAR Bunker

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the expenditure on the PINDAR bunker in each year of design and construction work.

Mr. Aitken: Details of expenditure for project PINDAR civil works by financial year are as follows:

	£ million
1984-85	0·1
1985-86	0·6
1986-87	2·4
1987-88	6·6
1988-89	6·7
1989-90	9·3
1990-91	24·5
1991-92	7·6
1992-93	8·2
1993-94	0·3
Total	66·3

Submarine Reactor Cores

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the expected timetable for the introduction into service of the replacements for the used core transport package flasks that were used by his Department for the transport of submarine reactor cores.

Mr. Aitken: The contract for the design and build of new purpose built transportation containers for the Royal Navy's nuclear submarine used fuel is expected to be placed later this year with the first delivery some three years later. For the interim period a contract was placed in December last year to procure two commercial containers which we expect should allow licensed transportation to resume later this year.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of delivery of vehicles and containers for the transport and storage of nuclear weapons in the former Soviet Union.

Mr. Aitken: Good progress is being made towards the provision of 250 nuclear weapons containers (supercontainers) and 20 vehicles which are being gifted to Russia to help with the disposal of surplus nuclear weapons. We expect deliveries of the first equipment to commence shortly. The estimated cost of the total package is £35 million at current prices.

Polaris

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any decisions have yet been taken on the methods of disposal for United Kingdom Polaris missiles and their components.

Mr. Aitken: Decisions have now been taken on the methods of disposal for most elements of United Kingdom Polaris missiles. Surplus components are being disposed of to best advantage; where this involves disposal for scrap, relevant legislation and conventions are being fully observed.

Strategic Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will define the terms strategic and sub-strategic as currently used by his Department.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, on 23 March at column 290.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current estimated cost of procurement of the European fighter aircraft for the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Aitken: The estimated total project cost comprising the costs of development, production and integrated logistic support, (assuming a United Kingdom offtake of 250 aircraft) is some £13·45 billion at September 1993 prices.

Ammunition

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to providing ammunition fitted with armour piercing, fin stabilised, discarding sabots to British tank and artillery forces; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Fin stabilised, discarding sabot ammunition has been in service with British tank regiments since 1982. It is not suitable for use by artillery forces.

Defence Sales

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each Government-to-Government or memorandum of understanding defence sales agreement since 1979, with the date of signing and indicating in each case whether all or part of the sales under the agreement had Crown status and were exempt from export licence controls; and in each such case how exemptions were reported to Parliament.

Mr. Aitken: Exports of defence equipment by Her Majesty's Government to: (a) the Government of Saudi Arabia, under the terms of the Al-Yamamah arrangement signed in 1985, 1986 and 1988, and (b) to the Government of Kuwait under the memorandum of understanding signed on 2 December 1992, have Crown status. As such, they do not require a licence. They are, however, assessed under the normal foreign and defence criteria.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which defence sales carried out since 1979 on behalf of International Military Services Ltd., Defence Sales Export Organisation, or Royal Ordnance or British Aerospace whilst in public ownership, carried exemptions from export licence controls.

Mr. Aitken: Only those sales made by Royal Ordnance through the sales/supply organisations of the Defence Export Services Organisation had Crown status. Although no export licences were required, such exports took account of foreign and defence policy considerations.

Arms Transportation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any Royal Air Force VC-10 cargo plane has been used to transport arms to Iran since 1979.

Mr. Aitken No.

Depleted Uranium Shells

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in which countries the depleted uranium imported by his Department for use in anti-tank penetrator shells originated; and what collaborative research is being undertaken with other countries that manufacture such shells.

Mr. Aitken: The depleted uranium used in my Department's anti-tank ammunition development programmes has been imported, by the contractors, from the United States of America.

My Department has undertaken a collaborative research programme with the United States, France and Germany to examine the feasibility of developing a 140 mm tank round. As part of the programme depleted uranium penetrators have been considered. This programme is now almost complete.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information his Department gathered as a result of the research conducted by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment into prophylactic protection against chemical and germ weapons; and how this was used to help protect British service men in Operation Granby.

Mr. Hanley: This is a matter for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (CBDE) under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from G. Pearson to Mr. Llew Smith, dated 25 March 1994:

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what information his Department gathered as a result of the research conducted by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment into protection against chemical and germ weapons; and how this was used to help protect British Service Personnel in Operation GRANBY has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment is to ensure that the UK Armed Forces have effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of this work the potential hazard of possible chemical and biological warfare agents is assessed and the effectiveness of British protective measures evaluated.

3. Effective protective measures against chemical and biological weapons necessitate a portfolio of capabilities:

(a) Hazard Assessment. The implications and evaluation of the potential hazard should such agents and weapons be utilised against British forces.

(b) Detection and Warning. The detection of an attack prior to inhalation of a harmful concentration and the provision of warning to units located in the downwind hazard area. Identification of the nature of the particular agent facilitates the assessment of the downwind hazard area and of the duration of the hazard and enables appropriate medical countermeasures to be taken.

(c) Physical Protection. The provision of effective protection for the respiratory tract and for the body. This may be provided either as individual protection or collective protection ie the provision of facilities supplied with filtered air in which individual protection does not need to be worn.

(d) Contamination Control. Some agents such as mustard and some of the nerve agents are persistent and present a long term hazard. Action needs to be taken to decontaminate personnel and equipment contaminated with such agents.

(e) Medical Countermeasures. The provision of prophylactic or pretreatment measures which enhance the ability of the body to withstand attack by chemical orbiological agents and the provision of therapy after exposure to chemical or biological agents.

4. The Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment has over the years built up a group of scientists with the expertise in these areas and skills to apply their scientific and technical knowledge to ensure that the UK Armed Forces are provided with the best possible protective measures.

5. When the United Kingdom sent its forces to the Gulf in Operation GRANBY it was with the knowledge that they would be facing Iraqi forces experienced in the use of chemical weapons. It was also assessed that Iraq had the capability to manufacture and use biological weapons.

6. During the Gulf conflict of late 1990/early 1991 the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down was directly engaged in ensuring that the British Service personnel were as well protected as possible against the possible use of chemical or biological weapons by Iraq. Some two thirds of the senior staff of the Establishment were involved directly in providing advice at least part of the time.

7. Our assistance covered a wide range of areas:

(a) Hazard assessment. Advice was provided on the potential implications should Iraq use chemical or biological weapons. Information was provided for example on the effect of the local environment on the duration of the hazard and on the optimum deployment of detection systems to give the most effective warning of such attacks.

(b) Detection. The existing detection equipment was extended so as to provide audible warning should chemical agents be used against UK Armed Forces. The capabilities of in-service equipment were extended so that all chemical agents which Iraq was assessed to posses would be detected. An expedient biological detection system was developed and deployed to the Gulf together with a supplementary identification capability. In addition, kits for the sampling and identification of biological and chemical agents were produced and deployed so that in the event of an attack, appropriate samples would have been taken and returned to this Establishment for analysis.

(c) Protection. Advice was given on the optimum use of available physical protective measures and on collective protection including the incorporation of air conditioning systems.

(d) Contamination management. Advice was provided on the likely duration of the hazard had chemical or biological weapons been used by Iraq and consequently on how that hazard might have been further reduced by appropriate decontamination techniques.

(e) Medical countermeasures. The effectiveness of existing medical countermeasures against agents assessed to be possessed by Iraq were evaluated and confirmed. In addition, advice was provided on appropriate medical countermeasures to be taken against the potential use of biological weapons by Iraq.

8. The contributions made by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment ensured that the protection available to the British Armed Forces was the best possible.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates on which Ministers or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost to his Department of each flight.

Mr. Aitken: Detailed information of this nature is not readily available without incurring disproportionate cost.

Atomic Weapons Research Establishment

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the contractorisation of the Atomic Weapons Research Establishment is included in the £850 million of civil service work won by private companies which was announced on 7 March.

Mr. Aitken: Yes.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the leasing of Tornado F3 aircraft to Italy.

Mr. Aitken: We are discussing with the Italian MOD detailed arrangements for the lease of 26 RAF Tornado F3 aircraft to the Italian air force. I hope to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Quality Assurance

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has to withdraw recognition of defence contractors claiming quality management assurance systems certification, which has been certified by institutions or companies which are not qualified to offer such certification by the National Association of Certification Control Bodies.

Mr. Aitken: The MOD recognises only contractors quality management system certifications which have either been:

(a) granted by certification bodies who hold appropriate accreditation through the National Accreditation Council for Certification Bodies (NACCB), or

(b) subject to assessment by MOD, or

(c) can be shown to be acceptable to another NATO MOD.

Armed Forces (Complement)

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what adjustments have been made to the size of the British armed forces since April 1992 due to changed strategic circumstances.

Mr. Hanley: The Government's plans for force restructuring over the time scale given in the question are detailed in the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1992 (Cm 1981) and 1993 (Cm 2270) and subsequent ministerial statements.

"Options for Change"

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a declassified version of the paper written by the former Minister of State for Defence Procurement, Mr. Alan Clark, as part of the "Options for Change" exercise.

Mr. Aitken: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so.

TRANSPORT

British Rail Staff

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total number of employees employed by British Rail in all staff categories in each financial year from 1990-91; and what are the projections for (a) 1994-95, (b) 1995-96 and (c) 1996-97.

Mr. Freeman: The table gives figures for 1990-91 to 1992-93 and the latest figures for 1993-94. Projections for future years are not available.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the dates on which Ministers or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost to his Department of each flight.

Mr. MacGregor: The information requested is not available in the form requested back to 1985. However, Ministers in this Department have not used Malaysian Airlines Services (MAS) during the last two years.

Rail Privatisation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total cost to public funds of rail privatisation to date.

Mr. Freeman: At March 31, the total cost to public funds of rail privatisation incurred by the Department of Transport, the Office of the Rail Regulator, the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising, British Rail and Railtrack, is expected to be around £92 million. The Government have made full financial provision to BR and Railtrack to meet their costs so there is no question of these costs affecting fares or the quality of passenger services. Privatisation costs are small in relation to the size of the railway businesses involved, the massive reorganisation taking place and the benefits that this will bring.

Seat Belts

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the requirements laid down by United Kingdom and EC legislation for the fitting and wearing of seat belts in minibuses and coaches; which legislation applies to each requirement; and if he will make a statement on the possibility of further requirements being legislated for.

Mr. Key: Regulations 46 and 47 of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 (SI 1986/1078) as amended, have required seat belts to be fitted to the front seats of minibuses and exposed forward-facing seats of coaches, since 1 October 1988. EC directives 76/115, 81/575, 82/318 and 90/629 in respect of seat belt anchorages and 77/541, 81/576, 82/319 and 90/628 in respect of seat belts, make, for new vehicles, similar provisions on seat belt fitment to the current United Kingdom regulations.

United Kingdom legislation (SI 1992/3105, SI 1993/31 and SI 1993/176) requires seat belts to be used wherever they are available in the front seats of all vehicles and in the rear seats of minibuses with an unladen weight of 2,540kg or less. It is illegal to carry an unrestrained child in the front seat of any vehicle. EC Directive 91/671 requires seat belts to be used in the front seats of vehicles of less than 3·5 tonnes and, where fitted, in the rear seats of cars with up to 8 passenger seats.

We are considering the technical and cost implications of fitting seat belts to all seats in minibuses and coaches and hope to publish the conclusions shortly.

Passengers Charter

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 104, concerning the passengers charter, whether rail franchisees will be required in their own passengers charters to commit themselves to standards of service, and levels of compensation to passengers when these standards are not met, that are no less favourable than those in the relevant British Rail passengers charter.

Mr. Freeman: Yes.

Channel Freight Services

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the cost advantage of the use of a through rail freight service for the journey across the channel compared to the costs of using (a) the conventional roll-on, roll-off ferry and (b) the road-rail ferry service; and to what extent there are likely to be differences in cost for transporting goods from, rather than into, the United Kingdom.

Mr. Freeman: It is for industry to decide which mode of transport to use. Distribution costs are a matter for commercial negotiation and will depend upon individual circumstances, such as volumes carried and frequency of service.

Rail Services (Wales)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations regarding rail services he has received from local authorities in Wales during 1994.

Mr. Freeman: I have received a number of representations covering a wide range of issues relating to railways in Wales including those from Clwyd county council, Gwynedd county council, Dyfed county council, and Maesteg town council.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his assessment of the impact of the Budget on housing in the Doncaster area.

Sir George Young: Householders in Doncaster, and throughout the country, have benefited from the steady reduction in interest rates over the last few years, from the new opportunities for home ownership that we are creating through rent to mortgage and the expansion of cash incentive schemes which release housing for those in greatest need; and from the prudent approach to public finances and the sound basis for economic growth which my right hon. and learned Friend set in place in his Budget.

As far as housing expenditure is concerned, significant reductions were made at a national level in provision for both local authority and housing association capital expenditure. Doncaster has, however, benefited from our policy of taking account of performance in allocating resources: our assessment that its performance improved from average last year to above average this year has been reflected in its increased share of regional resources, from 4·1 per cent. in 1993-94 to 4·5 per cent. in 1994-95. The authority's basic housing investment programme allocation in 1994-95 is £5·3 million.

In addition, Doncaster has been allocated £1·5 million in 1994-95 to continue work on the Stainforth estate action scheme, which when complete will have attracted £9·1 million in additional resources from the government. Doncaster could benefit from the in-year reallocation of specified capital grant resources for private sector renovation, as it has in previous years. The total Housing Corporation programme, including the tenants incentive scheme and do-it-yourself-shared-ownership will enable 197 units to be provided in 1994-95. The actual effect of housing allocations will depend on local decisions and priorities.

I hope to see Doncaster and all local authorities making maximum use of the opportunities for drawing private finance into housing, developing partnerships with the local private rented sector, and involving all those with a contribution to make in their efforts to tackle local housing need.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the size of the outstanding debt for each local authority for which he has responsibility, together with any balances from capital receipts which have not been used to reduce debt; and what are the annual costs of servicing the debt, together with income from the balances.

Mr. Baldry: The available information has been placed in the Library of the House.

London (Consultation Document)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to publish the information received from his recent consultation document on London.

Sir George Young: We aim to publish a digest of responses later this month.

Assets

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the assets (a) in total and (b) per head of population of (i) Manchester, (ii) Birmingham, (iii) Lambeth, (iv) Southwark, (v) Liverpool, (vi) Hackney, (vii) Leeds, (viii) Sheffield, (ix) Haringey, (x) Newham, (xi) Lewisham, (xii) Newcastle-upon-Tyne, (xiii) Salford, (xiv) South Tyneside, (xv) Coventry, (xvi) Hammersmith and Fulham, (xvii) Bristol and (xviii) Wakefield.

Mr. Baldry: No information is currently available on the capital value of assets held by individual local authorities.

Private Residential Homes

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 18 March, Official Report, column 890, if he will list those concessions and rebates applicable to residents of private residential homes under the Rating (Disabled Persons) Act 1978.

Mr. Baldry: Section 2 of the Rating (Disabled Persons) Act 1978 sets out the rebates which could be granted to the occupier of institutions for the disabled in England and Wales for years up to and including 1989-90. Full rebates in respect of rates chargeable were granted in respect of hereditaments used for the purposes set out in section 2(2) of the Act. The hereditament must have been used either wholly for one or more of the purposes listed, or partly for one or more of the purposes listed and partly for ancillary purposes.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Malta

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy towards Malta's application to join the EC.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We have welcomed the prospect of Maltese accession. The Commission's opinion on Malta's application identified institutional problems that would have to be addressed and a number of Maltese economic reforms that would be necessary before they can become members of the EU. In the interim, and before accession negotiations begin, the Government are looking at ways of maintaining a dialogue with the Maltese about accession matters.

Foreign Affairs Council

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council held on 22 March.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I attended the Foreign Affairs Council held in Brussels on 22 March.

The Council discussed the qualified majority voting arrangements which will apply once the EFTAn applications have joined the European Union. We again emphasised the need to ensure the adequate protection of significant minorities in the Council and the democratic legitimacy of Community decision-making. Our Spanish colleagues supported us. Other Ministers continued to argue that the qualified majority should be kept constant as a proportion of the total number of votes after enlargement. It was not possible to find a solution to this question. The matter will probably be discussed again at the informal Foreign Affairs Council on 26-27 March.

The number of seats on the European investment bank management committee after enlargement was also discussed, but no agreement reached.

The Council reached agreement on the remaining non-institutional aspects of the accession negotiations. Political agreement was reached on a declaration on less-favoured area coverage for Finland and Swedish access to Baltic cod.

There were no formal votes.

SCOTLAND

Procurators Fiscal

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement indicating, for each of the procurators fiscal in Scotland, in how many cases involving a fatality the procurator fiscal has decided to take no further proceedings in each of the last five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is not readily available and could not be obtained except at disproportionate cost.

Common Services Agency

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his plans for the future of the building division of the Common Services Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The Government are committed to a publicly funded health service with national health service units firmly within the public sector. However, health service managers should concentrate their skills on core activities of the NHS, using their expertise to seek best value for money in the provision of non-core services.

The work of the building division of the Common Services Agency (CSA) is a non-core activity and its ability to adapt and to develop the skills and services that it can provide in a changing world is constrained within the public sector. Following a review of the options for the future, my noble and learned Friend and I have agreed in principle that the opportunity should be taken to invite tenders for a management buy-out or from the private sector to take over the business as a going concern.

The CSA board has been asked to consider how this can be taken forward and to draw up an implementation plan. A prospectus will be issued by the board. When all bids received have been evaluated, the board will make recommendations to my noble and learned Friend.

Fishing

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet representatives of the Scottish Fishermen's Federation to discuss fishing management for the Scottish inshore fleet in the North sea.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 14 March 1994]: I meet representatives of the SFF regularly, but have no current plans for a meeting. Discussions about fish conservation have been held between Scottish Office officials and representatives of the SFF, and further discussions may be necessary in due course.

Wild Birds

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list details of all current licences issued to kill wild bird species, including the premises and the wild bird species concerned.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 24 March 1994]: The information requested is as follows:

Species	Premises	Number of licences
Cormorant	Fish farm/Put and take fishery	8
Goosander	District Salmon Fisheries Board (DSFB)	1
Goosander/Cormorant	DSFB/Put and take fishery	4

Disabled Employees

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many registered disabled people are employed in his Department; and what percentage this is of the total.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 23 March 1994]: There are 81 registered disabled people—1·3 per cent. of staff—who are recorded as employed in my Department. However, in a recent anonymous staff survey about disability in the workplace, which covered an additional 2,058 Scottish Office staff in associated departments and on loan and secondment, 131—(1·6 per cent.—indicated that they were currently registered disabled.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Case Procedure Reform

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps the Lord Chancellor is taking to reform the procedures for handling cases in the High Court and the county courts.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor has asked Lord Woolf to examine the procedures used in the civil courts. Lord Woolf will aim to improve access to justice and reduce the cost of litigation. He will also seek to reduce complexity and modernise terminology.

Legal Aid

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the desirability of availability of legal aid for disputes between groups of pensioners and their pension funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government have no plans to make legal aid available for groups, but civil legal aid is available to individuals pursuing most types of action through the civil courts of England and Wales subject to tests as to their means and the merits of their case.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Details of the number of staff in each civil service grade by (a) male and (b) female, and by (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees are set out in the tables.

Council Tax

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidelines he has issued in relation to the council tax liability for those domestic staff required to live in at judges' lodgings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Those staff required to live in at judges' lodgings are, as a condition of their employment, subject to a service licence and are required to pay rent. As resident licensees, they are consequently liable to pay the council tax, based on an assessment of the accommodation which they occupy. The staff concerned have been advised of the position.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Isle of Man

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of state for National Heritage when he last met the Minister of Tourism of the Isle of Man with a view to the co-promotion of the island's heritage, Celtic traditions and recreational facilities in north America and the Pacific rim.

Mr. Sproat: Neither I nor my right hon. Friend have met the Minister of Tourism of the Isle of Man to discuss the promotion of the island's attractions abroad. The British Tourist Authority has no obligation under the 1969 Development of Tourism Act to represent the Isle of Man. However, it does offer representational services and I understand that it is currently in discussion about new proposals to represent the Isle of Man in certain overseas markets.

Quangos

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the number of quangos for which he is responsible; how much in public funds has been given to each quango in each of the last three years; what is the current staffing establishment of each quango; and what it was five years ago.

Mr. Sproat: This information is available in "Public Bodies 1993" and earlier editions of the same publication. Copies of all editions are available in the Library of the House.

Rules and Regulations

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of state for National Heritage how many rules and regulations his Department has passed in each of the last three years.

Mr. Sproat: My Department was established in April 1992. Between then and the year end, it passed four regulations. In 1993, it passed 34 regulations and so far in 1994 it has passed six regulations.

Sports Facilities

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what discussions he has had with the Central Council of Physical Recreation concerning the loss of sports facilities and planning legislation as it relates to sports sites.

Mr. Brooke: My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary had discussions with representatives of the Central Council of Physical Recreation, on 2 March, to discuss a number of sports issues, including briefly the national register of recreational land.

TRANSPORT

Executive Agencies

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further progress he has made in transferring the executive functions of his Department to agency status; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I am establishing three further executive agencies in my Department with effect from 1 April: the Highways Agency, the Coastguard Agency and the Marine Safety Agency. I have set clear aims and objectives for each of the agencies and I am placing clear responsibility for the management of the agencies on their chief executives. I will look to the chief executives for improvements in efficiency and effectiveness and in the quality of the services the agencies provide. The aims and objectives of each agency and the chief executives' reponsibilities are set out in the agencies' framework documents; copies of which will be placed in the Library when published.

Each year, I shall set these agencies demanding efficiency and service targets, which will be published in annual business plans. The agencies will also publish annual reports; again, copies of these, and the business plans for 1994-95, will be placed in the Library.

The Highways Agency has some 2,400 staff, and has a headquarters office in London. The agency will be responsible for managing and maintaining the existing motorway and trunk road network in England and for delivering the Government's road programme. I believe that the increased focus on managing the network as a whole, which is reflected in the agency's aim and objectives and in the targets in the road users charter and charter standard statement—"Your Home and Trunk Road Proposals"—which I will publish shortly, will result in a better quality of service for users of the trunk road network and those who are affected by traffic on it and improvements to it. Following an open competition, I have appointed Mrs. Lawrie Haynes, formerly with British Aerospace, to be the agency's first chief executive.

The Coastguard Agency has some 580 staff, the large majority of whom are uniformed coastguard officers, and has its headquarters in Southampton. The agency will be responsible for discharging the Government's responsibilities for civil maritime search and rescue and combating oil and chemical pollution from ships where there is a threat to United Kingdom interests. Following an open competition, I have appointed Mr. Chris Harris, formerly director of the Department's marine emergencies organisation, to be the agency's first chief executive.

The Marine Safety Agency has some 410 staff, and has its headquarters in Southampton. The agency will be responsible for implementing the Government's strategy for marine safety and the prevention of pollution from ships. Following an open competition, I have appointed Mr. Robin Bradley, formerly a serving Royal Navy officer, to be the agency's first chief executive.

I wish the chief executives and their staffs every success for the future. I am confident that these new arrangements will enable them to provide yet further improvements in the services they provide while giving better value for money.

Where right hon. or hon. Members have queries about matters relating to the operation of the agencies, I hope they will write in the first instance to the chief executives, I and my hon. Friends the Ministers for Roads and Traffic and for Transport in London and my noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping will continue to deal with questions of policy and resources, or where there is dissatisfaction with an agency's reply.

Isle of Man

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the Minister for Transport of the Isle of Man to discuss transport links and matters of common interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I have not met the Isle of Man Minister for Transport. However, my noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping met the hon. David North MHK, Isle of Man Minister for Highways, Ports and Properties, on 2 March to discuss matters of mutual interest.

Rail Costs

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of additional costs in overall rail subsidy which will be necessary to pay for consultants and to cover additional administration arising out of rail franchising.

Mr. Freeman: It is not possible to separate the costs specifically associated with franchising from the overall cost of restructuring the railway industry. Although there will be some additional administration costs arising from the restructuring of the railway in April, we believe that, over time, these will be more than offset by the efficiency savings privatisation will bring.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is his estimate of the financial effects of rail franchising of the services subsidised by passenger transport authorities or executives on routes where track is shared with InterCity or Regional Railways where charges are currently made only for marginal costs; and what is his estimate of the financial effects on such services of the requirement to pay a proportionate share of administration costs;

(2) what effect changes in charging procedure as a result of rail franchising will have in respect of subsidies for services subsidised by passenger transport authorities or executives; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what is his estimate of the percentage increases in passenger transport executive Railtrack access charges for 1994-95, 1995-96 and 1996-97, compared to the present charges for each executive.

Mr. Freeman: It is not possible to draw a direct comparison between the various elements of the charges currently paid by the passenger transport executives to BR under their section 20 agreements, under which the PTEs have paid the net marginal cost of their services to BR, and the charges that will apply under the new regime, under which PTE services will carry an appropriate share of infrastructure charges and central overheads. From April 1994 the PTEs will be treated on the same basis as the franchising director, paying subsidy to the company operating their services, which will in turn need to pay access charges to Railtrack.

We expect the headline cost to PTEs of maintaining existing service levels to increase under the new regime, but we have undertaken to cover the increased cost in 1994-95 by making special grant payments to them, and, thereafter, to enhance the provision made in the section 20 bolt-on for their constituent metropolitan district councils.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of the channel tunnel rail link route, that he announced in his statement of 24 January, Official Report, columns 19-34, will be in tunnel.

Mr. Freeman: About 23 per cent. of the 108 km route of the new channel tunnel rail link route announced in January will be in tunnel, although final decisions on the route at Pepper Hill and Ashford may affect this figure.

Rail Fares

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the most recent available comparisons of rail fares per mile or kilometre throughout the EEC and non-EEC European countries.

Mr. Freeman: Comparative data of the kind requested are not available to the Department.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what statistics his Department has for each of the last four years on the number of accidents involving heavy goods vehicles where the operator of the heavy goods vehicle is found not to hold a heavy goods vehicle operator licence.

Mr. Key: The information necessary to provide the statistics requested is not at present collected; consideration is being given to how these statistics might be collected in the future following a meeting with the Association of Chief Police Officers, the Vehicle Inspectorate and the Local Authorities Co-ordinating Body on Trading Standards last December.

Personal injury road accident data are collected by the police and reported to the Department: those accidents involving heavy goods vehicles where the operator does not hold an operator's licence are not at present distinguished from those where such a licence is held by the operator. The Department is pursuing with the Association of Chief Police Officers and individual police forces how more precise statistics might be provided.

Ministerial Receptions

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost of receptions held by Ministers in his Department in 1993-94.

Mr. MacGregor: The cost of receptions held by Ministers in this Department in 1993-94 was £3,038·21.

Stansted Airport

Mr. Kenneth Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport at what date it is forecast that Stansted airport will be operating at full capacity as indicated by the new air traffic forecasts recently published by his Department; and what assessment he has made of the effect on this of doubling the air passenger duty in real terms.

Mr. Norris: The air traffic forecasts published by the Department of Transport provide aggregate forecasts for the London airports, and regional airports. They do not provide forecasts for individual airports. The forecasts of the working group on runway capacity to serve the south-east—RUCATSE—indicated that Stansted would reach capacity around 2015; this would require an increase in the air traffic movement limit from its present level of 78,000 movements. No assessment has been made of the effect of doubling the air passenger duty.

New Car Registrations

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of new car registrations for each of the last eight quarters for (a) Doncaster and (b) South Yorkshire; and what were the comparable figures for (i) five and (ii) 10 years ago.

Mr. Key: The requested information for 1993, 1992 and 1988 is given. Comparable figures for these two areas for the year 1983 are not available.

Kingkerswell Bypass

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to start work on the Kingkerswell bypass; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The future progress of this scheme depends on the outcome of our review of the national trunk road programme. We will announce the results of the review shortly.

Railway Staff, Redundancies

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he intends to take to fill the skills gap left by the departure of experienced railway managers and staff with the restructuring of the railway industry on 1 April.

Mr. Freeman: Recuitment and retention of staff are matters for employers in the industry.

Quarried Stone, Rutland

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will require the transport of quarried stone, for the purpose of any quarrying of limestone between Market Overton and Thistleton in Rutland, to be taken by rail according to the original planning consent of 1954.

Mr. Freeman: This is a matter for the county planning authority.

ENVIRONMENT

Birch Coppice

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he made the decision to set aside his decision of 2 August 1993 to refuse British Coal's application to opencast at Birch Coppice in Warwickshire.

Mr. Baldry: As the hon. Member is aware, my Department issued a decision letter on 2 August 1993 refusing planning permission in respect of British Coal's application to opencast at Birch Coppice in Warwickshire. British Coal exercised its right to challenge that decision in the High Court on 6 September 1993. Having considered the grounds of the challenge, my Department instructed the Treasury Solicitors to submit to judgment on certain aspects of the challenge in February 1994. We are currently awaiting for the court to determine the matter.

If the court decides to quash the Secretary of State's decision, the appeal will then be referred back to the Secretary of State for him to redetermine. It does not follow that the original decision will automatically be overturned and permission granted.

In accordance with rule 18 of the Town and Country Planning Inquiry Procedure Rules, the Secretary of State will send to the persons entitled to appear at the inquiry who appeared at it a written statement indicating the matters in respect of which further representations are invited for the purpose of his further consideration of the appeal. This will provide parties with the opportunities to submit written representations or call for the reopening of the inquiry. It will then be a matter for decision by the Secretary of State whether or not the inquiry should be reopened. It is not possible to commence the redetermination process until the court has determined the matter and referred the case back to the Secretary of State. If this happens, the process will be put into effect as soon as possible and a final decision on the matter will be issued as soon as possible after the process has been completed.

Emissions

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what account is taken of the expected changes in PM10 levels in his Department's methodology for assessing the costs and benefits of proposed road schemes; and if he will seek expert advice on the case for reviewing the methodology to give greater weight to the cost implications for proposed road schemes of the effects of PM10 emissions.

Mr. Key: The effects of emissions are considered as part of the environmental assessment of trunk road schemes although they are not assigned monetary values. There is no PM10 standard in the United Kingdom as yet, but this is under consideration as indicated by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Environment and Countryside on 21 March 1994 in his answer to a question from the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn), Official Report, column 114. I shall await the results of this work with interest.

Robin Hood Railway Line

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what financial support he plans for phases 2 and 3 of the Robin Hood line in Nottinghamshire; under what powers he will provide such assistance; in what financial years such assistance will be given; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what funding he intends to make available for phases 2 and 3 of the Robin Hood line in Nottinghamshire; how this funding might be paid; in what financial years this funding will be made available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make funds available for stage 3 of the Robin Hood railway line from Mansfield to Worksop.

Mr. Freeman: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport announced on 6 May 1993 resources of £6·5 million are to be made available for phase 2 of the Robin Hood line. An application by Nottinghamshire county council for grant under section 56 of the Transport Act 1968 is still being discussed. The £6·5 million will be a combination of grant and credit approvals under sections 53 and 54 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. The current project programme indicates that resources will be required in the 1994-95 financial year.

I am not yet satisfied with the case for phase 3 and my Department is discussing with the county council the further work needed on the appraisal. If the council wishes to bid for resources for phase 3, they will need to indicate in a future transport policies and programme submission how it fits into their overall strategy and priorities.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what will be the maximum speed of channel tunnel passenger trains through the tunnel under Blue Bell Hill, Kent when the channel tunnel rail link route he announced on 24 January, Official Report, columns 19-34, becomes operational.

Mr. Freeman: This is an operational matter for the railway operators concerned, in consultation with the Health and Safety Executive. The presently assumed maximum timetabled speed of trains between the channel tunnel and London is 225 km/h—140 mph. Not all trains will run at the maximum speed. Freight and commuter services may operate more slowly than international passenger trains.

Pollution

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the levels of (a) atmospheric pollution, (b) oxides of nitrogen and (c) black smoke emissions in the Doncaster area in each year since 1985.

Mr. Atkins: Annual average concentrations of nitrogen dioxide, sulphur dioxide and black smoke in the Doncaster area from 1985 to 1993 are given in the tables.

As in table 2.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he plans to take to reduce levels of PM10 in British cities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Measures to reduce emissions of particles from cars and light vans by 40 per cent. will be applied in 1996 under the consolidated cars directive 91/441/EEC. In addition a further stage of EC directive 91/542, covering emissions from heavy goods vehicles, buses and coaches, has been agreed for implementation in 1996, which will reduce particulate emissions from these sources by about 50 per cent.

Further action to reduce levels of fine particles will be considered in the light of advice from the Department of Health's independent Committee on Medical Effects of Air Pollutants and from the expert panel on air quality standards, which recommends air quality standards to the Secretary of State for the Environment and which is currently considering a standard for particles.

Environmental Action Fund

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a list of the bodies that will receive moneys under the environmental action fund for the year 1994-95; and how much each is to be given.

Mr. Atkins: The list of organisations receiving support from the environmental action fund in 1994-95 is as follows:

Opencast Mining

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy toward reapplications to opencast the same site following privatisation of coal.

Mr. Baldry: Each case will be considered on its merits, but I will consider the need for specific policies in the revision of minerals planning guidance 3. There is no time limit before a reapplication may be made.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the occasions in the last 20 years when very special circumstances have been shown under the Opencast Coal Act 1958 to allow a second application to be granted to opencast a site previously opencast.

Mr. Baldry: Figures are available only since 1984. Since that time, there have been five occasions on which special circumstances have been shown to allow compulsory rights orders to be confirmed in respect of sites previously opencast. Applications for a second compulsory rights order for the same site will be considered on their merits.

Pollution Inspectorate

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the 1994-95 charging schemes for Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mr. Atkins: Charges to cover the costs of regulating processes under integrated pollution control—IPC—and premises subject to Radioactive Substances Act 1993—RSA93—regulation were introduced in 1991 under the Environmental Protection Act 1990. The Act requires Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution to balance costs and income, taking one financial year with another.

With the agreement of the Treasury, and following consultation with industry and other bodies, my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales have now made revised IPC and RSA93 charging schemes, specifying the revised scales of fees and charges which will take effect from 1 April 1994. Copies of the revised schemes have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The charges are based on the cost of HMIP's regulatory activities. For 1994-95, the rate per inspector day will be £993, and increase of 2·9 per cent. over the rate for 1993-94.

For IPC, the scheme comprises an application fee to cover the assessment of the operator's proposals and preparation of the authorisation, a variation fee to cover the costs of assessment of any proposals for substantial variation to a process and an annual subsistence charge for the holders of authorisations to cover the costs of inspection and oversight of the plant.

The application fee for 1994-95 is £2,570 per component for processes which have previously been subject to air pollution control and £3,860 per component for processes coming under regulation by HMIP for the first time. The variation fee is £1,290 per component.

The annual subsistence charge is £1,730 per component. This included a charge of £150 to recoup the under-recovery of costs, including setting up costs, in earlier years. In addition, some operators will pay a charge for the monitoring of their processes by contractors engaged by HMIP; the amount of the monitoring charge will directly reflect the cost of this work to HMIP.

Under the RSA93 charging scheme, nuclear licensed premises are billed individually on the basis of regulatory time spent and costs incurred at each site, in accordance with the inspector day rate.

Non-nuclear premises are charged on the basis of flat-rate fees on a similar basis to the IPC scheme, covering applications, substantial variations and subsistence. For premises authorised to accumulate and dispose of radioactive waste—"band 3 premises", for example, research establishments and major universities—the application and variation fee will be £1,425 and the subsistance charge £995. For those premises authorised to accumulate and dispose of small quantities of substances, or substances with a lesser risk, a lower subsistence charge of £85 will be levied. For premises registered to keep and use radioactive material—"band 4 premises", for example, industrial users of radioactive sources—the application and variation fee will be £515. The subsistence fee for band 4 premises will be £85, but the majority of such premises will be exempt from this because they handle small sources and do not require routine inspection.

For 1991-92, the first year of operation of the charging schemes, charges were initially set too low. To ensure equity with those operators applying for authorisations and registrations in later years when more realistic charges have been set, holders of authorisations and registrations arising from applications in 1991-92 pay a supplementary subsistence charge. This charge will continue in 1994-95 at the same rate as in 1992-93 and 1993-94: under IPC, £610 per component for applications charges at the full rate, £410 per component for those charged at the reduced rate; under RSA93, £210 and £80 for band 3 and band 4 premises respectively.

Copies of the schemes will shortly be sent to relevant operators and to other interested bodies.

Council Houses

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the impact of higher council house rents in Wakefield on housing benefit expenditure.

Sir George Young: The increase in Wakefield city council's rent guideline for the purpose of housing revenue account subsidy in 1994-95 is £2·79 per dwelling per week. On the basis of returns made by Wakefield, if the council increases its actual rents by this amount, the Department estimates that additional rent income will be £5·803 million, of which £3·482 million will be granted in rebates.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what account is taken of capital expenditure for the purposes of council house maintenance in assessments for housing revenue account subsidies.

Sir George Young: Each housing authority's entitlement to housing revenue account subsidy takes into account annual loan charges on the cost of additional borrowing to finance capital expenditure up to a level related to that authority's annual capital allocations for this purpose.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what his estimate is of the expenditure required to bring all of Britain's council house stock up to fully habitable levels at 1994 prices.

Sir George Young: Estimates of the cost of making dwellings fit for habitation in England are contained in the report of the 1991 English house condition survey published in September 1993. For all public sector housing, the backlog of such work is estimated at £780 million at 1994 prices. Matters affecting the housing stock in Scotland and Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what the capital and revenue expenditure was, per council house tenancy, on housing maintenance and repairs for each year since 1979.

Sir George Young: Capital and revenue expenditure, in cash terms, on maintenance and repairs per council dwelling in England was as follows:

Year	Revenue £	Capital £
1979-80	n/a	n/a
1980-81	171	139
1981-82	189	129
1982-83	218	203
1983-84	256	250
1984-85	272	284
1985-86	289	294
1986-87	296	342
1987-88	326	405
1988-89	365	454
1989-90	406	720
1990-91	487	434
1991-92	509	381
1992-93	545	390
1993-94	[1]595	[1]394

[1] Estimate.
n/a = Not available.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the proportion of the 1994-95 housing revenue account subsidy which will be provided for housing benefits reimbursement.

Sir George Young: It is estimated that, in 1994-95, £3,549 million of housing revenue account subsidy will be paid to housing authorities in England as reimbursement for their rent rebate expenditure—net of the amount funded by HRA surpluses. This is 81 per cent. of the total provision for housing revenue account subsidy for 1994-95 of £4,381 million.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities receive a nil or negative housing revenue account subsidy for the housing element component.

Sir George Young: In 1993-94 there is a negative entitlement to the housing element of housing revenue account subsidy for 282 English housing authorities. No authority has a nil entitlement.

Unitary Development Plans

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list when each of the unitary development plans for each authority in Greater Manchester was published; when they will run to; and when he expects each authority to start preparing the next unitary development plans.

Mr. Baldry: The deposit drafts of the Greater Manchester UDPs were published on the following dates:

	Date
Bolton	September 1992
Bury	October 1993
Manchester	October 1992
Oldham	March 1993
Salford	November 1992
Stockport	February 1994
Tameside	March 1993
Trafford	April 1993
Wigan	April 1993

The Rochdale UDP has not yet been placed on deposit, a consultation draft was published in April 1993.

We have advised local planning authorities that the general policies for the development and use of land contained in part 1 of a UDP should make provision for development for a period of at least 15 years. The more detailed policies and proposals contained in part 2 should generally make provision for development for a period of 10 years.

Local planning authorities may prepare proposals to alter or replace existing plans at any time. Plans should be reviewed regularly and the appropriate timing of review will depend on local circumstances, I would generally expect plans to be reviewed at least once every five years.

Housing Investment Programme

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the housing investment programme allocation for each local authority in 1978-79, 1993-94 and 1994-95 in cash and in constant prices.

Sir George Young: I have today placed in the Library a table of housing investment programme allocations by local authority for the years in question.

Countryside Organisations

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated cost of merging English Nature and the Countryside Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: A decision whether to merge English Nature and the Countryside Commission has yet to be taken. The likely costs and benefits of merger are being considered as part of the current study into this matter. Conclusions have not yet been reached.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the statement and briefing published by the Countryside Commission on 28 February concerning the future of English Nature and the Countryside Commission was authorised by his Department.

Mr. Atkins: No.

Cwm Selar

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had with the Environment Commissioner of the European Union in relation to the implications of the 1992 habitats directive of the European Union on the proposed opencast coal site development on the Cwm Selar site of special scientific interest, Cwmgwrach, Vale of Neath.

Mr. Atkins: There have been no such consultations.

Nature Reserves

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to review the responsibility for, or administration of, national nature reserves; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: I have no such plans. However, the current study into bringing together English Nature and the Countryside Commission embraces all the activities of both bodies, including English Nature's responsibility for national nature reserves.

Institute of Terrestrial Ecology

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to review the role and functions of the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology.

Mr. Atkins: None. The Institute of Terrestrial Ecology is a component body of the Natural Environment Research Council, which is not one of my responsibilities. However, it is a highly successful and competitive contractor to many DOE research programmes.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to enhance the role or functions of local authorities in relation to sites of special scientific interest.

Mr. Atkins: None.

Housing Capital Receipts

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his current estimate of the additional capital receipts that have been made available for investment by local authorities in England as a result of the relaxation in the rules governing use of such receipts which applied between 13 November 1992 and 31 December 1993.

Mr. Curry: Latest figures from local authorities indicate that the level of additional receipts was about £1·8 billion, which is more than the £1·75 billion figure suggested by my right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State following the announcement of the relaxation in the 1992 autumn statement.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested in respect of permanent staff in post on 23 March 1994 is set out in the table.

Robin Hood Railway Line

Mr. Ashton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will allocate some of the coalfield regeneration fund to construct stage 3 of the Robin Hood railway line between Mansfield and Worksop.

Mr. Sainsbury: Lord Walker is currently considering proposals to support stage 3 of the Robin Hood line which have recently been put to him by the local regeneration partners.

British Coal (Environmental Impact Assessments)

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has for the future of the environmental impact assessment unit at British Coal, following implementation of the Coal Industry Bill.

Mr. Eggar: I understand that responsibility for environmental impact assessment of particular projects has been devolved to British Coal's operational groups, under the overall policy guidance of British Coal's headquarters operations department. After privatisation, it will be for successor mining companies to decide how to meet the statutory requirements for environmental impact assessment.

Exports (Israel)

Mr. David Young: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if it is his policy to refuse export licences for equipment or machinery capable for use in armaments manufacture which are bought for export to Isreal.

Mr. Needham: We announced in June 1982, following the Israeli invasion of southern Lebanon, that we would withhold approval of licences for the export to Isreal of all British military equipment. In 1983 it was decided to allow the export of electronic and other small non-lethal components provided they did not form part of equipment due to be put into immediate service with Israeli forces in south Lebanon.

Her Majesty's Government do control the export of sensitive goods for arms manufacture. However, it is not our policy to refuse such licences as a matter of course.

All applications for export licences for licensable equipment or machinery capable of use in armaments manufacture are considered on their merits and in line with these policies.

Car Boot Sales

Mr. Madden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the letter, dated 3 March from the Under-Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs to the hon. Member for Bradford, West, if he will list the powers available to local authorities and the police to address the problems arising from the sale of counterfeit and unsafe goods at car boot sales; what representations he has received from local authorities, the police and others concerning the effectiveness of current powers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton [holding answer 15 March 1994]: The powers under which local authorities may act against counterfeit or unsafe goods are contained within the Trade Descriptions Act 1968, the Trade Marks Act 1938, as amended in 1988, and the Consumer Protection Act 1987 and specific consumer safety regulations. The police may take action against counterfeit goods under the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988. In addition to these specific powers against counterfeit or unsafe goods, local authorities and the police have a number of powers to control temporary markets and car boot sales available to them under other legislation.

The Government are also aware of the problems of trade in counterfeit goods where traders seek to use disclaimers about the goods to prevent prosecution under the Trade Descriptions Act. That is why we are seeking to improve the powers available to local authorities and the police through the provisions of the Trade Marks Bill, which has just completed its passage through another place. The Bill addresses the use of disclaimers by making it an offence to sell counterfeit goods, even if the goods are acknowledged as copies at the point of sale.

There has been a small number of representations on this subject.

Negligent Auditors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will introduce legislation under which individual shareholders would be able to bring class actions against negligent auditors;

(2) if he will introduce legislation under which individual shareholders will be able to bring class actions against negligent auditors.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I have no plans to seek to change the present state of the law.

Code of Central Government Enforcement

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the print run of the code for central Government enforcement; and to whom it is being distributed.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The initial print run of "Working with Business: a Code for Enforcement Agencies" was 70,000.

The code was initially distributed to all Government Departments, DTI regional offices and to all the enforcement agencies listed in the code for them to distribute to their customers and to any other interested parties as required.

The code has also been sent to all local authorities, the British Retail Consortium, the Federation of Small Businesses, the Association of British Chambers of Commerce and all branches of the Confederation of British Industry.

In addition, numerous copies of the code have been sent out to any individual, company or organisation that has expressed an interest in seeing it.

SL Homes Ltd.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what connections have been reported to his Department between Scottish Legal Life Assurance Ltd. and SL Homes Ltd.; and what assessment his Department has made of whether Scottish Legal Life Assurance Ltd. is conducting its affairs in a fit and proper manner.

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

Scottish Legal Life Assurance Society Ltd. is a friendly society. Until April 1993 its supervision was the responsibility of the registrar of friendly societies. With the coming into force of the Friendly Societies Act 1992, responsibility has shifted to the Friendly Societies Commission.

The society's 1990 return showed that all nine members of the society's committee of management were directors of SL Homes Ltd. The chief registrar's report for 1990-91 announced that an inspector had been appointed under section 87 of the Friendly Societies Act 1974 to examine the affairs of the society, and a number of changes were subsequently made to the management structure. The latest return lodged by the society is for the year 1992. It showed that one member of the committee was a director of SL Homes Ltd., and that the society had an outstanding investment with the SL Homes Group of £3,980,637.

Under the Friendly Societies Act 1992, it is for the Friendly Societies Commission, and not for my Department, to satisfy itself as to the manner in which Scottish Legal Life Assurance Society Ltd. is conducting its affairs. The commission is required to submit to the Treasury and Parliament each year a report on the discharge of its functions.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Aid and Trade Provision

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what occasions and in regard to which countries he has made offers of funds under aid and trade provision in the absence of, or in advance of, applications for funding for particular projects; if he will list in each case the dates on which these offers were made; and what sums of money were involved.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Her Majesty's Government have entered into the following framework agreements with recipient Governments:

Country	Date	Level of Business to be supported
Cameroon	December 1983	£40 million
China (concessional financing agreement)
CFA I	May 1986	£300 million
CFA II	September 1988	£300 million
Egypt	March 1983	£64 million
India	February 1986	£300 million
Indonesia (concessional loan agreement)
CLA I	July 1986	£140 million
CLA II	February 1989	£100 million
CLA III	April 1993	£65 million
Malaysia	January 1981	£77 million
	September 1988	£200 million
Mauritius	October 1983	£12·25 million
Pakistan	July 1989	US$50 million
Thailand	May 1989	General protocol with no specific amount
World Bank	September 1986 (renewed September 1989)	£200 million

These framework agreements range from formal signed agreements, for example for China and Indonesia, and lines of credit, for example Egypt and Cameroon, to indications of possible levels of business, for example India and Malaysia. In each case, the levels indicated relate to support available for agreed projects—covering United Kingdom and EC officially supported packages—using a combination of aid and trade provision grants and export credits through Export Credits Guarantees Department. The content of these exchanges is confidential between Governments.

St. Helena

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what development aid was given to the island of St. Helena in the years 1991, 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Total gross bilateral aid to St. Helena in the three financial years 1990-91 to 1992-93 was as follows:

Year	£
1990-91	11,759,000
1991-92	9,136,000
1992-93	9,060,000

RMS St. Helena

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the cost of the RMS St. Helena.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The construction cost of the RMS St. Helena was £32·4 million, financed by Her Majesty's Government during the period 1987 to 1991. The annual operating subsidy, which varies, amounts to £911,000 in 1993-94.

PRIME MINISTER

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the dates occupants of his office, or members of the Cabinet Office, have used the Malaysian airline MAS, for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to his Department.

The Prime Minister: My Office has not used Malaysian airlines for official travel. I refer the hon.

Gentleman to the answer from my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in respect of members of the Cabinet Office.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister what major building projects, valued at over £1 million are being, or have been, wholly or partly financed in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by the Cabinet Office; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

The Prime Minister: None.

Isle of Man

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister when he last met the Chief Minister of the Isle of Man.

The Prime Minister: I have not had the opportunity to meet the Chief Minister of the Isle of Man as Prime Minister, and I do not recall meeting him prior to November 1990.

Euphrates River

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what information is available to Her Majesty's Government about the amount of water taken from the Euphrates and its tributaries and sources by water requirements in (a) Turkey and (b) Syria.

The Prime Minister: There are a variety of figures available on the quantities of water withdrawn from the River Euphrates and its tributaries and sources, by Turkey and Syria. The following figures are taken from the World Resources Institute report for 1990-91. Within the national boundaries of Syria 4,500 million cubic metres of water per year—MCM/yr—were generated and 4,700 MCM/yr extracted. The figures for Turkey were 28,200 MCM/yr generated and 3,100 MCM/yr extracted.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what evidence is available to Her Majesty's Government that draining constitutes the reason why water courses, linked to the Euphrates river, are dried up.

The Prime Minister: A stretch of 70 km of the Euphrates river is dry. On the evidence available there is no other possible explanation.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Accommodation (Commercial Organisations)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chairman of the Finance and Services Committee, pursuant to the answer given by the chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee to the hon. Member for Derbyshire North-East (Mr. Barnes) on 14 March, Official Report, columns 512-13, what consideration has been given to charging rent to those commercial organisations there listed for the space they occupy in the Palace of Westminster; and what considerations underlie the policy of not charging such rent.

Mr. Channon: As explained in the reply to the question to which the hon. Member refers, many of the arrangements with commercial organisations are long established, and enable the House to enjoy the benefit of services provided by the bodies concerned, taking account of the fluctuating nature of the House's requirements. The financial arrangements are kept under review.

Television Monitors

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Chairman of the Information Committee if he will make arrangements for television monitors to be placed in offices in the Norman Shaw South parliamentary building used by hon. Members' secretaries and research staff.

Mr. Waller: The location of television monitors is a matter which it would be appropriate for the House to consider in the context of the information Committee's report on the provision of a parliamentary data and video network.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Chairman of the Information Committee if he will make arrangements for access to television and radio channels to be made available to hon. Members with offices in the Norman Shaw South parliamentary building.

Mr. Waller: Proposals for access to television and radio channels are included in the Information Committee's report on the provision of a parliamentary data and video network, which recommends the extension of the pilot network to further buildings on the parliamentary estate. The report has not yet been considered by the House.

TREASURY

Ministerial Receptions

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost of receptions held by Ministers in his Department in 1993-94.

Mr. Nelson: Total expenditure in 1993-94 amounts to £3,100, part of which was met by the Government hospitality fund.

Russia

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the G7 proposes to help the Russian Government to strengthen their efforts to achieve their macroeconomic stabilisation and to establish a credible programme of social support.

Mr. Nelson: Macroeconomic stabilisation in Russia depends on the implementation of appropriate policies by the Russian Government. At their meeting in Kronberg on 26 February, G7 Finance Ministers encouraged the International Monetary Fund and the Russian Government to reach agreement on a suitable economic programme, which could be supported by IMF resources under the second tranche of the systemic transformation facility. The G7 confirmed that all the other elements of the $43 billion package announced in Tokyo in April 1993 remained available to Russia as reform was progressively implemented.

Bilateral donors have provided technical assistance on the development of a suitable social safety net in Russia.

This includes assistance from the United Kingdom through the know-how fund. G7 Finance Ministers underlined the importance of a credible programme of social support to enhance public acceptance of the reform process and urged the World bank and Russia to co-operate in accelerating disbursement of the elements of the $3 billion special privatisation and restructuring programme which addressed the social dimension of reform.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the dates Ministers, or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to his Department.

Mr. Nelson: MAS has been used for official travel on one occasion in March 1993 at the cost of £1,122.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what major building projects valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1989 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

Mr. Nelson: None.

Kenya (Debt)

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the level of Kenya's external debt to the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: Kenya's outstanding debt to the United Kingdom public sector totals £59·8 million, all of which is owed to the Export Credits Guarantee Department.

New Road Proposals

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Treasury requirements as to the cost-benefit analysis of new road proposals.

Mr. Portillo: The Treasury requires that new road proposals should provide good value for money. Treasury guidelines on the appraisal of public sector capital projects are set out in the publication "Economic Appraisal in Central Government: A Technical Guide for Government Departments".

Gross Domestic Product

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of gross domestic product and gross domestic product per head for (a) the north-west region of England, (b) the north-east region of England and (c) Northern Ireland.

Mr. Nelson: Estimates of GDP are compiled by standard economic region, and by county. The latest available regional estimates, for 1992, were published in the December 1993 issue of "Economic Trends", available in the House of Commons Library. The north-east of England, comprising Cleveland, Durham, Northumberland and Tyne and Wear, is not separately designated within the north standard region. However, figures for the north-east can be derived from the latest county estimates, relating to 1991. In 1991, total GDP for the north-east was £18,991 million, and GDP per head was £7,320.

Council Tax

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 15 March, Official Report, columns 577-78, what measures he intends to take to improve the rate of processing appeals against council tax banding in the London borough of Lewisham.

Mr. Nelson: The Valuation Office agency and valuation tribunals have been set targets for the clearance of appeals which will ensure four out of five appeals will be cleared by 31 December 1994. Any remaining appeals will be cleared as quickly as possible in 1995.

Steps have already been taken in Lewisham by deploying additional resources including the use of overtime and Saturday working whenever possible to ensure that these targets are met.

EDUCATION

Optical Fibre Network

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to encourage the rapid development of a national broadband optical fibre network.

Mr. Boswell: The Government have encouraged the higher education funding councils to establish a new administrative framework to support and develop the national broadband optical fibre network known as Super Janet. Fifty-nine higher education institutions and research centres are currently connected and it is intended to connect at least another 50 users over the next three years.

Autism

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of local education authorities provide educational support services for children with autism; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The information requested is not collected centrally. Under the Education Acts 1981 and 1993, it is the responsibility of schools and local education authorities to identify, assess and make provision for children with special educational needs, including those with autism.

Advertising

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the actual expenditure by each of the non-departmental public bodies for which he has responsibility in each year of their existence since 1964 on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what is his latest estimate for 1993-94 and 1994-95.

Mr. Boswell: This information is not held by the Department.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his latest estimate of the expenditure in 1993-94 and 1994-95 by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and whether this included expenditure on those items by the non-departmental public bodies for which he has responsibility.

Mr. Boswell: The latest estimate for advertising and other promotional materials by the Department for the financial years 1993-94 and 1994-95 are given in the table:

	£000s 1993-94	£000s 1994-95
Television advertising	0	0
Radio advertising	29·2	0
Newspaper advertising	1,413·0	900·0
Other promotional material	7,332·4	6,700·0

These figures do not include expenditure by the non-departmental public bodies for which the Department for Education has responsibility.

"National School Tests in 1994"

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what were the printing and production costs of the leaflet "National School Tests in 1994", ISBN 0 85522 441 X; how much his Department paid the Post Office to distribute these leaflets across post office counters; and how many copies were printed.

Mr. Robin Squire: The printing and production cost of producing 4 million copies of the leaflet "National School Tests in 1994" was £50,000. There was an initial print run of 3 million copies followed by a reprint of 1 million to meet demand.

Distribution of 1·2 million leaflets with child benefit payments in all main post offices in England during March cost £99,000.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what element of the grant to grant-maintained schools has been identified for teachers' pay in the 1994-95 annual settlement.

Mr. Robin Squire: There is no annual settlement covering annual maintenance grants for grant-maintained schools. In 1994-95 these will be based on the funding available to local authority schools, either by reference to the provisions of the relevant scheme for the local management of schools or by means of the common funding formula. The local authority finance settlement takes account of the broad range of pressures on local education authorities, including pay settlements and price inflation, as well as the scope for savings.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the allowance made for teachers' pay in the 1994-95 grant-maintained schools' annual settlement.

Mr. Robin Squire: Grant-maintained schools receive an annual maintenance grant which they may spend according to their own view of priorities. It contains no specifically identified element for teacher salaries.

Nursery Education

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many three and four-year-old children are in receipt of nursery or primary education in each education authority area; and what percentage this represents of the total number of children of that age group in each area.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is shown in the table.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Boswell: The figures are as follows:

	Male			Female
	Full time	Part time	Total	Full time	Part time	Total	Total
Grade 1	1	0	1	0	0	0	1
Grade 2	3	0	3	0	0	0	3

Total	922	12	934	1,160	149	1,309	2,243

These figures include 376 staff in post in the Teachers Pensions Agency.

School Meals

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much each education authority charges for school meals to children not on income-related benefits.

Mr. Forth: It is for each local education authority to decide how much to charge for the school meals provided for children not entitled to free school meals. Information on charging for school meals is not collected centrally.

Private Higher Education

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list those academic institutions in the private higher education sector whose courses have not been accredited by the Higher Education Quality Council and the Higher Education Funding Councils of England, Wales and Scotland, but where mandatory local education authority grants will apply at the lower rate.

Mr. Boswell: Neither the Higher Education Quality Council nor the three Higher Education Funding Councils accredit courses. A number of courses at private higher education institutions are designated under the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations. Students holding mandatory awards for attendance on those courses have their maintenance grants calculated in the same way as all other award holders. The fees payable on their behalf under the regulations are normally £715 in the current academic year; higher rates apply for courses at institutions which receive recurrent grant out of public funds.

Consultation Documents

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list all the documents issued for consultation in the last year, indicating the time provided for consultation and the recipients of each consultation document.

Mr. Boswell: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Surplus School Places

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many surplus school places there were (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of school capacity in each local education authority in 1979 and each year since 1987.

Mr. Forth: The Department collected comprehensive information on surplus school places through a detailed survey in 1991. For the figures derived from that survey, I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Warwickshire, North (Mr. O'Brien) on 31 January 1994, Official Report, columns 517-21. Detailed information by local education authority is not available for earlier years.

My right hon. Friend intends to make regulations later this year under section 21 of the Education Act 1993 requiring all LEAs and, where it has relevant responsibilities, the new Funding Agency for Schools, to submit information to the Secretary of State annually, beginning in 1994, on the numbers of surplus places in LEA-maintained and grant-maintained schools respectively.

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Boswell: The information given is based on the total number of public appointments made by the Department by the end of 1993 and includes information on ethnic minority appointments available at that time.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons;

(2) what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Boswell: The information we hold on individuals appointed or being considered for appointment to public bodies for which we have responsibility is limited to whatever personal information they volunteer as well as details we solicit relating to their professional background. This is because appointments are made or approved solely on the basis of aptitude, merit and suitability for the job.

We do not keep a record of the political affiliation of appointees or potential candidates. To add to the information already obtained, Ministers normally interview candidates before making or approving appointments. We are satisfied that these procedures are sufficient to avoid the possibility of unsuitable appointments.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment;

(2) if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Boswell: There is no statutory requirement placed on the Secretary of State to consult or inform organisations or individuals prior to making or approving appointments to paid or unpaid posts. The constitutions, articles and trust deeds of some public bodies do place a requirement on Ministers to consult with interests which they consider relevant; these bodies include the Further Education Unit Management Board, the Further Education Staff college and the National Youth Agency.

Reading

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what further plans he has to develop programmes to improve the reading skills of children;

(2) if he will continue to support the reading recovery programme;

(3) what plans he has to ensure that the expertise gained by those involved in reading recovery programmes continues to be utilised;

(4) what evaluation he has made of programmes sponsored by his Department and local education authorities to improve the reading skills of children in their early years.

Mr. Robin Squire: The best way to improve the reading skills of children is to ensure rigorous teaching in our schools, particularly our primary schools; and to continue with rigorous national tests which focus on the basics. Sir Ron Dearing's report on the national curriculum highlighted the need for primary education to concentrate on the basic skills, including reading, and said that this should be a priority for the discretionary time which will be released as a result of slimming down the national curriculum overall—to be concentrated outside the core subjects of English, mathematics and science. We now await Sir Ron's advice on a revised national curriculum.

We are also strengthening the initial teacher training regime by requiring students to spend more time in schools and by specifying that all primary initial teacher training courses should include at least 150 hours of work on English with a minimum of 50 hours on the teaching of reading.

In addition, we are supporting a number of literacy programmes including:

(i) a three-year trial of reading recovery in 20 local education authorities at a total cost of £14·2 million, supported through our grants for education support and training programme. This trial will be completed in March 1995. The School Curriculum and Assessment Authority is also sponsoring an independent research project on the effectiveness of reading recovery compared with other methods of early reading intervention, to be completed by the end of the year. Any further action on reading recovery will be considered in the light of this research and of our evaluation of the GEST-funded trial;

(ii) thirteen other literacy projects in 12 inner-city local education authorities at a total cost of £2·4 million in the current year, again supported through the GEST programme;

(iii) the family literacy programme undertaken by the adult literacy and basic skills unit. We have increased our grant to ALBSU for this programme for £0·25 million in the current year to £1·2 million in 1994-95;

(iv) Volunteer Reading Help, which is a charity which links volunteers with children who teachers feel would benefit from one-to-one help with their reading. The enable the organisation to expand further, we shall be nearly doubling our grant to VRH in 1994-95 to £90,000.

Sixth Forms

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answers of 25 February, Official Report, column 505, and 1 March, Official Report, column 686, how many pupils there are expected to be in each of the new sixth forms he has approved since April 1992.

Mr. Robin Squire: The number of pupils in the sixth forms concerned was expected to be:

	Number
(a) Grain-maintained
Baverstock GM School, Birmingham	70
Small Heath School, Birmingham	150
Sawtry Village College, Cambridgeshire	150
The Merrill Community School, Derbyshire	100

Teachers

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his policy towards the employment in local education authorities and grant-maintained schools of teachers without formal and recognised teaching qualifications.

Mr. Robin Squire: Unqualified teachers may not normally be employed in either local education authority maintained or self-governing—grant-maintained—schools. Some exceptions are, however, specified in statutory regulations. They include student teachers, those who with my right hon. Friend's approval are employed as licensed or overseas trained teachers, and instructors with special qualifications or experience who may be employed when no suitable qualified teacher is available.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 8 March, Official Report, columns 133-34, when the information about the appointment of newly qualified teachers to permanent teaching posts in 1993 will be available.

Mr. Robin Squire: The data are unlikely to be available for statistical use before spring 1995 when the appointment details of newly qualified teachers have been returned by local authorities on their annual returns for financial year 1993-94. The required information will then be placed in the Library.

Postgraduate Legal Training

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will reconsider his decision not to allow mandatory grants for postgraduate legal training.

Mr. Boswell: The Education Act 1962 restricts mandatory awards to full-time courses leading to a first degree or comparable qualification, or to the DipHE or HND, and to courses for the initial training of teachers. We have no present plans to expand the scope of mandatory awards to include postgraduate law, or other, courses.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the meetings between Ministers and officials in his Department with hon. Members representing constituencies in London in the last year.

Mr. Patten: The details[1] requested are as follows:

Secretary of State
Hugh Dykes MP (Harrow, East)—4 March 1993
Nicholas Scott MP (Chelsea)—20 December 1993
Minister of State
John Marshall MP (Hendon, South)—12 January 1994
Richard Tracey MP (Surbiton)—25 February 1994
Mr. Boswell
None.
Mr. Forth
Sir Michael Neubert MP (Romford)—26 October 1993
Mr. Squire
Richard Tracey MP (Surbiton)—12 October 1993
Michael Shersby MP (Uxbridge)—2 December 1993
Sir Michael Neubert MP (Romford)—21 January 1994

Note:
1. The details cover all Ministers' meetings concerning Departmental business with hon. Members since 1 March 1993.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest figure for the ratio between the number of unemployed persons, and the number of vacant jobs in the Doncaster travel-to-work area.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is not available in the form requested. The information that is available is shown in the table, although the figures cannot meaningfully be expressed as a ratio, as jobcentre vacancies represent only a third of all vacancies nationally, and this proportion is likely to vary between different regions, different skills and different occupations.

Furthermore, within any one area, there is not necessarily a strong match between the skills of the unemployed and the nature of the vacancies available. It should also be noted that the area covered by jobcentres in Doncaster does not correspond exactly with Doncaster travel-to-work area.

Unadjusted Unemployment and Vacancies February 1994

Claimant Unemployment	Unfilled Jobcentre Vacancies[1]
15,017	492

[1] There are currently six Jobcentres covering the Doncaster TTWA, five in Doncaster and one in Thorne.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish his Department's estimate for England, Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom, and for each year since 1990 of the numbers on the unemployment register; and what were the numbers and percentages of those on the unemployment register in each case leaving the register (a) to take up full-time employment, (b) to take up part-time employment, (c) to take up full-time or part-time training and (d) to take early retirement.

Miss Widdecombe: The available information on the levels of claimant unemployment and on the numbers leaving claimant unemployment can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library. Detailed information is not available on the destinations of the claimants who leave unemployment. However, past survey evidence indicates that the majority of people who leave claimant unemployment go into jobs.

Tattoos

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will explore ways in which he can assist job seekers with disfiguring tattoos to have them removed by the health service or other organisations.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Employment Service provides a very wide range of back to work help for job seekers, which can include advice about the removal of disfiguring tattoos. I understand from colleagues in the Department of Health that this treatment is available from the national health service if, in the opinion of a consultant, it is necessary for clinical reasons.

Wages

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish his estimate of the average gross weekly wage for men, women and all workers in each standard region of Great Britain for the latest available period.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on the average weekly earnings of employees in the standard regions of England, and in Scotland and Wales, is published in part A of the 1993 new earnings survey. Tables 12 and 13 cover full-time males and full-time females respectively, and table X5 covers all full-time employees.

A copy of the report is available in the Library.

Work Experience Schemes

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many participants are currently taking part in Government-run or financed work experience schemes; and what percentage are claiming unemployment benefit while on the scheme.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The latest figures available show that at the end of February there were 12,227 participants in Government-run or financed work experience programmes. None of these people was in receipt of unemployment benefit.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of state for Employment what consultation there has been with Health and Safety Executive customers before the distribution arrangements for its free and priced publications were changed from HMSO to Prolog; if he will state the terms of the agreement with Prolog; and what market research was conducted on the working of the previous arrangement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A review of distribution of the Health and Safety Executive's publications was carried out in 1993 by HSE and external consultants. This review focused on the existing arrangement with HMSO for the distribution of priced publications and other arrangements that existed for the distribution of free publications. The review did not involve consultation with customers. Following the review and an open tender, HSE decided that its customers could be accessed more satisfactorily and economically through a single contract with Prolog for warehousing, distribution and direct mail services. The contract with Prolog is for a three-year period from 4 October 1993.

EC Social Charter

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those topics of legislation contained in the social charter of the European Community signed by 11 members at Strasbourg (a) which can be implemented within the treaties of the Community operative prior to the coming into force of the treaty on European Union and (b) those which may flow from the latter treaty.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The social charter, signed by the other 11 member states, was a political declaration and as such contained no specific proposals for legislation. The social action programme, which followed the social charter, listed particular proposals for Community action. All of these proposals have a legal basis in the treaty of Rome, but many of them require unanimity.

The agreement of the Eleven on social policy contained in a protocol annexed to the treaty on European Union contains considerably more explicit provision for the other member states to adopt social legislation, in many cases by qualified majority voting.

Outdoor Education Centres

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 16 March, Official Report, column 719, what information is collected, and in what form, on visits by the Health and Safety Executive to outdoor education centres.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Following visits to outdoor education centres, inspectors prepare reports which include factual information about the centres, their size and the types of activities undertaken. The reports include an assessment of how providers manage health and safety.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on what basis his Department will decide which outdoor education centres will be inspected by the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Decisions on which education centres are inspected are a matter for the Health and Safety Executive, not the Department.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if his Department holds a comprehensive list of the outdoor education centres in England.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 15 March 1994, Official Report, column 625.

Employment Rehabilitation Courses

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the criteria used by Employment Service staff to decide whether a client they refer to an employment rehabilitation course should remain on their disability or unemployment-related benefits or be placed on a rehabilitation allowance; if those who remain on unemployment-related benefits may participate in full-time rehabilitation courses of more than 21 hours per week; and what changes are planned in these arrangements as a result of the introduction of the new incapacity benefit.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 28 March 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about whether a client referred to an employment rehabilitation course should remain on disability or unemployment related benefits.

Clients attending full-time rehabilitation programmes are entitled to claim Rehabilitation Allowance according to their circumstances or may choose to remain on their existing benefits. My people will discuss the options with each client and help them to decide which course of action will be most advantageous in their particular circumstances.

Clients may continue to claim benefits for unemployment (unemployment benefit, Income Support or a combination of both) for as long as they remain eligible, with the exception of those in receipt of Income Support as a sole benefit. They must claim Rehabilitation Allowance to satisfy the Benefits Agency rules about payment of benefits.

Similarly, as long as all the conditions of entitlement remain satisfied, a person who remains incapable of work may continue to receive benefits for incapacity (Sickness Benefit, Invalidity Benefit or Severe Disablement Allowance). Department of Social Security (DSS) inform us that there are no plans to change these rules under the new incapacity benefit.

I hope this is helpful.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is listed in the tables.

Training Allowances

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what responsibility the Birminghan training and enterprise council has to ensure that all young people in the youth training guarantee group receive a training allowance up to their 18th birthday; how this responsibility will be met if local training providers are not paid by Birmingham TEC to provide allowances after 17-year-olds have reached NVQ level 2; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: I understand that Birmingham training and enterprise council acknowledges its responsibility to ensure that all young people in the youth training guarantee group receive a training allowance up until their 18th birthday. For the 1994-95 financial year it will be a contractual requirement for the TEC's training providers to ensure that young people are able to remain in training and in receipt of a training allowance until their 18th birthday. The TEC will pay all training providers a contribution towards the training allowance and trainee support costs.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 23 March, Official Report, column 288, if he will list the number of contracts and their cost with management consultants in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In the period April 1993-March 1994, the Employment Department let 20 management consultancy contracts which had been drawn up by its business consultants lead buying unit to a value of £212,300. Information on contracts drawn up by the Department could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

DEFENCE

Chemical Weapons (Vaccines)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 4 November 1993, Official Report, column 474, if he will set out the reason for his policy of not to disclose stocks of nerve agent pretreatment sets.

Mr. Hanley: It is not my Department's practice to disclose information relating to stock levels of nerve agent pretreatment as it relates to operational capability.

Eskmeals Testing Range

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now publish the results of the monitoring of the Eskmeals testing range conducted by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mr. Aitken: As my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Environment and Countryside made clear in his answer on 2 February 1994, Official Report, column 799, environmental monitoring at Eskmeals is carried out by the Ministry of Defence. Copies of environmental monitoring reports and data going back to 1981 were placed in the House of Commons Library last July.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what major building projects, valued at over £1 million, are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1989 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

Mr. Hanley: There is no record of my Department having financed any major building projects valued at over £1 million in Doncaster, Barnsley, Rotherham or Wakefield since 1990. Information relating to the period before 1990 could be provided only at disproportionate cost as this would involve researching Property Services Agency archives.

Drug Testing

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the results of the trials on random drug testing conducted by the Army last year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The purpose of the trials carried out last year was to assess the proposed methodology for compulsory drug testing. The trials showed that adjustments were necessary. These have been made.

Redundancies

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 117, if he will give details of the number of redundancies by rank and the total to date in each of the three services as a result of "Options for Change"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: I will write to the hon. Member.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the Answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 29 November, Official Report, columns 371-76.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 23 March, Official Report, column 337, if he will list the number of contracts, and their cost, with management consultants in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Aitken: My Department does not maintain statistics centrally on the number and value of contracts placed with management consultants; thus, an answer to this question could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Auxiliary Oil Replenishment Vessels

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the auxiliary oil replenishment vessels 1 and 2 to enter service with the Royal Navy.

Mr. Aitken: The RFA's Fort Victoria—AOR-01—and Fort George—AOR-02—are currently undergoing post-acceptance trials and defect rectification work. They are planned to enter full service with the Royal Navy this summer.

Marsh Arabs

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence is available to Her Majesty's Government of shelling of villages occupied by indigenous peoples of the marshes where the Tigris meets the Euphrates.

Mr. Hanley: Evidence drawn from aerial surveillance and other sources indicates that there has been systematic destruction of villages belonging to the indigenous people of the southern marshes of Iraq. This has not necessarily been caused by shelling.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Public Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Goodlad: Consultation for appointments to public bodies is carried out as appropriate with other Government Departments and outside organisations depending on the circumstances of the appointment and the body involved.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Goodlad: The information is as follows:

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons.

Mr. Goodlad: Information on the political activities of candidates for appointments to public bodies is obtained from a variety of sources depending on the body in question. In many cases, the political activities of the appointee are not relevant.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Goodlad: Appointees to public bodies are considered on the basis of their experience and background in relation to the appointment in question. Political views are considered when membership of a political party is relevant to the appointment.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Goodlad: Names of individuals to be considered for appointments to public bodies are, depending on circumstances, submitted from a variety of sources including other Government Departments and, as appropriate, the body to which the appointments is to be made.

Zaire

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about Sudanese Government forces being assembled in Zaire; and what representations he has made to the Government of Zaire about this.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have made no such representations. A Zairean Government communiqué of 4 March strongly denied the presence of Sudanese Government troops in Zaire.

North Korea

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has had about the adequacy of the inspections of the International Atomic Energy Agency in North Korea; and what access the Korean authorities gave the team to the seven agreed nuclear sites.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The director general of the International Atomic Energy Agency has stated that IAEA inspections carried out between 3 and 14 March did not permit the agency to conclude that nuclear material had not been diverted for military use in North Korea since February 1993. Agency inspectors were not allowed to proceed with a full inspection at one of North Korea's seven declared nuclear facilities.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of whether North Korea now has diverted sufficient plutonium to make at least one nuclear weapon.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The director general of the IAEA told his board of governors on 21 March that as a result of inspections carried out between 3 and 14 March, the agency could not conclude that nuclear material had not been diverted for military use in North Korea since February 1993. In addition, North Korea has not granted the IAEA access to two undeclared sites, inspection of which would help to clarify whether there had been diversion of material prior to that date. The Security Council is currently considering the matter.

Occupied Territories

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in providing Palestinians with international protection in the occupied territories.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom co-sponsored United Nations Security Council resolution 904 which calls for measures to be taken to guarantee the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilians throughout the occupied territories, including a temporary foreign or international presence. The nature of such a presence is the subject of negotiations between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organisation.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the degree of commitment of Israel and the PLO to early elections in the occupied territories.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Israel and the PLO are committed by the declaration of principles signed on 13 September 1993 to the goal of holding elections not later than nine months after the entry into force of the declaration. The declaration entered into force on 13 October 1993.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance he is giving to the establishment of a Palestinian police force in the occupied territories.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We will train senior officers of the Palestinian police in the United Kingdom later this year. We are also providing full riot protection equipment for 200 members of the Palestinian police.

Western Sahara

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent progress has been made towards holding a referendum in the Western Sahara.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Nations Secretary-General submitted his latest report on 10 March. The report is being considered by the Security Council.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of the United Nations mission in the Western Sahara on the participation by Morrocans in a referendum in the Western Sahara.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Nations Indentification Commission is trying to establish the identification of all those eligible to vote in the referendum on the Western Sahara and to register them.

Sudan

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which United Nations employees are currently held by the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in Sudan; and what representations he has made about this.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We know of no United Nations employees being held by the SPLA. The United Nations announced on 6 March the release of United Nations staff detained on 24 February by the SPLA in violation of Operation Lifeline Sudan principles.

East Timor

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about the numbers of people who have died violently in East Timor since the Indonesian takeover.

Mr. Goodlad: There is no reliable source for such information.

Israel

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the United States of America to discontinue all military aid to Israel until further Israeli settling in the Palestinian areas ceases and there are adequate safeguards to the Palestinians from existing settlers.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None.

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the United States of America to press Israel to dismantle all settlements in Palestinian territory.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have kept in close touch with the Americans on this issue. We regularly make demarches to the Israelis urging them to cease the construction of settlements which is illegal and an obstacle to peace.

Entry Clearance Officers

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 16 March, Official Report, column 699, what is his definition of a man year.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: A man year is the amount of time spent per year by a person doing entry clearance officer work. It is based on a standard formula which takes account of time not available because of public holidays, leave, sickness, etcetera. It includes also the time of staff on temporary duty, such as summer seasonal relief.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answers of 16 March, Official Report, columns 699-700, if he will make a statement on the reasons for entry clearance officers at posts overseas being instructed to reply direct to letters from solicitors in the United Kingdom, but not to reply direct to letters received from hon. Members.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: As I explained in my letter of 7 July 1993 to hon. Members, the migration and visa correspondence unit was established specifically to handle MPs' inquiries about entry clearance matters; and to ensure more effective and efficient handling of such inquiries which had previously been subject to the risk of delay or of overseas mail going astray. MPs' representations are thus accorded priority at all times. Resource constraints preclude letters from others, such as solicitors, being given the same level of service.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Goodlad: The latest figures available are:

Marsh Arabs

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information is available to Her Majesty's Government about the reason for the burning of settlements in the marshes where the Tigris meets the Euphrates.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The destruction of settlements in the marshes of southern Iraq may be related to marsh drainage construction projects, counter-insurgency operations or harassment of Shia Arabs by the authorities in Baghdad. United States, United Kingdom and French aircraft deployed to patrol the southern no-fly zone continue to monitor the situation closely. Iraq's motives are unlikely to be clear until the United Nations monitors are allowed access to the area, as required by the United Nations resolutions. But judging from Saddam's past record of brutality towards his own people, the wide-scale burning of settlements is likely to be part of an aggressive campaign against those who live in the marshes.

Mr. Van den Broek

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will urge Mr. Van den Broek to refrain from commenting on issues which are the province of member states.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No. Mr. Van den Broek is entitled to express his personal opinions.

Paul Goodall

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure that Abdul Hadi Al Gahtani who is in jail in Zemica, Bosnia is brought to trial over his alleged participation in the murder of Paul Goodall.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We remain in close touch with the Bosnian authorities about their continuing investigations into the murder of Paul Goodall. They are fully aware of our concerns that the murderer is identified and brought to justice.

Nauru

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to reply to the Australian request of August 1993 for a contribution to the Australian settlement of the Nauru rehabilitation claim.

Mr. Goodlad: The United Kingdom Government has made an ex gratia payment to Australia of A$12 million in respect of the Australia/Nauru settlement agreement of 10 August 1993. In return Australia has agreed not to pursue any further claims against the United Kingdom on this matter. The British Government have accepted no liability with respect to any claims made by Nauru or Australia.

SCOTLAND

Sporting Estates

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made, on a per acre basis, of the yield to the Scottish economy from sporting estates.

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend does not collect this information.

Salmon

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons were employed in the salmon netting industry; and how many salmon netting stations were operative, in (i) 1979 and (ii) at the most recent available date.

Sir Hector Monro: Statistics are produced on salmon and sea trout netting effort but not on employment in the Scottish salmon netting industry nor on the number of salmon netting stations. The available statistics are included in the "Statistical Bulletin on Scottish Salmon and Sea Trout Catches".

Deer Forests and Grouse Moors

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of the acreage of Scotland under (a) deer forest and (b) grouse moors.

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend does not collect this information.

Isle of Man

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met Ministers of the Isle of Man to discuss transport links, promotion of the common Celtic heritage and other matters of mutual interest.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has had no meetings with Ministers of the Isle of Man.

Sheep Scab

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans he has to make it a requirement to notify the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department of an outbreak of sheep scab; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what information he has about the incidence of sheep scab in Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro: I have seen a number of reports recently about sheep scab outbreaks in Scottish flocks. However, this is a disease which can be controlled readily by individual farmers who are well aware of the preventive measures and procedures needed to deal with it. Most of the detailed measures on the control of sheep scab were removed in July 1992 and the Government have already announced that they will complete this process. We have no other plans to require the notification of sheep scab.

Prisoners

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total number of prisoners in custody in Scotland on the first day of each month from May 1992 until the latest month for which figures are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 24 March 1994]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Scottish Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. John Gunnell, dated 24 March 1994:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the total number of prisoners in custody in Scotland on the first day of each month from May 1992 until the latest month for which figures are available.

The table below gives that information to date.

	1992	1993	1994
January	—	5,157	5,080
February	—	5,490	5,372
March	—	5,886	5,561
April	—	5,893	—
May	5,276	5,739	—
June	5,361	5,879	—
July	5,406	5,853	—
August	5,184	5,835	—
September	5,348	5,916	—
October	5,376	5,214	—
November	5,337	5,253	—
December	5,387	5,340	—

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total numbers of prisoners in custody in Scotland on (a) 1 June 1979, (b) 1 June 1983, (c) 1 June 1987 and (d) 1 April 1992 and on the latest date for which figures are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 24 March 1994]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Scottish Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. John Gunnell, dated 24 March 1994:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the total number of prisoners in custody in Scotland on 1 June 1979, 1 June 1983, 1 June 1987, 1 April 1992 and on the latest date for which figures are available.

Information relating to the numbers in custody on the first of each month is not available for 1979, 1983 or 1987. In 1979 the average daily population (based on the full calendar year) was 4,585. In 1983 and 1987 the average daily population for the month of June in each year was 5,116 and 5,407 respectively. On 1 April 1992 the population was 5,348 and on 18 March 1994, the latest date for which figures are available, the population was 5,498.

Dougarie Estate

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the reasons for the decision not to prosecute in the case arising from the shooting of a short-eared owl on Dougarie estate, Isle of Arran.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is not the policy of the Crown to give details of the reasons for decisions taken in individual cases. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate is, however, aware of the circumstances of this case and is satisfied that the procurator fiscal's decision not to proceed to trial was a proper one in the circumstances as then known to him.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total numbers of prison spaces in Scotland on (a) 1 June 1979, (b) 1 June 1983, (c) 1 June 1987 and (d) 1 April 1992 and on the latest date for which figures are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 24 March 1994]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Scottish Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. John Gunnell, dated 24 March 1994:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about prison places in Scotland.

During any year a number of cells are unavailable for use for a variety of reasons, including redecoration or damage repair work, refurbishment (including in some cases, to provide night sanitation) or for other policy reasons (eg being retained in the event of an emergency). Information on cells in use is not available for the earlier of the years you requested. However the design capacity of the estate was as follows:

	1979	1983	1987
Design capacity (as at end of each calendar year)	5,279	5,318	5,691

At the beginning of April 1992, the design capacity was 5,692 with 5,103 spaces available for use. The latest position (as at Friday 18 March 1994) is that the design capacity is 5,736, with a total of 5,167 spaces available for use.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Improvement Programmes

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison improvement programmes have been cancelled over the past 12 months; if he will list the prisons in England and Wales where this has happened; and what are the reasons for such cancellations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Dunbar to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about whether any building improvement programmes have been cancelled within the past twelve months.

Two schemes have been cancelled during the last twelve months at Brixton and Stocken on value for money grounds. An alternative solution is currently being considered for Brixton.

Car Boot Sales

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received from (a) hon. Members, (b) members of the general public and (c) chambers of trade and other trade organisations requesting tighter controls and regulation of car boot sales.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Since April 1992, representations have been received from 11 hon. Members and from 11 members of the public. No representations have been received from chambers of trade and other trade organisations.

Prisoners (Police Cells)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are currently being held in police stations in south Yorkshire.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners currently held in police stations in South Yorkshire.

On the night of 22 March 1994, the latest date for which full information is available, there were 55 prisoners in police stations in the South Yorkshire area.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners on average were being held in each of the police stations in South Yorkshire (i) for each month since January 1993 and (ii) for each day in February and March 1994; and if he will make a statement as to what causes he has identified for any trends in these figures.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the numbers of prisoners held in police stations in South Yorkshire from January 1993 to date.

During the period from 1 January 1993 to 8 February 1994, no prisoners were held in police stations in South Yorkshire.

The attached table shows the position from 9 February 1994 to 22 March 1994.

Since 1 January 1994, the prison population in England and Wales has risen by over 3,300. This has caused considerable pressure on prison accommodation, particularly in the north of England.

Mixed-Sex Prisons

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mixed-sex prisons there are in England and Wales; if he will list their locations; and what consideration he is giving to increasing their number.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about mixed sex prisons in England and Wales.

The following three Prison Service establishments in England and Wales currently and routinely hold both males and females: Durham, Risley (near Warrington) and Low Newton (near Durham). Male and female prisoners are held separately.

There are, at present, no plans to increase the number of establishments holding both males and females.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, by category, the establishment number of prisoners to be held at Doncaster prison when it is opened.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 28 March 1994:

HM Prison Doncaster

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Doncaster prison.

Doncaster has a certified normal accommodation of 771 places. As a local prison serving the courts, the population mix will fluctuate with the number and age of prisoners committed to it. It is expected that two thirds of the prisoners will be male young offenders and one third adult males. The population will include those on remand, those convicted awaiting sentence, those sentenced awaiting allocation to a training prison and some who will serve their entire sentence in the prison.

Joy Gardner

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the report sent by the Police Complaints Authority to the Crown Prosecution Service concerning the death of Joy Gardner will include an investigation into the role of immigration officials involved in Mrs. Gardner's case in the period up to the attempted deportation.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No. The report of the investigation by the assistant chief constable of Essex police, which was supervised by the Police Complaints Authority, is concerned with any possible criminal and disciplinary consequences of the actions of police officers.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when his Department was first made aware that Joy Gardner was still in the United Kingdom after her six month visa had expired;

(2) how and by whom his Department was first made aware that Joy Gardner was still in the United Kingdom after her six months visa had expired; and from what other sources he later received the same information.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Immigration Department first became aware that Mrs. Gardner was still in the United Kingdom after expiry of her leave to enter when her husband visited the public inquiry office in Croydon on 11 September 1990 and applied on her behalf for leave to remain on the basis of marriage. This was the only source from which the information that she had overstayed was received.

Volunteering

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to involve representatives of local government in the planning and oversight of the "Make a Difference" initiative on volunteering.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I very much hope that local government will want to play a full and active part in "Make a Difference". My officials have already met local authority associations to discuss ways in which local government can be involved, and several local government representatives attended the launch on 1 March.

National Lottery Charities Board

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the members of the proposed National Lottery Charities Board.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend hopes to announce the chairman very shortly. He will then be discussing with him or her the appointment of the 16 board members and will make these as soon as possible.

Youth Detention

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much it costs per head to detain youths in (a) prisons and (b) other forms of detention centres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Martyn Jones, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent question about the cost of detaining young offenders.

Young people remanded to prison are held in local prisons and remand centres at an average weekly cost of £526. Sentenced young offenders are held in closed young offender establishments at an average weekly cost of £634 or open ones at £492.

Isle of Man

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the Chief Minister of the Isle of Man.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend has not had the opportunity to meet the Chief Minister of the Isle of Man.

Fire Safety Inspections

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fire safety inspections were undertaken by fire services in England and Wales in the past year; how many complaints were received about the conduct of these inspections; and how many complaints were found to be justified.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The total number of inspections carried out by fire services in England and Wales during the calendar year January to December 1992 was 840,724.

During the period January to March 1993, some 225,505 inspections were carried out. Figures for the calendar year January to December 1993 are not yet available.

A survey of brigades in 1993 showed that 81 complaints were received about the conduct of inspections. On investigation, 50 of those complaints were found to be justified.

Prisoners

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average proportion of category A prisoners and category B prisoners within the prison population in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the average proportion of category A prisoners and category B prisoners within the prison population in each of the last ten years.

The information for 30 June of each year is given in the attached table. Information on category A prisoners is available for the period requested but information on category B prisoners is only readily available from 1991 onwards.

Population of category A and B prisoners in Prison Service establishments on 30 June, 1984-1993

	Security category
	Category A		Category B
On 30 June	Number	Percentage of adult sentenced population[1]	Number	Percentage of adult sentenced population[1]

1992	597	2·0	4,751	15·8
1993	578	2·1	5,149	18·4

[1] Some sentenced prisoners will have had no category assigned to them. A small number of category A and category B prisoners may be young offenders rather than adults.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average number of prisoners in each of the last 10 years (a) serving life sentences, (b) serving sentences of over 10 years, (c) serving sentences of over four years and (d) serving sentences for crimes of a violent or sexual nature.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about what was the average number of prisoners in each of the last 10 years (a) serving life sentences, (b) serving sentences of over 10 years, (c) serving sentences of over four years and (d) serving sentences for crimes of a violent or sexual nature.

The available information is for 30 June each year and is published annually in successive volumes of "Prison Statistics England and Wales" (Tables 1.8 and 1.9 of the latest volume, for 1991, Cm 2157 give annual data for the period 1981 to 1991). A copy of this publication is available in the House of Commons Library. Provisional information for 1992 and for 1993 where available is given in the attached table.

Sentenced population in Prison Service establishments on 30 June[1]

[2] Includes those serving a sentence of over 10 years.
[3] As recorded. Some 13 per cent. of the sentenced population in 1992 and 6 per cent. in 1993 had no offence recorded centrally.
[4] Estimated.

Evidence (Video Link)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to allow adult victims of sexual offences to give evidence by video link, subject to judicial discretion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Government have no plans to introduce such legislation, but we have undertaken to review the position of vulnerable adult witnesses following the completion of research into the effectiveness of new provisions relating to the evidence of children, which were introduced by the Criminal Justice Act 1991.

Blakenhurst Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoner custody officers are currently employed at Blakenhurst; and how many have resigned or been sacked since the prison opened;

(2) how many prison custody officers have been employed at Blakenhurst by United Kingdom Detention Services since it opened; and if he will provide details;

(3) what information he has as to how many former members of the state prison service now work at Blakenhurst;

(4) what is the grade of the Crown Monitor at Blakenhurst prison;

(5) how many disturbances have taken place at Blakenhurst since it opened; and if he will give details.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 28 March 1994:

HM Prison Blakenhurst

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about Blakenhurst prison.

Since its opening a total of 308 people have been employed as prisoner custody officers at Blakenhurst. 30 people have resigned and two have been dismissed. There are 276 prisoner custody officers currently employed at the prison; 13 former members of the Prison Service work there.

The Controller is a Governor III grade Crown servant.

There have been a total of two disturbances and five occasions on which there have been peaceful acts of indiscipline at Blakenhurst since its opening. The details are listed in the attached Annex.

Police (Training)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the training given to (a) special constables and (b) regular police officers upon joining, after two years in post and thereafter.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The training of special constables is a matter for individual chief officers but usually takes place either at weekends or as part of a series of evening training sessions. Initial induction is followed by a basic training programme and development courses as appropriate.

All regular police officers go through a 31-week foundation course immediately they join, partly in force and partly at one of the district training centres. During their two-year probationary period, they spend a further six weeks following centrally produced training programmes, in addition to any further specialist or general training which their forces may provide locally.

On promotion to sergeant, officers attend a six-week sergeants development course, run by groups of forces on a regional basis. A further regionally run inspectors management development course follows promotion to inspector. Some specialist training—such as detective training, advance driving courses and dog training—is also organised on a regional basis.

A comprehensive programme of development related to the roles and responsibilities of more senior officers is provided by the Police Staff college, Bramshill. In addition to this leadership programme, the college offers a range of short courses and also runs an accelerated promotion course for officers of high potential.

Other establishments which provide national training facilities are the Crime Prevention Centre and the specialist support unit for community and race relations.

In addition to the training mentioned above, individual forces provide their own training either directly or through external courses.

Suspect Escorts

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost in each of the past three years of transporting under police escort suspects from the area in which they were arrested back to the area where the alleged crimes took place for trial; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This information is not collected.

Trials

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to the use of technology to enable all people charged with crimes to be tried in the area in which they were arrested; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: We have no current plans to use technology in the way suggested. The Government do, however, keep under review developments in this sector, and are examining a number of ways in which the conduct of court business might be aided by the use of new technology.

Prisoner Escapes

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the estimated number of prisoner escorts in each of the last five years; and what proportion of those involved the use of custom-built cellular vehicles;

(2) how many prisoners escaped from prison escorts in each of the last five years; and how many of those escapes were from custom-built cellular vehicles;

(3) how many escapes have occurred from Group 4 prisoner escorts since April 1993; and if he will give details of each case;

(4) how many category A prisoners have escaped from prison service escorts in the last five years; and how many of those escorts involved cellular vehicles.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about escapes from escorts, and the estimated number of prison escorts over the last five years, and the proportion in which custom built cellular vehicles were used.

The information you requested is not recorded centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Escapes from prison escort over the last five years and the number of escapes from cellular vehicles—the following table lists all escapes from escort of prisoners supervised by Prison Service staff from both the public and private sectors and from the private escort contract. It does not, however, include prison escorts conducted by the police forces in England and Wales.

Year	Number of inmates
1989	118
1990	119
1991	144
1992	147
1993	[1]192

[1] Thirty of these escapes would have been the responsibility of police escorts in previous years and are not reflected in prior year figures.

Information about escapes from Prison Service cellular vehicles is not readily available and could only be produced at disproportionate cost.

Escapes from Group 4 since April 1993 with details of escapes.

From 1 April 1993 to 28 February 1994 40 inmates escaped from Group 4 prisoner escorts.

The following table provides details of the escapes:

Location of escape	Number of prisoners
Attendance at court	31
En route from vehicle	8
Outside hospital	1
Total	40

Before Group 4 undertook prisoner escort work, 34 of the above inmates who escaped would have been the responsibility of police escorts.

This information is derived from the Incident Management Support Unit, a part of the Directorate of Custody.

Category 'A' prisoners and escapes from Prison Service escorts over the last 5 years.

No Category 'A' prisoner has escaped from a Prison Service escort in this period.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have escaped while under escort from Preston prison in the past 12 months; how many of those escapes were from private taxi hire; and how many of those escapes were from custom-built cellular vehicles.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the escape of prisoners whilst under escort from Preston prison in the past 12 months.

During the past year three prisoners from Preston prison have escaped whilst under escort. Two of these escapes were whilst the prisoners concerned were receiving treatment in an outside hospital. In the first of these incidents the prisoner was recaptured almost immediately by the escorting prison officers. In the later incident the prisoner was recaptured by the police within three hours of his escape. The remaining incident involved the escape of a prisoner from a privately hired bus. This prisoner was subsequently recaptured by the police some six weeks after his escape.

There have been no escapes from private taxi hire vehicles or custom built cellular vehicles during the past year.

Prisoner Escorts

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff Group 4 employ to carry out prisoner escort duties in Humberside and the east midlands.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 28 March 1994:

COURT ESCORT AND CUSTODY SERVICE IN HUMBERSIDE AND THE EAST MIDLANDS

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the court escort and custody service in Humberside and the East Midlands.

Group 4 have a current operational strength of 334 prisoner custody officers, including supervisory officers, for the prisoner escort and court custody duties required under the contract. This excludes senior managers at their area headquarters.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Securicor will begin escorting prisoners in London; and in what area of London this service will first be handed over to Securicor.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the court escort and custody service contract in the Metropolitan Police District.

The contract with Securicor will be introduced in five phases, commencing on 27 June 1994. The contract will commence in North East London and will cover Pentonville and Holloway prisons.

Prisoner Populations

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what has been the average certified accommodation and the average prisoner population for each month at Blakenhurst since the prison opened;

(2) what was the average prisoner populations and the average certified normal accommodation at The Wolds for each month since April 1992.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the average certified accommodation and the average prisoner population for each month at Blakenhurst since the prison opened and at the Wolds for each month since April 1992.

I attach tables showing the prison population and Certified Normal Accommodation (CNA) at the Wolds and Blakenhurst for the last day of each month.

Telephone Conversations (Taping Guidelines)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the guidelines issued to the Prison Service concerning the tape recording of telephone conversations between prisoners and third parties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Derek Fatchett, dated 28 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the guidelines issued to the Prison Service concerning the tape recording of telephone conversations between prisoners and third parties.

Guidance on the operation of telephones for prisoners' use including the tape recording of conversations are set out in Prison Service Circular Instructions 21/1992 and Circular Instruction 50/1988, copies of which are in the Library.

Staff and Prisoner Assaults

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many staff assaults have occurred at The Wolds prison since it opened; and what is the average rate of staff assaults per 100 prisoners;

(2) how many recorded prisoner on prisoner assaults have taken place in each month since The Wolds prison opened;

(3) how many staff assaults have occurred at Blakenhurst since the prison opened; and what is the average rate of assaults per 100 prisoners.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 28 March 1994:

ASSAULTS AT THE WOLDS AND BLAKENHURST

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about assaults on staff at Blakenhurst and the Wolds and on prisoners at the Wolds.

The Wolds opened in April 1992. During its first year of operation there were 36 assaults on staff proved at adjudication, equivalent to 18 per 100 average population of prisoners. In the eleven months to February 1994 there were 29 such assaults, equivalent to an annual rate of 10 per 100 average population. Blakenhurst opened in May 1993 and in the first ten months of its operation there were 81 assaults on staff, equivalent to an annual rate of 28 per 100 average population. This experience is consistent with that of new public-sector prisons, where the number of assaults is often higher in the period after opening and then declines.

I attach a table showing the monthly figures of prisoner on prisoner assaults at the Wolds.

Ethnic Minorities

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many full-time equivalent teaching posts have been approved for each local education authority in (i) 1993-94 and (ii) 1994-95 for funding under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 in (a) maintained schools, (b) voluntary-aided schools and (c) central teams which provide a service throughout the authority;

(2) how many full-time equivalent teaching posts have been approved for each parliamentary constituency in (i) 1993-94 and (ii) 1994-95 for funding under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 in (a) maintained schools and (b) voluntary-aided schools;

(3) if he will list, for each constituency, the schools with teacher posts approved for funding under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 in (i) 1993-94 and (ii) 1994-95.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave on 21 March, Official Report, columns 34-36, to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn), in which I set out, in relation to each relevant local education authority, numbers of posts designated to be filled by qualified teachers, approved for funding under section 11.

Comprehensive information is not available centrally about the current allocation of approved posts to individual schools within local education authority projects and such information could not be obtained except at disproportionate cost. As to the position with regard to 1994-95, an encouraging proportion of authorities have notified us of their intentions to make good the shortfall arising from the reduction in section 11 funding. However, many authorities have yet to inform us of their plans.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalent teaching posts have been approved for each grant-maintained school for funding under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 for (a) 1993-94 and (b) 1994-95; and what was the total grant in each case under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Comprehensive information is not available centrally about the current allocation of posts approved for funding under section 11 to grant maintained schools. The available information is shown in the table.

Grant-maintained schools are eligible to apply for funding direct. In some cases, schools which were already grant maintained applied successfully at the time of the last applications round and have had their own projects since 1 April 1992. Information in relation to those is shown in the table.

Other schools, which have since opted for grant-maintained status, were originally covered under local education authority projects. Local agreement is often reached for such schools to remain within those projects, notwithstanding their change of status. In such instances, section 11 grant continues to be paid to the local authority, and it is the responsibility of the school to make the contribution to the total cost which the authority would otherwise have made.

Alternatively, a school may leave the local education authority project and apply to set up its own. In such cases, the number and type of posts approved are agreed between the school and the local education authority as being the allocation appropriately made to the school by the local education authority immediately before. Section 11 grant is then paid to the school at a level consistent with contemporary practice in relation to the payment of grant to the local authority, and it is the responsibility of the school to pay the balance of the total cost. Information about such schools is included in the table.

For convenience, the local authority area in whose area a school is located is indicated.

Notes:

1. Figures in relation to posts are in full-time equivalent terms.
2. The figures for Deacons include 1 instructor post and 1 bilingual assistant post; and for Small Heath, 1 home/school liaison assistant post. All others are designated teacher posts.
3. As to 1994-95, figures relate to posts eligible for funding from 1 April 1994. It is a matter for each school to decide, within its overall financial provision, how it intends to proceed in the light of reductions in section 11 funding. Schools marked* have indicated that they propose to make no substantive change in 1994-95. In other cases, responses are awaited from schools.
4. At present, section 11 grant is paid quarterly in arrears on the basis of actual expenditure incurred by the grant recipient. The 1993-94 grant expenditure figures relate to grant paid in respect of the school's own expenditure in the three quarters from 1 April to 31 December 1993.
5. In the case marked, the expenditure is from 1 September 1993, the operative date for the school's project.
6. With effect from 1994-95, section 11 grant will be paid on the basis of an annual budget allocation. The figures for 1994-95 show the budget allocation which has been notified to each school in relation to the school's expenditure in 1994-95.
7. The table does not include schools whose new project proposals are in the process of consideration, or who have not yet been notified of a budget allocation figure for 1994-95.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent his Department will retain responsibility for funding teaching posts under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 after the creation of the single regeneration budget from April 1995; what will be the proportion of the funding thus retained; and what proportion will be transferred to the single regeneration budget.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Around 55 per cent. of the total provision in relation to 1994-95 for teaching and other posts approved for funding under section 11 will form part of the single regeneration budget when it comes into operation on 1 April 1994. The Home Office will continue to administer the balance of funding remaining under section 11 in respect of approved teacher and other posts.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Howard: The figures requested are given in the table below which sets out the total number of non-industrial Home Office staff by grade—including those in agencies, on outward secondment or maternity or special leave—and the number who are male and female and full-time and part-time employees. The information was extracted from the Home Office personnel system on 25 March 1994.

North Wales Police Authority

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will amend Home Office circular 176/1976 with a view to ensuring that the North Wales police authority can consider, in the appointment of a new chief constable, an officer or officers currently on the senior officer list who can speak Welsh; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The circular was introduced after careful consideration and discussion with the local authority associations and police staff associations and the policy outlined in it has been adhered to consistently since 1976. The principles underpinning the guidance in the circular are still valid.

Male Offenders

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of male offenders reconvicted within two years commenced (a) probation with day centre on 4A requirements, (b) probation without requirements and (c) community service, in 1987.

Mr. Maclean: Reconviction statistics relate to "standard list" offences as defined in appendix 4 of "Criminal Statistics England and Wales, 1992". It is estimated from a sample of persons commencing supervision under the probation service in 1987 that the proportions of males reconvicted within two years were:

	Per cent.
Community service orders	56
Probation orders with a day centre or 4A requirement	66
Probation orders with no such requirement	54

Source: Reconvictions of those given Probation and Community Service Orders in 1987. Home Office Statistical Bulletin Issue 18/93.

Marriage Registrars

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which section within his Department liaises with marriage registrars.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Home Office has no direct liaison with registrars. From time to time, staff in the immigration and nationality department are in contact with the registrar general of the Office of Population and Census Surveys.

HIV Infection (Prisons)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for reducing the risk of HIV infection in prisons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: HIV/AIDS policy for prisoners already places strong emphasis on preventive measures, notably educational and counselling services. Following a wide-ranging review of policy and practice the potential for further risk reduction measures is being considered.

It will be appreciated that these are sensitive and difficult issues which need to be considered carefully, the more so because I understand that the first report has been received of an identified case of HIV transmission within prisons in England and Wales. The Public Health Laboratory Service has been asked to investigate the case and, if appropriate, advise on the further measures necessary to reduce the risk of other similar occurrences.

The Wolds Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what means are in place to monitor services at The Wolds prison which Group 4 contract out to third parties;

(2) what steps have been taken to enable a comparative cost analysis between The Wolds and the public sector following the criticisms made by the Prison Chief Inspector last year;

(3) if he will publish the reports made by the Crown Monitor at The Wolds;

(4) how much Group 4 will be paid to run The Wolds prison; and how any originally agreed sum has been subsequently varied;

(5) how many disturbances have occurred at The Wolds prison since it opened;

(6) how many custody officers are currently working at The Wolds prison; and what information he has as to how many custody officers have resigned or been sacked by Group 4 since The Wolds opened.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 28 March 1994:

HM Prison Wolds

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about Wolds prison.

On 28 February 1994 155 people certificated as prisoner custody officers (PCOs) were employed at Wolds prison. In 1992 four PCOs resigned and in 1993 ten did so. Two have been dismissed, both in 1993. In 1994 12 PCOs have resigned. It is believed that some of these have accepted offers of PCO posts elsewhere.

The Controller monitors all the services delivered under the contract, including those which, with Prison Service permission, are subcontracted. There are no plans to publish the Controller's reports. These are internal management reports and it would not be appropriate to release them. Reports by HM Chief Inspector of Prisons and the Board of Visitors have been published.

The Prison Service has made public the cost of operating Wolds on several occasions, before and after publication of the Chief Inspector's report, including responses to a number of Parliamentary Questions and at the time of the publication of the Chief Inspector's report on Wolds in August 1993, the announcement of the plans for private sector involvement in the Prison Service in September 1993, and the announcement of award of the contract for Doncaster prison in January this year. Comparative cost analysis has also been undertaken and published at the time of the latter announcements. I should point out that the ability to draw meaningful comparisons is limited because the Wolds is the only adult remand prison. In addition, the Prison Service publishes comparative information about the performance of all prisons, directly and privately managed, on a regular basis in its Annual Report. Information on Wolds was included in the Prison Service Annual Report and Accounts for 1992-93 which was published in November 1993 (Cm 2385). The report shows that the net operating costs for Wolds for that financial year were £5·5 million and the cost per prisoner place per week was £333. The net operating cost includes all costs associated with the operation of Wolds, including payments made to Group 4. Figures for the 1993-94 financial year will be included in the next annual report.

Group 4 is currently paid at the rate of £4·8 million a year for the management of Wolds. Amounts paid to Group 4 are included in the total costs of operating Wolds referred to above. The contract with Group 4 allows for variations to be made to the services required under the contract and for annual reviews of the contract price in line with the movements of the appropriate prices and earning indices published by the Department of Trade and the Department of Employment. In the life of the contract the most significant changes have been variations to reflect the transfer of the court escort function from Wolds prison to the new court escort and custody service in Humberside and the East Midlands in April 1992; and the movements in the relevant indices.

Finally, you also requested information on disturbances at the prison. Details of incidents between the opening of the prison and 29 June 1993 have already been provided to Parliament (Official Report: 26 July 1993, col. WA 75-79). Since that time there have been three instances of concerted indiscipline, making a total of 28 incidents in all.

Pentonville Prison

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what improvements have been made in Pentonville prison relating to criticisms made by Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons; which points of criticism remain unresolved; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has received concerning conditions in Pentonville prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answers 25 March 1994]: Judge Tumin made 128 recommendations in his report of November 1993. There were five main recommendations; the Prison Service has accepted four, of which one is already being implemented. The further 123 recommendations to the governor have largely been implemented or are in the process of being implemented.

Some 17 recommendations are under active consideration. The remaining eight recommendations require further discussion.

In line with the main recommendations, it is expected there will be full access to sanitation by the end of 1994 and "slopping out" will no longer be necessary. There is an agreed strategic plan for building work; B wing is being refurbished and work should be completed by May 1995. Work to refurbish and extend the kitchen started in October 1993 and modernisation of the health care centre is intended for the financial year 1996-97. A review of staffing in the health care centre is currently being evaluated and a working group has been established to consider other health care issues. Computer software for budget management is to be provided.

The remaining main recommendation was to review the policy of holding immigration detainees in Pentonville. The majority of people detained under immigration powers are already housed in Immigration Service accommodation. There will, however, remain a certain number of immigration detainees who will need to be accommodated in prisons because of their behaviour.

There have been no formal representations from interested outside bodies or pressure groups about conditions generally at Pentonville.

Deaths (Police Cells)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) deaths and (b) suicides of Prison Service prisoners occurred in police cells in 1993:

(2) how many deaths there were in police cells in 1993; and how many were suicides.

Mr. Charles Wardle [holding answer 14 February 1994]: The numbers of persons who died in police cells or detention rooms in 1993 are as follows:

	Total deaths	Suicide verdict reached	Inquest awaited
Provincial forces	12	2	2

None of the deaths involved Prison Service prisoners.

NORTHERN IRELAND

National Continence Week

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what projects his Department instigated in respect of National Continence Week.

Mr. Ancram: The Department of Health and Social Services funded an advertising campaign on television and in the local press during National Continence Week which was supported with editorial coverage. It produced and distributed more than 50,000 leaflets, posters and stickers to promote the national help and advice line and encourage sufferers to seek treatment. The Department also collaborated with health and social services boards in drawing up a full programme of local events.

Agriculture (Incomes)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will show the average income of (a) farmers and (b) farm workers in (i) cash and (ii) real terms, using 1985 as a constant, in each year since 1980 showing these incomes as a percentage of the average wage.

Mr. Ancram: Estimates of cash farm income in Northern Ireland for 1986-87 onwards are given in the table. Figures for previous years are not available on a consistent basis. Estimates of average farm income are not comparable with the average wage.

Estimates of the earnings of full-time hired agricultural workers in Northern Ireland are also given in the table.

Farm Workers

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the total number of (a) farmers and (b) farm workers in Northern Ireland in each year since 1980.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is given in the table. The figures are from the June agricultural censuses for each year and include estimates for minor holdings not covered by the census:

	Farmers, partners and directors	Working spouses	All other farm-workers

Isle of Man

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met Ministers of the Isle of Man to discuss transport links, promotion of the common Celtic heritage and other matters of mutual interest.

Sir John Wheeler: Ministers from the Isle of Man had a meeting with Lord Arran on 14 October 1992. Those present were the Finance Minister, Minister of Health and Social Security and junior Health Minister all of whom were in Northern Ireland to discuss and seek advice on acute hospital planning.

The meeting also touched on opportunities for co-operation on a range of health service matters.

There has to date been no necessity for Ministers from both Governments to meet to discuss transport links or the promotion of the common Celtic heritage.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is provided in the tables.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what assessment he has made of how many of those pupils currently covered by the assisted places scheme would have entered private education without the support offered by the scheme;

(2) what safeguards are used by his Office to ensure that schools covered by the assisted places scheme meet recognised educational standards;

(3) how much his Office has spent on the operation of the assisted places scheme in each year since 1981; how many pupils have been covered by the scheme in each year since 1981; and if there was any overspend on the budget allocated in each of these years;

(4) if he will list those schools in Northern Ireland which have pupils under the assisted places scheme in the current academic year; how many pupils are supported at each institution; and how much it cost his Office to provide this support;

(5) how much it costs his Department annually to publicise and administer the operation of the assisted places scheme;

(6) what assessment has been made of the assisted places scheme by his Office;

(7) if he will list the 20 independent schools which currently have the highest proportions of their school rolls made up by pupils covered by the assisted places scheme; and if he will give the percentage of pupils covered by the assisted places scheme and the size of the school rolls;

(8) what level of fee is charged by each institution covered by the assisted places scheme in the current academic year.

Mr. Ancram: There is no assisted place scheme or equivalent in Northern Ireland.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Egg and Poultry Industries

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the best estimate of the number of regulations affecting the egg and poultry industries currently in force.

Mr. Jack: My Department has responsibility for 33 regulations that apply specifically to the egg and poultry industries. Twenty-one of these are EC rules for marketing and international trade, six covering eggs and 10 covering poultry and five applying to both. There are a further 26 regulations covering livestock and food commodities which also affect the egg and poultry industries.

The veterinary medicines directorate also has responsibility for regulations made under the Medicines Act 1968 which affect these industries.

Food Farming and Fishing Industries

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many regulations affecting the food farming and fishing industries have been either relaxed or rescinded during the course of this Parliament.

Mr. Jack: Up to the end of February 1994, 11 statutory instruments which imposed burdens on the food, farming or fishing industries had been rescinded and 18 had been relaxed. These figures do not, however, reflect other deregulatory activities undertaken by the Department, for example, the deregulation of the milk and potato markets as provided for in the Agriculture Act 1993, measures proposed under the Deregulation Bill, or deregulation gains won in Brussels.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what major building projects, valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1989 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by her Department; and what was the cost of each project to her Department.

Mr. Jack: The Ministry is not funding, and has not funded since 1989, either wholly or in part, any such building projects in these four towns.

Dairy Farmers

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many dairy farmers there were in England in each year since 1985.

Mr. Jack: The number of farms classified as dairy farms in England, is given in the table. The figures are taken from the June agricultural census; figures for June 1993 are not yet available.

Number of dairy farms in England[1] (excluding minor holdings)

	Number
1985	28,300
1986	27,583
1987	26,138
1988	24,767
1989	23,849
1990	23,174
1991	22,701
1992	21,712

[1] Up to and including June 1992, farms were classified as "dairy" if the dairy enterprise, including followers, accounted for over one-third and commonly over two-thirds of total standard gross margin and was the largest enterprise group. A new system of farm classification was introduced in 1993 under which farms were classified as dairy if the dairy cows accounted for over two thirds of total SGM. Under this new system the number of dairy farms in 1992 was 19,115.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the (a) amount and (b) percentage of CAP money being paid to farmers in the United Kingdom (i) in each of the three years prior to June 1992 and (ii) in each year since June 1992; and what was the total amount of CAP expenditure in each of these years.

Mr. Jack: Information on CAP expenditure by member state, consisting of direct aid to farmers, and indirect aid through market support measures, for example, is available for 1989 to 1992 from the annual financial reports of the guarantee section of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund, copies of which were deposited in the Library of the House of Commons. For 1993, provisional figures show total CAP payments to the United Kingdom of 2,736 mecu—£2,149 million—7·9 per cent. of corresponding total provisional expenditure of 34,585 mecu—£27,170 million. It is important to note that the first year in which the CAP reform agreement of June 1992 has a full budgetary impact is 1994.

Farming Incomes

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will show the average income of (a) farmers and (b) farm workers in (i) cash and (ii) real terms, using 1985 as a constant, in each year since 1980 showing these incomes as a percentage of the average wage.

Mr. Jack: Estimates of the earnings of hired agricultural full-time workers in England are obtained from the earnings and hours survey and the wages and employment inquiry prior to 1991. These figures are given in the table. Figures for 1980 are not available separately for England.

None of the estimates of average farm income is comparable with the average wage. The table presents estimates of cash income for 1986-87 onwards. Estimates for previous years are not available on a consistent basis.

Food Surpluses

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the level of surplus of (a) arable and (b) livestock food production in (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) the EU in each year since 1990; and what is her estimate of these figures for each of the next three years.

Mr. Jack: There are many different definitions of surplus. However, if surplus is measured as production in excess of domestic consumption, the following table provides the latest estimates of self-sufficiency for the major agricultural commodities in the United Kingdom and the European Union. Estimates for future years are not available.

Self sufficiency for the major agricultural commodities in the United Kingdom and the European Union, 1990-92

Public Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if she will list the organisations and individuals outside her Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment; (2) if she will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Jack: A wide range of organisations are consulted with reference to appointments made by Ministers. Inquiries involve many divisions of the Ministry and to collate the details requested could not be achieved without disproportionate cost as the information is not held centrally.

Farm Subsidies

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers in the United Kingdom were paid over £1 million in subsidies; and what was the total amount of aid given to organic farming in Britain in the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Jack: It is not possible to establish, without disproportionate cost, the number of farmers in the United Kingdom paid over £1 million in subsidies.

No specific aid for organic producers has yet been paid but it is intended to begin an aid scheme later this year, made under the EC agri-environment regulation, which will encourage conversion to organic farming. Organic producers are of course able to benefit under all the schemes open to farmers generally. In addition, we have a programme of research and development into questions of concern to organic farmers and growers with funding of £1 million in the current financial year.

Farm Sizes

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms in the United Kingdom are in the size classification (a) under eight, (b) from eight to 40, (c) from 40 to 100, (d) from 100 to 200, and (e) over 200 farm size units; and what is the total business activity in each category, as measured by standard gross margins.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is given in the table.

Number of holdings in the United Kingdom and total ESU by ESU size group as at June 1993

Size of business ESUs	Number of holdings	[1]ESUs
<8	106,850	245,801

TOTAL	244,205	8,755,717

Note:
Data in this table exclude minor holdings.
[1] 1 European size unit (ESU) equals 1,200 ECU of Standard Gross Margin (average value 1987-1989).

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list for each civil service grade in her Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Jack: The information set out as at 1 March 1994 relates to non-industrial staff in MAFF, excluding agencies.

Grade	Full-time male	Full-time female	Part-time male	Part-time female	Total
Grade 1	1	0	0	0	1

The figures are given by grade equivalent and include all permanent staff, casuals and staff on temporary release. Part-time staff are counted as 1·0.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Maxwell Pensions Unit

14. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the progress made by the Maxwell Pensions Unit.

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of state for Social Security what progress has been made by the Maxwell Pensions Unit on behalf of Maxwell pensioners.

Mr. Hague: The Maxwell Pensions Unit continues to encourage an early resolution to Maxwell pensions disputes. It is providing substantial administrative support to the Maxwell Pensioners Trust initiative to secure an overall settlement to pensions disputes. The Government fully support this initiative, and we are continuing to urge all parties to participate constructively. A speedy settlement which keeps legal action to a minimum must be in everyone's best interests, especially the pensioners'.

Child Support Agency

15. Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will consider changes in the Child Support Agency regulations where the amount of child support received by the parent with care extinguishes her entitlement to income support; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We have no specific proposals for further changes. We will, however, continue to keep the scheme under close scrutiny.

22. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he has to alter the formula for calculating maintenance payments under the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Scott: We have no specific proposals for further changes. We will, however, continue to keep the scheme under close scrutiny.

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Doncaster, North can expect to receive replies to his letters to the Child Support Agency chief executive of 17 December, PBU 03452, and 7 January PBU 03670.

Mr. Scott: I understand that Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive of the Child Support Agency, replied to the hon. Member on 24 March.

Private Pensions

16. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he next intends to meet the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board to discuss the regulations of the private pensions sector.

Mr. Hague: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board on 23 March.

Pensioners (Government Expenditure)

17. Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much extra money the Government are spending each year on poorer pensioners, since the 1988 reforms.

Mr. Hague: The total extra help above the normal upratings that will be made available to pensioners on income-related benefits since 1988 will be worth around £1·2 billion in 1994-95.

Benefit Tourism

18. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he is planning to combat benefit tourism.

23. Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he is taking to limit the payment of United Kingdom benefits to foreigners.

Mr. Lilley: The Government have referred a proposal for an habitual residence test in the income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit schemes to the Social Security Advisory Committee and the local authority associations. Once the consultation process has been completed, regulations will be laid before Parliament.

25. Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to ensure that people from abroad, who are allowed to enter this country on condition that they will be no burden on public funds, will not be allowed to claim benefit.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if people from abroad who come into this country on the condition that they will be no burden on public funds will be prevented from claiming benefit.

Mr. Hague: Persons from countries outside the European Union are generally admitted to this country on the understanding that they do not become a charge on public funds while they are here. The income support rules exclude them from receiving that benefit except in very closely defined circumstances. Regulations were recently laid before the House to take effect from 1 April which will bring the housing benefit and council tax benefit rules into line with the income support rules.

Benefits (Working Women)

20. Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what social security benefits are payable, and what other measures his Department is taking, to help working women.

26. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps his Department has taken to help women at work.

Mr. Hague: We have recently announced new measures which will particularly assist working women. About 150,000 families will benefit from the introduction in October 1994 of a disregard for child care in family credit which will be worth up to £28 a week. Improved maternity payments which take effect in July will benefit around 285,000 working women who give up work around the time of their baby's birth.

In addition, working women may be able to claim income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit depending on their hours of work and incomes, and child benefit and family credit if they have children.

Pregnant Workers Directive

21. Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what response his Department is making to the pregnant workers directive.

Mr. Hague: I announced the proposed changes to maternity benefits on 8 March in my reply to the hon. Member for Erewash (Mrs. Knight).

Pensioners

24. Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners in the west midlands are in receipt of either income support or housing benefit.

Mr. Hague: In May 1992, 130,000 pensioners were receiving housing benefit alone from local authorities in the standard west midlands region and 270,000 pensioners were receiving income support in the midlands administrative region for social security.

2. Pensioners have been defined as recipients aged 60 or over, or with a partner aged 60 or over.
3. All figures are in benefit units. A benefit unit may be a single person or a couple.
4. The standard west midlands region covers the counties of Shropshire, Warwickshire, Hereford and Worcester, Staffordshire and the metropolitan district of west midlands.
5. The midlands administrative region for social security covers most of the east and west midlands.

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner households were, in 1979 and in the last year for which figures are available, below the 1979 supplementary benefit level.

Mr. Hague: Official estimates are available only for 1979. They were published in the "Low Income Families" series. Following a technical review in 1988 LIF was superseded by the "Households Below Average Income" series, which provides estimates of the pattern of disposable income across the United Kingdom population and analyses change over time. The latest edition of HBAI, published in 1993, shows a reduction in the number of pensioners in the bottom 10 per cent. of the income distribution from 31 per cent. in 1979 to 11 per cent. 1990-91 when measured after housing costs or 36 per cent. and 22 per cent. respectively before housing costs.

Copies of both publications are in the Library.

Family Credit

27. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of families who are worse off as a result of claimants moving from income support to family credit in 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Hague: The information requested is not available. However, recent research by the Policy Studies Institute indicated that couples in work with family credit were on average £18 per week better off than when out of work.

VAT on Fuel

Mr. John Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what calculations he has made of (a) the amount of VAT at 8 per cent. on fuel will add to the cost of each unit of electricity consumed and (b) the number of units on which 50p will pay the additional VAT.

Sir John Cope: I have been asked to reply.

The answers would depend on the particular electricity company, and factors such as whether standard tariff or Economy 7 tariff is used.

The Government have made available a very substantial package of help, which will cost up to £1,250 million a year from April 1996 onwards.

Pensioners and disabled people are likely to find, on average, that this extra help from the Government will broadly cover all changes in the price of fuel, including VAT, over the course of this Parliament.

Maintenance Payments

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department gained for income support claimants in maintenance payments from absent parents in the last year before responsibility was transferred to the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Scott: The total amount of maintenance obtained through DSS action for income support claimants in 1992-93 was £220 million.

Records of maintenance payments from liable relatives kept during the last year before responsibility for child maintenance was transferred to the Child Support Agency do not distinguish between payments from absent parents, spouses and the sponsors of immigrants.

Partial Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to introduce a partial incapacity benefit.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to do so.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what major building projects valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1988 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

Mr. Hague: There is one such project. In Doncaster there is a joint Benefits Agency/Property Holdings project to assist the rationalisation of the district organisation. This project began in 1993 and is due to be completed during 1995-96 at an anticipated cost of £1·445 million.

Income Support

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide details of the most recent estimate of the take-up rate of income support, by caseload and by entitlement; and, by reference to the former measure, how many individuals are not claiming their entitlement.

Mr. Hague: Estimates of the take-up of income related benefits for Great Britain were published in "Income Related Benefit Estimates of Take-up in 1990 and 1991" on 25 March 1994, a copy of which is in the Library.

Maintenance Prosecutions

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give details for the last three years of the number of prosecutions and their outcomes for failure to maintain under section 105 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992, formerly section 26 of the Social Security Act 1986.

Mr. Scott: The available information is in the table.

Criminal Proceedings: Section 26 of Social Security Act 1986

	1989	1990	1991
Against the liable person	39	11	4
Convictions	18	1	4
Sentenced to a term of imprisonment	2	—	—
Fine or imprisonment	8	1	2
Suspended sentence	—	—	—

Bronchitis and Emphysema

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide details of (a) the total number of claims to date received for prescribed disease D12—coal miners' chronic bronchitis and emphysema—(b) the total number of awards for prescribed disease D12 to date and (c) the total number of refusals for prescribed disease D12 and the grounds for these disallowances.

Mr. Scott: As at 20 March 1994, about 38,700 claims had been received for the prescribed disease D12, chronic bronchitis and emphysema. Of the claims so far decided, about 2,600 have been awarded benefit, and about 18,400 have been disallowed. Most of those disallowed failed to satisfy the medical conditions, about 940 failed to satisfy the occupational prescription requirements and a very small number were already being fully compensated for the diseases in an award for pneumoconiosis—PD D1. All figures are based on a 100 per cent. count and are subject to amendment.

Disability Working Allowance

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures (a) will be introduced and (b) are under consideration in order to improve the coverage and take-up of disability working allowance.

Mr. Scott: We have announced three changes to improve take-up of disability working allowance. From October 1994 we will introduce a child care costs exemption of £40 per week in cash terms. From April 1995 there will be automatic remission of NHS charges for those with savings of £8,000 or less and we will extend access to disability working allowance for those undertaking training for work. We have commissioned extensive independent research to examine coverage and take up; final evaluation is expected to be completed in 1996.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total amount allocated for housing benefit reimbursement in 1993.

Mr. Hague: The total amount of housing benefit subsidy paid to local authorities in Great Britain for the 1992-93 financial year was £6,613 million; the estimated expenditure for 1993-94 is £7,861 million.
Source:
The Social Security Departmental Report: March 1994

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of (a) housing association tenancies, (b) council tenancies and (c) private tenancies received housing benefit in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Hague: The proportion of housing association, council and other privately rented tenancies in receipt of housing benefit in 1992-93 were 46 per cent., 62 per cent. and 45 per cent. respectively.

Notes:
1. The quarterly caseload information includes estimates for non-responding authorities.
2. The housing and construction statistics are estimates based on the 1991 census and information from local authorities; the number of dwellings includes unoccupied dwellings.

Benefits (Young People)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on social security payments available to those aged under 25 years.

Mr. Hague: A wide range of social security benefits is available to those aged under 25, subject to their individual circumstances. Income support recipients under 25 years old are entitled to a lower rate of benefit than those aged 25 or over. There are a number or reasons for this, such as the lower earnings expectations of younger people and the fact that a large majority of younger people receiving benefits do not live independently. It would be wrong for benefit levels to offer an attractive alternative to work or to training for work or an incentive to leave home.

Personal Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, for each year since 1986, each publicity campaign run by his Department regarding personal pensions together with the cost of each campaign; and if he will place representative copies of press advertisements and other literature in the Library.

Mr. Hague: In January 1988 the Department of Health and Social Security ran a general campaign which included personal pensions at a cost of £1·2 million. In March 1994 the Department of Social Security ran a campaign costing £100,000.

I am placing copies of relevant material in the Library.

Pension Funds

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will make a statement on his policy concerning pension funds and their trustees following the decision on 26 July 1993 of Vinelott J. in McDonald and others v. Horn and others—Chancery division Nos. 2931M and 5995M of 1992;

(2) if he will make it his policy to enable pensioners to be funded in advance for disputes with their pension funds, subject only to leave from a High Court master; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will introduce measures relating to pension fund disputes which would help to reduce the uncertainty surrounding pre-emptive orders for costs; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will introduce measures to require the trustees of pension funds to appoint an independent trustee or arbitrator to report on the claims against such funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: The Pensions Law Review Committee considered the role of pension scheme trustees and dispute resolution procedures as part of its wide-ranging review of pension matters. We are currently considering the PLRC's recommendations and will announce our conclusions in due course.

Quarry House, Leeds

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the making of the television programme "Here and Now" at Quarry house, Leeds, constituted a breach of security; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: The element of the television programme "Here and Now" which involved internal filming in Quarry house did not constitute a breach of security. Those involved were authorised visitors to the building.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Hague: The information requested for permanent staff employed by the Department, including its agencies, on 28 February 1994 is in the table.

Grade (including equivalent professional and other grades)	Male		Female
	Full-time	Part-time	Full-time	Part-time
Grade 2	4	0	0	0
Grade 3	14	0	3	0
Grade 4	6	0	3	0
Grade 5	92	1	25	4
Grade 6	240	2	66	7
Grade 7	543	3	142	10
Senior Executive Officer	1,090	4	373	9
Higher Executive Officer (D)	11	0	6	0
Higher Executive Officer	3,418	9	2,295	228

Others	43	1	82	34
Totals	31,136	436	51,122	12,997

Notes:

1. The table excludes:—
   (i) staff on loan or secondment and not being paid by the Department.
   (ii) staff on unpaid leave for more than 3 months or on unpaid maternity leave.
   (iii) casual staff.

Invalidity Benefit

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the European Court of Justice to consider the case of women on invalidity benefit whose payments are reduced when they reach 60 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 3 March at column 821.

Performance Targets

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what performance targets he is setting for his Department's executive operations for 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: The targets for 1994-95 which I have set for DSS executive operations are set out below. The targets support the continued success of the Government's "next steps" agencies and citizens charter initiative.

The targets represent a challenging level of performance and a year-on-year improvement in the service that the customers receive. In particular, I have set a comprehensive list of targets for the new War Pensions Agency to be launched in April.

As well as the performance targets, agencies have been set resource management targets requiring them to deliver their plans within their agreed financial allocation and, where appropriate, to make efficiency savings.

Targets for the Child Support Agency will be announced as soon as they have been finalised.

The business plans of the Benefits Agency, Contributions Agency and the Resettlement Agency have been published today, the War Pensions business plan will be published on 13 April. The Information Technology Service Agency's business plan will be published shortly. The Child Support Agency's business plan will be published after the targets have been finalised. I will arrange for copies of business plans to be placed in the Library.

The targets are:

Benefits Agency

1. Benefit Clearance Times[1]
   Social Fund Crisis Loans—the day the need arises.
   Income Support New Claims—71 per cent. of claims cleared in 5 days and 90 per cent. in 13 days.
   Sickness and Invalidity Benefit Claims—65 per cent. of claims cleared in 10 days and 95 per cent. in 30 days.
   Child Benefit—67 per cent. of claims cleared in 10 days and 95 per cent. in 30 days.
   Family Credit—60 per cent. of claims cleared in 13 days and 95 per cent. in 42 days.
   Disability Living Allowance—68 per cent. of claims in 30 days and 85 per cent. in 53 days.
2. Benefit Accuracy
   Income Support—to pay the correct amount in 92 per cent. of cases.
   Incapacity Benefits[2]—to pay the correct amount in 96·5 per cent. of cases.
   Family Credit—to pay the correct amount in 93 per cent. of cases.
   Disability Living Allowance—to pay the correct amount in 96 per cent. of cases.
3. Customer Satisfaction
   85 per cent. of customers to regard the Agency's service as satisfactory or better.
4. Resource Management

Correct 91 per cent. of rejects from employers end of year returns by 31 March 1995.
3. Performance: information provision/customer service
Clear 99 per cent. of benefit enquiries handled clerically in 2 working days to 98 per cent. accuracy.
Despatch either a full reply, or an informative response, to 95 per cent. of all customer enquiries within 10 working days of receipt.
Complete action to register acceptable Personal Pension cases and process straight-forward Termination Notices for 94 per cent. of all cases within 24 working days of receipt.
Provide a level of public service considered to be satisfactory by at least 80 per cent. of customers surveyed.

War Pensions Agency

1. Performance targets
Disablement 1st claims (UK)—60 per cent. of claims cleared in 150 days
War Widows claims (UK)—80 per cent. of claims cleared in 70 days
Disablement second and subsequent claims—60 per cent. of claims cleared in 135 days
Claims accuracy (all claims)—95 per cent.
Entitlement appeals—70 per cent. of appeals processed in 275 days
Assessment appeals—70 per cent. of appeals processed in 190 days
2. Customer satisfaction target
85 per cent. of clients to regard the Agency's service as satisfactory or better, as measured by an independent survey.

Resettlement Agency

1. Disengagement Strategy
Cease direct operation of four resettlement units by granting funds to suitable organisations who will provide similar resettlement services in the same premises by 31 March 1995.
Progress replacement proposals for Leeds and Bishopbriggs Resettlement Units to enable completion of the disengagement programme by 31 March 1996.
2. Grant management
Agree with DSS HQ by 31 March 1995 the aims and objectives of the business which will remain after resettlement unit closes in 1996.
By 30 June 1994, review and evaluate the initial programme of monitoring visits to grant-aided organisations. Produce a plan to address the problems found by 30 June 1994. Determine a framework for the following year's monitoring programme by 1 September 1994. Revise the standard conditions of award by 31 December 1994.
3. Customer Care
Survey of residents to confirm that not less than 85 per cent. express satisfaction with standards.
4. Resettlement
By 31 March 1995 place 625 resettlement unit residents into suitable alternative accommodation in the community.

Information Technology Services Agency

1. Manage ITSA's resources within the net running cost regime.
2. Deliver an overall business efficiency improvement of 5 per cent.
3. Deliver 80 per cent. of services to customers to service levels for budget, time and quality as agreed within contracts.
4. Prepare ITSA for outsourcing the bulk of its IT Processing functions to Departmental timescales.
5. Departmental Information Technology Authority (DITA) —provide agreed regulatory services within allocated resources.

HEALTH

Devon Divisional Ambulance Office

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will call for a report into the circumstances in which a prosecution of Devon divisional ambulance office failed due to the loss of prosecution documents; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: No. This is a matter for the Crown Prosecution Service.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will itemise by regional health authority and family health service authority the expenditure by general practitioner fund-holders of management allowances on (a) employment of staff, (b) use of loan services, (c) training, (d) buying in specialist advice, (e) purchase of equipment and (f) other in each year since 1990-91.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 26 January at column 298. More detailed information about the breakdown of reimbursement from the management allowance is available from regional health authorities.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the general practitioner fundholding practices in South Yorkshire; and if she will give the total spent out of the allocation for each practice for 1992-93 and the current year to date.

Dr. Mawhinney: There will be 152 fundholding practices in the Yorkshire region from 1 April 1994, covering 39 per cent. of the population. Regional health authorities are responsible for managing the general practitioner fundholding scheme in their areas. For local information about South Yorkshire the hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Bryan Askew, chairman of the Yorkshire regional health authority.

Private Health Insurance

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she has issued about the provision to senior managers in the national health service of private health insurance.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Fraud

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will draw the attention of agencies with auditor responsibilities inside the national health service to the new guidelines issued by the Auditing Practices Board regarding the duty to report fraud.

Mr. Sackville: No. External auditors of the national health service operate independently in accordance with their own code of practice or auditing standards.

Tattoo Removal

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she is taking to encourage the provision of services enabling disfiguring tattoos to be removed;

(2) to what extent her Department helps or encourages organisations which remove disfiguring tattoos.

Mr. Sackville: The removal of tattoos is available through the national health service where it is considered to be clinically necessary.

Hospitals, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed by the Doncaster royal and Montagu hospital NHS trust in (a) April 1992, (b) October 1992, (c) April 1993 and (d) October 1993.

Dr. Mawhinney: The most recent information available centrally is that 2,330 and 2,520 whole-time equivalent national health service staff were employed in Doncaster royal and Montagu hospital national health service trust on 30 September 1991 and 1992 respectively.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was, in cash terms, the rate of return on capital for the Doncaster royal and Montagu Hospital national health service trust in (a) 1992-93 and (b) 1993-94; and what rate is projected for 1994-95.

Mr. Sackville: The operating surplus of the trust in 1992-93 was £3·82 million, which represented a return of 7·2 per cent. on average net relevant assets. The forecast rate of return for 1993-94 and the projected rate for 1994-95 are estimated and unaudited information which is only appropriate for the internal performance management purposes for which it is collected.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many long-term hospital ward beds have been closed in the Doncaster area since the coming into effect of the community care provisions of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1991.

Mr. Bowis: Information about available beds on long-term care wards in Doncaster since the community care arrangements were introduced in April 1993 is a matter for the local health authorities or trusts.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Doncaster Royal infirmary and Mexborough Montagu hospital NHS hospital trust achieved its target rate of return on capital in 1992-93.

Mr. Sackville: Yes.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed by the Doncaster Healthcare NHS trust in (a) April 1993 and (b) October 1993.

Dr. Mawhinney: The most recent information available centrally is that 1,740 whole-time equivalent national health service staff were employed by the Doncaster Healthcare national health service trust on 30 September 1992.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was, in cash terms, the rate of return on capital for the Doncaster Healthcare NHS trust in 1993-94; and what rate is projected for 1994-95.

Mr. Sackville: The rate of return for 1993-94 will not be available until the trust prepares its accounts later this year. The information for 1994-95 is estimated and unaudited and is appropriate only for the internal management purposes for which it is collected.

Public Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is responsible for appointments listed in "Public Bodies 1993", a copy of which is available in the Library.

A full list of members and their remuneration was placed in the Library in July 1993.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment;

(2) if she will list the organisations and individuals outside her Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Sackville: No central record is maintained of the organisations and individuals consulted. The Department's aim is to appoint people from a broad range of different backgrounds, and many professional and voluntary bodies are consulted when appointments are made to public bodies.

Nominations for the chairmen and ministerial non-executive appointments to regional health authorities and national health service trust boards are sought from the chairmen of the appropriate regional health authorities.

Surplus Property

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she intends to take to ensure that redundant hospitals are disposed of promptly;

(2) what steps she takes to ensure that health authorities and NHS trusts pay due regard to the Department's estate code on property transactions in the NHS in disposing of surplus property.

Mr. Sackville: None. Health authorities and trusts are expected to follow the guidance contained in "Property Transactions in the NHS", and to conduct disposals expeditiously and in accordance with the advice of professional agents. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated current value of the national health service estate in the North Western regional health authority region which is surplus and is to be disposed of.

Mr. Sackville: North Western regional health authority estimate the value of surplus property available for disposal over the next 10 years to be about £56 million.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received concerning expenditure by Warrington Community NHS trust on maintaining empty properties; what guidance has been issued to trusts on these costs; and how they are counted for capital charging purposes.

Mr. Sackville: National health service trusts are responsible for managing their own estates.

The costs of maintaining property is a revenue cost accounted for through the trust's accounting procedures.

Capital charges are payable in respect of property in use based on an assessment of their existing use value. There is guidance on their reassessment of values for capital charges for empty property in the capital charges and trust equivalent manual.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to collect centrally information on hospital closures in England.

Mr. Sackville: No, these are for local decision except where statutory objections are raised. In her statement of 21 October 1993, Official Report, columns 398-412, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced changes to streamline and simplify central management. This requires that central reports are kept to a minimum.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 23 March, Official Report, columns 231-32, if she will list the known hospital closures contested by community health councils in each year between 1979 and 1988.

Mr. Sackville: Records of notification of proposed closures were not routinely collected before 1990. The previous reply provided all the information readily available.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what major building projects valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1989 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by her Department; and what was the cost of each project to her Department.

Mr. Sackville: The information is as follows:

Building projects since 1989 valued at over £1 million

	Expenditure to completion or estimated out-turn cost £	Recorded expenditure to date £
Doncaster
Doncaster royal infirmary phase 1 (west end development)	2,284,635	—

Wakefield
None

[1] Building projects currently under construction with a total value of over £1 million.

Dental Services

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average number of teeth of five-year-old children suffering from dental decay for (a) 1991 and (b) the most recent date for which information is available, analysed by district for England, in descending order of good health.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department has commissioned the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys to conduct surveys of the dental health of children at 10-year intervals. The most recent survey was carried out in 1993 and the report will be published later this year. Copies of previous survey reports and preliminary results of the 1993 survey are available in the Library.

Information on the dental health of five-year-old children is available from surveys by the British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry. Copies of the latest published report, which relates to a survey conducted in 1989-90, are available in the Library.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received in respect of dentists encouraging patients to join insurance schemes to cover dental care.

Dr. Mawhinney: We receive correspondence from hon. Members, dentists and members of the public on many aspects of dentistry including provision of private treatment.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have left the national health service in relation to dental care, in each family health service authority covering Coventry.

Dr. Mawhinney: Some 1,676 patients were deregistered in the Coventry family health services authority area between 3 July 1992 and 18 March 1994. The number who subsequently reregistered with another general dental practitioner is not known. On 3 July 1992 the number of patients registered with a national health service dentist in Coventry was 181,371. At 31 January 1994 the total was 181,463, an increase of 92.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how she is monitoring the numbers of dentists who have left the national health service (a) nationally and (b) in Coventry.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department collects information from all family health services authorities of the number of dentists who have given written notice to remove their names from the FHSA dental lists, and of the number of dentists who deregister patients. The Dental Practice Board supplies periodic reports on the numbers of dentists in contract to the FHSAs.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to review the level of dental charges (a) nationally and (b) in the Coventry area.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Government keep the level of national health service dental charges under regular review. Patient charges are determined nationally, and are not subject to local variation.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines she has issued for dentists regarding the encouragement of patients to take out private insurance schemes.

Dr. Mawhinney: The regulations governing general dental services stipulate that a dentist shall not, with a view to obtaining the agreement of a patient to undergo care and treatment privately, advise a patient that the care and treatment which is necessary to secure and maintain his oral health is not available from that dentist under general dental services. Nor may a dentist seek to mislead a patient about the quality of care and treatment available under general dental services.

Complaints

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many written complaints relating to hospital and community services were made in each year since 1982.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Truro (Mr. Taylor) on 25 March at column 462. Information for the year 1992-93 is not yet available.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to publish the report of the review of the national health service complaints procedure.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Members for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) and for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) on 24 March at column 411.

Family Health Services (Drugs Bill)

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the drugs bill for the family health services has been accounted for by prescription charges in each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: None. The family health services drugs bill does not include the income received from prescription charges.

PM10 Emissions

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made by her Department of the number of excess deaths associated with emissions of PM10; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 17 March at column 828.

Autism

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the efforts of the responsible bodies to make an early diagnosis and assessment of children with autism; what is the current assessment of the prevalence of autism in children; and how many autistic children have been so diagnosed.

Mr. Bowis: It is primarily a matter for the statutory authorities to monitor the arrangements for assessment in their area. It is estimated that the prevalence rate of autism is between four and five per 10,000 population.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS trusts coming into operation on 1 April will have a turnover (a) in excess of £50 million, (b) between £20 to £50 million and (c) less than £20 million.

Mr. Sackville: The financial plans of the fourth wave of national health service trusts are currently being discussed with purchasing health authorities and the outposts of the National Health Service Management Executive and will be finalised during April. We expect that the information will be available shortly after that.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with whom Touche Ross had a contract to advise on the financial performance of fourth-wave trust hospitals in the west midlands; and how much the contract was worth.

Mr. Sackville: The contract to advise on the financial viability of fourth-wave trust applicants was between Touche Ross and the National Health Service Management Executive of the Department of Health. It is inappropriate to disclose the value of the contract on the grounds of commercial confidentiality.

Waiting Times

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of patients are seen and assessed for treatment within five minutes of arriving in accident and emergency departments;

(2) what percentage of patients are seen within 30 minutes of their out-patient appointment time.

Dr. Mawhinney: In the quarter ending 31 December 1993, 83 per cent.—estimated based on samples—of patients attending accident and emergency departments were assessed immediately and 80 per cent.—estimated based on samples—of patients were seen within 30 minutes of their specified appointment time in out-patient clinics.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each civil service grade in her Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Sackville: The information shows the position on 23 March 1994:

Grade including grade equivalents)	Male	Female	Full-time	Part-time

Others[1]	96	70	153	13
Totals	2,452	2,653	4,818	287

[1]There are a number of grades, mainly in the youth treatment service, which do not easily equate to unified grades.

Casual staff have been excluded, as have staff on loan to other Government Departments, on maternity leave of more than three months, and on unpaid career breaks/study leave.

NHS Estates

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the current staffing levels of National Health Service Estates, setting out the number of staff (a) on permanent contracts and (b) on temporary contracts.

Mr. Sackville: The staffing level of the National Health Service Estates agency is as follows:

73 Staff on permanent contract
24 Staff employed on three-year fixed term contracts.
2 Staff employed on five-year fixed term contracts.
2 Staff employed on temporary contracts of less than one year.
27 Staff employed via Manpower Agency contract.
1 Temporary member of staff employed via a specialist financial employment agency.

NHSME Pamphlets

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pamphlets the National Health Service Management Executive has published since October 1993; and if she will list the title, the recipients and the cost.

Dr. Mawhinney: Since October 1993 the National Health Service Management Executive has published 15 pamphlets, leaflets and brochures. The table gives the description, cost and to whom they were sent.

Home Help

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her latest information on how much each local authority charges for home helps to people not on income-related benefits.

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 17 February at columns 931-32.

Medical Negligence

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 538, how many of the cases of medical negligence, and what costs, were associated with self-governing trusts.

Dr. Mawhinney: None for 1990-91, as there were no national health service trusts then. For 1991-92, the returns were incomplete, as previously stated, and it would be invidious to extract from the information already provided, the figures for NHS trusts that supplied them, without comparable details for others or for individual directly managed units.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 538, when she expects the information on medical negligence claims for 1992-93 to be available.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information for 1992-93 that has been supplied by national health service bodies by 31 March 1994 will be collated and will be available shortly after that.

Hospital Admissions

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to her answer of 8 March, Official Report, column 168, how many of the non-elective hospital admissions were from general practitioners fundholding practices in each region in each year;

(2) pursuant to her answer of 8 March, Official Report, column 168, how many of the non-elective hospital admissions were (a) readmissions and (b) self-referrals in each year in each region.

Mr. Sackville: The information available centrally on in-patient activity does not separately identify non-elective readmission rates, the level of self-referrals or whether individual patients are registered with fundholding or non-fundholding general practitioners.

Highfield Primary School, Leeds

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what inquiry she is making into the role of Leeds health authority in providing sex and health education advice to Highfield primary school, Leeds.

Mr. Sackville: Leeds community and mental health services national health service trust employs the school nurse who has provided a sexual health education class at Highfield primary school. The school, the local education authority and the trust are co-operating in determining the facts about the class and will take any necessary action once the facts of the matter have been established.

Hospital Statistics

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give by region (a) the number of new accident and emergency cases during 1992-93 and (b) the total out-patient attendances during 1992-93.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in "Outpatients and ward attenders for England: Financial Year 1992-93", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Radiation

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she has taken to examine ways of reducing children's artificial exposure to radiation, including X-rays.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 23 March 1994]: Practitioners carrying out medical exposures of radiation are required by regulation 4(3) of the Ionising Radiation (Protection of Persons Undergoing Medical Examination or Treatment) Regulations 1988 to keep doses of ionising radiation to the patient as low as reasonably practicable in order to achieve the required diagnostic or therapeutic purpose. A guide to good radiation practice was published in 1988 by the United Kingdom Health Departments, the National Radiological Protection Board and the Health and Safety Executive. These are the "Guidance Notes for the Protection of Persons against Ionising Radiations Arising from Medical and Dental Use", copies of which are available in the Library.

All practitioners wishing to administer radioactive medicinal products must hold a certificate issued under the Medicines (Administration of Radioactive Substances) Regulations) 1978. The Administration of Radioactive Substances Advisory Committee advises the Department and the United Kingdom Health Ministers on matters connected with the issue of certificates and has also issued guidance notes. Investigations concerning children are the subject of special advice within those guidance notes. The ARSAC keeps its advice under constant review.

Following the issue of health circular (89)18, copies of which are available in the Library, all health authorities were required to review the management of all departments making use of ionising radiation to ensure that they conformed to the statutory requirements and the guidance on good practice. They were also required to set up a system to review and periodically update their procedures in the light of changing guidance.

The Department of Health medical devices directorate issued safety guidelines for magnetic resonance diagnostic equipment in clinical use in 1993. Copies of the guidelines will be placed in the Library.

A further circular to the national health service is due to be issued later this year consolidating and updating advice on the statutory and management responsibilities in relation to the medical use of ionising radiations.

The Department is currently funding a research project designed to test the feasibility of parents keeping a radiation dose log book for their child's diagnostic and therapeutic radiation doses from birth until the age of five years.

The reduction in medical radiation doses for the whole of the population including children is under constant review. Officials are in contact with all the professional bodies involved in the medical use of ionising radiation and have regular discussions with them. Meetings and discussions are also held regularly with the royal colleges connected with radiology, the NRPB and the Health and Safety Executive.

The Royal College of Radiologists has produced a booklet entitled "Making the best use of a Department of Clinical Radiology—guidelines for doctors". This gives specific advice for paediatric radiology and copies will be placed in the Library.

NHS Administration

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost of employing managers, advisers, administrators and clerical staff in the NHS Management Executive, the NHS Supplies Authority, the Prescription Pricing Authority, the medical advisers support group and the Medicines Research Centre in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Dr. Mawhinney [pursuant to his reply, 28 February 1994, c. 603]: I regret that some of the figures in my previous reply were provided incorrectly as millions rather than thousands.

They should read:

"The total manpower costs for the medical advisers support group—properly named the Medical Advisers Support Centre —were £71,108 in 1990-91—part year in which the MASC was set up—£157,958 and £175,936 in 1991-92 and 1992-93 respectively. The total manpower costs for the Medicines Research Centre—MeReC—were £83,000 in 1990-91—part year in whch the MeReC was set up—£114,247 and £111,828 in 1991-92 and 1992-93 respectively."

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

The Attorney-General: The information is set out in the table below and is correct as at 1 March 1994.

Members of the legal secretariat to the Law Officers will be reflected, as appropriate, in the records of the Government Departments from which they are seconded.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Rail Information

38. Mr. Rowe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Transport about the degree of openness in the information being made available about the channel tunnel rail link and other rail developments.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have had no discussion with my right hon. Friend on this particular subject.

Tenders

39. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps his Department is taking to ensure that when tenders for public work are invited that they are in realistic commercial terms and without unnecessary contingent liabilities.

Mr. David Davis: The Government's guide to market testing, produced by my Department and published in August 1993, gives advice on how to invite tenders for central Government work. This is supplemented and updated as the need arises.

Civil Service

40. Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the change in the size of the home civil service since 1987; and what change is expected in the next seven years.

Mr. David Davis: Since 1987, the size of the civil service has been reduced by 51,480 to 546,340 the lowest number in the past 50 years.

Plans for the next seven years are not available, but plans for the next three years are published in the "Statistical Supplement to the Financial Statement and Budget Report", Cm 2519, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Citizens Charter

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, columns 84-85, whether the Government will introduce a regular annual report on the performance of public services against charter promises; and what alternative means he proposes to enable citizens to ascertain whether service standards are being improved year on year.

Mr. Waldegrave: It is essential that public services themselves report regularly and publicly on their performance against service standards so that people can see that standards are being raised. As I said in my response to the hon. Member for York on 21 March, Official Report, columns 84-85, reports on the initiative as a whole will be made to Parliament as and when appropriate.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, columns 84-85, who will decide when it is appropriate for a report on the citizens charter to be made to Parliament; and if he will take steps to involve citizens of the United Kingdom about the timing of such reports.

Mr. Waldegrave: After consultation with colleagues I will decide when it is appropriate for a report on the citizens charter to be made to Parliament. There are no immediate plans to involve citizens of the United Kingdom about the timing of such reports.

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 25 March 1994, Official Report, column 440.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the dates Ministers, or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985, including this year to date, on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to his Department.

Mr. David Davis: Information available shows that neither Ministers nor officials of the Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service and Science and its agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS. An official of the Central Office of Information used MAS on one occasion in June 1989 at a cost of £819.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. David Davis: In the departments and agencies for which I am responsible, and in other areas which fall to the Cabinet Office vote, the figures for non-industrial civil servants are:

Grade Band	Male		Female
	Full-time	Part-time	Full-time	Part-time

Figures at 23 March 1994.

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many civil servants were in post in each Government Department (a) in 1990 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available; and how many jobs, from which Ministry, have been contracted out or turned over to external agencies.

Mr. Waldegrave: Details of the number of civil servants employed by each Government Department are available in the Library of the House. The figures for 1 October 1990 were laid on 15 January 1991, Official Report, column 462, and for 1 October 1993 on 17 December 1993, Official Report, columns 972-73. Between 1 April 1992 and 31 December 1993, 12,291 civil service posts were contracted out as part of the competing for quality programme. Information about numbers of posts contracted out prior to 1 April 1992 and about contracting out which may have resulted from other initiatives is not held centrally.

Some 336,585 civil servants are currently employed in agencies created as part of the next steps initiative.

Charters

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many charters are in the course of preparation and in what areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Davis: The citizens charter second report, published on 16 March, sets out the good progress that has already been made on the citizens charter initiative, and show the plans for the future. Some 38 charters have now been produced. When it becomes an agency on 1 April, the Highways Agency will launch its own charter. Further and higher education charters for Northern Ireland will be published in the spring. Revised versions of the job seekers charter and the parents charter are also planned for the spring.

WALES

Health Promotion Authority for Wales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales concerning the removal of Mr. David Griffiths from the audit committee of the authority.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 25 March 1994]: None. This is a matter for the chairman and board of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales concerning the letter he received from Mr. David Griffiths, a board member of the authority;

(2) what representations he has received from Mr. David Griffiths, a member of the board of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales, concerning the financial management and audit procedures of the authority;

(3) when he proposes to respond to the letter from Mr. David Griffiths, a board member of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales, in relation to the financial management and audit procedure at the Health Promotion Authority for Wales.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 25 March 1994]: Mr. Griffiths wrote to me on 29 January 1994, setting out his concerns. He wrote a further letter on 18 March asking when he would receive a reply. The Chairman of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales provided information to assist my reply. A response was sent to Mr. Griffiths on 23 March.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those representations that have been made to him favouring the inclusion of Llanelly in the proposed new unitary authority of Powys.

Mr. Redwood: Since publication of the Local Government (Wales) Bill, I have received representations about the inclusion of Llanelly in the proposed Powys unitary authority from:

Powys county council
Blaenau Gwent borough council
Llanelly community council
Roger Evans MP

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those representations that have been made to him favouring the inclusion of Pentyrch in the proposed new unitary authority of Cardiff.

Mr. Redwood: Since publication of the White Paper "Local Government in Wales: A Charter for the Future", I have received one representation from Taff Ely borough council expressing opposition to the inclusion of Pentyrch in the proposed Cardiff unitary authority. Cardiff city council has written to express its support for the proposals in the White Paper, as have many members of the public.

Public Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment;

(2) what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons.

Mr. Redwood: The general procedure for the making of public appointments is contained in the Cabinet Office publication "Guide to Public Appointments Procedures" which is available in the Library of the House. Applicants to the Welsh Office register of candidates for public appointment complete a nomination form giving biographical information including a self-assessment of their background and skills. References are taken up on candidates considered for an appointment and a conflict of interest declaration is required from everyone who is offered an appointment. I take all relevant information into account in seeking to appoint the best candidate for the post.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment;

(2) if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Redwood: I consult such individuals and organisations as may be appropriate.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Redwood: The information at 1 March 1994 is shown in "Appointments by the Secretary of State for Wales" which is available in the Library of the House.

Housing

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will publish for each district council and for Wales as a whole at constant prices (a) the number of council houses, (b) the amount of guideline housing revenue account subsidy for 1994-95 and (c) the amount shown in (b) divided by the number of council houses;

(2) if he will publish for each district council and for Wales as a whole at constant prices (a) housing revenue account subsidy for 1993-94, (b) guideline housing revenue account subsidy for 1994-95 and (c) the percentage change of (b) compared with (a).

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on the number of council houses in each district and in Wales as a whole was given to the hon. Member in my reply of 9 March 1994, Official Report, columns 289-290.

Information on the amount of housing revenue account subsidy claimed by each district council and for Wales as a whole in 1993-94 was given to the hon. Member in my reply on 14 February 1994, Official Report, column 634.

An overall subsidy guideline for each district council is not provided. Local authorities calculate their housing revenue account subsidy entitlement for each year in accordance with formulae within the determinations which are issued annually. Copies of the determinations for 1994-95 have been placed in the Library of the House and authorities' subsidy claims for that year have not yet been received.

Development Board for Rural Wales

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what targets he has set the Development Board for Rural Wales for the sale of its industrial estates on the open market; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The development board has a commercial and industrial property disposal target of 150,000 sp ft in 1993-94. This is expected to raise receipts totalling some £2·7 million.

Seismic Activity, Newtown

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will initiate an urgent study into seismic activity in the Newtown area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Earthquakes in the Newtown area are adequately recorded by the British Geological Survey United Kingdom seismograph network which is operated by its global seismology research group from Edinburgh. BGS has already initiated a macroseismic survey of the recent earthquake in this area. It routinely undertakes such surveys after all significant earthquakes in the United Kingdom and did so following the nearby Bishops Castle earthquake in April 1990.

A more extensive study of the mid-Wales area was undertaken in 1984, by the British earthquake research group, following the event in April of that year. More generally, a study into "Earthquake Hazard and Risk in the UK" has been commissioned by the Department of the Environment from Ove Arup and Partners and the report was published in 1993 by HMSO. A copy of the report is in the Library of the House. A conclusion of the report is that, since there is only a small possibility of an earthquake —in the United Kingdom—causing significant damage, the risk to society is sufficiently low not to cause undue concern.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps have been taken to ensure the adequacy of emergency arrangements in the event of earthquakes in the Newtown area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: This is primarily a matter for Powys county council.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Redwood: The total number of persons employed by my Department are:

Tuberculosis

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information is held by his Department on the numbers of people and children infected by tuberculosis in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The number of notifications of tuberculosis in Wales by age is published annually in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys publication "Communicable disease statistics". The latest edition includes data for 1991 and is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children in Wales leave school without having been vaccinated against tuberculosis.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information is not available centrally in the form requested. However in the financial year 1992-93 there were 15,878 tuberculosis vaccinations given to children aged 15 and under. This figures does not include children in this age group who were vaccinated in a previous year.

Dental Services

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many general dental practitioners there are within each family health services authority in Wales; and how many in each area are accepting new patients who are entitled to receive free NHS dental treatment.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not available centrally in the format required. Family health services authorities have notified the Welsh Office that the position as at 24 March 1994 was as follows:

	(a) Number of general dental practitioners	(b) Number accepting all new NHS patients
Clwyd	106	[1]40
Dyfed	107	70
Gwent	154	22
Gwynedd	65	16
Mid Glamorgan	134	69
Powys	42	25
South Glamorgan	146	35
West Glamorgan	126	126

Notes:

1. These figures are not statistically validated.
2. Columns (a) and (b) may include dentists registered with more than one family health services authority.
3. [1] Denotes number of practices—number of GDPs not available.
4. Column (b) indicates number of dentists accepting all new patients. It does not include those dentists accepting only children and/or adults exempt from NHS charges.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many salaried dentists are employed by each family health services authority in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There are two salaried dentists employed by Gwynedd family health services authority and one by Dyfed family health services authority. A further salaried dentist will be employed by Powys family health services authority from 19 April 1994.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many community dentists are employed by each health authority and each hospital trust in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Provisional information, relating to staff in post in the community dental service, is given in the table.

	Staff in post as at 30 September 1993[1]
Health Authorities
Gwynedd	8·3

South Glamorgan Health Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the transfer of funding from South Glamorgan health authority to other Welsh health authorities; what consultations he has had in relation to the basis of the formula for allocating the capitation funding; what consultations he has had with the chairman of South Glamorgan health authority concerning the abatement of purchasing power; and if he will list the numbers of patients, specialties, operations and treatments affected by the alteration in the formula.

Mr. Redwood: Health authorities were consulted in January 1991 on options for a weighted capitation formula to be used to determine each authority's share of available revenue resources. After considering the responses from authorities, my predecessor informed the House on 21 March 1991, Official Report, columns 178-80, of his decision as to the most appropriate basis for this formula.

South Glamorgan HA's present share of revenue resources exceeds its formula share. It is intended that all authorities will attain their formula shares by 1998-99, with the shares of presently underfunded authorities increasing and those of overfunded authorities, including South Glamorgan, decreasing.

Although South Glamorgan HA's percentage share will decline, its cash allocation will be dependent upon the growth resources available and on inflation. The 10-year resource assumptions provided to health authorities for planning purposes show how their formula shares and cash allocations would move on the basis of annual real terms growth of 0·5 per cent.

This growth assumption was exceeded in the cash allocations for health authorities for 1994-95, which I announced on 16 March 1994, Official Report, column 698, South Glamorgan's allocation provides a cash increase of 2·05 per cent., over its allocation for 1993-94. Provided that the authority secures the minimum efficiency savings specified for all health authorities for 1994-95 and uses these savings to fund the cost of pay awards in 1994-95, there should be no abatement of its purchasing power. It will, in fact, have received a real terms cash growth of over 1 per cent. For these reasons, I have no plans to meet the chairman of the health authority.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 29 March 1994

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many magistrates were in post in 1993; and how many resigned for reasons other than age.

Mr. John Taylor: At 31 December 1993 there were 30,054 magistrates in post in England and Wales; during 1993, 1,043 magistrates resigned for reasons other than age.

Divorce Law Reform

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) people and (b) organisations have responded to the Green Paper on divorce law reform "Looking to the Future"; and what were their names.

Mr. John M. Taylor: As at 22 March, 533 responses had been received from private individuals and 103 from organisations, institutions or professional bodies.

Of these, 52 individuals and 78 others sent a written response only; 434 individuals and 15 others sent a completed questionnaire only; and 47 individuals and 10 others sent both a written response and a completed questionnaire.

Responses are still being received. Once they have all been received, I will write to the hon. Member listing those who have responded. A copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of both Houses.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many staff have been in the employment of his Department for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The number of staff who have been in the employment of the Lord Chancellor's Department for each of the last 10 years is set out in the table.

Total numbers of staff in the Lord Chancellor's Department

1992-93	11,774
[2]1993-94	[1]11,809

[1] Forecast.
[2] Estimated outturn.
These figures include part time staff who have been shown as whole numbers.

Redundancies

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to (a) make redundant and (b) seek voluntary redundancies from the staff of his Department in the next financial year; and how many and what grade of (i) civil servants and (ii) qualified lawyers he estimates will be affected.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor's Department has no plans to make members of staff redundant or to seek voluntary redundancies from the staff during the next financial year.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 7 March, Official Report, column 73, what percentage of the total number of staff employed, and how many qualified lawyers, are affected by the requests for voluntary redundancies by the Legal Aid Board.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Voluntary redundancy has been sought from approximately 9 per cent. of the staff employed by the Legal Aid Board. The board is seeking the voluntary redundancy of 11 qualified lawyers.

Matrimonial Cases

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answers of 9 February, Official Report, columns 249-50, about matrimonial cases, what plans he has to undertake an investigation into the arrangement between his Department and the Home Office immigration and nationality department; when it will be completed; and if he will place a copy of the report of the investigation in the Library.

Mr. John M. Taylor: An internal investigation conducted in February revealed that the facts of the matter were straightforward. The arrangement was made by officials of my Department, as described in my earlier answer, and was terminated as soon as it came to my attention. Measures have been put in place to ensure that no similar action can be taken without proper consideration. I do not propose to publish a report.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Government Information

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what changes have been made to the code of practice on Government information proposed in draft in the White Paper, "Open Government", Cm. 2290; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: In my statement of 15 July 1993, Official Report, columns 1115-17, I described the Government's plans for increasing openness in government. We received more than 100 consultation responses to the White Paper, many of which gave the proposals a broad welcome. I am placing a summary of the consultation responses and copies of the responses themselves in the Library of the House.

The White Paper proposed a new code of practice on Government information. This will come into effect on Monday 4 April. The draft code has been revised and improved since last summer. Copies of the new code have been placed in the Library of the House. Further copies of the code and of a leaflet describing the new system may be obtained by telephoning 0345 223242.

Ministers will be responsible for the performance of their Departments under the code of practice. Complaints that information has not been provided should be addressed in the first instance to the Department concerned. Where applicants are still dissatisfied, they can complain—through a Member of Parliament—to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration.

The code of practice means that, in future, anyone seeking information from Government Departments and public bodies can be assured that their request will be received positively. When there is a case for confidentiality it must be based on specific tests in part II of the code. I am confident that the advantages of the code, which puts into practice key principles of the citizens charter, will rapidly become apparent.

PRIME MINISTER

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has had from the Government of Malta about luggage alleged to have left Luqa airport for the Rhein-Main airport in December 1988, destined to destroy Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie.

The Prime Minister: As my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate made clear in issuing warrants for the arrest of the two Libyans suspected of the Lockerbie bombing, the investigation concluded that the bomb which caused Pan Am 103 to explode over Lockerbie on 21 December 1988 was placed on board a flight from Luqa airport to Frankfurt, where it was transferred to flight PA 103. I have received no representations from the Maltese Government on this matter.

Engagement

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 29 March.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 29 March.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Bosnia

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Bosnia.

The Prime Minister: I visited central Bosnia and Sarajevo on 18 March. In central Bosnia I met British and other United Nations soldiers and civilian aid experts. I was impressed, as always, by their courage and professional dedication. UNPROFOR's achievements on the ground have helped to transform the situation in Bosnia and the prospects for a settlement.

In Sarajevo I met Bosnian Vice-President Ganic and General Rose. I announced a further £12 million of United Kingdom aid for Bosnia: £5 million to help rebuild Sarajevo, and £7 million to support the work of UN agencies throughout Bosnia. With the £2 million announced by my right hon. and noble Friend, Baroness Chalker, to support the Tuzla airlift, this brings total United Kingdom humanitarian aid to former Yugoslavia to £171·5 million.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Political Refugees

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many political refugees are settled in the United Kingdom at the present time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The available information on those given leave to remain in the United Kingdom as a recognised refugee is that in the period 1979 to end 1993 around 43,200 persons, including associated dependants, were given such leave. These comprise some 19,700 asylum applicants who were recognised as refugees and granted asylum in the United Kingdom, and 23,500 south-east Asian refugees accepted for settlement, mainly on arrival. Information on the number of these persons who have since died, left the country, obtained British citizenship or otherwise ceased to hold refugee status here, and information prior to 1979, is not available.

Persons granted asylum here apply for permanent settlement after four years. Information on persons accepted for settlement in the years 1979-92 on this basis, along with south-east Asian refugees, is published in table 8 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin Issue 22/90 "Refugee Statistics United Kingdom 1989" and Table 10.1 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin Issue 19/93 "Asylum Statistics United Kingdom 1992". Copies of both these publications are in the Library. Corresponding information for 1993 will be published in the summer.

Charity Commission

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the charities involved in the complaints of improper political activity investigated by the Charity Commission since 1990; and what are the dates of the investigation, the nature of the complaint and the conclusion in each case.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Since 1990 the Charity Commission has investigated 76 complaints concerning possible political or campaigning activity of which 24 have been upheld.

Formal reports have been published on two of these investigations: (i) "War on Want: Report of an Inquiry to the Charity Commissioners 15 February 1991" (ISBN 0-117-016128); and (ii) "Oxfam: Report of an Inquiry submitted to the Charity Commissioners 8 April 1991" (ISBN 0-117-016217). Both are available from HMSO. Full details on all 76 cases would be available only at disproportionate cost, but I will write to the hon. Member shortly with a summary based on those cases most recently concluded.

Metropolitan Police Area Crime Rate

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were recorded by the Metropolitan police within each division, for each category of crime during the 12 months ended 31 December 1993.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not yet available.

Criminal Justice Act 1993

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to implement the remaining provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 1993.

Mr. Howard: The following new provisions to combat money laundering are being brought into force on 1 April by means of Commencement Order No. 6: sections 18-19, 26, 32, 48, 50-51, 77 and 79. Section 77 implements schedule 4 of the Act and section 79 relevant consequential amendments in schedule 5.

Youth Detention

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his future policy will be on the detention of youths convicted of crimes.

Mr. Maclean: The Government's policy is to ensure that the courts have available to them a wide range of penalties, including custodial sentences. Custodial sentences in respect of young offenders aged 10 to 17 will be considerably extended by provisions in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill now before Parliament.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what forms of detention are available to deal with convicted youths; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The following sentences of detention are currently available to the courts after the conviction of young offenders between the ages of 10 and 17:

Detention during Her Majesty's pleasure for murder from age 10.

From age 14 (and from age 10 for manslaughter), terms of detention under section 53 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 up to the adult maximum are available for crimes which are punishable in the case of an adult with 14 years imprisonment or more. In addition 14 to 17-year-olds who are convicted of the offences of causing death by dangerous driving or causing death by careless driving while under the influence of drink or drugs may be sentenced to terms of detention under section 53 for a period up to the adult maximum penalty, which is 10 years. In the case of 16 and 17-year-olds, a term of detention under section 53 is also available for the offence of indecent assault on a woman up to the adult maximum, which is 10 years.

For juveniles aged 15 to 17, detention in a young offender institution for a maximum of 12 months is available for any offence for which an adult may be sentenced to imprisonment.

"Black Book of Captain Ramsey"

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the present whereabouts of the "Black Book of Captain Ramsey"; and if he will make it available for public inspection and publication.

Mr. Howard: A check of departmental records has revealed reference only to a ledger known as the "Red Book", which lists membership of the Right Club. The ledger is currently in private hands.

Visitors (Pakistan)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors from Pakistan have overstayed for each year since 1987.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Comprehensive information on the number of visitors who remain in the United Kingdom after the expiry of their leave is not available.

Sex Shops

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many sex shops there are in each English district council and London borough.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not recorded centrally.

Deputy Lords Lieutenant

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what clothing, travel or other allowances are available from public funds to deputy lords lieutenant.

Mr. Charles Wardle: There is no provision for the payment of allowances or expenses to deputy lieutenants from central funds.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what major building projects valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1989 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

Mr. Howard: The information is set out in the table:

Area	Project	Total cost £ million	Cost to the Home Office £ million
Doncaster	Works complex HM young offenders institution, Hatfield (commenced 1988)	1·0	1·0
Doncaster	Construction of HM prison Moorland (commenced 1990)	47·2	47·2
Doncaster	Construction of HM prison Doncaster (commenced 1990)	82·0	82·0
Doncaster	Conversion of dormitories into cubicles, HM prison Lindholme (commenced 1993)	3·7	3·7
Wakefield	Works Unit HM prison, Wakefield (commenced 1988)	1·1	1·1

Area	Project	Total cost £ million	Cost to the Home Office £ million
Wakefield	Cell block, HM prison New Hall (commenced 1989)	4·5	4·5
Wakefield	Chapel and Sportshall HM prison, Wakefield (commenced 1990)	1·9	1·9
Wakefield	Kitchen and other facilities, HM prison New Hall (commenced 1991)	3·1	3·1
Wakefield	Dispersed gas boilers HM prison, Wakefield (commenced 1992)	1·8	1·8
Wakefield	Ossett divisional police headquarters (commenced February 1992)	1·4	0·714
Wakefield	Hospital and mother and baby unit, HM prison New Hall (commenced 1993)	1·9	1·9

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment;

(2) if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Howard: When making appointments I seek information from a variety of sources, including professional bodies, other Government Departments, the public appointments unit at Cabinet Office and any others that I consider relevant.

Chief of Defence Staff

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he was first informed that the position of Sir Peter Harding as Chief of the Defence Staff might be compromised.

Mr. Howard: I first became aware of the circumstances leading up to the resignation of Sir Peter Harding on Sunday 13 March.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Plymouth Council (Prosecutions)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Attorney-General what estimate has been made of the cost to the Crown Prosecution Service of prosecuting a number of Plymouth councillors under section 106 of the Local Government Act 1992.

The Attorney-General: The estimated costs to the Crown Prosecution Service of the prosecution of 14 past or present Plymouth city councillors under section 106 of the Local Government Finance Act 1992 are £10,900. This figure is inclusive of all case preparation, disbursements, and court attendances before and during the trial.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Goodlad: The percentage of (a) Asians and (b) black people appointed to public bodies by my Department in 1993 was:

(a) 13·33 per cent.
(b) 0 per cent.

It is not our policy to provide details of the ethnic origins of appointees.

Occupied Territories

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Israeli Government about the desirability of releasing more prisoners to aid the peace process in the occupied territories.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We and European Union partners regularly make representations to the Israelis to urge them to release Palestinian detainees.

Asil Nadir

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to secure the return to the United Kingdom of Asil Nadir.

Mr. Goodlad: We have an extradition treaty with the Republic of Cyprus, but the writ of the lawful Government does not run in the north of the island. Officials of the Serious Fraud Office have pursued their investigations in both Turkey and northern Cyprus.

North Korea

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the mandate of the International Atomic Energy Agency team in North Korea; and to what extent it has been allowed to carry out that mandate.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On 15 February, North Korea agreed to open its seven declared nuclear facilities to IAEA inspections, and to the agency's requirements for inspection at each facility. On 21 March, the IAEA director general stated that the inspections, carried out between 3 and 14 March, had not permitted the agency to conclude that nuclear material had not been diverted for military use in North Korea since February 1993. Agency inspectors were not allowed to proceed with a full inspection at one of the declared nuclear facilities as previously agreed.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 23 March, Official Report, column 292, if he will list the number of contracts and their costs with management consultants in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Goodlad: The number of management consultancy contracts and their costs for the latest year for which figures are available ie 1992-93 is:

	Number	£
Diplomatic wing	4	129,000
Aid wing	8	451,907

(this excludes management consultancies awarded under the aid programme)

Human Rights (China)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the systematic killing of handicapped babies in China; what representations he has made to the Chinese Government concerning this abuse of human rights; and if he will raise this issue with the United Nations Secretariat dealing with human rights.

Mr. Goodlad: We have not received any representations about this issue. We regularly raise human rights, including population policy issues, with the Chinese authorities, urging them to adhere to internationally approved standards of behaviour. We co-sponsored a resolution on China, with our European partners, at this year's session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, which specifically drew attention to reports of forced abortion. But it was stopped by a no-action motion introduced by the Chinese.

Palestine

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about progress to increase protection for the Palestinian people in the occupied territories.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Details of the international presence and other measures to protect the Palestinians in the occupied territories called for in United Nations Security Council resolution 904 are the subject of on-going negotiations between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organisation.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Goodlad: The information is as follows:

The latest available figures are:

	Grades[1]
	1	2	3	4[2]	5	6	7	below 7
Women
Number	—	1	4	—	25	19	129	2,953
Percentage of all staff	—	3 per cent.	4 per cent.	—	7 per cent.	11 per cent.	17 per cent.	38 per cent.
Ethnic minority respondents[3]
Number	—	—	—	—	2	1	4	291
Percentage of all staff	—	—	—	—	0·6 per cent.	0·6 per cent.	0·5 per cent.	4 per cent.
Registered disabled staff[4]
Number	—	—	—	—	1	—	—	57
Percentage of all staff	—	—	—	—	0·3 per cent.	—	—	0·7 per cent.

[1] Grades which are not part of the Open Structure have been aggregated with the equivalent Open Structure grades.
[2] There is only one individual employed at this grade.
[3] Includes only those members of staff who have responded to questionnaires; there is no compulsion on staff to record their ethnic origin, although well over 90 per cent. have done so.
[4] Includes only staff who are registered disabled.

Security Contracts

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contracts his Department has put out to tender for the supply of security services at its buildings; how many of them cover the protection of classified information held on the premises; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office puts out to tender contracts for security services at its premises overseas, but these do not directly concern the protection of classified material. Information on the number of such contracts is not readily available. As regards the FCO's buildings in central London, the guarding of the entrances and the patrolling of buildings where classified information is stored will shortly be put out to tender under the market testing programme. Six companies will be invited to bid, and the present in-house team will also be tendering. The FCO will award the contract to the contractor which offers the best overall value for money.

East Timor

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what position the United Kingdom has taken at the United Nations since 1974 on the legality of the Indonesian occupation of East Timor.

Mr. Goodlad: We do not recognise the Indonesian annexation of East Timor.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the British Government will support an economic embargo being imposed against Indonesia until that country ends its occupation of East Timor; and what other sanctions against Indonesia the British Government will support to assist bringing this occupation to an end.

Mr. Goodlad: No. Sanctions would be neither appropriate nor effective.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many meetings have been held between representatives of Her Majesty's Government and the Indonesian Government to discuss human rights issues in East Timor since January 1993.

Mr. Goodlad: Our regular discussions with the Indonesians cover a wide range of issues, including human rights.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of the human rights situation in East Timor since March 1993.

Mr. Goodlad: We believe that the human rights situation in East Timor continues steadily to improve.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest situation in East Timor.

Mr. Goodlad: We are encouraging Indonesia and Portugal to continue to co-operate with the United Nations Secretary-General to find a solution to East Timor. We therefore welcome the return to consensus language at this year's session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights and hope that it will help provide an atmosphere conducive to progress at the next round of talks on the territory's future between Portugal and Indonesia under the Secretary-General's auspices in May.

Mr. Raja

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons Her Majesty's consulate in Düsseldorf refused to see Mr. Raja, case number MP A363834/6, PO 24915/93, husband of Mrs. Carol Raja, of 145 High street, Linlithgow, when he applied for an interview.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 17 March 1994]: The consulate-general in Düsseldorf has never refused to see Mr. Raja. He and his wife were interviewed in June and August 1993 respectively, after which his application was referred to the Home Office. The Home Office refused it in December 1993, but the relevant papers never reached the post, for reasons that we have been unable to establish. A further copy was sent to Düsseldorf by fax on 15 March. The consulate-general wrote to Mr. Raja so to inform him, and enclosing an appeal form, the following day.

European Parliament, Strasbourg

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the cost of building the new European Parliament in Strasbourg; and whether the United Kingdom supported the expenditure.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 28 March 1994]: A decision was taken at the Edinburgh European Council in December 1992 on the seat of the European Parliament and of other Community institutions. It is for the European Parliament itself to decide policy on buildings in the light of that decision.

UNITA

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he intends to take to enforce the measures imposed under paragraph 19 of resolution 864 (1993) against UNITA.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: United Nations Security Council resolution 864, imposing sanctions against UNITA, was implemented in the United Kingdom under the United Nations Act 1946 by the Angola (United Nations Sanctions) Order 1993, SI 2355, which came into force on 1 October 1993. A copy is available in the Library of the House of Commons.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to expel UNITA's official representative in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The long tradition of free political expression in the United Kingdom means that anyone can set up a representative office here. So long as staff of the office comply with our laws—and I am not aware of any evidence that they have failed to do so—there is no basis in United Kingdom law for closing the office. This position is well understood by the Angolan Government.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will consult with his counterparts on the United Nations Security Council to enforce the sanctions against UNITA in Angola, Zaire, South Africa and in the various locations where UNITA enjoys the benefits of its material and financial assets.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Operative paragraph 22 of the United Nations Security Council resolution 864, imposing sanctions against UNITA, established a Committee of the Security Council consisting of all the members of the council to oversee and advise on the implementation of those sanctions. The United Kingdom is a member of this committee and has participated fully in its work.

Turkey

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people have been killed by Turkish security services during the past year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are no reliable statistics. Our embassy in Ankara estimates, on the basis of press reports and other information, that some 1,370 alleged terrorists, 720 civilians, and 650 members of the security forces have been killed during the past year.

Iran

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to Iran regarding the number of dissidents abroad; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas-Hogg: We and our European partners frequently discuss this issue with the Iranian authorities.

Foreign and Commonwealth Office Letterheaded Paper

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) of 23 March, Official Report, column 292, what payment his Department has received from the Conservative and Unionist party for the mistaken use of letterheaded paper.

Mr. Hurd: The cost of the three sheets of headed notepaper used was less than a penny. No further costs were incurred since all photocopying and distribution was done by Conservative central office. It would be disproportionate to seek any reimbursement to the FCO from Central Office.

Norway (Whaling)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what concessions were made to Norway in respect of whaling activities within the context of that country's terms of accession to the European Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: As part of its terms of accession to the European Union, Norway agreed that its policy on whales will fully respect the European Community's existing legislation.

Commonwealth Institute

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further discussions are taking place between Government Departments on funding for the Commonwealth Institute after 1996.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: By long-standing convention, discussions of this nature between Departments are confidential.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what view the Government have formed about the quality of the work of (a) the Scottish Commonwealth Institute and (b) the regional centre of the Commonwealth Institute in Bradford.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The educational work of the Commonwealth Institute, Scotland and the institute's office in Bradford has been positive and useful.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the management committee of the Scottish Commonwealth Institute is determined; and what is its current membership.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Executive Committee of the Commonwealth Institute, Scotland, is determined by the board of the Commonwealth Institute, Scotland. Its membership is:

Sir Mark Russell KCMG—Chairman
T. J. Barron, MA PhD
J. C. Horobin, BSc PhD
G. Paton, MA MEd FEIS FITD
Miss A. J. B. Sloan, MA

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the membership of the board of the Scottish Commonwealth Institute; and what representation it has made to the Government about the future of the Commonwealth Institute in Scotland.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Membership of the board of the Commonwealth Institute, Scotland is as follows:

Chairman—Sir Mark Russell, KCMG

Members nominated by educational and local government bodies:

E. T. Laing, BSc MSc
Association of Directors of Education
R. Paul, MA
Headteachers' Association of Scotland
J. W. Anderson, MA MEd
Headteachers' Association of Scotland
Miss M-R Caden, MA FEIS
Educational Institute of Scotland
G. M. Wilson, MA PhD
Joint Committee for Colleges of Education
Vacancy
Convention of Scottish Local Authorities
Councillor W. Speirs
Convention of Scottish Local Authorities
N. E. Paine, BE(hons) MA FITD
Scottish Council for Educational Technology

Members co-opted by the Committee:

T. J. Barron, MA PhD
K. W. Borthwick, CBE DL JP
J. R. Carson, MA
J. C. Horobin, BSc PhD
M. E. Jogee, JP
G. Paton, MA MEd FEIS FITD
Sarah J. Sieley, BA MEd PhD
Miss A. J. B. Sloan, MA

Assessors

D. Broad
Foreign and Commonwealth Office
D. Campbell
Scottish Office Education Department
I. K. Gamble, HMI
Scottish Office Education Department

Representations have been made to the Government through the committee of the Commonwealth Institute, Scotland, and through the executive committee of the board of governors.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Lord Armstrong took in reviewing the work of the Commonwealth Institute for his Department to visit (a) the Scottish Commonwealth Institute and (b) the Commonwealth Institute in Bradford and assess the work of staff.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: As an independent reviewer of the Commonwealth Institute, Lord Armstrong chose his own modus operandi. His views on the operation of the Commonwealth Institute, Scotland and of the Bradford office were formed from papers and interviews in London.

South Africa

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what approach he has made to Chief Buthelezi to urge Inkatha to take part in the South African elections.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary last met Chief Buthelezi on 6 September 1993. My right hon. Friend made it clear that we attach the utmost importance to the constructive participation of all major political figures in the peaceful transition to democracy in South Africa. My noble Friend Baroness Chalker of Wallasey spoke with Chief Buthelezi again in similar terms on 9 December 1993. Through our embassy in Pretoria we continue to keep in close touch with all South Africa's major leaders.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

D-day

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much Lowe Bell Communications is being paid for its work for the D-day anniversary.

Mr. Sproat: I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member for Redcar (Ms Mowlam) on 2 February at column 716.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what major building projects valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1992 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

Mr. Sproat: My Department has not financed any major building projects in Doncaster, Barnsley, Rotherham or Wakefield.

Slave Trade (Museum)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will consider the establishment of a national museum in Liverpool dedicated to the history of the slave trade.

Mr. Sproat: My Department does provide grant in aid to National Museums and Galleries on Merseyside, which is opening a new permanent gallery in October called "Transatlantic Slavery: Against Human Dignity" with the help of funding from the Peter Moores Foundation. This gallery will address the history of the transatlantic slave trade.

Sport (Museum)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what further consideration he has given to the creation of a national museum for sport to be situated on Merseyside.

Mr. Sproat: I understand that Liverpool city council is carrying out a feasibility study on a possible museum of sport based on Merseyside. The backers of such a project would be responsible for taking it forward and for ensuring the necessary funds.

Disabled Employees

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many registered disabled people are employed in his Department; and what percentage this is of the total.

Mr. Sproat: The information requested is contained in the annual disability report in the magazine "Independent" which was published on 18 March 1994. The publication of this magazine was announced in a written reply on 18 March at column 874 and copies are available in the Libraries of the House.

Museums and Galleries (Attendance)

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish the attendance figures covering the financial year ended 31 March reported by the national museums and galleries in England for which he is responsible, broken down into individual institutions but including their outstations, with figures in each case of the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Sproat: I refer to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member on 14 February at column 578.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the objects and property accepted in satisfaction of inheritance tax during the financial year ended 31 March; and if, in listing these, he will specify (a) the amount of tax satisfied in each case, (b) whether any offers of objects carried conditions as to destination, (c) the dates in each case of the recommendations received by him from the Museums and Galleries Commission for the acceptance of objects, (d) the total for the financial year of the tax this satisfied and (e) how much of this total was covered in the public accounts by means of resort to the reserve in accordance with Government policy as announced on 26 July 1985, Official Report, column 779.

Mr. Sproat: The Department will, before the end of this financial year, be announcing the acceptance of a further four items in lieu of tax. In the interest of completeness I will reply to the hon. Member on the day of that announcement.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The total number of full-time and part-time male and female staff in each grade within the Department of National Heritage, excluding its two executive agencies, the Historic Royal Palaces and the Royal Parks, are listed in the table:

DNH staff as at 28 February 1994

WALES

Head Teachers, Clwyd

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what advice he has given to Clwyd county council in respect of head teacher pay awards and consequential efficiency savings.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education has consulted interested parties on his proposals for implementing the recommendations of the third report of the School Teachers' Review Body and on the first of two pay and conditions orders which would give effect to its recommendations. The review body's recommendations took account of evidence from the Government, the teacher unions, the employers, and Government provision for local authority spending in 1994-95. The review body also took the view that "there is significant scope for . . . efficiency savings". Decisions on the scope for such savings and the implementation of the pay award are matters for the employers.

National Curriculum

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had concerning the national curriculum as it affects primary schools; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: In response to concerns by teachers and parents about the manageability of the national curriculum in both primary and secondary schools, my right hon. Friend announced last year a review of the national curriculum and its assessment arrangements in Wales by the Curriculum Council for Wales and Sir Ron Dearing. I refer the hon. Member to the statements issued in response to the interim and final reports on the review on 2 August 1993 and 5 January 1994, copies of which are in the Library of the House and which were sent to all hon. Members in Wales.

Rehabilitation Therapy

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many patients with severe head injuries in (a) Wales and (b) each health authority area are currently receiving rehabilitation therapy within the NHS.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information his Department holds on the number of psychotherapists employed by the NHS in Wales in (a) the rehabilitation of all patients and (b) the rehabilitation of children with severe head injuries.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Psychotherapy is a form of treatment and can be carried out by medical and other professional staff. The following table gives the whole-time equivalent numbers of staff in post in Wales who are specifically designated as working in the field of psychotherapy. Other staff groups, whose work may include psychotherapy but not as a major part of their duties, are excluded.

	Number
Child psychotherapists[1]	4·3
Clinical psychologists[1]	182·9
Consultant psychotherapist[2]	0·6

[1] In post as at 31 December 1993.
[2] In post as at 30 September 1993.

Information relating to the number of psychotherapy staff involved in the rehabilitation of children with severe head injuries is not available centrally.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research studies his Department has commissioned in each of the last 10 years on the effects of rehabilitation programmes in Wales for patients who have suffered severe head injuries.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Research costing £1,118,000 into the rehabilitation of brain-injured adults is currently being funded jointly by the Welsh Office and the Department of Health. The project started in May 1992 and will take three years to complete. In addition the Welsh Office has funded two projects on rehabilitation following brain damage. These received some £60,000 between 1989 and 1992.

Insulin-dependent Diabetics

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the guidance he has issued to insulin-dependent diabetics in Wales regarding the methods they should use to dispose of (a) blood-glucose testing strips, (b) lancets and (c) hypodermic syringes and needles.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Guidance for insulin-dependent diabetics on the disposal of hypodermic syringes and needles has been provided under Welsh health circular WHC (FP)(87)24 dated 6 August 1987. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House. No guidance has been issued in respect of the disposal of blood-glucose testing strips or lancets.

Redundant NHS Hospitals

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many redundant NHS hospitals have been disposed of since 1987 without the benefit of planning permission.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not held centrally.

National Continence Week

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what projects his Department instigated in respect of national continence week.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Health Promotion Wales, on behalf of the Welsh Office, arranged for a continence awareness campaign during the period 13 to 19 March 1994. This ran in parallel with a Department of Health campaign in England.

Leaflets and posters, for the attention of the general public, were distributed to health authorities, family health services authorities, community health councils, NHS premises, general practitioners' surgeries, pharmacies, social services departments, health promotion units and voluntary organisations.

Continence advisers in Wales ran local campaigns, the details of which are not held centrally.

A bilingual helpline, charging local call rates, will operate in Wales until the end of March.

Dairy Farmers

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many dairy farmers there were in Wales in each year since 1985.

Mr. Redwood: The number of holdings on which the dominant activity is dairy farming is shown in the table. The information for 1993 is not yet available.

Ysgol Maes Garman Mold

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what response he has made to the delegation of pupils from Ysgol Maes Garman Mold he met on Monday 21 March regarding teacher losses at the school.

Sir Wyn Roberts: It is for Clwyd county council to decide from within its available resources the level of funding to be devoted to primary and secondary education in the county. Individual schools are funded according to the authority's local management of schools scheme, and it is the responsibility of the governing body of schools with delegated budgets to decide how many staff they should employ.

Farm Workers

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the total number of (a) farmers and (b) farm workers in Wales in each year since 1980.

Mr. Redwood: Information on the number of holdings and workers on those holdings is available from the annual June agricultural census and is shown in the following table.

Farms and farm workers in Wales[1]

Year	Holdings	Workers[2]
1980	29,508	21,144

Council Meetings (Transport)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consideration he has given to the availability of methods of transport for local councillors to attend meetings on his proposals for the reorganisation of local government in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: None.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what assessment he has made of the suitability of the present bus timetable linking Llandridod Wells and Llanelly Hill for the use of councillors wishing to attend council meetings;

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of his local government reorganisation in Wales on the ability of councillors to travel to and from council meetings by existing public transport routes within one day.

Sir Wyn Roberts: None.

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Redwood: Information on ethnic minority appointments as at 1 September 1993 is shown in "Public Bodies 1993", available in the Library of the House.

Education Authorities (Standard Spending Assessment)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the standard spending assessment for each education authority in Wales in 1993-94.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 25 March 1994 at column 453.

Mostyn Docks, Clwyd (Planning Application)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to answer the letter from Mr. P. McGreevy, chief executive of Delyn borough council, of 21 February, regarding the proposed planning application at Mostyn docks, Clwyd.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Secretary of State worte to Mr. McGreevy on 28 March.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Redwood: The position at 1 January 1994 is given in the following table:

	Number	Percentage
Women
Grade 1 and equivalents	0	0
Grade 2 and equivalents	0	0
Grade 3 and equivalents	1	8
Grade 4 and equivalents	2	33
Grade 5 and equivalents	9	15
Grade 6 and equivalents	14	18
Grade 7 and equivalents	53	27
Total number	1,304	53
Ethnic minorities
Grade 1-5 and equivalents	0	0
Grade 6 and equivalents	1	1·3
Grade 7 and equivalents	1	0·5
Total number	34	1·4
Disabled
Grade 1-5 and equivalents	0	0
Grade 6 and equivalents	1	1·3
Grade 7 and equivalents	1	0·5
Total number	41	1·7

Notes:
1. Part-time staff are counted as one.
2. Figures exclude casual staff.
3. Figures show registered disabled staff only.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Consultation Documents

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the documents issued for consultation in the last year, indicating the time provided for consultation and the recipients of each consultation document.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not available centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

School Visits

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will visit Sealand CP School to meet the governors and staff to discuss the pupil-teacher ratio for the next school year;

(2) if he proposes to visit Golftyn High School, Deeside, in order to discuss the concerns of parents, governors and staff; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend and I will bear these schools in mind when considering our programme of visits to schools.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning his policies on special needs for the next school year.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Children with special educational needs will benefit from the range of measures introduced in the Education Act 1993 to improve the present statutory framework, including a code of practice containing guidance and criteria for the identification, assessment and other arrangements for such pupils. We hope to lay the code before Parliament shortly.

We remain committed to the principle that children with special educational needs should be educated in mainstream schools wherever possible and sensible.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning his aims to create new style apprenticeships; in what industries he expects the new apprenticeships to be created; and what estimate he has of the number of new apprenticeships he expects to be created.

Mr. Redwood: Modern apprenticeships will be introduced in manufacturing engineering in Wales in 1994-95, and I have made £3·6 million available to support them; 550 additional opportunities will be offered to young people to begin training for national vocational qualifications at levels 3 and 4. Details about the extension of modern apprenticeships to other sectors from 1995-96 onwards will be announced in due course.

Public Transport (Disabled Access)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to encourage the provision of accessibility to public transport for disabled people in urban and rural areas of Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Government are already committed to the development of accessible transport systems which meet the travel needs of all users. Since the early 1980s significant progress has been made in improving access to public transport for people with disabilities.

Farm Colleges

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the annual amount of public funding allocated to farm colleges in (a) Wales and (b) Great Britain as a whole; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh funding councils allocated £4·7 million to agriculture colleges in Wales for the academic year 1993-94. The agriculture colleges in England and Scotland are the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Education and for Scotland. However, I understand that the allocations for agriculture colleges in England and Scotland were £67·3 million and £11·2 million respectively. The figure for England relates to the academic year 1993-94 and the figure for Scotland to the financial year 1993-94.

Courses in agriculture are provided by many institutions which do not have "agriculture college" in their names. Expenditure on courses in these institutions has not been included in the figures given here.

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he has issued to the chairman of the Welsh health authorities in respect of the application of total waiting times guarantees for hospital treatment, inclusive of the first out-patient appointment waiting time; and if he will place a copy of such guidelines in the Library.

Mr. Redwood: A copy of the letter sent to all health authorities outlining the new approach to waiting times in Wales will be placed in the Library of the House. Detailed work on operational aspects of the approach will take place this year in preparation for its implementation from April 1995.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he has issued to Welsh health authorities and to provider units in Wales in respect of dates being given for first out-patient appointment within a short period after receipt of the referral letter from the general practitioner; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: All patients referred to a hospital out-patient clinic by their GP are included in waiting list statistics whether or not they have been provided with a fixed appointment date.

Comprehensive guidance on the management of waiting lists has been issued to all health authorities, NHS trusts and other healthcare providers, identifying the provision of booked dates for first out-patient appointments as best practice.

Rural Areas (Assistance)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of state for Wales (1) what policies the Development Board for Rural Wales has for the voluntary sector to be a vehicle for assisting rural communities;

(2) how much funding in each of the last five years and for the next financial year has been allocated by the Development Board for Rural Wales to the voluntary sector for assisting rural communities; and if he will list those organisations and how much each received.

Mr. Redwood: I have asked the chief executive of the Development Board for Rural Wales to write to the hon. Member, and for a copy of the reply to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what procedures are used by the board members and officials of (a) the Welsh Development Agency and (b) the Development Board for Rural Wales to inform themselves of the needs of individual rural areas within their areas of responsibility.

Mr. Redwood: I have asked the chief executives of the agency and the board to write to the hon. Member and for copies of their responses to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how much funding in each of the last five years and for the next financial year has been allocated by the Welsh Development Agency to the voluntary sector for assisting rural communities; and if he will list those organisations and how much each received;

(2) what policies the Welsh Development Agency has for the voluntary sector to be a vehicle for assisting rural communities.

Mr. Redwood: I have asked the chief executive of the agency to write to the hon. Member and for a copy of his response to be placed in the Library of the House.

Cancer Treatment

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report, column 196, if he will list all the appraisals commissioned by his Department of the options for improving cancer services for north Wales; and if he will place a copy of each appraisal in the Library.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I will write to the hon. Lady.

Development Board for Rural Wales

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what directions he has given to the Development Board for Rural Wales to sell its industrial estates on the open market; how many estates are involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 28 March 1994]: None. However, the development board seeks to identify opportunities for property disposal and under its guidelines is expected to encourage private ownership and secure the disposal of its completed premises and estates to the private sector.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Tigris and Euphrates Valleys

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the United States and Egypt about the provision of pharmaceuticals, water pumps and water-filtering equipment to the valleys of the Tigris and Euphrates.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: None. Our substantial aid to Iraq is organised through the United Nations agencies and non-governmental organisations.

Aid and Trade Provision

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the dates on which aid and trade provision offers in principle were made to the Governments of countries overseas in each year since 1986.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The dates of all ATP offers are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. A list of successful ATP projects on which offers have been accepted by developing country Governments has been placed in the Libraries of the House. This list is based on the dates when the formal Government-to-Government agreements or exchanges were signed; this is the operative date for project commencement.

Rwanda

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in Rwanda for British-based aid organisations; what progress is being made in Rwanda by the United Nations mission; and what estimate has been made of the number of refugees and displaced people in Rwanda.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Although some difficulties remain, most aid organisations can now operate with relative freedom. The United Nations assistance mission for Rwanda continues to encourage full implementation of peace agreements signed last August in Arusha. A copy of the United Nations Secretary-General's report of 30 December 1993 on UNAMIR's progress has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The number of refugees and displaced persons in Rwanda at present is estimated at 650,000.

UK Assistance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much United Kingdom Government assistance was given for: the covered reservoir scheme 1985 at Irbid, Jordan; sewage works at Rustamiyah, Iraq and the Suez Canal Authority, Egypt 1985; water works at Tangerang, Indonesia 1985; water development department, Cyprus 1985; canal project at Rahimyakham, Pakistan 1986; canal project in Cameroon 1986; canal project in Kwasa State, Nigeria 1986; Kwasa project in Nigeria 1987; water projects in Niger, Uganda and Panama 1987; Hill Country water scheme, Sri Lanka 1988; water schemes in Greece and Turkey 1988; Akashat scheme in Iraq 1989; El Nasr Co. in Egypt 1991; water valve equipment in Singapore 1991; Larnaca scheme, Cyprus 1992; the Great Cairo wastewater scheme 1992; and water project in Ghana 1992.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Of the projects listed, the following have been supported from the United Kingdom aid programme:

Project	Overall commitment £ million
Canal project, Rahimyakham, Pakistan	10·77
Hill country water scheme, Sri Lanka	2·13
Water schemes, Turkey	1·13
Greater Cairo waste water scheme, Egypt	69·14
Two regions water rehabilitation project, Ghana	11·39
Uganda water projects (three)	0·07

Child Mortality Rates

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on (a) the child mortality rates and (b) the average life expectancy of inhabitants of (i) El Salvador, (ii) Nepal, (iii) Paraguay, (iv) Benin, (v) Togo, (vi) Sierra Leone, (vii) Mauritius, (viii) Burundi, (ix) Rwanda, (x) Haiti, (xi) Chad, (xii) Albania, (xiii) Barbados, (xiv) Malta, (xv) Botswana, (xvi) Ukraine, (xvii) The Gambia and (xviii) Mongolia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The latest information we have on child mortality and average life expectancy rates in the countries listed, based on data contained in the World Bank Atlas 1994, is as follows:

Country	Infant mortality rate (per 1000 live births) as at 1992	Average life expectancy at birth (years) as at 1992
El Salvador	46	66
Nepal	99	54
Paraguay	47	67
Benin	110	51
Togo	85	54
Sierra Leone	143	43
Mauritius	18	70
Burundi	106	48
Rwanda	110	46
Haiti	93	55
Chad	122	47
Albania	28	73
Barbados	10	75
Malta	10	76
Botswana	35	68
Ukraine	18	70
The Gambia	142	45
Mongolia	60	64

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy regarding the proposal to build an airstrip on St. Helena.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I am aware of a proposal for the construction of an airfield on St. Helena and the subsequent introduction of an air service to the islands. While this could bring benefits to the island's economy, it would also be costly.

The Government of St. Helena has not so far approached Her Majesty's Government about this matter. Should we receive such an approach, we will consider it very carefully.

TREASURY

Value Added Tax Charges

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the average annual VAT charges incurred by (a) people with a disability and (b) people with no disability for each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: Estimates are not readily available on VAT incurred by people with a disability.

Tiger Products

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what seizures of tiger products or material containing tiger products have been made by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in the last three years.

Sir John Cope: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise made seizures apparently of such a kind over the period as follows:

Tiger skin—1 whole, 1 piece, 1 handbag and 1 pair of shoes.
Tincture of tiger bone—2 bottles.
Tiger bone plaster—43 packets and 30 strips.
Tiger bone pills—51 boxes and 420 tablets.
Tiger bone medicine—1 package and 3 sachets.
Tiger claws—2.

Liquor Duty

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on the balance of payments and Treasury receipts resulting from lower liquor duties in mainland Europe.

Sir John Cope: The effect of cross-border shopping on the balance of payments is difficult to assess. It takes place for a variety of reasons. Duty differentials encourage personal imports, but are only one factor. Duty free shopping arrangements are another. The overall effect on the balance of payments will depend on where cross-border shopping is taking place and the country of origin of the product purchased as well as the amounts purchased. Receipts of duty on alcoholic drink held up well in 1993.

Taxation

Sir David Knox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures for each of a single person, a single-wage married couple and a single-wage couple with two children, showing the percentages of earnings taken in (a) income tax, (b) national insurance contribution, (c) VAT, (d) local authority rates/community charge and (e) other indirect taxation, at 75 per cent., 100 per cent. and 150 per cent. of average male manual earnings, in 1979-80, 1989-90 and the latest year for which such figures are available.

Mr. Dorrell: The information available is given in the tables.

Percentage of gross earnings paid in direct taxes in 1979-80

	Multiples of average male manual earnings
	¾	1	1½
Single
Income tax	20·2	22·6	25·1

Notes to tables:

[1] Income tax payments are calculated on the assumption that the households receive no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and only have income from employment. All earners, are assumed to pay class 1 NI contributions at the contracted-in-rate.

[2] In order to provide comparability with 178-79, when support for children was given partly through child tax allowance, child benefit is treated as a negative income tax for the married couple with two children.

[3] Average male manual earnings are taken to be the average gross weekly earnings of all full-time manual males on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. Average male manual earnings stood at £101·10 in 1979-80 and £225·60 in 1989-90. They are assumed, on the basis of an illustrative assumption of 3·5 per cent growth in 1993-94, to be £281·50 in 1993-94.

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost to the Treasury in (a) 1994-95, (b) 1995-96 and (c) 1996-97 of tax expenditures and structural reliefs; and what specific changes in this cost will be brought about by the changes announced in his last Budget.

Mr. Dorrell: The latest estimate of the cost of tax expenditures and structural reliefs, which are for 1993-94, were published in a Treasury booklet "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs" in July 1993. A copy of this was placed in the Library. Preliminary estimates for 1994-95 will be published later this year.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the Government's tax policies on the economic well-being of people on low incomes and below the pension age.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 3 March at column 880.

Arms Sales

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cambridge (Mrs. Campbell) of 21 March, Official Report, column 22, if he will set out the reasons for the unavailability of the information on arms exports requested.

Mr. Nelson: The question to which the hon. Member refers asked for the proportion of gross domestic product derived from the sale of armaments. This information cannot be supplied as the term "armaments" is not defined in the classifications used for national accounts purposes. The value of exports of defence equipment can be estimated from overseas trade statistics and is published in table 1.11 of "UK Defence Statistics", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Exchange Rate Mechanism

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost to the Exchequer of the loss in value immediately after the withdrawal from the exchange rate mechanism of the sterling purchased by the Bank of England two weeks prior to United Kingdom withdrawal.

Mr. Nelson: For good reasons of market management, it has been the practice of successive Governments not to publish intervention figures. Whether or not intervention results in a profit or loss depends on a number of factors, including the cost at which foreign currency assets are bought and sold, and the rate at which reserves are rebuilt and foreign currency borrowing is repaid. No unambiguous estimate can therefore be made of any profit or loss arising from intervention.

Royal Yacht

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost to Customs and Excise of hiring the royal yacht for a reception; who was invited; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: According to records going back to 1980, Customs and Excise have made no use or application for use of the royal yacht.

Brian Charrington

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assistance will be given by his Department to the investigation by Thames Valley police into the conduct of the Brian Charrington case by Cleveland police force.

Sir John Cope: Customs and Excise will co-operate fully with the Thames Valley police inquiry team.

Inland Revenue Adjudicator

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases the Inland Revenue adjudicator has dealt with since being established; and how many cases have been adjudicated in favour of the complainant.

Mr. Dorrell: Since the adjudicator took up appointment on 1 July 1993, she has completed 98 investigations. She has found wholly or partly in favour of the complainant in 63 cases.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer in (a) 1992-93, (b) 1993-94 and (c) 1994-95 of raising the threshold for capital gains tax to £5,800.

Mr. Dorrell: The capital gains tax annual exempt amount was increased in 1992-93 to £5,800 in line with the statutory indexation formula. Therefore there was no cost to the Exchequer measured against an indexed base.

Taxation

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has further to reduce tax evasion; if he will make it his policy to abolish the road fund licence and recoup the lost revenue from additional petrol duty; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The Government devote substantial resources to tackling tax evasion.

We have no plans to abolish vehicle excise duty and recoup the lost revenue from additional petrol duty. I also refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) on 9 February 1994 at col. 248.

Mr. Christopher Thompson

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what plans he has to review the case of Mr. Christopher Thompson of 18 Bootham terrace, York, in relation to the treatment by Customs and Excise of his VAT liabilities and those of his competitors;

(2) what account he has taken in considering the case of Mr. Christopher Thompson of 18 Bootham terrace, York, in the past of Mr. Thompson's affidavit about competitors' tax affairs and the reported inaccuracy of advertisements for their services.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 28 March 1994]: None. His complaints, which relate to events before and during 1979, have been reviewed carefully over the last 15 years by Customs and Excise, by Ministers and by the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, and full account has been taken of all the many thousands of documents that Mr. Thompson has sent, both direct to customs and via Members of Parliament and others.

VAT on Fuel

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 1 December, Official Report, column 567, if value added tax would be applied to standing charges for electricity and gas if billed separately.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 28 March 1994]: Separate billing of standing charges for electricity or gas would not affect the VAT liability of these charges. They remain part of the consideration for a single supply of fuel and power. Were they to be viewed otherwise, they would now be liable to VAT at the standard rate.

Nurse Training Courses (VAT)

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance he is giving health trusts about value added tax exemption for essential training courses for nursing staff who are converting from state enrolled nurse to state registered nurse.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 28 March 1994]: None. There is no VAT on in-house training. Nursing training provided by external suppliers is exempt.

Lower Earnings Limit

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer at what level the national insurance lower earnings limit has been set in each year since 1989 (a) in money terms and (b) at 1994 prices.

Mr. Hague: I have been asked to reply.

Because the lower earnings limit has moved broadly in line with the increase in prices, the value of the limits applying since 1989 at 1994 prices will be approximately £57, that is the limit for 1994-95. The cash value of the limits requested is in the table.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Civil Aircraft Trade Agreement

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the time scale for completion of negotiations on the aerospace part of the GATT negotiations postponed from December 1993.

Mr. Sainsbury: Members of the GATT civil aircraft committee reached an agreement on 14 December 1993 that negotiations on a new GATT agreement on trade in civil aircraft would continue for a further year, ending in December 1994.

Post Offices

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish tables showing the number of sub-agency and Crown status post offices in each English region, Wales and Northern Ireland in each year since 1989; how many of each category of post office in each case opened or closed in each year since 1989; and how many changed status.

Mr. Heseltine: The number of directly operated main post offices, other main post offices and sub post offices in operation in each of the years from March 1989 to February 1994 are shown in tables 1 to 6 by current Post Office Counters English regions, and with Northern Ireland and Wales shown separately. Because of administrative boundary changes during the period, the historic apportionment between regions is a best estimate. Figures of sub office closures and openings are available from March 1993 only and are shown in table 7; for 1992-93 they are available only at disproportionate cost, and are not available for earlier years. The number of Crown post office conversions is shown on a cumulative basis in the column "other main post offices", with openings and closures not linked to Crown office conversions shown separately for each year.

Regional Challenge

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Monmouth (Mr. Evans) of 8 March, Official Report, columns 204-5, how regional challenge and the envisaged competition between local deprived communities in a locality will help to achieve sustainable regeneration; what is meant by the term "Community support framework areas"; and if he will place in the Library, information regarding the rules of this competition and how bids will be judged.

Mr. Sainsbury: Regional challenge, an alternative method of selecting projects for European regional development fund grant, will improve the use of this fund for sustainable regeneration because the competition will stimulate better applications, which should involve the co-operative participation of appropriate authorities and bodies and the private sector.

Detailed rules will be published in due course.

The community support framework areas in England will be:

Objective 1
Merseyside
Objective 2
North East
Yorkshire and Humberside
East Midlands
West Midlands
Greater Manchester/Lancashire/Cheshire
Greater London
West Cumbria
Thanet
Plymouth
Objective 5(b)
South West

Shropshire/Herefordshire/Worcestershire (the Marches)
Staffordshire/Derbyshire (Midlands Uplands)
Northern Uplands
Lincolnshire
East Anglia

I do not intend to include west Cumbria, Thanet and Plymouth in the first regional challenge competitions.

Regional Enterprise Grants

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was (a) the total money spent, (b) the percentage of that money allocated according to decisions made by Ministers on competitive bids and (c) the percentage of that money allocated according to some statistical measure of need in the last available operational year of the regional enterprise grants.

Mr. Sainsbury: In the 1992-93 financial year payments of regional enterprise grants in England totalled £5·7 million. The other questions are not applicable to this scheme.

Rover Group

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much public money was invested in the Rover Group from 1977 to privatisation; and what is his estimate of the replacement cost of the assets sold by British Aerospace to BMW.

Mr. Sainsbury: Between 1975, when the Government took a majority shareholding in the company that became British Leyland, and of which Rover was part, until privatisation, some £3·5 billion was invested in BL in the form of grants, loans and equity.

The group last made profits, after tax, on ordinary activities in the 1975-76 financial year. By 1988, Rover's accumulated losses amounted to £1,600 million.

We are not in a position to estimate the replacement cost of the assets sold by British Aerospace to BMW.

Manufacturing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he will ensure that the forthcoming White Paper on competitiveness will include an analysis of United Kingdom and world exports of manufactures since 1979 similar to that in the article published in the 18 November 1966 issue of the Board of Trade journal.

Mr. Sainsbury: The White Paper on competitiveness will be presented to the House later in the year.

Charter Markets

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many charter markets he had visited in his official capacity prior to publication of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I have not visited a charter market in an official capacity.

Overseas Investment

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the level of United Kingdom overseas investment in 1979; what it was in 1993; and what was the percentage increase.

Mr. Heseltine: The level of United Kingdom overseas investment was £5·9 billion in 1979 and £16·9 billion in 1993. This represents a percentage increase of 186 per cent.

Tobacco Companies (Grants)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many regional selective assistance grants were given to tobacco companies in the United Kingdom in each year since 1989-90; and if he will list the companies.

Mr. Sainsbury: No regional selective assistance grants have been given to tobacco companies in the United Kingdom since 1989-90. Reference to "regional selective assistance grants" in answer to an earlier question from the hon. Lady on 1 February 1994, Official Report, column 613, should have read "selective financial assistance to industry". This assistance is available to companies in Northern Ireland only under the Industrial Development (Northern Ireland) Order 1982 and the Employment and Training (Northern Ireland) Act 1950.

Arms Exports (Indonesia)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what type, quantity and value of arms have been exported to south-east Asia by Britain for each year since 1985; and what proportion of sales in that region have gone to Indonesia.

Mr. Heseltine: For reasons of commercial confidentiality, it has been the consistent policy of successive Governments not to disclose particulars of defence trade with other countries.

Trade and the Environment

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library a copy of the draft work programme on trade and the environment, recently agreed in Geneva, for the general agreement on tariffs and trade and World Trade Organisation meeting in Marrakesh.

Mr. Heseltine: I have today placed a copy of the draft ministerial decision on trade and environment in the Library of the House.

Concorde

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the life expectancy of Concorde.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Department of Trade and Industry has made no such assessment.

Legislation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he intends to publish compliance cost assessments of the burden on businesses of legislation.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The Government publish compliance cost assessments with all proposals for United Kingdom and EC legislation that have an impact on business. The arrangements for publishing CCAs for proposed domestic legislation were set out in my written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Colchester, North (Mr. Jenkin) on 19 October, Official Report, column

202. The arrangements for publishing the assessments for proposed EC legislation were set out in the written answer by my right hon. Friend the Lord President to the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Hertfordshire, South-West (Mr. Page) on 19 July, Official Report, column 24.

Local Business Partnerships

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the 18 pilot local business partnerships set up by his Department's deregulation unit.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The 18 pilot local business partnerships, established by local authorities and the business community with the help of my Department, are located at:

Kent county council, Tunbridge Wells borough council, Suffolk county council, Ipswich borough council, Nottinghamshire county council, Gedling district council, Barnsley metropolitan borough council, London borough of Hounslow, South Ribble borough council, West Sussex county council, East Sussex county council, Cardiff city council, Warwickshire county council, Hertfordshire county council, Oxfordshire county council, Hereford and Worcester county council, Berkshire county council and Lewes district council.

In addition to these 18 pilot partnerships, a new partnership has been established at Hastings borough council and I understand that launches for new partnerships are already planned this year by Gloucestershire county council, Essex county council and Rother and Wealden district councils.

I am keen to encourage the creation of other partnerships and to this end hosted a series of regional seminars in late-1993 to help promote them. The response to these seminars was encouraging and officials in my Department's deregulation unit are planning a number of initiatives to follow up on the many expressions of interest.

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Eggar: In 1993 the Department of Trade and Industry made 887 public appointments. Of these, 0·34 per cent. were Asian appointments, 0·34 per cent. black appointments and 0·12 per cent. other ethnic origin appointments.

Names cannot be provided as ethnic origin information was obtained in confidence from those concerned.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Eggar: The required information is not held centrally in the form requested and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Eggar: Such consultations are made in accordance with the "Guide to Public Appointments Procedures".

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons;

(2) what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Eggar: The Department does not hold information on the political affiliations of public appointees or potential public appointees. Appointments are made on the basis of the person judged best for the job; political affiliation is not a factor.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for the last 12 months how many parliamentary questions he has referred to one of his Department's agencies for answer; and what percentage of parliamentary questions to his Department this represents.

Mr. Heseltine: Between 1 March 1993 and 28 February 1994, Department of Trade and Industry Ministers referred 31 parliamentary questions to chief executives of my Department's agencies for reply. They represent 1·1 per cent. of the total of 2,812 written questions answered by my Department during that period.

RECHAR Programme

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the projects and their costs covered by the RECHAR programme to date in (a) the Doncaster area and (b) the rest of south Yorkshire.

Mr. Sainsbury: To date, in Doncaster, 25 infrastructure projects have attracted RECHAR funding of £6,872,236 out of a total South Yorkshire programme of £18,575,176. In addition £8,621,016 has been allocated to 73 business support projects. Although not specific to Doncaster, the projects cover a wide area of South Yorkshire and are all available to companies in Doncaster. I have today placed copies of the list of projects in the Library of the House.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what major building projects valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1989 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

Mr. Sainsbury: Regional selective assistance grants can be offered in support of investment projects which create or maintain jobs. While the details concerned are commercially confidential, five projects involving building costs of over £1 million have received RSA offers since 1 April 1989, as shown in the table.

In addition, English Estates has been undertaking building and development activities in these areas supported in part by grant aid from the Department.

Number of projects	Total project costs £ million	Building costs £ million	Grant £ million
5	81·6	15·7	8·55

European Imports

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of European imports to the Yorkshire and Humberside region are transported directly by (a) sea and (b) air (i) currently, (ii) five years ago and (iii) 10 years ago.

Mr. Needham: There are no data on the level of European imports into the Yorkshire and Humberside region.

BS 5750

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will issue guidelines on the issuing of quality management systems equivalent to BS 5750 by both certifying bodies and consultants who themselves have not been approved in particular industrial sectors in which they are offering their services by the National Accreditation Council for Certifications Bodies.

Mr. Heseltine: Certification to BS 5750 and the accreditation of certification bodies are commercial decisions for the parties concerned. I recognise that accreditation provides confidence in certification services. My Department does, therefore, encourage certification bodies to seek accreditation and individual companies to use the services of accredited certification bodies. This is reflected in the current edition of the DTI QA register which now lists only accredited certification bodies.

Nuclear Installations

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes have been made under the statutory security provisions for sites occupied by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority or which require permits under section 2 of the Nuclear Installations Act 1965.

Mr. Eggar: Sites belonging to the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority and those where enrichment or reprocessing operations take place are subject to special statutory security provisions. These are designed principally:

(a) to protect information about and restrict access to enrichment technology, which could be misused for the purposes of nuclear weapons proliferation. The House recognised the importance of this last year in passing the Official Secrets Act 1989 (Prescription) (Amendment) Order 1993; and

(b) to protect information about and restrict access to facilities, where this is desirable for the safekeeping of plutonium and other fissile materials.

Under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965 as amended, sites, other than those of the UKAEA, require a permit for reprocessing or enrichment. Sites to which permits apply and those of the UKAEA can be made prohibited places for the purposes of the Official Secrets Act 1911.

Work undertaken last year identified that the current list of nuclear prohibited places ought to be updated generally, including to align with current site boundaries. New permits have been issued for Sellafield and Capenhurst and my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary yesterday made a new prohibited places order.

This order significantly reduces the number of places that are prohibited. Current or past UKAEA sites at Risley and Culcheth, and in London at Rex house and 19 Charles II street have been dropped. The small part of the Sellafield site managed by the UKAEA, which had been omitted from the previous order, has been added to the Sellafield prohibited place. Land has also been added as a result of aligning the permit with the current Sellafield site boundary. The UKAEA sites at Harwell and Dounreay remain prohibited places in the latter case under a separate order.

The new arrangements will ensure that at Sellafield and Capenhurst, the entire site within the security fence is a prohibited place and that this will remain the case following any transfers of land between British Nuclear Fuels plc and UKAEA at Sellafield or BNFL and Urenco (Capenhurst) Ltd. at Capenhurst. The areas of land affected are defined by the permits; copies of these, together with proof copies of the prohibited places order, have been placed in the Library of the House.

Diamonds (Angola)

Dr. Howells: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what plans he has to consult his counterparts in the European Union on the question of formulating cross-frontier measures to prevent the importation of diamonds traded by, and on behalf of, the UNITA organisation in Angola;

(2) what plans he has to take measures to prevent Angolan diamonds, stolen and traded by UNITA, being imported and marketed in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Heseltine: I have no such plans. There is no reliable way of identifying the geographical origin of diamonds imported into the United Kingdom. Technically, it is seldom possible to do so and the channels of distribution are also varied and complex. It would be impractical to track the origin and provenance, legal or otherwise, of individual stones. Nor, for the same reasons, would it be practicable to seek a Community-wide restriction.

Coal Industry Privatisation

Mr. Riddick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what arrangements are in place to ensure that potential purchasers of British Coal's mining assets are given equal access to relevant information about the five mining businesses being offered for sale by the Government.

Mr. Eggar: The Government attach importance to ensuring that no potential purchasers are given preferential access to the relevant information. I expect in the coming weeks to clarify the basis on which the Government will be making information available.

British Coal has issued instructions which govern the conduct of all corporation employees during the privatisation period. These instructions set out, among other things, the consents which managers are required to obtain before they can participate in any buy-out bid, and the undertakings which they are obliged to give as a condition of such consents. British Coal has equally introduced detailed arrangements which seek to prevent the unauthorised disclosure by corporation employees of information which might impede the privatisation process. These measures are designed to provide effective safeguards against the possibility of conflicts of interest on the part of British Coal staff who may be authorised to participate in management and employee buy-outs. British Coal will also put in place specific additional measures in the case of individual MEBO participants where necessary.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what budget provision is planned for the financial year 1994-95 to commission consultants to provide advice on the restructuring and privatisation of British Coal.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 28 March 1994]: Provision of £11·7 million for consultants costs has been included in the 1994-95 Main Supply Estimates, HC 3.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the value of capital allowances to be transferred to licensed operators under schedule 4 to the Coal Industry Bill.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The Coal Industry Bill provides a mechanism for the transfer of capital allowances from British Coal Corporation to successor companies. No firm estimate of the value of such allowances has yet been made.

Telecommunications

Mr. Riddick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he has received a report by the Director General of Telecommunications for the year 1993 as required under section 55 of the Telecommunications Act 1984.

Mr. McLoughlin: Yes. The tenth report by the Director General of Telecommunications is being published today. It covers the period 1 January to 31 December 1993. Copies of the report have been laid before each House of Parliament.

Post Office (Damaged Letters)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many incidents have been reported by the Post Office of letters and small packages being (a) irrecoverably damaged and (b) damaged but recoverably so by the new mark 1, 2 and 3 GT 4000 machines in use in some sorting offices.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 28 March 1994]: I understand from the Post Office that it does not use any sorting machines designated as GT 4000 but that Royal Mail currently operates 185 NP 4000 sorting machines. Incidents of damage to mail during sorting processes are not recorded centrally by Royal Mail.

Consorzio Ital Offshore

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the proposed visit by Offshore Supplies Office officials to the Sicilian fabrication site, Consorzio Ital Offshore.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 28 March 1994]: In the course of discussions between British consulate officials and the Consorzio Ital Offshore, an invitation was extended to OSO to visit CIO's fabrication site in Sicily.

Apparently following adverse comment in the United Kingdom press the invitation to visit the site was withdrawn.

Tobacco Companies

Ms Primarolo: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the tobacco companies that have received regional selective assistance grants in each year since 1990; and for what purpose each grant was given.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 11 March 1994]: Payment of selective assistance to individual companies is confidential to those companies.

British Coal (Assets)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what has been the total investment by British Coal over the most recent five-year period at those collieries and opencast sites currently in operation;

(2) what is the total value of capital allowances outstanding against corporation tax on British Coal in respect of assets of collieries and opencast sites currently in operation.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answers 28 March 1994]: These are matters for British Coal.

ENVIRONMENT

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions in the last five years he has knowingly provided incomplete information in answers to parliamentary questions other than on grounds of disproportionate cost; and on what subjects.

Mr. Gummer: I answer parliamentary questions on the basis set out in paragraph 27 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". I also seek to comply with the Speaker's guidance on the need for brief answers to oral questions.

Malaysian Airlines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the dates Ministers, or officials from his Department, including his Department's agencies, have used the Malaysian airline MAS for each year since 1985 including this year to date on official business; and what was the cost of each flight to his Department.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is not available.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what major building projects valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1989 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

Mr. Baldry: The following major building projects valued at over £1 million have been or are being funded wholly or partly by my Department since 1989 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield. This excludes major reclamation schemes funded through derelict land grant.

Hospitals

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) hospitals in use, (b) redundant hospitals and (c) converted or redeveloped hospitals there are on green-belt land.

Mr. Baldry: This information is not available centrally. Planning guidelines on redundant hospital sites in the green belt are contained in DOE circular 12/91.

Pollution Control

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy towards the proposals under consideration by the European Parliament and European Commission to halve the pollution emissions from cars.

Mr. Atkins: The European Parliament at its March plenary meeting rejected proposed amendments to the latest directive on vehicle emissions which called specifically for the halving of pollution emissions from cars. The Council of Environment Ministers therefore adopted this directive, further amending directive 70/220/EEC, on 24 March, taking account of the European Parliament's views. In addition to specifying new tighter standards, the latest directive also calls for the European Commission to bring forward by the end of this year further proposals to reduce emissions from cars.

Homelessness

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what rights those who are waiting assessment as to whether they are unintentionally homeless will have under the citizens charter in respect of (a) the time such an assessment should take and (b) temporary assistance pending assessment under his proposed legislation.

Sir George Young: When reaching the final decisions following our consideration of the responses to the consultation paper "Access to Local Authority and Housing Association Tenancies", we will take full account of the principles of the citizens charter.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library (a) the original advice memo given to James Gray advising Ministers on how to use the political network to rebut criticisms of the Government's homelessness consultation paper and (b) the revised guidelines reissued by Richard Wilson to his staff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Yes. I am also placing in the Library a copy of the press release issued by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Inner Cities and Construction, on 24 February commenting on Shelter's misleading and inaccurate statements on the Government's "Consultation Paper on Access to Local Authority and Housing Association Tenancies".

Sefton Park Palm House

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what funding will be available to enable the completion of the renovation of the Sefton Park palm house, Liverpool; and what timetable has been established for the completion of the work.

Mr. Baldry: The hon. Member will recall that urban programme funding of £0·254 million, was secured for a short-term rescue package to arrest further deterioration and make the structure safe and secure.

These works were completed last summer. Their purpose, to secure the palm house for a maximum of seven years while proposals for its long-term use were developed, has been achieved. The consideration, by Liverpool city council, of the palm house's future, together with the wider issue of maximising the use of Sefton Park and its facilities, will need to be carried out as part of an overall tourism strategy.

There will be opportunities, under both the single regeneration budget and objective 1, for projects developed in partnership with the private sector and the Community to be successful in a bid for funding. Obviously, I cannot judge whether such a partnership approach would be forthcoming in the case of Sefton Park palm house, nor can I say that if it did, such a bid would be successful.

Housing

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what funds have been made available to the Liverpool city council during the past financial year for the modernisation of homes under the provisions of the mandatory house improvement grant system; whether all available funds were claimed; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The level of resources dedicated to house renovation grants is a matter for Liverpool city council to decide within the framework of its capital programme and available resources. A guideline figure of £9·9 million was included in the housing investment programme allocation for 1993-94. Liverpool claimed a total grant expenditure of £13·846 million and a supplementary credit approval for £3·558 million was issued last December.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how management and maintenance cost assumptions are calculated for the purpose of allocating housing revenue account subsidies.

Sir George Young [holding answer 28 March 1994]: Each housing authority is allocated an allowance for housing revenue account subsidy which reflects its relative need to spend on the management and maintenance of its dwellings. This allowance is based on the particular characteristics of the authority's stock, including the type, age and size of the dwellings, the proportion of flats to houses, the sparsity of the stock and its geographical location. Local authorities are consulted in advance about the details.

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list local authority housing departments which have submitted successful housing investment programmes in 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Sir George Young: Under the housing investment programme process, all local housing authorities in England are invited each year to submit bids for capital resources for their housing programmes. Allocations are then announced in December. Lists showing the allocations for each authority in 1991-92 and 1992-93 are available from the Library of the House.

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the allocation of resources to local authorities under his Department's housing partnership fund for 1994-95.

Sir George Young: A list of the resources being allocated to local authorities under the housing partnership fund for 1994-95 has been placed in the Library of the House.

Housing Association Rents

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the effects of changes in housing association grant on housing association rent levels.

Sir George Young [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The relationship between the Government's decisions on changes in housing association grant rates and the rent levels determined by housing associations for their new properties is not direct. The implications for rents of a change in the grant rate will depend on the costs of construction and borrowing, as well as on an association's management and other costs.

Reductions in average grant rates from 80 per cent in 1990-91 to a ceiling of 62 per cent. for 1994-95 have reflected a considerable reduction in procurement costs across the period. Housing associations have also been able to reduce the rents they would otherwise need to charge on new properties by their ability to pool rents across their stock and to make efficiency savings.

Fire Safety

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on fire safety in large open-plan single-storey buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 28 March 1994]: I have received representations about the safety of both firefighters and the occupants of large single-storey buildings, and about the effect of fires in such buildings on fire service resources, contamination of the environment, loss of property and disruption to the life of local communities. I have also met representatives of the fire service, the Loss Prevention Council and the Institute of Building Control. A scrutiny team is currently looking at fire safety issues, as announced by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on 17 January, Official Report, column 381. In the light of their findings, and of the representations made to me, I shall consider whether any changes should be made to the relevant part of the building regulations.

Countryside Organisations

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the costs of reorganising the Countryside Commission for England and Wales, the Countryside Commission for Scotland and the Nature Conservancy Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The estimated total cost of the reorganisation of the conservation agencies in 1991-92 was £9·18 million, excluding administrative costs within Government disbursed across three Departments. The latter could only be supplied at disproportionate cost. In addition £1·4 million was provided in 1990-91 to cover the agencies initial costs. The direct implementation costs of merging the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland and the Countryside Commission for Scotland to form Scottish Natural Heritage incurred in 1991-92 were £118,000. This figure is exclusive of the administrative costs incurred by the Scottish Office Environment Department and the two existing agencies which could, again, be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The following information covers non-industrial staff in my Department—excluding PSA services—as at 1 March 1994:

	Part time			Full time			Total

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 23 March, Official Report, column 280, if he will list the number of contracts and their cost with management consultants in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The information requested is not held centrally by my Department and is obtainable only at disproportionate cost.

County Hall, London

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total capital receipt from the sale of county hall in London; and if he will publish the amounts that have been paid to each London borough.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 28 March 1994]: I refer to my answer of 23 November, Official Report, column 17, in which I explained that the total capital receipt from the sale of county hall was a matter of commercial confidentiality. Under the terms of the London Government Reorganisation (Capital Money) (Greater London) (Amendment) Order 1993, the London residuary body distributed the following amounts, totalling £60 million, to the London boroughs and to the City of London:

City of London	45,373·34
Camden	1,681,516·01

Valpak Scheme

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects that consultation on the Valpak scheme proposed by the packaging industry producer responsibility group will be completed; and if he will list those organisations which have been consulted.

Mr. Atkins: The producer responsibility industry group which represents 28 of the largest companies with interests in packaging has asked for comments on its proposals by 15 April. PRG has invited comments from all interested parties and I have asked them to send the hon. Member a list of those consulted.

Single Regeneration Budgets

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) of 18 March, Official Report, column 863, by what means and when the recommendation of any senior regional director of single regeneration budgets will be publicised.

Mr. Baldry: The advice and recommendations from regional offices to Ministers about bids for the single regeneration budget will not be published. Ministers will reach final views on the bids in the light of these recommendations. Decisions will subsequently be published around the end of the year.

Race Bank (Dredging)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if an environmental impact assessment complying with current European directives was carried out in relation to proposals to dredge sand from Race bank; and if he will place a copy of that assessment in the Library.

Mr. Baldry: An environmental statement was produced on behalf of the applicant by Posford Duvivier, and a copy will be placed in the Library as soon as possible.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the progress made during 1993 to extend CCT to white collar services and on the operation of CCT during the year.

Mr. Baldry: Last year, I was very pleased to witness the close co-operation of the local authority associations with the Department in developing the detailed proposals for the extension of CCT to local government professional services. During the year, I had to look into 122 cases where local authorities were alleged to have acted anti-competitively in tendering services, or where their direct services organisations failed to meet the required financial rate of return; and I had to take statutory follow-up action in 23 of these cases. But these figures indicated that the great majority of local authorities approach CCT positively and properly, to the benefit of their local taxpayers.

These are the themes which run through the "CCT in Local Government in England Annual Report" which my Department has published today. The report is the first of its kind. It describes the achievements of 1993, both on the work of extending CCT and in promoting fair competition amongst the current blue-collar services. The report also describes the research projects completed and initiated during the year.

Copies of the report will be sent to all local authorities in England, and to the main trade associations and others involved with CCT. Copies have also been placed in the Library of the House.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Baldry: My Department has never purchased a Proton car.

Derelict Sites

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what powers local authorities have to compel owners of derelict and unsightly sites in urban areas to improve their appearance.

Mr. Baldry: Local planning authorities may serve a notice on the owners and occupiers of land under section 215 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 if it appears to them that its condition is adversely affecting the amenity of their area.

Local authorities may also use their powers under part III of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to improve land if they judge it to constitute a statutory nuisance.

Children's Play Facilities

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest available annual figures for grants for children's play facilities; and if he will list in each case the size and location of the grant.

Mr. Baldry: The latest forecast of expenditure under the urban programme in 1993-94 includes £3,042,000 for children's play facilities. Figures for individual grants are not available centrally. In addition, my Department provides local authorities with revenue support grant which they may use to fund such facilities. The total amount of revenue support grant for England and its distribution among local authorities are set out in the "Local Government Finance Report (England) 1994-95" and the accompanying exemplifications, which were placed in the Library of the House on 27 January 1994.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the cost of the CAP (a) to the United Kingdom and (b) to the EC in each year since 1990; and what are her estimates for 1994.

Mr. Jack: This information is contained in chapter 4 of the 1994 departmental report by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Intervention Board, a copy of which was deposited in the Library of the House of Commons.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of the CAP budget was spent on (a) set-aside and (b) environmental protection measures other than set-aside in each year since 1990; and what is her estimate for each of the next three years.

Mr. Jack: Information on expenditure on set-aside and on the CAP as a whole from 1990 to 1992 is available from the annual financial reports of the guarantee section of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund, copies of which were lodged in the Library of the House of Commons. Until the end of 1992, agri-environment measures were not financed from the CAP budget—that is, the EAGGF guarantee section—but rather from the guidance section. It is not possible to identify expenditure on these measures under the guidance section. For 1993, expenditure on set-aside and on agri-environment measures accounted for 1·2 per cent. and 0·5 per cent., respectively, of total CAP expenditure. The latest official estimates suggest that the corresponding figures for 1994 will be 4·5 per cent. and 1·5 per cent. We have no estimates of the future proportions as EC budgets are set only one year in advance. The 1995 budget has not yet been set. EC agri-environment schemes, and set-aside outwith the arable area payments scheme, are co-financed by member states. The above figures do not include any nationally funded expenditure. EU-wide information on this is not available.

Tobacco

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the tonnage of tobacco production in the EC in each year since 1990; what are her estimates of tobacco production for the next three years showing, in each case, the amount (a) consumed in the EC and (b) exported, and indicating the main export markets.

Mr. Jack: European Commission figures show Community annual tobacco production since 1990 as follows:

1990—419,953 tonnes
1991—429,739 tonnes
1992—408,451 tonnes
1993—364,219 tonnes (latest estimate)

As the revised regime, which came into force from the 1993 harvest, limits tobacco support to a maximum guaranteed quantity of 350,000 tonnes, production may fall in the next three years. Producers are also being encouraged to switch to more marketable varieties.

EC consumption was estimated at around 670,000 tonnes in 1992, the latest year for which we have information. Consumption, over two thirds of which is met by imported supplies, in the next few years may depend more upon consumer demand than production.

Exports to third countries were some 200,319 tonnes in 1992 of which half went to the United States of America, Egypt, Algeria, Japan and Switzerland and a fifth to eastern European countries. As part of the regime reform, export refunds have been abolished in all but exceptional circumstances. In the future exports may decline.

Cereal Prices

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the harvest cereal prices for each year since 1990; and what is her estimate for these prices for each of the next three years.

Mr. Jack: During the crop years 1989-90 to 1992-93 and the first six months of 1993-94, average ex-farm prices for the principal cereal crops grown in the United Kingdom were as follows:

£/tonne

Crop	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93	[1]1993-94
Wheat	105·33	114·54	115·82	128·88	106·07
Barley	107·20	109·85	107·29	118·22	106·38
Oats	102·81	107·65	105·82	127·37	118·39

[1] July to December only.
Source: MAFF.

Ex-farm cereal prices are influenced by a number of factors, including annual variations in the size and quality of the harvest both at home and abroad. It is therefore not possible to make a meaningful estimate of likely future prices.

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of public appointments made by her Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if she will list their names.

Mr. Jack: So far as I am aware there were no Asian or black people appointed in 1993 to the public bodies sponsored by the Ministry and listed in "Public Bodies 1993".

Farm Workers

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the total number of (a) farmers and (b) farm workers in England in each year since 1980.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is given in the table. The figures are from the June agricultural census for each year and include estimates for minor holdings not covered by the census.

Number of farmers and farm workers on agricultural holdings as at June each year (thousands)

	Farmers'[1] partners and directors	Spouses[2]	All other farm workers[3]
1980	196·4	50·2	277·2
1981	193·9	50·4	269·7
1982	192·1	50·1	267·9
1983	189·8	50·7	264·7

	Farmers[1] partners and directors	Spouses[2]	All other farm workers[3]
1984	190·1	50·5	257·1
1985	187·8	51·6	256·0
1986	187·4	51·5	249·5
1987	185·5	51·2	241·2
1988	183·5	51·2	235·2
1989	182·4	50·7	224·3
1990	181·9	50·5	223·5
1991	180·3	49·6	215·1
1992	181·5	49·8	208·8
1993	184·3	49·8	206·4

[1] Farmers are defined here as farmers, partners and directors working on farms and who describe themselves in the agricultural census returns. There can be more than one farmer, partner or director per farm.
[2] Spouses of farmers, partners or directors.
[3] Excluding school children but including trainees under an official scheme at agricultural wages board rates or above.

Export and Slaughter Levy

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans she has to withdraw the export levy on meat; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what plans she has to increase the slaughter levy; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The Meat and Livestock Commission is financed by levy which is collected on each animal at the time of slaughter or on export. There is no levy on exported meat. One of the recommendations of the recent review of the Meat and Livestock Commission was that the levy should be collected only at slaughter and not on export. Publication of the findings of the review was announced on 1 March and views have been invited by 1 June 1994.

Dog Exports

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what provisions apply to the export of greyhounds;

(2) what steps the Government are taking to enforce the Balai directive in so far as it relates to banning the export of dogs other than from registered centres.

Mr. Soames [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The transport of greyhounds both within this country and for export is subject to the provisions of the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1992.

Commercially traded greyhounds intended for export to EC member states are required to be accompanied by official health certification confirming that the animals comply with the animal health conditions laid down in the so-called "Balai" directive—92/65/EEC. In accordance with the directive, the Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 1993 (SI 3247) make it an offence to export commercially traded dogs to another member state unless the animals originate from a holding registered with the Agriculture Departments and the owner or person in charge of the holding has given the undertakings laid down in the directive. Enforcement of the regulations is the responsibility of local authorities.

The health certification requirements for pet dogs, including pet greyhounds, exported to other EC member states and to third countries vary according to the import conditions laid down by the country of destination.

Sand Dredging

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if any other aggregate company has offered to supply for coastal protection work from existing licensed dredging areas;

(2) if any other licensed dredging area is to be closed down as a condition of the Race bank licence.

Mr. Jack: The National Rivers Authority has invited tenders for supply of 1·2 million cu m of sand for nourishment of the beaches between Mablethorpe and Skegness. In this Ministry's contribution to the Government response to their licence application, I have specified that maximum possible use must be made of supplies from existing licensed areas before any material is removed from Race bank.

The NRA currently has no licensed areas and could not therefore relinquish any in lieu of the Race bank.

Whaling

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has made to the Russian authorities on the killing by former Soviet whalers of blue whales; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The United Kingdom is well aware of recent reports of under-reporting by the former Soviet Union of catches of a number of species of whale, including the blue whale. At a recent intersessional meeting of the International Whaling Commission, the Russian delegation undertook, in response to a request from a number of delegations, to submit to the IWC comprehensive updated statistical data on the USSR's whale catches.

The United Kingdom commissioner to the IWC has since written to the Russian authorities welcoming the contribution Russia made at this meeting and reaffirming the importance we attach to obtaining accurate information on past whale catches.

Milk Marketing Board

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the last date on which the milk marketing board may submit a reorganisation scheme.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have made a further order under section 2(7) of the Agriculture Act 1993. This defers the last date on which the England and Wales milk marketing board may apply under the Act for approval of a reorganisation scheme from 31 March 1994 to 30 June 1994.

Animal Health

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the amount spent by her Department on research programmes on animal health and welfare in each year since 1985-86; and what is the intended expenditure for each of the next three years.

Mr. Soames: Details of MAFF expenditure on animal health and welfare research since 1991-92 are given in the table. Prior to 1991-92 the data were not recorded in the required format and could not be obtained except at disproportionate cost.

Financial year	£ million
1991-92 actual	19·9
1992-93 actual	20·4
1993-94 estimate	22·0
1994-95 plans	21·1
1995-96 plans	21·9
1996-97 plans	21·8

NORTHERN IRELAND

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Departments who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment;

(2) if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Sir John Wheeler: District councils, professional organisations, employers' and employees' organisations, the Irish Government under the terms of the Anglo-Irish Agreement 1985, and other individuals and organisations as considered appropriate are consulted or informed about forthcoming appointments to public bodies.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested on racial origins of public appointments made is not held by the Northern Ireland Office, nor by the Northern Ireland Departments. However, details of ethnic minority appointments are contained in "Public Bodies 1993", a copy of which is held in the Library.

Nursery Schools

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the number of children attending nursery school in (a) the controlled sector, (b) the maintained sector and (c) the integrated sector in each of the five education and library boards; and what proportion of under-five-year-olds attend the above schools.

Mr. Ancram: The number of children attending nursery schools in the controlled and maintained sector in each of the five education and library boards is as follows:

Education and library board	Controlled	Maintained	Total
Belfast	783	693	1,476
Western	670	—	670
North-Eastern	1,006	120	1,126
South-Eastern	756	419	1,175
Southern	663	100	763
Total	3,878	1,332	5,210

There are no nursery schools in the integrated sector.

The proportion of under-five-year-olds in nursery schools is 10·3 per cent.

Slopping Out

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list each prison in the Province where slopping out is still in practice; and if he will set out his plans, and the estimated date, for ending slopping out for each prison.

Sir John Wheeler: Slopping out takes place in three Northern Ireland prisons—Her Majesty's prison Belfast, Her Majesty's prison Maze and Her Majesty's prison Magilligan.

The provision of en suite and in-cell sanitation facilities is a major element of an extensive refurbishment programme currently under way at Belfast prison. As the prison will have to remain operational, the programme of work will continue until 2000.

While there are currently no firm plans for ending slopping out at Maze and Magilligan prisons, where periods of unlock are extensive, the Northern Ireland Prison Service is continuing to explore a range of options for providing prisoners with 24-hour access to sanitation facilities.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. David Davis: In the departments and agencies for which my right hon. Friend is responsible, and other areas which fall to the Cabinet Office vote, the appointments are set out in the table.

The table does not refer to appointments to the research councils, which will be restructured on 1 April 1994. I shall write to the hon. Member with the details.

My right hon. Friend is also responsible for the appointment of justices of the peace in Lancashire, Greater Manchester and Merseyside and appoints several individuals to posts which have historical connections with the Duchy of Lancaster. These receive no remuneration.

Notes to the table:
Usual terms for Special Advisers
There are standard terms governing Special Adviser appointments concerning the length of their appointment. Unless a termination date is stated the appointment will terminate either:
(i) at the end of the present Administration;
(ii) in the event of the appointing minister leaving Government or moving to another appointment; or
(iii) in the event of a General Election
whichever is soonest. If a length of appointment is stated then the appointment will terminate when this period is up in the event that one of the above does not pre-empt this.
[1] Special Advisers are normally paid according to a salary spine which ranges from £19,121 to £59,957.
[2] Members of the Security Commission do not receive a salary, but are fee-paid. As members of the judiciary, the Chairman and Alternative Chairman do not receive a fee as they are already paid from public funds. All members (including Chairman and Alternative Chairman) are entitled to claim expenses.
[3] All appointments to the Political Honours Scrutiny Committee are made by the Prime Minister by Order of Council.
[4] CDL—PBT—Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, President of the Board of Trade.
[5] Appointments to the LINK Steering Group are made jointly by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster and the President of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Departments who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment;

(2) if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. Friend follows the procedures for the selection of candidates set out in the "Guide on Public Appointments Procedures" copies of which are available in the Library. The public appointments unit and the chairmen of the respective bodies are consulted in all cases. Other organisations that have been consulted about appointments are as follows:
The Accounts Commission (Scotland)
The Advisory Board for the Research Councils
The Agricultural and Food Research Council
The Association of County Councils
The Association of District Councils
The Association of Metropolitan Authorities
The Audit Commission

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what major building projects, valued at over £1 million, are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1992 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 28 March at column 505.

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what procedures his Departments have to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment;

(2) what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations,

(b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons.

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. Friend follows the procedures for the selection of candidates set out in the "Guide on Public Appointments Procedures" copies of which are available in the Library. Details of candidates' political views are not usually held but the appropriate security clearance is obtained where necessary.

Epilepsy

Mr. Parry: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much has been spent by the Medical Research Council on research into the causes of epilepsy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: In the last financial year, 1992-93, the Medical Research Council spent £336,000 on research concerning epilepsy, the majority of which provided for clinical trials and studies of the physiological basis of epilepsy. The council recognises that epilepsy is an under-researched area, and has advertised that it wishes to encourage high-quality innovative research that may lead to understanding of causation or to clinical advances in the medium term, under its neuroscience approach to human health initiative.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Parry: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the latest studies funded by the Medical Research Council of possible cures for Alzheimer's disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: In 1992-93 the Medical Research Council spent £1·5 million on research directly related to Alzheimer's disease, plus £3·4 million on research of relevance to Alzheimer's disease. A list of currently funded projects is attached. The Medical Research Council is always willing to consider soundly based scientific proposals in competition with other applications for research funding.

Breast Cancer

Ms Lynne: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what funds are specifically being allocated to gene therapy and to explore the biochemical pathways in breast cancer.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Medical Research Council's current expenditure on research related to gene therapy for melanoma is £50,000 per annum. The council has very recently awarded support for two new multi-disciplinary teams—one at Birmingham for £2 million and another at the Institute for Cancer Research for £1·1 million—to develop gene therapy for common cancers. Both grants will run for five years.

In 1992-93, the MRC spent £486,000 on projects exploring the biochemical pathways in breast cancer.

The council is always willing to consider soundly based scientific proposals in competition with other applications for research funding.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what funds are being put down for basic laboratory research into breast cancer.

Mr. Waldegrave: In the financial year 1992-93, the Medical Research Council expenditure on breast cancer research was £3·1 million. Included in that figure was £836,000 which was directly related to basic laboratory research into cancer. The council is always willing to consider soundly based scientific proposals in competition with other applications for research funding.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Phase 2 (New Parliamentary Building)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what is the current situation with regard to the development of the phase 2 new parliamentary building; what is the programme for demolition of the site; when the building is expected to be ready for occupation; and what steps are being taken to keep the House informed about progress on this project.

Mr. Ray Powell: On 2 February, following the Government's agreement that the Jubilee line should proceed, the House handed over to London Underground Ltd. the site on which the phase 2 building is to be constructed. Preliminary work on the site has begun and demolition work in preparation for the construction of the new underground station at Westminster will commence in a few weeks.

A legal agreement has been signed between the House and London Underground under the terms of which the site is due to be handed back to the authorities of the House in February 1997 to allow construction of the new building to proceed. Detailed design work is progressing and contracts for the first of the prefabricated sections will be placed later in the year.

The Accommodation and Works Committee is maintaining a close interest in the project and will receive monthly reports on its progress. At the earliest appropriate moment a further report will be made to the House.

Arrangements are being made for an exhibition to be mounted shortly after Easter to advise Members on the work planned for Westminster station and its consequences for the House. In due course a further exhibition on the new parliamentary building will be arranged.

HEALTH

Community Psychiatric Nurses

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each district health authority the number of community psychiatric nurses employed in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The information will be placed in the Library.

Air Toxics Study

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make an assessment of the United States Environmental Protection Agency's "Motor-Vehicle-Related Air Toxics Study", Ann Arbor, 1993.

Mr. Sackville: We are obtaining a copy of this report and will then consider it.

Abandoned Babies

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new-born babies were abandoned by their mothers in the last year that the figures are available.

Mr. Bowis: Information about new-born babies abandoned by their mothers is available in the register of children found abandoned in England and Wales, maintained by the Registrar General for birth registration purposes. There were five entries on this register in 1992 and two in 1993.

Hartley Hospital, Colne

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ascertain whether all the proper procedures were followed by the North Western regional health authority in its disposal of Hartley hospital in Colne.

Mr. Sackville: The North Western regional health authority is responsible for the management of the disposal of Hartley hospital, Colne. From the information available there are no grounds to conclude that there is a need to investigate the actions taken by the RHA.

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information her Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons;

(2) what procedures her Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Sackville: Information on the political affiliation of candidates for appointment is not readily available centrally. Public appointments are made on the basis of aptitude, merit and suitability.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent the procedures adopted for the appointment of the new chief executives and general managers for the eight English health regions, coming into effect on 1 April, conformed with the Government Opportunity 2000 programme and procedures and practices on equal opportunities; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The particular circumstances of these appointments meant that the exercise was not run as open recruitment and the field was therefore restricted. As far as it was possible, we used good practice in line with Opportunity 2000 and equal opportunities policies and practices as they apply within the national health service and the Department of Health.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of public appointments made by her Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if she will list their names.

Mr. Sackville: In 1993, 4,801 people were serving on Health public bodies. Of these, 2·04 per cent.—98 appointees—were of Asian origin and 0·94 per cent.—45 appointees—were of black origin.

Information about ethnic origin was given in confidence, and it would therefore be inappropriate to publish the names of these appointees.

Health Authority Staff, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed by the Doncaster health authority in each half year since March 1990 to the latest date figures are available.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information available is shown in the table. These figures exclude staff in trusts in September 1991 and September 1992. By 1992, all direct care staff were employed by the two trusts in Doncaster.

National health service staff in Doncaster DHA area—England—September 1990 to 1992—excluding trusts.

Whole-time equivalents	1990	1991	1992
All direct care staff	3,250	1,620	0
All non-direct care staff	1,170	n/a	n/a

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest ten.
2. "n/a indicates figures not available. Zero indicates figures less than five.

Children Act 1989

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many local authorities in England have (a) appointed project workers to develop services for disabled children, (b) established multi-agency planning structures, (c) established budgets for services to disabled children and for how much, (d) developed home-based short-term care provision and (e) developed residential short-term care provision following the implementation of the Children Act 1989.

Mr. Bowis: Information is not available centrally in the form requested. The 1993 report to Parliament on the operation and achievements of the Children Act will be available shortly and will include a commentary on the services provided by local authorities for children with disabilities.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if guidelines issued by her Department are of uniform status; and what action is taken to monitor guidelines with particular reference to those issued under the Children Act 1989 regarding the use of corporal punishment by child minders.

Mr. Bowis: The Department's guidance on behaviour and sanctions by child minders if minded children misbehave is contained in volume 2 of the Children Act Guidance and Regulations series entitled "Family Support, Day Care and Educational Provision for Young Children", copies of which are available in the Library. All these volumes were issued under section 7 of the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970 which requires local authorities in the exercise of their social services functions to act under the general guidance of my right hon. Friend the Secretry of State.

The Department keeps the working of the Children Act under review and issues supplementary guidance when this is appropriate. At present we are studying the recent High Court judgment in the case of Mrs. Davis. This was not critical of the content of the Department's guidance. We will consider if any further clarification is appropriate.

Oldchurch Accident and Emergency Unit

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account was taken in the business plans submitted by (a) Havering hospitals trust and (b) Redbridge healthcare trust of the projected closure of Oldchurch accident and emergency unit; and if she will place copies of those business plans in the Library.

Dr. Mawhinney: Barking and Havering health authority has undertaken its statutory responsibility to consult on the proposed closure of the accident and emergency department at Oldchurch hospital. A decision will be announced shortly. Business plans are national health service trust internal working documents. Summary business plans of all NHS trusts for 1994-95 will be published no later than May 1994 and can be obtained from individual NHS trusts.

Asthma

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to work with her colleagues in the Department for Education to promote good asthma management for children at school.

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on 10 March at column 346.

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the Government's strategy for research into asthma; where major funding is being allocated; and how the allocation of resources is decided.

Mr. Sackville: The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. In 1992-93 the MRC spent £759,000 on research into asthma and a further £757,000 on research which may be relevant to the condition. The Medical Research Council takes account of the Department of Health's priorities for research when allocating resources.

The Department of Health is a founder member of the respiratory research liaison committee, which includes the major organisations with a research interest in respiratory diseases, including asthma. In addition, the national health service research and development strategy determines research priorities on a range of difficult problems of direct relevance to the NHS and work is planned to establish detailed priorities in the field of respiratory diseases across all age groups.

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response she intends to make to the findings of a recent study showing that 13·1 per cent. of children suffer from doctor-diagnosed asthma with 2·2 per cent. experiencing more than 12 asthma attacks in the previous year; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Department is concerned about the incidence of asthma in children. At our request the Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants has set up an expert sub-group to review the evidence linking asthma to air pollution.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will accept the finding of the recent Audit Commission report, "A Prescription for Improvement", on under-prescribing for asthmatic patients; and what steps she is planning to take to ensure asthmatic patients receive the medications they need.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is the responsibility of general practitioners to decide the clinical needs of their patients. Since the introduction of chronic disease management programmes for asthma and diabetes in July of last year about 90 per cent. of general practitioners are running programmes for asthmatic patients. The British Thoracic Society's guidelines for the management of asthma are regularly drawn to the attention of all GPs and prescribing of preventtive medicine for asthma has increased sixfold over the last 10 years. Low levels of asthma prophylaxis are brought to the attention of GPs by family health services authority prescribing advisers.

Schizophrenia

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from SANE about (a) the difficulty in providing appropriate help for victims of schizophrenia and (b) the victims of schizophrenia being obliged to vacate hospital beds prematurely.

Mr. Bowis: Ministers and officials have been in close touch with SANE to exchange views on a range of issues.

Dentistry

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Association of Denture Prosthesis on the introduction of a Bill on Professions Supplementary to Dentistry; what plans she has for further discussions; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: I met the hon. Member for Southend, East (Sir Teddy Taylor) and representatives of the Association for Denture Prosthesis on 28 February 1994.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 17 March, Official Report, column 830, what information her Department has centrally for England and Wales as a whole on the number of dental surgeons (i) providing national health service treatment and (ii) not providing national health service treatment for each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The available information is shown in the table. Information is not held on dentists in wholly private practice.

Number of general dental practitioners providing national health service treatment[1] at 30 September England and Wales

Year	Number of dentists under contract to family health services authorities[2]
1989	16,178
1990	16,317
1991	16,287
1992	16,242
1993	16,616

[1] National health service dental treatment is also provided by the community dental service, the hospital dental service and by salaried dentists.

[2] Includes principals, assistants and vocational trainees.

Acute Psychiatric Beds

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sanctions exist when guidelines in respect of the provision of acute psychiatric beds are broken.

Mr. Bowis: It is for health authorities to assess the need for acute psychiatric beds and to contract with providers of mental health services to ensure that sufficient beds are available to meet the needs of their residents.

Chronic Disease Management Programme

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will indicate what progress is being made on the chronic disease management programme.

Mr. Sackville: New arrangements for chronic disease management in general practice were introduced on 1 July 1993. The latest available data suggests that almost 90 per cent. of general practitioners have already been approved to run chronic disease management programmes for the treatment of asthma and diabetes. This is an excellent response by general practitioners and their practice teams towards improving the treatment of these conditions.

Accident and Emergency Units

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assumptions she makes about the effect on neighbouring units of a closure of an accident and emergency unit; how that effect is assessed; and what degree of co-operation is expected from neighbouring units affected by a proposed closure of such a unit.

Mr. Sackville: Local health authorities plan the provision of accident and emergency services, based on existing patterns of treatment and assessments of future need. Closure of an accident and emergency department is only agreed where it can be demonstrated that there will be a net gain in the effectiveness and efficiency in patient services. It is for the appropriate health authority to undertake an assessment of the impact on surrounding hospitals, and to ensure an appropriate level of service. Only where there is no agreement locally should Ministers become involved in planning for local patient services.

Life Expectancy Statistics

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has on (a) the child mortality rates and (b) the average life expectancy for the inhabitants of (i) Manchester, (ii) Birmingham, (iii) Lambeth, (iv) Southwark, (v) Liverpool, (vi) Hackney, (vii) Leeds, (viii) Sheffield, (ix) Haringey, (x) Newham, (xi) Lewisham, (xii) Newcastle upon Tyne, (xiii) Salford, (xiv) South Tyneside, (xv) Coventry, (xvi) Hammersmith and Fulham, (xvii) Bristol and (xviii) Wakefield.

Mr. Sackville: The information on child mortality rates is shown in the table. The data requested on average life expectancy for the selected areas are not collected.

Hammersmith Hospital

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the future of the Hammersmith hospital.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 21 March at columns 68-69.

Tuberculosis

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths from tuberculosis occurred in each of the last five years by region; and how many new cases of tuberculosis were reported in each region in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The information will be placed in the Library.

Care Orders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children between the ages of 16 and 18 years have care orders; and how many of them are (a) currently with fostering families and (b) in homes.

Mr. Bowis: The latest centrally available information relates to the position at 31 March 1992, when it is estimated that 6,900 children aged 16 or 17 were subject to care orders; of these 3,100 were placed with foster parents and 900 were resident in community homes.

Training Costs (Doctors)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost to the national health service of training a doctor.

Dr. Mawhinney: The clinical training of medical students provided within the national health service is supported by the service increment for teaching and research. The amount of SIFTR paid annually in respect of each medical student is £36,292 at 1993-94 prices, for each of three clinical years. However, doctors also spend varying but significant periods in postgraduate training and subsequently throughout their careers in training activities designed to enable them to keep up to date in a rapidly changing clinical environment. It is not possible to quantify the total cost to the NHS of these forms of training.

Vasectomies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information and guidance is available to men seeking vasectomies; what information is given on the failure rate of such operations; and what are the figures for the failure rate of this procedure.

Mr. Sackville: The handbook of contraceptive practice issued by the Department to all general practitioners and doctors and nurses working in family planning clinics gives advice on counselling for vasectomy, including the need to inform the patient about the possibility of failure. The overall failure rate is less than 0·5 per cent. Copies of the handbook are available in the Library.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost of official entertainment in her Department in each year since 1990-91; if she will list the receptions held in each year at her Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. Sackville: Expenditure on hospitality since 1990-91 is shown in the table. A breakdown of past expenditure is not available in the form requested as hospitality expenditure tends to consist of large numbers of small payments—for example, refreshments for meetings of expert advisory committees, working groups etc.—which are summarised, managed and recorded by organisational group; I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Knowsley, South (Mr. O'Hara) on 24 January at columns 109-10 for a breakdown of 1992-93 expenditure by organisational group within the Department.

Year	£
1990-91	158,000
1991-92	168,151
1992-93	246,374
1993-94	[1]223,000

[1]Estimate.
Note: Figures have not been adjusted for inflation.

Cervical Smear Tests

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will issue guidance on the time before a repeat cervical smear test is needed after a result which shows no endocervical cells.

Mr. Sackville: An absence of columnar glandular endocervical cells per se does not in itself constitute an indication for a repeat smear as the smear could be adequate in other respects. Where a patient's smear is shown by the laboratory to be unsatisfactory, she is invited to have a smear as soon as possible.

HIV-AIDS

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, (1) pursuant to her answer of 1 March, Official Report, columns 680-81, to what extent the AIDS (Control) Act 1987 reports for the past year revealed gaps in the area of HIV-AIDS-related services for those with a physical disability;

(2) what assessment her Department has made of the physical accessibility of those locations in which HIV-AIDS-related services for the physically disabled are based.

Mr. Sackville: The AIDS (Control) Act 1987 requires regional and district health authorities to report on:

the known number of HIV seropositive people and people with AIDS in the area of the authority;
a report of facilities and services;
the number of staff employed;
expenditure on HIV and AIDS-related services.

Gaps in the area of HIV-related services for those with a physical disability have not been specifically identified. We would, however, expect authorities to provide services which are sensitive to the needs of and accessible by people with a physical disability since many people with AIDS would fall within this category.

Profit Margins

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if her Department has collected data, or issued guidance, regarding the levels of profit margin placed on equipment and goods sold to national health service authorities or bodies.

Mr. Sackville: No, apart from the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme.

Health Promotion Clinics

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will assess value for money in regard to health promotion clinics in general practice.

Dr. Mawhinney: Practice-based health promotion programmes are a good use of national health service resources to improve people's health.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Proton cars were purchased by her Department and its predecessor in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Ritual Abuse

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when Professor Jean La Fontaine's report on ritual abuse will be completed; and if the result will be made public.

Mr. Bowis: Professor La Fontaine's survey into the extent and nature of organised and ritual abuse will be completed later this year. No decision on publication has yet been made.

Suicides (Paracetamol)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to deal with suicides from paracetamol.

Mr. Bowis: We are considering a number of measures designed to reduce the risk of deliberate or accidental paracetamol overdoses.

Cancer Treatment

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much in real terms was spent in each of the last three years in the NHS on (a) the treatment of cancer and (b) the prevention of cancer.

Mr. Sackville: Information on the amount spent on treatment and prevention of cancer is not identified separately.

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of billboard sites currently covered by the voluntary agreement with the tobacco manufacturing companies; and how many she estimates are within (a) three miles, (b) two miles, (c) one mile, (d) three quarters of a mile, (e) half a mile and (f) one quarter of a mile of school premises.

Mr. Sackville: Under the voluntary agreement, billboard advertising of cigarettes and hand-rolling tobacco is not allowed which is in close proximity to and clearly visible from schools, places of education for young people and children's playgrounds. Information on the number of billboard sites covered by the voluntary agreement, and on the proportion within different distances of school premises is not held by the Department. However, the voluntary agreement limits expenditure on cigarette brand poster advertising by companies represented by the Tobacco Manufacturers Association to 50 per cent. of the 1980 level, allowing for inflation.

NHS Supplies Authority

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the National Health Service Supplies Authority, either centrally or through its divisions, employs independent consultants to undertake comparisons between the prices it pays or negotiates and the best available market price.

Mr. Sackville: The National Health Service Supplies Authority currently contracts with three independent consultants to obtain regular price comparisons.

Trent RHA

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was allocated to Trent regional health authority purchasers in each year since 1990; and what percentage this represents of all revenue funding for hospital and community health services in each year.

Mr. Sackville: Allocations to district health authorities as purchasers of health care were made for the first time in the 1991-92 financial year. It is the responsibility of regional health authorities to allocate resources to districts and this information is not separately identifiable in the information collected by the Department.

Expenditure by district health authorities in Trent in 1991-92 and 1992-93 is shown in the table; it excludes expenditure by general practitioner fundholders. The figures for individual authorities over the two years are not directly comparable in every case because of boundary changes.

Figures for 1993-94 are not yet available.

Trent district health authorities' expenditure accounted for 8·7 per cent. of the total expenditure by district health authorities in England in 1991-92 and 9·2 per cent. in 1992-93.

Hospital Beds

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital beds there were in each year between 1978-79 and 1988-89 in England excluding inner and outer London district health authorities and regional health authorities.

Mr. Sackville: The available information on the average daily number of available beds has been published and copies of the national and regional summaries placed in the Library. The data for the years 1978 to 1986 are contained in the publication "Hospital Statistics-Form SH3". Summary tables for the years from 1982 to 1992-93 are set out in "Bed availability for England: Financial Year 1992-93".

Breast Lump Clinics

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of hospitals have specific breast lump clinics.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

It is for local provider units in consultation with their purchasers to decide what provision is required.

Cash Limits

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes will be made to the cash limits of her Department in 1993-94.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The cash limit for class XII vote 1—hospital, community health, family health services (part) and related services, England—will be increased by £5,794,000, from £19,880,171,000 to £19,885,965,000. This increase covers transfers of £5,000,000 for enabling work for phase IV development of Derriford Hospital, from class I, vote 1, Ministry of Defence; £763,000 for payments to the National Health Service Estate Management and Health Building Agency and £123,000 in respect of Public Health Laboratory Service Board, from class XII, vote 3, Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England; £93,000 for the cost of clinical placements in England in respect of Glasgow Caledonian university students, to class XIV, vote 18, student awards, Scotland; and an increase of £1,000 offset by receipts from members of the public towards the cost of medical treatment for Bosnian evacuees.

The non-voted cash limit for supplementary credit approvals for personal social services—DOH/LACAP—in England is to be increased by £1,183,500, from £23,700,000 to £24,883,500 in respect of the take up of entitlement to carry forward of underspends from the 1992-93 financial year under the end-year flexibility arrangements as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 July 1993 at columns 512-17.

All increases will either be offset by increased receipts, transfers to or from other votes, or from the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Microbiology

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the future of the centre for applied microbiology and research.

Mr. Sackville: I announced on 15 January 1993 that the Centre for Applied Microbiology and Research was to become independent of the Public Health Laboratory Service and would be separately accountable to Health Ministers. I can now announce that the centre will, from 1 April, be administered by a new authority called the Microbiological Research Authority under the chairmanship of Mr. J. E. Everitt, outgoing chairman and chief executive of Vickers Medical. I have also agreed to the appointment of Dr. J. Melling as chief executive and director of the centre. The greater independence and more appropriate management expertise provided by these measures should enable the centre to develop its full scientific and commercial potential.

Breast Cancer Treatment

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her policy on the encouragement of randomised controlled trails for the treatment of breast cancer.

Mr. Sackville: The Government are committed to encouraging research into breast cancer. Randomised controlled trials are regarded as the scientific method for determining and evaluating new developments in health care, and are funded by the Department when they represent the most appropriate method of research for answering specific questions relevant to health care policy and practice.

The United Kingdom Health Departments, along with the Medical Research Council which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and the major cancer research charities—the Imperial Cancer Research Fund and the Cancer Research Campaign—are currently funding four studies into breast screening at an estimated cost of £5 million over five years. Three of these trials involve RCTs. The trials are being co-ordinated by the United Kingdom Co-ordinating Committee on Cancer Research.

General Practitioner Fundholders

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was allocated in Greater London to general practitioner fundholders in 1991-92 and 1992-93; and what percentage this represented of the total allocation for general practitioner fundholders in England for each year.

Dr. Mawhinney: Regional health authorities manage the general practitioner fundholding scheme in their areas. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen of the Thames regional health authorities for local information in London.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many fundholding practices there were in Greater London for each year since 1991-92; and what percentage of the total figure for fundholders in England those figures represent in each year.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information about general practitioner fundholder numbers is only available centrally at regional health authority level. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) on 7 February at columns 43-44.

Patient Stays (Average Length)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average length of in patient stay for patients who receive (a) hysterectomy, (b) gall bladder removal, (c) hernia repair, (d) kidney transplant and (e) angioplasty in hospitals in (i) Birmingham, (ii) Leeds, (iii) London, (iv) Manchester, (v) Newcastle and (vi) Bristol.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally. The available information by regional health authority is shown in the table.

District Health Authority Mergers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all proposed district health authority mergers and the timetable for each.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 15 March at column 566 concerning district health authority mergers from 1 April 1994. Proposals to merge Wigan DHA with Bolton DHA and Newcastle DHA with North Tyneside DHA have been received by the Department. Decisions on these proposals, which will include a timetable, will be made in due course.

Disability Equipment

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the average weekly cost of powering (a) a powered wheelchair, (b) a bed/bath hoist, (c) an automatic door opener, (d) a stair lift, (e) a respirator, (f) an automatic toilet-bidet unit and (g) a self-lift chair; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what amount of public funding is granted each year to help disabled people not on benefits pay the costs of running disability equipment; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: A wide range of disability equipment is supplied and, where appropriate, maintained by the national health service, social services departments, and other public bodies.

Health Authorities (Ethnic Minority Members)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what specific measures her Department plans to take to increase the percentages of ethnic minority members of health authorities, national health service trusts and working parties formed by her Department; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Our aim is to appoint the best people we can to the boards of national health service authorities and trusts and to ensure that good candidates from ethnic minorities are given every encouragement to come forward. To this end, regional health authority chairmen are specifically encouraged to seek people from ethnic minorities when identifying candidates for chairman and non-executive positions.

Urgent Cases

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the implications for patients of the letter by Sir Duncan Nichol, chief executive of the national health service, to district health authorities on the treatment of urgent cases within available resources.

Dr. Mawhinney: Sir Duncan Nichol wrote to all hospitals and health authorities on 24 February reminding those concerned with the purchasing and provision of hospital treatment of the need to ensure that appropriate clinical priority is given to patients on waiting lists. Copies of the letter, EL(94)19, are available in the Library.

Continuing Care Provision

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the NHS Management Executive to complete its inquiry into NHS continuing care provision by those district health authorities identified in the recent Alzheimer's Disease Society report as supplying no NHS continuing care beds; whether the NHS Management Executive's findings will be made public; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: I expect to receive a report from the National Health Service Management Executive shortly. Such advice is normally internal for the Department.

Birth Deformities

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has carried out on the link between sea pollution and deformities of children at birth; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Department itself has undertaken no such research. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Hartlepool (Mr. Mandelson) on 25 March at columns 462-63.

"Your Pocket Guide to Sex"

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of (a) commissioning, (b) printing, (c) distributing, (d) promoting and (e) recalling "Your Pocket Guide to Sex", written by Nick Fisher for the Health Education Authority, which was withdrawn on 23 March.

Dr. Mawhinney: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Waiting Times

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has to issue patients charter maximum waiting times inclusive of the wait for the first time out-patient appointment; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: New initiatives to reduce hospital waiting times are constantly being considered. An announcement will be made in due course if it is decided to add to the successful standards contained in the patients charter.

Farmers (Suicide)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will commission a report into the rate of suicide for farmers; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: We have commissioned Dr. K. Hawton of the University of Oxford to carry out a study of individuals in high-risk groups, including farmers, for whom verdicts of suicide or undetermined death were returned. His report is expected in December 1995.

EMPLOYMENT

Supported Employment

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on provision for supported employment in 1994-95.

Mr. David Hunt: The maximum grant payable in 1994-95 per contracted place in the supported employment programme will be £4,420 for both voluntary body and local authority providers. Under the arrangements I announced on the 10 March 1994, Official Report, column 338, coming into force on 1 April, the number of places in the programme will be for negotiation between the Employment Service and both local authorities and voluntary bodies. Payments to local authorities will continue, as previously, to be limited to at most 75 per cent. of their costs.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the cost of new furniture for his private office during the year 1993-94.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The cost of new furniture for the Secretary of State's private office was £911·88.

Work Experience Schemes

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of participants in (a) North Norfolk Action, (b) job clubs, (c) workstart and

(d) Government-organised or funded work experience schemes found subsequent employment as a result of joining the scheme, after the first six months of the scheme starting.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows: North Norfolk Action 12·8 per cent. from the work experience element and 2·3 per cent. from attendance at a series of caseload interviews; job clubs 63 per cent.

Figures for workstart are as yet unavailable; the scheme, which began in July 1993, provides subsidies for 12 months to employers who recruit eligible long-term people. Figures are also unavailable for community action, through which work experience is currently provided. This scheme also began in July 1993, and information on the number of leavers who obtain jobs is collected three months after the date of leaving.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the proportion of the United Kingdom work force which is employed under terms and conditions which do not fulfil the terms of the European Community social chapter.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The draft social chapter proposed at Maastricht did not set out any terms and conditions of employment.

Aerospace Apprenticeships

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many engineering apprenticeships in the aerospace industry there were in each year since 1979.

Miss Widdecombe: Data on apprentices have been collected on a consistent basis through the labour force survey since 1984. However, the sample size does not allow reliable estimates at this level of industrial detail.

Labour Flexibility

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assumption the Government make about the cost of their policy of labour flexibility for those affected: if he will list the evidence available to him about the relative costs and benefits; and if he will publish his estimate of the losses and gains and those who have lost and those who have gained.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A more flexible and efficient labour market leads overall to more jobs and less unemployment. It is not possible to disentangle the effect of flexibility on individuals.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what is the objective of the Government policy of labour flexibility; and what benchmarks the Government used for judging its success;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 11 March, Official Report, column 433, concerning rewards for productivity, by what means he assesses the effectiveness of the Government's policy of labour flexibility.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The objective of labour flexibility is to support economic growth, create jobs and reduce unemployment. Increased labour flexibility has contributed to unemployment falling earlier in the cycle than previously—a fall of 220,000 since December 1992, and to a relatively early upturn in the work force in employment—an increase of 136,000 in the nine months to December 1993.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a list of the measures which the Government include under the heading of labour flexibility; and which of these were commended to the Group of Seven.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Flexibility requires measures to improve the efficient working of the labour market, to increase the ability of unemployed people to get jobs and compete effectively, and to encourage investment in skills by individuals and their employers. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State commended each of these to the G7 jobs conference, which agreed that flexible labour markets support economic growth and deliver higher employment and lower unemployment.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the effect of the policy of labour flexibility on full-time adult male employment since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No such assessment has been made. Labour market flexibility should support economic growth, reduce unemployment and increase all types of jobs.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the minimum rate of unemployed required to sustain the Government's policy of labour flexibility.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There is no minimum rate required to sustain labour market flexibility. The aim of labour market flexibility is to support economic growth, create jobs and reduce unemployment.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the effect of the Government's policy of labour flexibility on the distribution of income; and whether it was intended to have that effect.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The distribution of income is determined by a variety of factors including the extent of unemployment. A flexible labour market should reduce unemployment and therefore help those at the lower end of the income distribution.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what account the Government have taken of the extra cost to the social services in assessing the results of their policy on labour flexibility;

(2) what account the Government have taken in judging, the results of their policy of labour flexibility, of the extra cost, to law and order;

(3) what account the Government have taken of the extra cost to the health service in assessing the results of their policy on labour flexibility.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Labour market flexibility supports economic growth, creates jobs and reduces unemployment. It does not involve extra costs to the social services, law and order or the health service.

Productivity (Rewards)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 11 March, Official Report, column 433, concerning rewards for productivity, what effect the increase in part-time working in the service sector has had on output per person employed; and if he will restate the published figures to show the estimated increase.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Statistics on the component of output attributable to part-time workers in the service sector are not compiled. As a result it is not possible to estimate reliably the effect on productivity of an increase in part-time working in the service sector.

Productivity

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 11 March, Official Report, column 433, concerning rewards for productivity, if he will give the data per person-hour in the sectors requested.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The data on output per person-hour in the sectors requested are not available.

Working Hours

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 861, on the number of hours worked, if he will provide comparable information for the whole economy less manufacturing.

Miss Widdecombe: The figures given in my reply to the hon. Member on 3 March 1994, Official Report, column 861 were based upon the index of total weekly hours worked by all operatives in manufacturing. There are no comparable figures for the rest of the economy.

However, the labour force survey provides estimates of the total number of hours worked in each industry sector on the basis of information provided by individuals responding to the survey. These estimates are not seasonally adjusted and so comparable figures must relate to the same time period for each year. Thus, most recent comparable estimates from the LFS between spring 1989 and spring 1993, show that the total number of hours worked by employees and self-employed in Great Britain fell by 19 per cent. for those in manufacturing industries, and by 13 per cent. for those in other sectors of the economy.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest figure for those in full-time training and also included in the count of the work force in employment.

Miss Widdecombe: In Great Britain, in December 1993, there were 428,000 participants on Government training programmes who were included in the count of the work force in employment. This figure comprises those people whose training has an element of work experience, including those with a contract of employment.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the correlation between the rate of economic growth since 1964 and the numbers employed in manufacturing in the United Kingdom and other industrial countries.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Industrial employment has fallen in a majority of the G7 countries since 1964. Output, on the other hand, has risen—in most cases substantially.

Ministerial Duties

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will publish a list of his duties and the amount of his working week allocated to each activity.

Mr. David Hunt: A list of my duties and those of my Ministers is set out in the Departmental Report (Cm 2505), a copy of which is available in the Library. The amount of time spent on any one aspect will vary from week to week.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

Allerton Road Jobcentre

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the future of the Allerton Road jobcentre, Liverpool.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. Fogden to Mr. David Alton, dated 29 March 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question in which you ask about the future of Allerton Road Jobcentre (JC), Liverpool.

Allerton JC will be closed on or about 10 June 1994 as part of the Employment Service (ES) programme to integrate its services and rationalise its estate. The Allerton premises are located in a small three storey shop unit which cannot be converted to provide the full range of ES services; the lease expires in February 1995. We are therefore bringing together all our job seeking and benefit payment services at our nearby newly refurbished office at Wavertree. We hope this will provide an improved standard of service to our clients locally as everything will now be available under one roof.

Wavertree ES JC is approximately two miles from Allerton and there is a regular bus service between them.

I hope this is helpful.

Thorne Jobcentre

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what wards in the Doncaster, North constituency are covered by the Thorne jobcentre.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. Fogden to Mr. Kevin Hughes, dated 29 March 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking which wards in the Doncaster North Constituency are covered by Thorne Jobcentre.

It may be helpful if I explain that Jobcentre boundaries are not defined in ward terms. However, it is possible to match frozen April 1991 Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) wards to Jobcentre areas on a best-fit basis.

There are four wards in the Doncaster North Constituency. On a best-fit basis, two wards, Thorne and Hatfield, are fully within the Thorne Jobcentre catchment area as is the northern half of the Stainforth ward. The fourth ward in the constituency, Askern, falls in the neighbouring Doncaster Jobcentre area.

I hope you find this helpful.

Earnings

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on comparisons between pay increases in the public and private sectors in Britain in 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on the earnings of employees in the public and private sectors is published, each year, in table 1 of part A of the new earnings survey. The latest available information, published in September 1993, relates to April 1993. Copies of the latest report are available in the Library. The monthly average earnings index, published by the Department, does not distinguish between private sector and public sector earnings.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement concerning his plans to create new-style apprenticeships; in what industries he expects the new apprenticeships to be created; and what estimates he has of the number of new apprenticeships he expects to be created.

Miss Widdecombe: A wide range of modern apprenticeships will be offered to 16 and 17-year-old school leavers from September 1995, with some prototypes starting later this year. Fourteen sectors are involved in prototype arrangements and these are linked to 42 training and enterprise councils. These are:

Agriculture
Somerset, South and East Cheshire, Northumberland, Humberside

Business Administration
Gloucestershire, Norfolk and Waveney, Northamptonshire

Chemicals
Wakefield, CEWTEC/NorMidTEC

Childcare
North West London, Stockport/High Peak

Electrical Installation
Essex, Suffolk, South Derbyshire, MetroTEC

Engineering Manufacturing
Devon and Cornwall, Milton Keynes and North Buckinghamshire, London East TEC, Walsall, Barnsley and Doncaster, Merseyside, Hertfordshire, Birmingham (in conjunction with Coventry and CENTEC)

Engineering Construction
Bolton/Bury, Durham

Information Technology
Leeds, West London, Teesside

Marine Engineering
Cumbria

Merchant Navy
Tyneside

Polymers
Shropshire

Retail
AZTEC, Lincoln, HAWTEC

Steel
Sandwell, Sheffield (Steel Training)

Travel Services
North London, Dorset, Surrey

Up to 2,000 young people will be catered for this year, with up to 150,000 in training at any one time when the initiative is fully developed.

European Structural Funds

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if the Government will apply for objective 4 grants under the European structural funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Hertfordshire, North (Mr. Heald) on 25 January 1994, at column 233.

Part-time Work

Mrs. Clywd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what action the Government will take to implement the ruling given by the House of Lords on part-time workers;

(2) to what extent retrospective compensation claims from part-time workers will be possible following the House of Lords ruling.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what changes to current employment legislation he is considering following the recent House of Lords ruling that part-time employees have the same rights as full-time employees with regard to unfair dismissal and redundancy; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The Government are carefully considering this judgment to ascertain its full implications and will make an announcement as soon as possible.

Child Care

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much his Department spends on child care provision for the under-fives and out-of-school provision for children aged over five either directly, excluding provision for departmental staff, or indirectly through resources made available to local authorities or other organisations; what form of provision is thereby provided; how many places are thereby provided; and if he will make a statement on child care.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 14 March 1994]: We have committed £45 million to the out-of-school child care grant initiative, with the aim of creating up to 50,000 new after-school and holiday places for the over-fives throughout Great Britain. Training and enterprise councils and local enterprise companies also have the flexibility to use their budgets to provide child care assistance for trainees.

In addition, over 90 per cent. of three to four-year-olds attend either education or group day care. It is not, however, possible to say what proportion of these places will have benefited from Government support—for example, through TECs and LECs.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current average cost of administration of an unemployment benefit payment.

Mr. Hague: I have been asked to reply.

The latest expenditure figures are contained in the DSS departmental report, Cm 2513. The total administration cost of unemployment benefit in 1992-93 was £269 million. The total number of payments was 23,847,000 giving an average of £11·28. This includes allowance for the cost of administering national insurance credits for clients who do not receive any social security benefit and part of the cost of Employment Service advisers who check benefit eligibility.

SCOTLAND

Development Corporation

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many tenancies controlled by the (a) Cumbernauld, (b) East Kilbride, (c) Glenrothes, (d) Irvine and (e) Livingston development corporations occupying (i) less than 10,000 sq ft, (ii) between 10,000 and 20,000 sq ft, (iii) between 20,000 and 30,000 sq ft, (iv) between 30,000 and 40,000 sq ft, (v) between 40,000 and 50,000 sq ft, (vi) between 50,000 and 100,000 sq ft, (vii) between 100,000 and 200,000 sq ft and (viii) over 200,000 sq ft are (1) currently vacant and (2) occupied.

Mr. Stewart: The tables show the numbers of industrial and commercial units currently owned by the development corporations and whether tenanted or vacant:

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much each of Scotland's development corporations has spent during each of the last five years on advertising.

Mr. Stewart: Information on advertising costs is not available centrally. Expenditure on publicity and marketing is set out in schedule 2 of the annual accounts of each new town development corporation. The annual reports, including the accounts, are available in the Library of the House.

National Health Service Helpline

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 7 March, Official Report, column 54, what action has been taken by each of Scotland's health boards to publicise the operation of the NHS helpline; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: Since the NHS helpline came into operation in October 1992 expenditure on administration of the service totals £227,566 and expenditure on publicity totals £98,748.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 7 March, Official Report, column 54, what assessment he has made of the calls to the NHS helpline; what procedure was adopted by his office in establishing its helpline; how many people are employed to deal with the calls; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The NHS in Scotland management executive receives monthly monitoring reports and quarterly customer satisfaction survey reports from Network Scotland which operates the NHS helpline on a contractual basis. These give details of the number and subjects of the calls received and an indication of customer satisfaction with the service.

Tenders were invited for the setting up and running of the service from a number of organisations and the contract was awarded to Network Scotland. A project supervisor and up to four part-time operators are employed by Network Scotland in work relating to the NHS helpline.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 7 March, Official Report, column 54, how much his office has spent (a) administering and (b) publicising the operation of its NHS helpline; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: All health boards in Scotland, and their provider units, publicise the NHS helpline telephone number and information about the service provided in a variety of ways. These include the provision of information in health board literature, local health charters, patient information leaflets, notice board information in public areas of health board premises and distribution of the NHS helpline poster.

Redundant Hospitals

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many redundant NHS hospitals have been disposed of since 1987 without the benefit of planning permission.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is not collected centrally. Advice on the planning aspects of disposals is contained in current guidance on the handling of NHS property transactions.

National Continence Week

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what projects his Department instigated in respect of National Continence Week.

Mr. Stewart: The Scottish Office provided funding for the expansion of a telephone helpline facility at the continence resource centre, Southern General Hospital NHS Trust, Glasgow to secure additional staff and equipment, for a four-week period including National Continence Week. Leaflets, posters and stickers advertising the helpline and encouraging sufferers to seek help were distributed widely, advertisements were placed in public transport buses throughout Scotland and in national newspapers, and a briefing note was circulated to all media outlets. In addition a number of events were organised across the country by local health service professionals, including continence advisers.

Dairy Farmers

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many dairy farmers there were in Scotland in each year since 1985.

Sir Hector Monro: No information on the number of dairy farmers is collected. The Scottish agricultural census identifies specialist dairy and general dairy farm types.

The number of such farms was:

Year	Number
1985	2,949
1986	2,873
1987	2,789
1988	2,690
1989	2,622
1990	2,562
1991	2,515
1992	2,460
1993	1,885[1]

[1] A new system of farm typology was introduced in 1993. On the same basis there were 1,899 dairy farms in 1992.

Agriculture (Incomes)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will show the average income of (a) farmers and (b) farm workers in (i) cash and (ii) real terms, using 1985 as a constant, in each year since 1980 showing these incomes as a percentage of the average wage.

Sir Hector Monro: Estimates of the earnings of full-time hired agricultural workers in Scotland are derived from the control test inspection sample survey carried out under the Agricultural Wages (Scotland) Act 1949. Those figures are given in the table.

None of the estimates of average farm income is comparable with the average wage. The table presents estimates of cash income to farm businesses in Scotland for 1986-87 onwards. Estimates for previous years are not available on a consistent basis.

Farm Workers

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, if he will list the total number of (a) farmers and (b) farm workers in Scotland in each year since 1980.

Sir Hector Monro: The information requested is given in the table. The figures are from the June agricultural census of main holdings.

	Occupiers	Spouses	All other farmworkers
1980	23,061	7,872	40,602
1981	22,984	7,724	37,756

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his current plans for city technology colleges in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No proposals for establishing a city technology college in Scotland are currently under consideration. Any firm proposals which come forward will be carefully considered.

Court of Session Fees

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to implement the extension of the principle that the litigant should contribute to the recovery of the full judicial costs applicable to civil business; and when he intends to lay the statutory instrument order on Court of Session fees.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer to the answer I gave the hon. Gentleman on Thursday 24 February, column 442.

An order will be laid later this year.

Nursery Schools

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of the extra nursery school places since 1979 have been provided through the urban programme; and what percentage the urban programme places are of the increase in places since 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No central records are maintained of the number of places which have been created through the urban programme and continue to form part of the total provision of nursery school places in Scotland. Such information could be gathered only at disproportionate cost.

Training

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will instruct Scottish Enterprise that it should be able to provide answers to questions about the specific skills being learnt on Government training schemes.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend has no plans to instruct Scottish Enterprise on this matter.

Schools (Expenditure)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the annual capital expenditure on schools since 1979 in real and constant price terms.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested, which is given in the table, has been compiled from local authority financial returns. The fall in expenditure in real terms during the period reflects a substantial and progressive decline in school pupil numbers which has reduced the requirement for new school building.

Capital expenditure by local authorities on schools

	At out-turn prices	At 1992-93 prices

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people, of all ages, are on training schemes in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: The numbers of Government training programmes in Scotland at the end of December were as follows:

	Number
Youth training	32,453
Training for work	14,065

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many training establishments he visits each year.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend and I and other ministerial colleagues have in recent years visited a number of employers, chambers of commerce, training providers and educational establishments which provide vocational and non-vocational training.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Lang: None.

Assisted Places

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the 20 independent schools which currently have the highest proportions of their school rolls made up by pupils covered by the assisted places scheme; and if he will give the percentage of pupils covered by the assisted places scheme and the size of the school rolls.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information, for autumn term 1993-94, is as follows:

School	School roll	Per cent. of pupils supported by assisted place scheme
Kilquhanity House School, Castle Douglas	40	50
Keil School, Dumbarton	225	28
Morrison's Academy, Crieff	642	24

Lomond School, Helensburgh	514	11

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what follow-up is undertaken to assess the usefulness of training schemes in finding jobs.

Mr. Stewart: Responsibility for the follow-up survey of leavers from the employment training and youth training programmes was transferred from the Training Agency to Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise on 1 April 1991. The Department of Employment delivered the service on their behalf under contract until 1 April 1993 when the enterprise bodies introduced their own follow-up systems.

I have asked the chairmen of the enterprise bodies to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of trainees between the ages of 40 and 50 years find work on completion of a training course.

Mr. Stewart: The information is not collected in the form requested.

Motorists (Culpable Homicide Charges)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what considerations he takes into account when determining whether charges of culpable homicide should be proceeded with in relation to drivers of motor vehicles.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Crown counsel will charge a motorist with culpable homicide where, on the evidence available to them, the driver's conduct showed gross or wicked criminal negligence amounting to a criminal indifference to the consequences of his driving.

DNase

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions his Department has had with health boards relating to the use of the drug DNase; and if he has recommended its use to health boards.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 March 1994]: There has been no discussions between the Scottish Office Home and Health Department and health boards about the drug DNase; and no recommendations have been made as regards its use. The prescribing of DNase is a matter for clinical judgment.

Council Tax

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appeals there have been against council tax valuations since the council tax was introduced in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 March 1994]: By 30 November 1993, 95,966 proposals to change the valuation list were lodged with assessors' departments in Scotland.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the average waiting time for appeals against valuation to be heard since the introduction of the council tax in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 March 1994]: For proposals to change the valuation list and consequential appeals settled by 30 November 1993, the average time from lodging the proposal to settlement was four months.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appeals against council tax valuations are still waiting to be heard in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 March 1994]: At 30 November 1993, the latest date for which information is available centrally, 66,329 proposals to change the valuation list and appeals were still to be dealt with.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appeals against valuation have resulted in a change in the banding of a property since the introduction of the council tax.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 March 1994]: Information is not collected centrally on the number of proposals to change the valuation list which have resulted in a change in the banding of a property. The table shows the recorded outcomes of the 29,637 proposals settled up to 30 November 1993.

	Number
Settled before citation by the Valuation Appeals Committee:
Withdrawn by appellant	6,995
List adjusted by assessor	21,699
Settled after citation and prior to Valuation Appeals Committee hearing:
Withdrawn by appellant	415
List adjusted by assessor	496
Decisions by the Valuation Appeal Committee:
Number dismissed	29
Number allowed	3

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the total cost of the valuation exercise in Scotland, including the appeals process, since the introduction of the council tax.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 March 1994]: No information is held centrally relating to the cost of the appeals process or to costs of valuation work other than the initial preparation of valuation lists. The additional costs incurred by valuation authorities on the initial valuation exercise, which are reimbursed by my Department through the council tax valuation grant, amount to an estimated £9 million. Not all final claims have yet been received in respect of work in 1992-93.

NHS Staff

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hospital staff were lost from each health board in 1993; and of these totals how many were nurses.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 March 1994]: The information requested is not available centrally for all staff groups. The readily available data on qualified nurses joining and leaving each board are shown in the table.

Qualified nurses (excluding those in training): net movement analysis by health board for year beginning 30 September 1992 (Headcount).

Public Appointments

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those members of bodies to which he makes appointments who can be identified as having estate-owning interests.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 28 March 1994]: Appointments are made on the basis of aptitude, merit and the qualifications of the person for the post to which they are appointed. No central record is kept of the land ownership of those appointed to public bodies.

Football Grounds

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland by how much Greenock Morton football club will benefit in terms of the formula valuation following the changes contained in the Football Grounds (Rateable Values) (Scotland) Order 1994.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 22 March 1994]: The Football Grounds (Rateable Values) (Scotland) Order 1994 falls to be implemented by the local assessor. I cannot, therefore, provide a definitive figure for its effect on any particular club. From the latest figures available to my Department, however, I estimate that the club's rateable value will be reduced from £17,000 to £11,600.

Specialists (Waiting Lists)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people, not on waiting lists for treatment, were waiting to see a specialist in the national health service for each quarter in the last two years.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 23 March 1994]: Information on waiting times to first out-patient appointment is set out in the "NHS Patient Treatment and Waiting Time Bulletin". Copies of the bulletin, which is published quarterly, have been placed in the Library of the House.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The number of staff in post in the Scottish Office, its executive agencies and associated Departments as at 1 April 1993 are shown by grade equivalent, full-time or part-time status and gender in the table.

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) at what stage the unit general manager at Glasgow royal infirmary became aware that Greater Glasgow health board had awarded cleaning and portering contracts to Executive Healthcare; and whether his advice was sought on that company's suitability to be invited to tender;

(2) if he will investigate the contract evaluation methods carried out by Greater Glasgow health board, to determine whether they meet ministerial guidelines;

(3) if he will conduct an investigation into the practices of the commercial section of Greater Glasgow health board;

(4) on what criteria firms were chosen to be invited to tender for cleaning and portering services at the Glasgow royal infirmary.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The unit general manager was a member of the evaluation panel for the tenders and was involved in the advice to Greater Glasgow health board in reaching its decision to award the contract.

My noble and learned Friend has been assured by the health board that the evaluation was carried out in accordance with the central guidance issued and the board's standing instructions. It is for the board's auditors to investigate any non-compliance with procedures and standing instructions.

In line with EC procurement regulations, advertisements were placed in the national press and European Journal. Technical and financial checks were undertaken on the companies that responded to the advertisements. The checks included the taking up of bank and trade references. Only those companies that satisfied the checks were placed on the tender list.

Scottish New Town Development Corporation

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements have been made for the maintenance of pension funds for staff employed by the Scottish New Town development corporation following the wind-up of those bodies.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 March 1994]: New towns staff are in general members of either the new towns pension fund or local government superannuation schemes. Discussions are taking place at present towards safeguarding staff pension rights, following the wind-up of the development corporations.

Mearnskirk Hospital

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much surplus land within the grounds of Mearnskirk hospital is for sale; what price was negotiated with Dickie Ambion Bryant; how many other firms were invited to submit bids for the purchase of this land; and how many bids were received.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 March 1994]: Thirty-six hectares of land at Mearnskirk hospital has been declared surplus to requirements and offered for sale by Greater Glasgow health board. Extensive marketing included a mailshot of the top 500 housing developers. By the closing date seven formal offers and one expression of interest were received, and the offer from Dickie Ambion Bryant was recently approved by the board. As missives of sale have not yet been concluded, it would be inappropriate to reveal price details.

East End Leisure Centre, Shettleston

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial contribution the Glasgow Development Agency is making to the proposed East End leisure centre in Shettleston constituency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 March 1994]: It is for the local enterprise company to decide what, if any, contribution it wishes to make towards a particular project. I understand Glasgow Development Agency has, at present, no plans to make any financial contribution towards the East End leisure centre.

East Kilbride Development Corporation

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library documents from 1989 onwards relating to the agreed redundancy arrangements applying to staff employed by East Kilbride development corporation.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 March 1994]: It is not normal practice for copies of correspondence between the Secretary of State or his officials and third parties to be made public.

Specialist Medical Examinations

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average length of time which elapses between a general practitioner's recommendation for specialist investigation and the effecting of such consultations in each health board or health trust area in Scotland, in each specialty.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 March 1994]: Information on the average waiting time for first out-patient consultations in the main specialties following GP referrals is set out in the "NHS Patient Treatment and Waiting Time Bulletin". Copies of the bulletin, which is published quarterly, may be found in the Library of the House.

Sporting Rates

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice he received from Scottish Natural Heritage on the abolition of sporting rates in Scotland; and if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 March 1994]: None.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of the cost, by local authority area, of abolishing sporting rates in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 March 1994]: There will be no cost to local authorities due to the loss of non-domestic rate income following the abolition of sporting rates in Scotland. Through the aggregate external finance mechanism any NDRI forgone will be compensated by an increase in revenue support grant.

TRANSPORT

West London Railway Line

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to ask Railtrack to undertake studies into alternative routes to the west London railway line for freight traffic to and from the channel tunnel.

Mr. Freeman: I am asking Railtrack to carry out a study of the proposal to route international freight trains via the North Downs route when it takes over responsibility for the infrastructure in April 1994.

Cash Limits

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to change his Department's cash limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Macgregor: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) on Thursday 24 February 1994, Official Report, column 324.

London, Tilbury and Southend Line

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the ministerial statement of March concerning closure of Fenchurch Street station for seven weeks in the summer, Official Report, column 1220, what alternative services, or what recommended means, will be available to passengers wishing (a) to use the London, Tilbury and Southend line to and from Limehouse station and (b) to interchange at that station to and from stations on the docklands light railway.

Mr. Freeman: Fenchurch Street and Limehouse stations on the London, Tilbury and Southend line will be closed from 22 July to 12 September. I understand that, during the closure, LT and S passengers wishing to travel from Limehouse into the City of London will be able to do so using the docklands light railway. Passengers wishing to transfer to the docklands light railway will be able to change to the London Underground District line at Barking and then to the docklands light railway at Bow Road—Bow Church. LT and S services terminating at Liverpool Street will call at Stratford where there is also an interchange with the docklands light railway.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the ministerial statement of 17 March concerning the seven week closure of Fenchurch Street station this summer, Official Report, column 1220, over what period of time the re-signalling and track re-laying programme, costing £83 million, could be accomplished on the basis of withdrawal of all trains between Barking and Fenchurch Street on weekends only from 21.00 hours on Friday until 06.00 hours on Monday; and what withdrawal of services, other than those already announced, he expects east of Barking in this respect during the remainder of 1994 and in 1995.

Mr. Freeman: It is impossible to undertake the required resignalling work between Fenchurch Street and Barking at weekends and at night in a safe manner. It involves the complete removal of the tracks into Fenchurch Street.

The full scheme will involve a programme of works in 1995 both east and west of Barking. LT and S management cannot predict at present what further changes to the service may be necessary before the resignalling scheme is complete.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the ministerial statement of 17 March concerning closure of Fenchurch Street station for seven weeks this summer, Official Report, column 1220, how many passengers travel (a) to Fenchurch Street from Barking via West Ham on the London, Tilbury line between 07.00 hours and 10.00 hours on a normal weekday morning and (b) westbound on the District line to central London via West Ham on that line between 07.00 hours and 10.00 hours on a weekday morning in August; how many in (a) above are expected, during closure of the line from Barking to Fenchurch Street, to add to those travelling as in (b) above; how many are expected to travel by trains direct from Barking to Liverpool Street; what is the planned capacity provided over those times; how many additional passengers are expected on services on the Great Eastern line between Southend and Stratford; and what is his estimate on the reduction in demand in (a) above from 22 July to 9 September this year.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Approximately 3,000 passengers join trains at Barking for Fenchurch Street station on the London, Tilbury and Southend line—LT and S—between 07.00 and 10.00 hours on a weekday morning in August. Many of these have changed from the District line.

(b) This information is not available in the form requested. London Underground says that, in spring 1990, the latest period for which figures are available, 30,500 people each weekday travelled westbound on the District and Hammersmith and City lines between Plaistow and West Ham during the morning peak.

During the closure of Fenchurch Street station, several alternative travel options for LT and S passengers will be available: to change at Barking on to the London Underground District line, to travel to Liverpool Street on the London, Tilbury and Southend line or to travel to Liverpool Street on the Great Eastern line. It is not possible to predict precisely which options passengers will choose. However, extensive research is being undertaken to forecast traffic flows and the likely level of passengers who will transfer at Barking. London, Tilbury and Southend management will consult the Southend Rail Travellers Association before publishing a temporary timetable at the end of April.

Planned capacity is as follows:

There will be approximately 960 seats every 12 minutes from the Southend Borough West, Benfleet, Pitsea and Basildon to Liverpool Street. There will be 620 seats every 12 minutes from Southend Borough calling at all stations to Barking. There will be 620 seats every 12 minutes from Pitsea to Barking via Tilbury.

There is usually a 13 per cent. seasonal reduction in passenger numbers in July and August, but owing to the closure it is expected that this will increase to 20 or 30 per cent.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the ministerial statement of 17 March concerning the closure of Fenchurch Street station for seven weeks this summer, Official Report, column 1220, how many additional trains will be run by London Underground between Upminster or Barking and central London during weekday mornings and evening peak hours —between 07.00 hours and 10.00 hours and 16.00 hours and 19.00—during those weeks; and what number and proportion of timetabled trains outside those periods on those days, and on Saturdays and Sundays, respectively, will be run direct from Barking into and out of Liverpool Street station.

Mr. Norris: The eastern section of London Underground's District line already operates at full capacity during the peak periods, leaving no possibility of additional services during the seven weeks' closure of Fenchurch Street station. The frequency of peak hour services from Barking on the Hammersmith and City line will double from four to eight trains per hour, when London Underground Ltd. introduces new timetables in May. LUL has no plans to run Hammersmith and City line services to or from Barking outside peak hours.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of the additional bus services planned by the management of the London, Tilbury and Southend line and management between stations on that line and Great Eastern stations; and how many additional trains will be run at peak hours during that period from either Southend or Shenfield into Liverpool Street station.

Mr. Freeman: Fenchurch Street station will be closed for seven weeks during the summer. London, Tilbury and Southend line management are working closely with local user groups to determine the best use of bus services between LT and S stations and nearby alternatives on the Great Eastern line. They are examining routes between Laindon and Billericay, Basildon and Wickford and the Leigh area to Rayleigh. LT and S management believe that many passengers will make their way to Southend Victoria, Prittlewell and Rayleigh where they will be able to travel to Liverpool Street on the Great Eastern line.

Two trains an hour from Southend Victoria via Shenfield will be strengthened from eight to 12 cars to provide additional capacity. Colchester trains will call additionally at Romford where a short branch line connects the Great Eastern with the LT and S at Upminster.

Owing to limited track and platform capacity it will not be possible to run additional trains into Liverpool Street.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what decisions relating to (a) issuing and inspection of tickets, (b) passenger services, (c) signalling and safety and (d) platform allocation will be taken by (i) private commercial management of mainline London railway stations, (ii) the franchisees or (iii) Railtrack.

Mr. Freeman: Station operators will normally be responsible for (a). Franchisees and open access operators will be responsible for (b). Railtrack will have overall responsibility for (c) although all operators will be required to conform with its safety case. Station access agreements will cover (d).

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what activities he will open to the London mainline railway stations under private commercial management that could not have been activated by the British Railways Board.

Mr. Freeman: Private sector management of mainline stations in London and elsewhere will ensure that the commercial potential of such stations is more fully developed than under public sector ownership and management. Private sector management will also help to provide a more attractive environment for passengers and greater responsiveness to customer requirements at such stations.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made as to whether passenger transport authorities making payments to Railtrack from 1 April will have sufficient information about the basis of the charges to meet the statutory criteria required by their auditors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Passenger transport authorities, through the passenger transport executives, will not be making payments direct to Railtrack for the access charges attributable to their rail services, but will be paying the subsidy required by BR to run the trains. BR, in turn, will pay access charges to Railtrack.

I understand Railtrack has been discussing with the passenger transport authorities the composition of the access charges for their services. I have no reason to believe that the passenger transport authorities will have insufficient information to meet the statutory criteria required by their auditors.

Donaldson Inquiry

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he now expects to make public the findings of the Donaldson inquiry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: My right hon. Friend expects to publish the report of Lord Donaldson's inquiry during May.

Sleeper Services

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instruct the franchising director to include sleeper services on the Night West Countryman and the Night Riviera in the contract with train operating companies.

Mr. Freeman: The sleeper services on the Night West Countryman and the Night Riviera are included in the existing timetable. The objectives, instructions and guidance issued to the Director of Passenger Rail Franchising on 22 March by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State included an instruction to the effect that, for the initial letting of franchises, the specification of minimum service levels for railway passenger services is to be based on that being provided by British Rail immediately prior to franchising, taking into account the existence of, and justification for, seasonal variations in service schedules.

Road Construction

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of published research into the role of road construction in stimulating economic regeneration in the areas concerned.

Mr. Key: The conclusion to be drawn from published research is that in general there is no clear evidence for specific regeneration effects. The main likely reasons for this are that local or regional economic problems are varied and seldom specifically related to lack of adequate access by road, that road improvements help traffic in both directions, and therefore can help importers to a region as much as exporters from it, and that labour employed on road improvements does not necessarily come from the immediate area. However, road schemes taken forward by the Department of Transport or by local authorities with Department of Transport assistance show healthy economic benefits, principally from time and cost savings to local and through traffic. Their planning takes into account any appropriate regeneration or economic development measures that are proposed for the areas affected.

Second Tamar Bridge

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has for a second Tamar bridge which also crosses the Tavy; when he expects to make an announcement about these proposals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The consultants who undertook a study of the feasibility of a new Tamar crossing advised that a new crossing is likely to be needed by the turn of the century. Their report was published in June 1993 and comments were invited on the four possible routes which had been identified. One of these, the purple route, would cross both the River Tamar and the River Tavy.

I am considering the responses to the consultation before deciding if, when and how the proposal for a new Tamar crossing should be taken forward.

Signposting

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to review legislation on the size and display of public and private signs.

Mr. Key: We will shortly be placing before Parliament updated traffic signs regulations and general directions. These will offer a much wider range of signs than before —and of circumstances in which they can be used—and so reduce the need for traffic authorities to seek special authorisations from my Department, thereby substantially reducing bureaucracy. As a separate exercise we recently invited the views of a wide range of organisations on the procedures currently in place for approving the use of white-on-brown tourist signs. I am now considering how the procedures might be changed in the light of the responses to this consultation.

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and upaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Norris: Names of candidates for appointments are obtained from the public appointments unit and from a wide range of other sources such as those described in section 4 of the Cabinet Office guide on public appointments procedures, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Information on which bodies have been invited to submit names for particular appointments is not held centrally and could be assembled in respect of all appointments made by my right hon. Friend only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons;

(2) what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Norris: My right hon. Friend does not seek information on involvement in political activities when considering candidates for public appointments, and no such information is held centrally within the Department. Where the rules on political activities referred to in paragraph 7.2 and annexe 7A of the Cabinet Office guide on public appointments procedures apply, they are drawn to the candidate's attention when the appointment is offered. It is then for the individual to decide whether to accept the appointment on these terms.

London Buses (Privatisation)

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has received from London regional Transport, London Buses Ltd or any other organisation on the expected change in bus mileage in the capital following privatisation of London Buses Ltd.

Mr. Norris: After privatisation of London Buses Ltd., London Transport will continue to be responsible for the general level of provision of bus services. It has no plans to make significant changes to its bus network. However, it intends to give bus operators the opportunity to increase service frequencies, if they wish, to make their services more responsive to the needs of their passengers.

Continental Time

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what evidence his Department has as to the extra costs imposed upon United Kingdom (a) airlines, (b) ferry operators and (c) train operators by the one hour time difference between the United Kingdom and continental Europe;

(2) what representations he has received from United Kingdom airlines, ferry operators and train operators regarding the one-hour time difference between the United Kingdom and continental Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: We have received representations from British Rail and British Airways on this issue. Both organisations have drawn attention to the reduced costs and other benefits which would result from harmonisation of United Kingdom and continental European time. I believe that the chamber of shipping takes a similar view.

The Council of Ministers has recently adopted a common position on a Commission proposal to harmonise the end-date of summertime throughout the Community from 1996. The case for a move to single-double summertime in the United Kingdom is currently under consideration and I expect a conclusion to be reached shortly.

Vocational Drivers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 102, if he will list the reasons why certain offences will no longer be categorised as requiring disciplinary hearings after reorganisation.

Mr. Key: There has never been any requirement for drivers who have been convicted of offences by the courts to be called in addition to public inquiry by a traffic commissioner; offences involving more than six penalty points have, however, hitherto been referred routinely to the traffic commissioners, who have had discretion to call drivers to inquiry and, especially in cases involving disqualification, often did so. Under the new guidelines, traffic commissioners are recommended not to call to inquiry drivers who have received first-time disqualifications of 12 months or less, but to deal with such cases by warning letter. In addition, drivers who have received only very short disqualifications or penalty points short of a disqualification will no longer be routinely referred to the traffic commissioners for possible action unless the penalty points result from alcohol or drug-related offences.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 102, if he will list the categories of offences of the driver disciplinary hearings held in the last 12 months, giving details.

Mr. Key: During the last 12 months there have been approximately 9,000 individual disciplinary hearings for vocational drivers. Information on the category of offences on each of these hearings could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Railway Staff Redundancies

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that the statutory requirements on the railway industry of operating with due regard to economy, efficiency and safety continue to be fulfilled in the light of redundancies and early retirements which have taken place since January 1993.

Mr. Freeman: I am satisfied that the railway industry will continue to fulfil all its statutory requirements in line with the objectives I have set and will continue to set.

Motor Cyclists (Leg Protectors)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has commissioned on leg protectors for motorcyclists.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 21 March to a question from the hon. Member for Bradford, South (Mr. Cryer) Official Report, column 107.

Barkby and Beeby Bypass

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether any route has been approved by his Department for a new eastern bypass near the Leicestershire villages of Barkby and Beeby.

Mr. Key: No. The work done so far has just identified the broad corridor through which the proposed Leicester eastern bypass would be likely to run.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the status of the plans to build a new Leicestershire eastern bypass near the villages of Barkby and Beeby.

Mr. Key: Along with all trunk road schemes in the national roads programme, the future of the Leicester eastern bypass is under review. The outcome of the review should be known shortly but until then it is not possible to comment on the status of any individual scheme.

Accidents (Young People)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish tables covering the last three years showing the number of accidents to 17 and 18-year-olds who had passed their driving test within one and two years before an accident.

Mr. Key: The information requested is not available.

Civil Servants

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each civil service grade in his Department the number of (a) male and (b) female, (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 28 March 1994]: I am placing copies of the information requested in the Library.

Compensation Payments

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of whether he has discharged his responsibilities under section 52 of the Land Compensation Act 1973 in respect of a Woolwich constituent, Department of Transport, Ref. N/PSO/21676/93; what progress he can report subsequent to his letter to the hon. Member for Woolwich of 24 November 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The Secretary of State has considered his responsibilities under section 52 of the Land Compensation Act 1973 in respect of the hon. Member's constituent and he is satisfied they have been discharged. Agreement has been reached with the hon. Member's constituent for all the outstanding mortgages to be discharged. Officials will shortly seek agreement with the mortgagees of the hon. Member's constituent to complete this process.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the administrative cost of disallowing income support for one day in the case of applicants who absent themselves from the United Kingdom for one day.

Mr. Burt: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. It is not possible to give an accurate estimate as such costs are wholly dependent on the circumstances of each individual case.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many single people with no dependants who work between 16 and 24 hours a week are now excluded from entitlement to income support.

Mr. Hague: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the maximum number of taught hours an unemployed adult can undertake without affecting his entitlement to family income support;

(2) what assessment he has made of the move of the Further Education Funding Council to mode 3 learning; to what extent the concept of full-time or part-time course or student still applies; and if he will make it his policy that that concept should not be used by his Department in determining eligibility for benefit.

Mr. Hague: People aged 19 or over but under pension age who are attending a full-time course at an educational establishment are not entitled to income support other than in a limited number of circumstances.

People attending a part-time course may under certain circumstances continue to receive IS but only if the course is not more than 21 hours.

The Further Education Funding Council's new funding methodology is concerned solely with the distribution of recurrent funding to colleges in the FE sector. It will not affect entitlement to social security benefits.

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Hague: For those executive and advisory bodies listed in "Public Bodies 1993", 4 per cent. of new appointments last year were from an ethnic minority. Ethnic origin details are given in confidence and names cannot be divulged.

The information requested is not readily available for the independent tribunal service and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Industrial Disablement Benefit

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances a medical question in respect of a claim for industrial disablement benefit should be determined by more than one adjudicating medical practitioner; what standing instructions there are to officers acting on his behalf on when and how to apply regulation 29(1)(d) of the Social Security (Adjudication) Regulations 1986; and if he will place a copy of those instructions in the Library.

Mr. Scott: Medical questions must be referred to, and determined by, more than one adjudicating medical practitioner in the case of:

(a) any question arising on an application for the review of a decision on the grounds that:
  (i) the decision was given in ignorance of, or based on a mistake as to, a material fact; or
  (ii) there has been an error of law;
(b) any other case which, in the opinion of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, should be determined by more than one adjudicating medical practitioner.

There are no standing instructions on the application of regulation 29(1)(d), but guidance is issued to adjudicating medical authorities.

Industrial Injuries

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the level of administrative costs for the industrial injuries scheme as a proportion of all benefit paid under the scheme.

Mr. Scott: The cost is estimated as 9·6 per cent.

Disability Working Allowance

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 782, if he will publish the reasons for the low level of take-up of the disability working allowance before the completion of the research, commissioned by his Department, in October 1996.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to do so.

Benefit Tourism

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all the countries whose Governments have made representations concerning his proposals to tackle benefit tourism.

Mr. Hague: The Republic of Ireland.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each year since 1988 for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Hague: None.

Pensioners (Benefit Loss)

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security from what date the benefit loss to a pensioner was set at £1 per £250 of savings.

Mr. Hague: The formula applied for taking account of capital above £3,000 in the income-related benefits was introduced in April 1988. In housing benefit and council tax benefit, however, the effect of the tapers which apply to those benefits means that housing benefit is reduced by only 65p and council tax benefit by only 20p for each £1 above a set level.

Residence Test

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what representations he has received expressing concern at the Government's new residence test; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list the points raised by the Irish in Britain's representation group concerning the economic effects of the new residence test proposals on immigrant Irish youth; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: Proposals for the introduction of a habitual residence test into income support, housing benefit and the council tax benefit are before the Social Security Advisory Committee. Representations are currently being considered by the committee, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will receive their report in due course.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to change the way in which assumed amounts of national insurance contributions are calculated in determining the net amount of estimated earnings and bonus and commission payments in the assessment of family credit and disability working allowance entitlement.

Mr. Burt: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State laid before Parliament on 10 March 1994 amendments to the family credit and disability working allowance regulations on the calculation of these assumed amounts. Because of the difficulty of ascertaining the actual rate of contribution for which the person would be liable, it has been the practice to make all the calculations at the rate applicable to a person who is not contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme. This was considered to be within the terms of regulations 20, 20A and 26 of the Family Credit (General) Regulations 1987, and regulations 22, 23 and 29 of the Disability Working Allowance (General) Regulations 1991, but recent legal advice is that they do not permit this. In consequence, overpayments have occurred since the introduction of the schemes, in April 1988 and April 1992 respectively, amounting to a total of about £725,000. The cost of the administrative arrangements which would be required to prevent the overpayments would be well in excess of the amounts overpaid. The regulations are therefore being amended urgently to regularise the situation and, in the meantime, the additional payments are continuing to be made on an ex-gratia basis. A note will be included in the relevant appropriation account.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals there were against invalidity benefit being removed in the Doncaster area in the last 12 months; and what was the figure for the previous 12 months.

Mr. Scott: This is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from M. Bichard to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 28 March 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about appeals against removal of Invalidity Benefit (IVB) in Doncaster.

The information is not available in the exact format requested. This is because Benefit Agency District boundaries do not correspond with county or borough boundaries. Part of the Doncaster postal area falls within that covered by the Mexborough Branch Office of the Agency's Rother and Dearne District.

The Agency's Doncaster District, comprising Doncaster West District Office and Doncaster East Branch Office deals with the remainder of the Doncaster postal area.

Statistics are maintained to show the number of appeals received at each office. Within these figures it is possible to identify the number of appeals against removal of IVB.

The number of appeals received at each office against removal of IVB received for people in the Doncaster area were as follows:

	Number
Doncaster West District Office from 1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993	34

Prosecutions

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many prosecutions were instigated by his Department in the financial years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93 by nature of offence, the number of convictions, the number of custodial sentences and the financial penalties levied.

Mr. Hague [pursuant to his reply, 22 March 1994, columns 167-68]: The totals shown in the table should read as follows:

Year	Number
1990-91	8,336
1991-92	4,618
1992-93	5,902

Child Support Agency

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were (a) the start-up costs, (b) the running costs and (c) the moneys recovered from absent parents in the first year of the Child Support Agency; and what was the target sum for (c).

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Frank Field, dated 28 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the costs of the Child Support Agency and the money recovered by the Agency.

The total cost of setting up the Agency was around £146 million. This figure includes the 1992-93 cost of liable relative work, transferred in April 1992 from the Benefits Agency to the Child Support Unit, as the shadow Agency was known before its launch in April 1993. The running costs for the Agency in 1993-94 are estimated at £97·8 million.

The Agency was set a target to recover £530 million in benefit savings in the financial year 1993-94. To 31 January 1994, £250 million had been recorded as recovered. This does not represent the total amount of savings during the period as some will be scored restrospectively.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the operation of the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Lilley: The Child Support Agency was introduced to ensure that parents meet their responsibility for the financial maintenance of their children where they can afford to do so. It replaced an inconsistent, often unreliable system which resulted in a drastic decline in maintenance payments over the past decade.

There is already the right of appeal to an independent tribunal against a decision of a child support officer on the basis of an incorrect application of the formula.

DEFENCE

RAF Personnel Management Centre

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 March, Official Report, column 394, what was the cost of refurbishment to the personal residence of the air officer commanding the RAF personnel management centre, Innsworth.

Mr. Hanley: The current air officer commanding the personnel management centre at RAF Innsworth vacated his official residence, Haymes Garth, in May 1992. That was to allow it to be refurbished for the air officer commander in chief of the new RAF personnel and training command. Since May 1992, the existing air officer commanding has been living in his own private residence. The value of the work being carried out at Haymes Garth is estimated at around £260,000 and includes substantial expenditure on repairs to the roof, on rewiring and re-plumbing.

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Hanley: No Asians or black people were appointed to MOD non-departmental public bodies during 1993.

David Hart

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what role and status David Hart has in his Department; what are his terms and conditions of employment; and when he was appointed.

Mr. Hanley: Mr. Hart is not an employee of the Ministry of Defence. He is one of a number of people who provide unpaid advice to my right hon. and learned Friend from time to time. He has carried out this role since July 1993.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 March, Official Report, column 752, if he will now give the same information for south Yorkshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: I did not visit south Yorkshire on that date.

Low Flying

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have been carried out on the possible cumulative effect of low flying sorties on the hearing of young infants; and if he will make a statement on their findings.

Mr. Hanley: My Department has not carried out specific research into the cumulative effect of low flying sorties on the hearing of young infants. In 1990, however, we commissioned a study to review the available information on any possible relationship between aircraft noise and hearing loss. The review included consideration of research reports of possible hearing loss in children due to aircraft noise. A copy of the report was placed in the Library of the House—university of Southampton institute of sound and vibration research, "Risk to Hearing from Overflight Noise of Military Aircraft".

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low flying sorties have been conducted over mainland Britain for every year since 1979 (a) above 250 ft, (b) between 100 and 250 ft and (c) below 100 ft.

Mr. Hanley: The total numbers of sorties booked in the United Kingdom low flying system—UKLFS—for each year since 1979 are as follows:

Year	Number
1979	[1]108,860
1980	[1]122,851
1981	[1]131,841
1982	[1]130,313
1983	[1]127,683
1984	133,519
1985	141,762
1986	151,164
1987	147,661
1988	151,291
1989	144,323
1990	141,390
1991	127,400
1992	131,464
1993	119,410

[1] Before 1984 sorties were not recorded, but have been estimated from the number of movements into individual low flying areas.

Central records are not maintained of the heights at which low flying sorties are flown. Information is, however, available on operational low flying—OLF—which is flying by fixed-wing military aircraft below 250 ft and down to 100 ft and which may only take place in three tactical training areas—TTAs—in central Wales, northern Scotland and the borders. Details of OLF sorties are not available, but the total numbers of movements authorised into the TTAs in each year since 1979 are as follows:

Year	Number
1979	787
1980	797
1981	660
1982	240
1983	1,922
1984	1,007
1985	476
1986	1,200
1987	1,386
1988	2,115
1989	2,694
1990	6,027
1991	1,814
1992	3,220
1993	3,049

The figures from 1988 onwards reflect the division of the borders TTA into east and west sectors. Movements for the two sectors were counted separately so that sorties which crossed the border between the two sectors generated additional movements; this led to an overstatement of the amount of activity in comparison with earlier years. The division between the two sectors was removed in October 1993. Analysis of the figures which show OLF movements on the basis of treating the borders TTA as a single area give revised figures from 1991 onwards as follows:

Year	Number
1991	1,050
1992	2,026
1993	1,874

Note: Revised figures for 1988-90 are not available.

OLF may be authorised down to a minimum level of 100 ft but records do not distinguish between movements flown below 250 ft and at 100 ft.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the total number and type of low flying exercises that have been conducted over Britain since 1979; if he will account for each significant change since 1990; and if he will describe future plans during 1994.

Mr. Hanley: Central records of all low flying exercises in the United Kingdom are not held. There have been no significant changes in the broad pattern of exercise activity in the United Kingdom since 1990, and none are anticipated during 1994.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been paid out in compensation to farmers in Wales for loss of livestock, abortion and loss of production caused by low flying aircraft during each year since 1990.

Mr. Hanley: Since 1990 the Ministry of Defence has paid out the following amounts in compensation to farmers in Wales to cover livestock-related losses caused by low flying military aircraft:

Year	£
1990	47,953
1991	59,159
1992	33,152

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will define the geographical area included in the central Wales tactical training area.

Mr. Hanley: The Welsh tactical training area comprises the south-west portion of Montgomery, the north-west corner of Brecon and Radnor, the north-east corner of Carmarthen and north Pembroke. The area, which is designated low flying area 7T, is shown on the copy of the map of the day low flying system which is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the total number of low flying sorties that have crossed the terrain of the Carmarthen constituency (1) on average per year from 1979 to 1991, (2) during 1992 and (3) during 1993.

Mr. Hanley: Although records are maintained of the total number of sorties flown in the United Kingdom low flying system, it is not possible to estimate the number of sorties flown over particular locations.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many representations have been received by his Department against low flying aircraft during each year since 1979.

Mr. Hanley: The number of inquiries and complaints received by my Department about low flying in each year since 1979 are as allows:

Year	Number
1979	4,004
1980	3,365
1981	4,502
1982	3,304
1983	5,164
1984	5,609
1985	4,206
1986	5,304
1987	5,695
1988	5,763
1989	8,057
1990	7,130
1991	4,846
1992	6,295
1993	5,738

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what form of warning is given to farmers and residents of mid and west Wales prior to Royal Air Force test flights scheduled to fly in their area at altitudes below 250 ft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: All low flying below 250 ft and down to 100 ft in Wales by fixed wing military aircraft takes place in the Welsh tactical training area—TTA. Each month my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence notifies hon. Members in the areas affected of the planned usage of the TTA.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the minimum height at which low flying takes place (a) in the central Wales tactical training area, (b) in the rest of Wales and (c) in the rest of Britain.

Mr. Hanley: Fixed-wing military aircraft, except light propeller-driven aircraft, are permitted to fly to a minimum height of 100 ft in the tactical training areas in central Wales, northern Scotland and the borders. Elsewhere in the United Kingdom low flying system the minimum height is 250 ft.

Light propeller-driven aircraft are permitted to fly to a minimum height of 50 ft. There is no minimum height restriction for helicopters.

Arms Sales

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's officials are involved in the selling of British arms to other European NATO countries outside the Western European Union.

Mr. Aitken: Taking into account associate membership of the WEU, there are no European NATO countries outside the WEU.

Pregnant Personnel

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the current employment policies when female personnel in the armed forces become pregnant.

Mr. Hanley: Service women who become pregnant can choose either to take a period of up to 48 weeks maternity leave and return to duty, or if they prefer, to leave the armed forces. Those who choose to leave can apply to re-enter subsequently if they wish.

Child Care

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent child care facilities are made available to personnel in the armed forces.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 21 January, Official Report, column 940.

Female Personnel

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the percentage of female personnel in each of the armed forces.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

Service	Percentage of Female Personnel (as at 1 January 1994)
Royal Navy	7·6
Army	5·7
Royal Air Force	8·5

Porton Down

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 March, Official Report, columns 392-93, what were the cash outturns at 1992-93 prices for the chemical and biological establishment at Porton Down for each financial year between 1969 and 1979.

Mr. Hanley: This is a matter for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment under its framework document. I have asked the Chief Executive of the CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 29 March 1994:

Parliamentary Question 3, Order Paper 24 March 1994

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking pursuant to the answer of 10 March, Official Report, columns 392-3 what were the cash outturns at 1992-93 prices for this Establishment for each financial year between 1969 and 1979 has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The cash outturns for 1975-76 to 1978-79 at 1992-93 price levels are as follows:

Outturn at 1992-93 Price Levels

Year	£ million
1975-76	18·7
1976-77	17·0
1977-78	15·8
1978-79	13·5

I regret that the cash outturns for 1969-70 to 1974-75 are not readily available.

Air Cadets

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the representations he has received about the future of the Air Cadets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd) on 3 March, Official Report, column 871.

EDUCATION

Examination League Tables

16. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has concerning the publication of examination league tables this year.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend is currently considering the responses to consultation on the content and format of the 1994 school and college performance tables. He intends to build on the considerable success of previous years' tables and is minded, as in 1993, to publish in November two sets of booklets, covering secondary schools and institutions catering for students aged 16 to 18. He has also proposed that the secondary school tables should, for the first time, include data on authorised absence as well as on unauthorised absence from school, and information on the length of the taught week.

Local Management of Schools

17. Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received on the funding of teacher salary increases within local management of school budgets.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has received comments on the funding of teacher salary increases for 1994-95 from the teacher unions, local authority associations and others who were invited to comment on his proposals for implementing the recommendations of the school teachers' review body. A further 70 letters have been received from individual LEAs, head teachers and governors.

Discretionary Awards

18. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when the Gulbenkian Foundation survey of discretionary awards will be published.

Mr. Boswell: Although publication is not in the Government's hands, I understand that, in order to avoid publication at the beginning of the Easter break, the survey's steering committee has now decided to publish the report on 8 April.

Direct Grant Schools

19. Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what applications for capital spending he has received from direct grant schools on Merseyside for the year up to 1 April; and what allowance has been made by his Department to those schools during the same period.

Mr. Robin Squire: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to capital bids by self-governing—grant-maintained—schools for 1993-94. One such school on Merseyside received a named project allocation totalling £750,000. Emergency grants totalling £188,000 have also been made to schools on Merseyside in the same period.

Nursery Education

20. Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to expand nursery provision; and if he will make a statement.

22. Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on the provision of private sector nursery education and its relationship to state nursery education provisions.

23. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to extend nursery education to all four and five-year-olds whose parents want it.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what recommendations he has for nursery education.

Mr. Robin Squire: Over 90 per cent. of three and four-year-olds already receive some form of pre-school provision, whether in maintained nursery and primary schools or in playgroups or elsewhere in the private sector. Our policy is to promote diversity, choice, quality and cost-effectiveness. We are currently reviewing possible ways of extending opportunities still further for the under fives, as resources allow. We will announce our conclusions when we are ready.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate his Department has made of the educational and social benefits of nursery education.

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing) on 17 February at columns 934-35.

School Places (Portsmouth)

21. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received from Hampshire local education authority concerning school places in Portsmouth.

Mr. Forth: None.

Public Examinations (Course Work)

24. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement about the role of course work in GCSE.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend is clear that the proportion of course work assessment must be appropriate to the type of qualification and to the knowledge, skills and understanding that are being tested. He recognises that some aspects of achievement are better assessed through course work than through terminal examination.

Medical Students (Financial Support)

25. Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what consideration he has given to special provision of further financial support for medical students and others on four and five-year degree courses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer told the House on 30 November 1993 that the total support available to students through the mandatory maintenance grant and the student loan would rise by 4 per cent. in 1994-95. The same annual rates of grant and loans apply to all students irrespective of their course length. We have no plans to change that arrangement.

Truancy

27. Mr. Roger Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what were the principal findings of the tables on truancy published last year by his Department.

Mr. Forth: The tables published in November 1993 found that significant amounts of valuable learning time are being lost due to unauthorised absence; 12 per cent. of all pupils in primary and in secondary schools had been absent without authority in the period covered by the tables. An average of 12 half-days were lost by every absent primary school pupil and 24 half-days were lost by every absent secondary pupil. Rates of unauthorised absence varied widely between individual LEAs and schools.

Grant-maintained Schools

28. Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many pupils are now being educated in self-governing grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: We estimate that over 530,000 pupils are currently being educated in grant-maintained schools. As more schools join the sector next month this total will rise to over 580,000.

Assisted Places Scheme

29. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on the future of the assisted places scheme.

Mr. Forth: The Government remain fully committed to this excellent scheme. We expect to achieve our target—namely, 35,000 available places in England and Wales, by 1995.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Boswell: The figures are as follows:

Grade	Number of women	Percentage women	Number of ethnics	Percentage ethnics	Number of disabled	Percentage disabled
Grade 4	1	25·0	0	0·0	0	0·0
Grade 5	12	26·1	0	0·0	1	2·2
Grade 6	2	13·3	0	0·0	0	0·0
Grade 7	44	28·8	4	2·6	1	0·7
TOTAL IN DFE	1,309	58·4	164	7·3	63	2·9

There were other staff in the Department with disabilities who chose not to register and are not therefore included in the figures.

These figures include 376 staff in post in the Teachers' Pensions Agency.

Parental Appeals

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will give figures, in total and for each local education authority, on the number and percentage of parental appeals on school admission which are (a) rejected, (b) withdrawn, (c) settled and (d) upheld; and if he will give these figures for both the earliest and latest years for which they are available since 1964.

Mr. Robin Squire: Data on the number of parents securing their first choice of secondary school are not collected centrally. However, the most recent evidence—from surveys commissioned by the Association of Metropolitan Authorities in 1992 and The Times in 1993—shows that some 90 per cent. of parents gain a place at their first choice of school.

Forensic Medicine

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what guidelines he has on the training of medical students in forensic medicine.

Mr. Boswell: It is for individual universities to determine the content and organisation of their medical curriculum taking account of guidelines issued by the General Medical Council.

Teachers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 8 March, Official Report, column 134, when the information about the number of people who graduated or qualified or failed in teacher training in 1993 will be available.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information is expected to become available for statistical use during the summer. The required information will then be placed in the Library.

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Boswell: The information has been placed in the Library. Ministerial responsibility for approval rests ultimately with my right hon. Friend.

Charing Cross Medical School

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on the future of the Charing Cross medical school.

Mr. Boswell: The Government accepted Sir Bernard Tomlinson's recommendation that Charing Cross medical school should merge with St. Mary's medical school within Imperial college. The Higher Education Funding Council for England is taking forward discussions on the merger with the institutions themselves.

Secondary Schools

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 532, which four local authority secondary schools in London he visited in the last 12 months; and how many he plans to visit during 1994.

Mr. Patten: The four local authority schools that I have visited in London during the last 12 months are: Bishop Thomas Grant secondary school, Lambeth; The Hague primary school, Tower Hamlets; Mulberry school for girls, Tower Hamlets; and Hasmonean school, Barnet.

During the same period I have visited Archbishop Tennison school and Bexley and Erith technical high school for boys which are both self-governing, grant-maintained, schools; my plans for further visits this year are under consideration.

Music Teachers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his latest assessment of the shortage of teachers of music.

Mr. Robin Squire: There is currently no significant shortage of teachers of music. In January 1993 only 0·7 per cent. of music posts were vacant—some 30 posts. Recruitment to initial teacher training in music in 1993 rose by 9 per cent. from the previous year. Applications for entry to initial teacher training in autumn 1994 are higher than this time last year.

Local Management of Schools

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many grant-maintained schools and schools operating under local management of schools in (a) the primary sector and (b) the secondary and tertiary sectors had a budget (i) surplus and (ii) deficit last year; how much money was involved in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested on local education authority schools could be collated only at disproportionate cost. No grant-maintained school was in cash deficit at the end of the financial year 1992-93. In the interests of effective management of public funds, schools operating under local management of schools are able to carry forward balances from one year to another, as are grant-maintained schools within limits set by the Department.

Schools (Capital Projects)

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education for what named capital projects the Greenwood Dale GM school, the George Spencer comprehensive school and the Ravensdale middle school bid in 1994-95; what was the total amount of each bid; and how much finance was allocated to each school.

Mr. Robin Squire: The following are details of the named capital project bids made by the schools for funding in 1994-95:

School	Bid £	Description	Allocation £
Greenwood Dale	550,206	Roof/cladding/boiler repairs	Nil
	144,225	Refurbishment of five science laboratories	120,000
George Spencer	119,606	Roof works and asbestos removal	100,000
	715,117	Science/technology provision	250,000
Ravensdale middle	129,250	Refurbishment of science laboratory and administration area	Nil
	22,372	Renewal of defective felt roofing	20,000

Iraqi Students

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many Iraqi students were studying in the United Kingdom at the latest available date; and what were the numbers five years ago.

Mr. Boswell: The latest available information relates to the 1991-92 academic year, when there were 174 Iraqi students enrolled as full-time students at universities, polytechnics, Scottish central institutions and other colleges maintained or assisted by local authorities or grant-aided by education departments in the United Kingdom. This compares to 1,300 in the 1987-88 academic year.

Pupil Exclusions

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received about the powers of maintained schools to exclude pupils.

Mr. Forth: The Department has received a wide range of responses to the draft circular on exclusions, which was issued for consultation in January as part of the "Pupils with Problems" package. Those responses are currently being analysed. From time to time the Department also receives representations from parents or other interested parties about individual exclusion cases.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) how many cases received legal aid in the North West region last year; what was the average length of time taken to bring a case to court; and what was the average cost of each case;

(2) how many legal aid certificates have been issued in the last two years for preliminary work only in the North West region; how many of these led to completed court cases; and how many were incomplete and did not come to court.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The North-West region is served by four legal aid area offices which are situated in Chester, Manchester, Liverpool and Newcastle-upon-Tyne. The offices at Chester and Newcastle also serve other areas outside of the region. It is not possible to distinguish assisted persons residing in the North-West region from those residing in the other areas covered. In the geographical areas covered by all four offices 112,029 civil legal aid certificates were issued in the financial year 1992-93. According to statistical returns submitted by the courts 70,215 criminal legal aid orders were granted in the North-West region in the calendar year 1992. A further 2,563 criminal legal aid orders were granted by legal aid committees following appeals against magistrates' refusal of legal aid. The average cost of all legal aid bills paid in 1992-93 in England and Wales was as follows:

Civil legal aid	£906
Criminal Magistrates'	£449
Criminal Higher	£840

Information is not available on the length of time taken to bring legally aided cases to court, but the average length of time taken from the granting of a civil legal aid certificate to the conclusion of the case is approximately three years.

Legal aid certificates are not issued in respect of preliminary work only. A certificate may however be limited to specific steps in the proceedings, pending counsel's opinion on the legal merits of the case. The Legal Aid Board's management information does not distinguish limited certificates from full certificates.

During the financial years 1991-92 and 1992-93 a total of 214,655 civil legal aid certificates were issued in the geographical areas covered by the area offices situated at Chester, Manchester, Liverpool and Newcastle-upon-Tyne. The average duration of a legally aided case is three years and therefore the majority of cases commenced in the last two years will not have reached a conclusion. Out of a total number of 164,038 cases concluded in 1991-92 and 1992-93 in the geographical areas covered 106,962 were settled out of court or otherwise disposed of.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to ensure that solicitors receive adequate recompense for work carried out under the legal aid system where the value of the claim being pursued is for less than £3,000.

Mr. John M. Taylor: It is the Lord Chancellor's aim to ensure that all legal aid remuneration rates give adequate recompense to solicitors who carry out work under the scheme.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will ensure that where solicitors are pursuing claims of less than £3,000 with legal aid that the work is not delegated to an unqualified fee earner.

Mr. John M. Taylor: It is the responsibility of each solicitor doing legal aid work to ensure that work is conducted by the appropriate level of fee earner. The Lord Chancellor has no plans to change this.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the amount spent on the new franchising arrangement for legal aid; how many new posts were created; and what are the costs of the new staffing arrangements of the franchising units.

Mr. John M. Taylor: In the year 1993-94 including recruitment, training and systems development, the new franchising arrangements costs were £3·4 million. Approximately 80 full-time equivalent posts have been created at an annual total employment cost of £2 million.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades, 1 to 7 and overall, in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The number and percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall who are (a) women is set out in table 1. Information on the ethnic origin of officers and on numbers of disabled officers is obtained by the use of voluntary staff surveys. The number and percentage of respondents in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall who are (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively, are set out in tables 2 and 3.

Number and percentage of officers in grades 1-7 and overall who are women as at 25 March 1994

Notes to table:
(1) The grades shown are for grade levels ie they include equivalent grades
(2) Information on ethnic origin is collected by the use of a voluntary survey of all staff. To date 10 per cent. of staff have chosen not to respond to the survey. The figures quoted in the table are therefore based on the number of respondents.
(3) The asterisks denote numbers that were so small as to enable identification of individuals, and are used to protect the privacy of those concerned.

(2) Information on disability is collected by the use of a voluntary survey of all staff. To date 23 per cent. of staff have chosen not to respond to the survey. The figures quoted in the above table are therefore based on the number of respondents.
(3) The asterisks denote numbers that were so small as to enable identification of individuals, and are used to protect the privacy of those concerned.

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The figures for public appointments made by the Lord Chancellor's Department and the Northern Ireland Court Service in 1993 are for (a) Asians 1·5 per cent. and for (b) black people 1 per cent. This answer does not include judicial appointments. It is not our practice to give names: when asking appointees for information on their ethnic origin it is our practice to make it clear that it will be used only for statistical purposes.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what major building projects valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1989 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

Mr. John M. Taylor: (a) In Doncaster, the Lord Chancellor's Department comissioned a new Crown court building which became ready for use in the third quarter of 1989. The final total cost of the scheme was £5 million —inclusive of site purchase costs, construction and design costs. An extension to the magistrates court is now currently being designed. It is estimated to cost £2·6 million and construction is likely to begin during 1995-96.

(a) There are no plans at present for a new court building scheme in Barnsley.

(c) In Rotherham the construction of a new ten courtroom magistrates court building commenced in February 1992 and is now in the final stage, and is due to become operational in early May. The full cost is likely to be £5·4 million.

(d) In Wakefield there are proposals to build a new magistrates court to contain six courts. If approved, construction could commence in 1997-98 and the estimated cost would be approximately £7·8 million.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. John M. Taylor: None.

Race Awareness Training

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what measures the Lord Chancellor has taken to ensure that (a) High Court judges and (b) circuit judges receive training in race awareness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Training for members of the judiciary is a matter for the Judicial Studies Board. I can tell the hon. Member that the board includes race awareness as a standard topic in all its refresher and induction seminars attended by High Court judges and circuit judges. In addition, the board is developing a programme of seminars on these issues for all circuit judges, recorders and assistant recorders in England and Wales to be carried forward over the next two years.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the total cost of official entertainment in the Lord Chancellor's Department in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Three principal receptions are funded each year by the Department: the Lord Chancellor's breakfast at the commencement of the legal year, a summer reception given by the Lord Chancellor for members of the media and—since 1992-93—a reception in the Inner Temple given by the Lord Chief Justice. The costs of these events, and the total costs of official entertaining each year since 1990-91, are given in the table.

While other individual receptions may have been held, the cost of identifying them and their related expenditure would be disproportionate.

Magistrates

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 23 March, Official Report, columns 271-72, if he will make it his policy to collect centrally information on the expressed political affiliations of magistrates and applicants for the magistrates bench.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Information is collected centrally for each bench on the expressed political affiliations of magistrates. The Lord Chancellor has no plans to collect centrally similar information on applicants.

EMPLOYMENT

Annual Performance Agreement

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the Employment Service annual performance agreement for 1994-95 will be published.

Mr. David Hunt: I have today placed copies of the Employment Service annual performance agreement for 1994-95 in the Library. The new targets represent a considerable challenge to the Employment Service. I have set a demanding target of placing 1·7 million unemployed people in jobs next year. And I have asked the chief executive to give a high priority to helping unemployed people who face particular difficulties in getting back to work.

We have agreed an exceptionally demanding target that 29·5 per cent. of total unemployed placings should be long-term claimants. This will mean finding jobs for at least 500,000 people who have been unemployed for six months or more. There will also be two new targets aimed at offering extra help to people who have been unemployed for 12 months and 24 months. I have also agreed the highest ever target for finding jobs for people with disabilities.

Youth Training

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide a table showing for each training and enterprise council in England the number of people covered by the youth training guarantee who have been waiting for over eight weeks for a YT place; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: On 10 March the number of young people covered by the youth training guarantee who had been waiting for eight or more weeks for a YT place was 138. This was a fall of 97 per cent. from March 1993 when the total was 5,424. This is excellent progress and a tribute to the efforts of training and enterprise councils, careers services and all others involved in placing young people into training. The following table gives information for each TEC:

DEFENCE

Government Contracts

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the report by the Review Board for Government Contracts on its 1994 annual review of the profit formula for non-competitive Government contracts.

Mr. Aitken: The Government have accepted the overall target rate of return on capital employed as recommended by the review board in its report. The new rate will be 18·2 per cent. compared with the current rate of 19 per cent., both on the basis of historic costs. It will be effective from 1 April this year. There are other points arising from this report and from the board's report on the seventh general review last year which officials will be discussing with the Confederation of British Industry as part of our continuing drive to secure maximum value for money from our defence contracts and ensuring a fair return for our contractors. Copies of the report are being placed in the Library of the House.

Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key performance targets have been set for 1994-95 for the chief executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

Mr. Aitken: The chief executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down is responsible for research to ensure that the United Kingdom armed forces are provided with effective protective measures against the threat that chemical and biological weapons may be used against them. He has been set the following challenging key performance targets for 1994-95:

1. To deliver to time 90 per cent. of the programme milestones agreed with the customers and have the work rated by the customer as meeting or exceeding the agreed objectives.
2. To respond to 85 per cent. of requests accepted for unplanned urgent advice within the timescale negotiated at the outset.
3. To deliver the agreed work programme within the aggregate of the programme costs agreed with each customer —including individual package customers within the applied research programme.
4. To increase the overall efficiency of CBDE by reducing net expenditure, as shown in the net expenditure account, by 1 per cent.
5. To develop, in conjunction with the Ministry of Defence, an appropriate system of trading to provide greater empowerment of the customer by April 1995.
6. To continue the agreed market testing programme with the objective of placing the service level agreement/contract by 31 March 1995.
7. To survey customers to identify appropriate measures of the quality of service provided by CBDE to the Ministry of Defence, and conduct a full customer satisfaction survey on the basis of these measures by March 1995.
8. To develop a strategy for a formal quality plan for the conduct of all research carried out at CBDE. This will include: standards of planning, management, execution and reporting of the work to the customer; measures of customer satisfaction; and peer review of scientific rigour, novelty and innovation.

Helicopters

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made in the procurement of support helicopters for the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Aitken: I am pleased to say that we have made considerable progress since my right hon. and learned Friend, the Secretary of State for Defence, announced our intentions in December.

Invitations to tender are now being issued for my Department's requirements for additional support helicopters. In consequence, my Department will enter into parallel negotiations with Boeing (Chinook) and Westland (EH101 Utility) on the basis of its normal NAPNOC—no acceptable price, no contract—procedures, to determine the specifications, performance details, terms and conditions and prices, against which further support helicopters might be supplied.

Accordingly, separate single invitations to tender are being issued to Boeing Defense and Space Group and to Westland Helicopters Ltd. for return on 30 June 1994, on the clear understanding that respective performance and value for money considerations will be taken into account as part of the Department's normal process of evaluation and will influence the Department's eventual decision on what support helicopters to buy.

Sir Peter Harding

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has investigated the security aspects of the events leading to the resignation of Sir Peter Harding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: These matters have been investigated. The principal conclusion is that no evidence has been found of any compromise of classified or sensitive information. Nor has any evidence been found, in the events which led to Sir Peter's resignation as Chief of Defence Staff, of any intelligence operation or criminal conspiracy against him.

Career and Manpower Review

Dr. Charles Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he is yet in a position to announce the appointment of a chairman for the independent review of service career and manpower structure and terms and conditions of service; and if he will publish terms of reference for the review.

Mr. Hanley: Further to the answer I gave the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 9 February, Official Report, columns 362-63, my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has now invited Mr. Michael Bett to lead the independent team which will be conducting this major independent review of service career and manpower structure and terms and conditions of service. Further appointments to the team will be announced in due course. Terms of reference for the review are as follows:

The review is to examine service career and manpower structures, and terms and conditions of service, and recommend changes required to render them appropriate to the needs of the 21st century.

The review is to take account of changes in military commitments and deployment patterns, including any which may flow from the defence costs studies. It should draw on work already conducted in each service, and may need to subsume the current in-house review of the armed forces pension scheme. It should examine practices within the armed forces of other nations, and within other major organisations in the United Kingdom.

The review should propose future structures which are robust, flexible, efficient and cost-effective, paying particular attention to:

a) Current practice in such areas as length of service, career patterns, deployment patterns, rank structure and trade structures;

b) The relationship between responsibility, rank, trade and pay, and the concept of performance pay; current sources of dissatisfaction; and the scope for a rationalised pay and allowance structure.

The review should seek to contribute to the reduction over the longer term of the overall resource cost of manpower, and should identify clearly the resource implications of its proposals. It should at the same time take full account of the requirement to maintain disciplined, highly trained and well-motivated armed forces, and of the particular requirements of service life.

The Review should consult widely within MOD, the Office of Manpower Economics and the services; and should ensure that the Armed Forces Pay Review Body and the Senior Salaries Review Board are consulted on matters within their remit.

The review team will be led by Mr. Bett and will be supported by a small MOD project team. It is to submit its final report to the Secretary of State for Defence within 12 months of its starting work.

TRANSPORT

Lands End-Isles of Scilly Monitoring Area

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make the sea between Lands End and the Isles of Scilly a mandatory reporting and monitoring area for ships under the international convention for the safety of life at sea.

Mr. Norris: There is already international agreement that laden vessels should report their intention to enter the traffic separation scheme in place between Lands End and Isles of Scilly. The United Kingdom is taking a leading role in international negotiations which should lead to changes in the safety of life at sea—SOLAS—convention and to the establishment of a legal framework for the mandatory reporting of ship movements.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what resources will be made available to local authorities affected by increased levels of rail traffic resulting from the channel tunnel for noise mitigation.

Mr. Freeman: Supplementary credit approvals of £1 million and £0·25 million respectively were previously allocated to Kent and Surrey county councils for jointly-funded schemes agreed with British Rail for the provision of acoustic barriers alonside existing tracks at locations in the areas expected to be most affected at night by noise from international freight trains. Kent county council has decided also to offer double glazing for certain isolated properties which could not be protected by noise barriers.

More recently, I have agreed to provide further credit approvals of £0·375 million to Kent, to cover the balance of its costs, and £0·336 million to the London borough of Bromley, which has also agreed a joint noise mitigation scheme with BR.

As stated in my answer of 18 February, Official Report, column 1007, I and my colleagues will be prepared to consider TPP applications for resources in 1995-96 from other authorities in London which agree schemes with BR. Such applications will be considered on their merits and in the light of the resources available.

Victoria Station

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when rail customers are able to obtain service information at Victoria.

Mr. Freeman: The information point at Victoria is open Monday to Saturday 07.00am to 10.15pm, Sunday 08.00am to 10.00pm. Service information can also be obtained from telephone inquiry bureaux between 07·15am and 9.00pm daily, by ringing 071-928-5100 or 0273-206-755.

Research Laboratory

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has reached a conclusion on the future of the transport research laboratory.

Mr. Macgregor: Following a review I commissioned from consultants, KPMG Peat Marwick, I have decided that the transport research laboratory should transfer to the private sector.

I have considered the consultants' report very carefully. I have also had discussions with the TRL trade unions. The consultants concluded that retention of TRL in the public sector would risk the laboratory being unable to respond adequately to changes in its market and so lead to a cycle of cumulative decline. The likelihood is therefore that TRL would be unable to continue to offer its current breadth of research. The consultants' analysis confirmed that privatisation was both feasible and desirable in allowing the laboratory to compete more effectively across a wider market than is currently available to it.

I am satisfied that privatisation will provide the best opportunity for TRL's future progress. In setting objectives for the sale I shall have regard to a number of requirements, including to the need to secure the Government's continuing requirement for high quality, independent transport research at good value for money, and the needs of staff working in the laboratory.

I shall announce details of the form of sale in due course. My current aim is to provide for a competitive sale, attracting bids for the whole of the TRL business from a wide range of possible purchasers. I hope privatisation can be achieved during 1995-96.

On-street Parking

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement concerning the introduction of compulsory competitive tendering to the management and provision of services for the new local authority on-street parking enforcement system under the Road Traffic Act 1991.

Mr. Norris: In November 1993 the Department of the Environment consulted local authorities nationally on a draft order to extend compulsory competitive tendering to the provision and management of services for the new local authority on-street parking enforcement system under part II of the Road Traffic Act 1991. This system is being applied initially only in London but is being extended to the rest of England and Wales.

In general the authorities supported the principle of extending CCT to these services but some were concerned about the timing of its introduction. In particular the Parking Committee for London, which includes a representative from each London local authority, felt that the suggested commencement date of April 1995 should be deferred for six months. I have accepted this view and decided that CCT will apply from 1 October 1995 in the metropolitan areas and London, and following the local government review in other areas. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will be laying an order before the House shortly.

Hazardous Cargoes

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it mandatory for ships with hazardous cargoes to give notice of their intention to sail through the Pentland firth, in accordance with changes in the safety of life at sea convention.

Mr. Norris: There is already international agreement that laden vessels should report their intention to transit the Pentland firth. The United Kingdom is taking a leading role in international negotiations which should lead to changes in the safety of life at sea—SOLAS—convention and to the establishment of a legal framework for the mandatory reporting of ship movements.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 23 March, Official Report, column 251, what penalties exist for ships carrying hazardous cargoes that do not use the safe deep water route around the Hebrides.

Mr. Norris: The Department is applying increasing pressure on the owners of ships carrying hazardous cargoes to use the deep water route west of the Hebrides. There is evidence to suggest that this is having a positive effect.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reporting is mandatory for ships carrying hazardous cargoes near environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Norris: Whilst there are no requirements for reports to be made at the moment, the Department is applying increasing pressure on shipowners to comply with internationally agreed recommendations, and the United Kingdom is taking a leading role in international negotiations to set in place a legal framework for the mandatory reporting of ship movements.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many ships carrying hazardous cargoes from the United Kingdom via the Hebrides have (a) made use of the safe deep water route via the outer Hebrides and (b) passed through the Minches in the last year.

Mr. Norris: This information is not held in the form requested. I can say, however, that in the last 12 months 113 ships carrying hazardous cargoes have reported their intention to use the Minch to HM Coastguard at Stornoway.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 23 March, Official Report, column 251, what legal force backs the measures in place to keep ships carrying hazardous cargoes away from environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Norris: Routeing measures around the United Kingdom are in accordance with agreements reached at the International Maritime Organisation. For the most part they are voluntary and are enforced by complaint to the flag state of a transgressing vessel. The United Kingdom is actively engaged in negotiating in the IMO on mandatory routes which can be put in place to protect environmentally sensitive areas.

River Buses

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost to public funds of maintenance and mooring of river buses on the Thames; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: No central Government funding is involved.

Oil Discharges

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the annual volume of oil entering (a) the North sea, (b) the straits of Dover and (c) the English channel from shipping for each of the last four years; and, for each year, what proportion of that was intentionally discharged.

Mr. Norris: The information is as set out. There are no records of volumes of oil spilt in the Dover straits. The Bonn agreement estimates that between 1,000 and 2,000 tonnes of oil per annum are intentionally discharged in to the North sea—all sectors—each year but no such estimates exist for the Dover straits or the English channel.

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Norris: Lists of any such organisations and individuals are not held centrally and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

In general, my right hon. Friend consults the chairmen of the relevant committee or board and such consultation may, in some cases, be a statutory requirement. He will also consult professional and other organisations if necessary in order to find persons with suitable qualifications for an appointment. He has regard to the guidance on consultations with the Prime Minister and other Departments set out in Section 6 of the "Cabinet Office Guide on Public Appointments Procedures", copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercies the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Norris: Information on most of the appointments made by my right hon. Friend are shown in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1993". Further information on these and on some other appointments is to be found in "A Handbook for Women's Organisations" published by the Women's National Commission. Copies of both documents are available in the Libraries of the House. Up-to-date lists of persons currently appointed to posts are not held centrally, but information on membership of many public bodies was provided recently in response to questions tabled by the hon. Member for Liverpool, Walton (Mr. Kilfoyle) on 27 January 1994. Further detailed information in response to the points raised by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The exercise of responsibility on behalf of my right hon. Friend is a matter for him and any delegation will vary according to the nature of the body and the appointments being made.

Railway Stations, Yorkshire

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those British Rail stations within Humberside and the three counties of Yorkshire that are not yet classed as open stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Only four stations within Humberside and Yorkshire have ticket barriers. These are Bradford interchange, Huddersfield, Hull and Leeds.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many British Rail stations within Humberside and the three counties of Yorkshire regional passenger committee area are totally unstaffed; and if he will list them.

Mr. Freeman: A total of 138 stations within the Humberside and Yorkshire transport users' consultative committee for the north-east England area are totally unstaffed. I have placed the list in the Library and written to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Business Aviation

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the direction of trend in business aviation use at United Kingdom airfields.

Mr. Norris: My Department does not produce separate forecasts for demand for business aviation. However, the Government believe that such demand is likely to be correlated with economic growth and therefore in the longer term the trend is likely to be upward.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what spare capacity for business aviation exists at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports.

Mr. Norris: At Heathrow and Gatwick airports the runways are essentially full in the peak periods; general aviation services can obtain permission to use these airports no more than ten days in advance. At Stansted airport there is an administrative annual limit of 78,000 passenger air transport movements. Flights with less than 10 passengers and certain others are not included in this limit. Any increase to the annual limit would require the approval of both Houses of Parliament. Some 48,000 air transport movements operated last year.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the Government's policy on ensuring that a suitable airport or airports close to central London will continue to be available for business aviation use;

(2) what are the plans to retain and develop suitable London airports for business aviation use.

Mr. Norris: The Government have acknowledged for some time that access to Heathrow and Gatwick airports will become increasingly difficult for general aviation and that alternative facilities will need to be used. The Government believe that there remains unused airport capacity within reach of central London—including at Stansted and Luton airports.

As far as airport facilities not generally serving commercial passengers are concerned, there are facilities at a number of sites. The Department has been in discussion with the Ministry of Defence about the scope for establishing a privately operated civil enclave for business aviation users at RAF Northolt.

The recent planning policy guidance on transport—PPG13—published by the Secretary of State for the Environment says that local authorities should take into account the contribution of general aviation when formulating plans. This would be relevant if permission was being sought for any change of use.

The Department will seek to ensure through the planning system that the benefits of business aviation are fully reflected in local plans. Within this framework it is for airport operators to make decisions on the development of facilities, in the light of their commercial judgment.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are his Department's estimates of the increase in demand over the next 20 years for business aviation capacity in the London area.

Mr. Norris: My Department does not produce estimates of demand separately for business aviation.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which airports within 30 miles of central London, which are currently being used for business aviation, are due to close during the next 10 years.

Mr. Norris: I understand that Hatfield and Leavesden aerodromes are to close this year.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which airfields, other than Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted, near London, are planned for continuing business aviation use.

Mr. Norris: Aerodromes near London available for continuing business aviation use are Biggin Hill, Blackbushe, Elstree, Fairoaks, Farnborough, London Luton, London City, Northolt and Southend. Some of these cannot take all types of aircraft.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department and the Civil Aviation Authority have made of the effect of access difficulties to London airports on the scale of business aviation; and what evidence he has of business aviation being transferred to France.

Mr. Norris: I have encouraged the business aviation community to provide me with information on the industry; my Department is currently undertaking a study with the Department of Trade and Industry into the demand and economic case for business aviation. I have no evidence that business aviation is transferring from the United Kingdom to France.

"Britain's Railways: A New Era"

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many copies were (a) printed and (b) distributed of his Department's document, "Britain's Railways: A New Era", and if he will list the recipients.

Mr. Freeman: A total of 8,000 copies of the document "Britain's Railways: A New Era" were printed. Distribution has been as follows:

- 1,056 to BR and 2,000 to Railtrack; in turn I understand that BR and Railtrack are distributing the document to senior managers at national and regional level
- 1,000 to the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising for distribution in response to enquiries
- 827 copies to Peers and Members of Parliament
- 50 copies to the media
- 45 copies to attendees at a City seminar about rail privatisation
- 110 copies sent on request to the Railway Industry Association
- 28 copies have also been sent on request to individuals with an interest in the rail industry.

The residue will be distributed on request.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost of (a) printing, (b) distributing and (c) writing the document "Britain's Railways: A New Era."

Mr. Freeman: (a) Printing costs were £16,000 within an overall total for production costs of £30,000;

(b) The Department's distribution costs were £2,000.

(c) The document was written by the Department, its advisers and others as part of their normal duties.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Jenner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades, 1 to 7 and overall, in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Norris: The following table shows numbers and percentages of staff in post in the Department of Transport and its agencies at 1 April 1993. The figures relating to ethnic origin are based on responses to voluntary and confidential surveys of staff and are derived from the Department's computerised personnel records.

Department of Transport—Staff in post 1 April 1993

Grade	Total number	Women		Ethnic minority		Disabled
		Number	percentage	Number	percentage	Number	percentage

7	763	73	9·6	24	3·1	0	0
All	15,246	6,946	45·6	736	4·8	198	1·3

Coastline Protection

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make further protective measures immediately to protect the United Kingdom coastline, human and wild life communities and the lives of seafarers in the light of information about the collision of two ships in the Bosphorus on 14 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 23 March 1994 at column 251.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what emergency training for air traffic controllers has been implemented at Birmingham and Manchester airports by National Air Traffic Services.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 28 March 1994]: As the training of air traffic controllers is a matter for the Civil Airports Authority I am asking the chairman of the CAA to write in reply to the hon. Member's question.

Shipping

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the Baltic Exchange's proposal for a British open register; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 29 March 1994]: Since the Baltic Exchange put its proposals for a British open register for shipping to Ministers on 3 December 1993 there have been a number of representations from various sources, some have been in favour, some against.

As I explained to the hon. Member on 11 January, Official Report column 124, and again more recently to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Perry), Official Report, 16 March column 692, the proposal requires careful study before a conclusion can be reached. An announcement will be made shortly.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the past five years.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 23 March 1994]: In each of the five years from 1989 to 1993 the number and value of contracts let by the Department to consultants for non-highways work was as follows:

Year	Number	Value (£000s)
1989	74	8,745
1990	126	15,225
1991	186	16,414
1992	254	13,621
1993	378	14,924

For highways work, new consultant contracts awarded in respect of schemes in the trunk road programme, operation of the trunk road network and associated investigations were as follows:

	Number
1989	72
1990	115
1991	113
1992	46
1993	44

Since many of these commissions are continuing, it is impossible to provide final costs. However, on a financial year basis, total expenditure in the last four years on all such contracts—not just those identified—has been:

	£ million
1990-91	159
1991-92	181
1992-93	208
1993-94	[1]173

[1] To date.

The figure for 1989-90 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Norris: Statistics are not kept on the total number of public appointments—including reappointments—made by my right hon. Friend each year. A check was made on the number of appointments held by members of ethnic minorities at 1 September 1993 as part of the Government-wide monitoring exercise for the purposes of the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1993". This revealed that a holder of one of the DOT appointments listed in it is a member of an ethnic minority. However, as information on ethnic origin is given in confidene, the policy is not to give details that would identify ethnic origins of individuals.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total cost of official entertaining in his Department in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport—excluding its agencies—has spent the following amounts on official entertainment since 1990-91:

1990-91	203,684
1991-92	169,050
1992-93	231,547
1993-94	[1]218,615

[1] To 28 March 1994 only.

Information regarding individual receptions and the related costs is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport has not purchased any Proton cars in the last 10 years.

Cycling (Code of Conduct)

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce a cyclists' code of conduct; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: Advice to pedal cyclists on safe cycling practices is contained in the highway code. Rules 36 to 154 apply to cyclists as they do to all vehicle users and rules 187 to 211 give further specific advice to cyclists. We have also issued a leaflet "Tips for Safer Cycling" as part of our Cycle Safe campaign.

Traffic Calming

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice is given by his Department to local authorities on the design of traffic calming measures.

Mr. Key: The Highways (Traffic Calming) Regulations 1993 build on the earlier Highways (Road Humps) Regulations 1990 and provide local highway authorities with a wider choice of features to improve road safety and the local environment. The regulations provide for features such as chicanes, narrowings and gateways, as well as road humps, which can be used separately or in combination.

It is for individual authorities to design local schemes but my Department provides technical advice on the regulations and individual design features in circulars and traffic advisory leaflets.

Traffic Congestion (Cost)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the annual cost of traffic congestion.

Mr. Key: The cost of traffic congestion can be measured only against specific alternatives such as road schemes, junction improvements or initiatives to reduce or redirect traffic. It is not possible to provide a national aggregate measure.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Local Government Legislation

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he will list the Acts of Parliament and Consolidation Acts that affect local government that have been introduced by his Department since 1992;

(2) if he will list the Acts of Parliament and Consolidation Acts that affect local government that have been introduced by his Department since 1990.

Mr. Waldegrave: None.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 4 March, Official Report, columns 899-900, if he knows of any other people known to be Labour party supporters appointed to public bodies.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have nothing to add to my earlier answer.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 4 March, Official Report, columns 899-900, (1) if he will construct a list of known Liberal Democrat party supporters appointed to public bodies;

(2) if he will construct a list of known Conservative party supporters appointed to public bodies.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those former honourable and right honourable Members defeated in the general election of 1992 who, at any subsequent date, have been appointed to public bodies by the Government; and if he will list those appointments.

Mr. Waldegrave: Information about individual public appointees is not held centrally.

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proposals the Government have to strengthen and extend the role of the parliamentary ombudsman.

Mr. Waldegrave: As proposed in the White Paper "Open Government" (Cm 2290), there will be a major extension to the responsibilities of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration as from April 1994, when complaints may be referred to him in connection with the code of practice on access to Government information.

The Government are also giving support to the private Member's Bill of the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Malone), which had its Second Reading in the House on 11 March, to extend the jurisdiction of the PCA to the administrative actions by the administrative staff in certain tribunals not already within his remit.

Finally, the Government are considering the proposals in the first report of the Select Committee on the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, Session 1993-94, on the powers, work and jurisdiction of the ombudsman, and will respond in due course.

Research Councils

Mr. Roger Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancster, what progress he has made in appointing members of the three new research councils.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Biotechnology and Biological Sciences research council, Engineering and Physical Sciences research council, and Particle Physics and Astronomy research council, will come into being on 1 April 1994. I have appointed the following members to serve on the councils:

BIOTECHNOLOGY AND BIOLOGICAL SCIENCES RESEARCH COUNCIL (BBSRC)

Chairman: Sir Alistair Grant (Argyll Group)
Chief Executive: Professor Tom Blundell FRS
Members:
Professor Jack Baldwin FRS (Oxford University)
Dr. Peter Bunyan (Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food)
Dr. Ed Dart (Zeneca)
Professor Peter Dunnill FEng (University College London)
Dr. Elliot Finer (Department of Trade and Industry)
Sir Brian Follett FRS (University of Warwick)
Mr. Ben Gill (National Farmers' Union)
Dr. Keith Humphreys (Rhone-Poulenc)

Professor Susan Iversen (Oxford University)
Professor Rachel Leech (University of York)
Dr. Tom Little (Unilever)
Mr. Kenneth Mackenzie (Scottish Office)
Professor Lady Noreen Murray (University of Edinburgh)
Dr. Brian Richards CBE (British Biotechnology Group)

ENGINEERING AND PHYSICAL SCIENCES RESEARCH COUNCIL (EPSRC)
Chairman: Dr. Alan Rudge, OBE FEng FRS (BT)
Chief Executive: Professor Richard Brook, OBE

Members:
Professor John Ball, FRS (Heriot Watt University)
Professor Alec Broers, (FRS (Cambridge University)
Professor Sir David Davies, CBE FEng FRS (Ministry of Defence)
Dr. David Evans, (Department of Trade and Industry)
Dr. David Giachardi, (Courtaulds)
Professor Julia Higgins, (Imperial College of Science Technology and Medicine)
Professor B. F. G. Johnson, FRS (University of Edinburgh)
Dr. Tony Ledwith, (Pilkington)
Mr. S. C. Miller, CBE FEng (Rolls-Royce)
Dr. D. J. H. Smith, (Whatman)
Professor Jean Thomas, CBE FRS (Cambridge University)
Professor David Wallace, FRS (Loughborough University of Technology)

PARTICLE PHYSICS AND ASTRONOMY RESEARCH COUNCIL (PPARC)
Chairman: Dr. Peter Williams, CBE (Oxford Instruments)
Chief Executive: Professor Ken Pounds, CBE FRS

Members:
Sir David Cooksey, (Advent)
Professor Stan Cowley, (Imperial College of Science Technology and Medicine)
Mr. John de Fonblanque, (Foreign and Commonwealth Office)
Professor John Dowell, FRS (University of Birmingham)
Professor John Enderby, FRS (University of Bristol)
Dr. David Evans, (Department of Trade and Industry)
Professor Ian Halliday, (University College Swansea)
Dr. Carole Jordan, FRS (Oxford University)
Sir Martin Rees, FRS (Cambridge University)
Dr. Geoff Robinson, (IBM)

Citizens Charter

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what external routes of complaint have been established for each part of the Government service covered by the charter.

Mr. Waldegrave: For the purpose of this question I am taking "external routes of complaint" to mean the provision by public services covered by the charter of a route to deal with complaints which is separate from the management hierarchy of the service. Those which are known to my Department are:

Benefits Agency War Pensions Unit: War Pensions Committees;
British Gas: Gas Consumers' Council and OFGAS;
British Rail: Area Transport Users' Consultative Committee (co-ordinated through the Central Transport Consultative Committee);
British Telecom: OFTEL with recourse to a service provided by the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators;
British Waterways Board: British Waterways Ombudsman;
14 Electricity Companies: Electricity Consumers Committees and OFFER;
Home Office Immigration and Nationality Department: Complaints Audit Committee;
Housing Corporation: Housing Association Tenants Ombudsman Service;
Inland Revenue: Revenue Adjudicator;
Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce: Agency Complaints Adjudicator;
London Buses and London Underground: London Regional Passengers Committee;
Department of National Savings: Adjudicator for National Savings;
Police Service: Police Complaints Authority (England and Wales);
Procurator Fiscal Service (Scotland);
Post Office: Post Office Users' National Council with recourse to a service provided by the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators;
Probation Service: Area Probation Committees;
32 Water companies: Regional Customer Services Committees and OFWAT.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department and the Department of Energy in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Eggar: No Proton cars have been purchased by my Department or the Department of Energy in the last 10 years.

Overseas Trade

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) of 22 March, Official Report, column 210, if he will set out the reasons for the separate information on EC trade data not being available.

Mr. Heseltine: Separate information on volumes, unit values and terms of trade for United Kingdom trade with the EC is not available because of the unreliability of the price indices, or deflators, used in their calculation. These deflators are thought to be reliable overall but less so for trade with individual countries.

The quality of those concerning United Kingdom trade with the EC is also adversely affected by problems associated with the introduction of Intrastat, the system for collecting information on EC trade following the completion of the single market.

Construction Industry Deregulation Task Force

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the report of the construction industry deregulation task force will be published; and if the task force took evidence from (a) the Home Office and (b) fire service.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The booklet "Deregulation Task Forces: Proposals for Reform" was published on 19 January 1994 and copies placed in the Library of the House. The working papers of all the task forces will be placed in the Library of the House today.

The construction industry task force held discussions with officials and Ministers in several Government Departments including the Home Office. The fire review announced by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on 17 January 1994, Official Report, column 381, is exploring the fire safety issues identified by the task force in consultation with all interested parties including fire service bodies and is assisted by expert advisors including a chief fire officer.

Coal Industry (Geological Data)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he will take to ensure that as part of the denationalisation of the coal industry British Coal or its successor, the Coal Authority, will release all borehole information to the British Geological Survey; and if he will ensure that British Coal or the Coal Authority will remove the present embargo on academic study and research of geological data to develop geological knowledge for non-commercial purposes.

Mr. Eggar: The Coal Industry Bill currently before Parliament places a specific duty on the Coal Authority normally to provide public access to a wide range of information in its possession, including geological data.

Export Assistance

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of the assistance his Department gives to help British companies market and sell their products abroad in the past five years; and what is the planned expenditure in 1993-94 and 1994-95.

Mr. Heseltine: The table records gross and net expenditure on export promotion assistance programmes. This does not include the running costs associated with delivering these programmes at home and abroad.

In £ million—1993-94 and 1994-95 are forecasts

	Gross	Net
1988-89	46·8	30·4
1989-90	47·1	32·9
1990-91	52·5	36·9
1991-92	46·0	27·8
1992-93	46·3	29·8
1993-94	51·3	36·6
1994-95	55·3	39·4

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many letters were received from, and written to, hon. Members by him and his ministerial colleagues in February.

Mr. Heseltine: During the month of February, I and my ministerial colleagues received 1,751 letters from hon. Members and responded to 1,376. Some letters are transferred to other Government Departments for reply.

Government Enforcement Agencies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each Government enforcement agency covered by his Department's code the dates on which their codes of practice were published and made available to the public.

Mr. Neil Hamilton [holding answer 15 March 1994]: The table sets out the dates on which each of the enforcement agencies listed in "Working with Business" published their code of practice. The table also shows the date from which each code was available since many agencies had their codes available to business while preparations for publication were underway.

Following my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's seminar on deregulation on 19 January, it was agreed that all remaining enforcement agencies would finalise their codes by April 1994.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades, 1 to 7 and overall, in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Sproat: The information is for staff within the Department of National Heritage, excluding its two executive agencies, the Historic Royal Palaces and the Royal Parks;

The total percentage of women in each grades 1 to 7 and overall within the Department of National Heritage are listed:

DNH staff as at 28 February 1994

Grade	Total number in grade	Per cent. of which are female
G3	4	25
G4	1	0
G5	16	25
G6	5	80
G7	44	25
SEO and below	265	49

Note:
Information on ethnic minorities is not yet held centrally;
The percentage of registered disabled staff employed within the Department of National Heritage is 0·6 per cent.

Royal Palaces

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many grace and favour apartments there are in the historic royal palaces.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 29 March 1994]: At historic royal palaces 18 apartments are occupied on a grace-and-favour basis by pensioners, employees and holders of official positions in the royal household.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Rules and Regulations

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many rules and regulations her Department has passed in each of the last three years.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 16 March 1994]: This Department made the following numbers of statutory instruments over the last three calendar years:

Year	Number
1991	93
1992	117
1993	143

Not all instruments impose requirements or regulations on business and some amend, replace or revoke existing instruments.

Feline Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give a breakdown of feline spongiform encephalopathy cases for each month since the first case was reported and the areas in which they occurred.

Mr. Soames: This disease is not notifiable to the Ministry and report to the Ministry is usually by private veterinary surgeons. The information requested is therefore listed by date of onset of clinical signs of the disease and is as follows:

Date of onset	County
1989
November	Avon

Food Stockpile

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to her answer of 15 March, Official Report, column 606, if she will list the recipients of the foodstuffs in the national food stockpile.

Mr. Soames: There have been numerous recipients of foodstuffs from the national food stockpile following the decision to run it down. Some foods have been donated for food aid. Other foods have been either sold by competitive tender or returned under contract to the supplier. Stocks no longer suitable for human consumption have been sold for animal feed or destroyed.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many Proton cars were purchased by her Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Jack: The policy is for the Ministry to buy cars for official use where they can provide the most cost-effective means of arranging travel on the Ministry's business. Only those models showing the basic features necessary for the business in question are purchased and all purchases are made through central call-off contracts set up for that purpose.

There are no records of any purchase of Proton cars during the period in question.

Fishing Quotas

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes she envisages in regulations concerning "quota hoppers" in respect of the joint declaration on ownership of fishing vessels (final act) of annex 1 Union common position of the Norway EV fisheries agreement; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 29 March 1994]: The text of the joint declaration corresponds to wording included in the judgment of the European Court of Justice in cases 216/87 and 221/89. As such, the declaration does not appear to necessitate any change in United Kingdom legislation.

Freshwater Fish Stocks

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to her answer of 24 March, Official Report, column 374, if she will place in the Library copies of the studies commissioned by the National Rivers Authority on the reasons for declines in fish catches.

Mr. Jack: Studies carried out by the National Rivers Authority in response to anglers' concerns about the perceived decline in catches of fish often involve an assessment of the status of stocks at the location in question. Normally further work would be carried out only if this revealed a particular problem. The results of such studies are made available to local fishery interests but are seldom disseminated more widely in the form of formal published reports. I am, however, arranging for reports on two of the more extensive studies carried out recently—those relating to the Warwickshire Avon and to the Test and Itchen—to be deposited in the Library of the House.

Legal Action (Dairy Producers)

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much was paid by her Department during 1993-94 as a result of legal action taken by dairy producers.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Costs of £75,972 have arisen as a result of legal actions taken by dairy producers. This amount will be brought to account in the 1993-94 appropriation account.

Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets she has set for the Veterinary Medicines Directorate in 1994-95; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The chief executive of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate has submitted his proposals to me and I have agreed that the VMD should be set the following performance targets for 1994-95:

full cost recovery for the three business activities of licensing, policy work and residues monitoring; 75 per cent. of new licence applications to be issued within 120 clock days; 95 per cent. within 200 days;
an overall efficiency gain of 2 per cent.

These are challenging targets which will build on the improvements already made in the efficiency and quality of service provided by the directorate since its establishment as a next steps agency, and for which I commend the chief executive and his staff. In addition, I have agreed the VMD's corporate plan for 1994-95—1996-97, and copies are being placed in the Library of the House and the Public Information Office.

Milk Development Council

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the National Farmers Union's proposal for a milk development council.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In deciding whether to establish a development council, Ministers have to follow the procedures in the Industrial Organisation and Development Act 1947. In particular, they need to be satisfied that its establishment is desired by a substantial number of persons engaged in the industry.

In mid-April the Ministry and the Welsh Office therefore intend to invite all milk producers in England and Wales to vote on a proposal for the establishment and operation of a milk development council covering Great Britain and its funding by means of a statutory levy.

A development council would continue certain activities of the milk marketing boards in Great Britain—such as the funding of research and development and the provision of market information—which would not be assumed by commercially-oriented successor co-operatives but are of benefit to the industry generally.

We intend to ask for completed questionnaires to be returned by 12 May. The Scottish Office intends to conduct a similar poll in Scotland.

Coast Protection

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the progress made with the survey of coast protection works in England.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My Department commissioned a coast protection survey of England in 1993. The survey was to examine the extent, adequacy and state of repair of coast protection defences, which are designed to protect the land from erosion and encroachment by the sea. A lead consultant was appointed to co-ordinate the collection of data by associate consultants. The lead consultants' report has been published today and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

The condition of each defence element—for example, embankment groyne—around the coast of England was assessed by visual inspection and the results can be summarised as follows:

	Per cent.
Class 1 (condition as built)	12
Class 2 (some signs of wear)	47
Class 3 (moderate works needed)	33
Class 4 (significant works needed)	8

It should be emphasised that where a defence element is in need of significant works this does not mean that the integrity of the defences for the relevant stretch of coastline is in immediate jeopardy.

The survey also identified some 135 km of unprotected coast which is at present significantly eroding and where the provision of works may need to be considered within the next ten years.

The survey results have been sent to the local coast protection authorities in England so that they can consider the condition of existing defences in their respective areas and the potential need for defences for unprotected lengths of coastline that are eroding significantly. Councils will also be drawing the survey results to the attention of other owners of defences in their areas. The Ministry will be discussing the survey results with the coast protection authorities in order to prioritise the necessary remedial works.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she will be able to announce the composition of the medical panel to investigate health effects claimed to arise from organophosphorus sheep dip exposure; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: I am pleased to announce that the following members have been appointed to the medical and scientific panel, which is being established to look into reports of long term health effects claimed to arise from organophosphorus sheep dip exposure.

Dr. D. N. Bateman, BSc, MB BS, MRCS, MD, FRCP (Chairman)
Professor P. G. Blain, Phd, BMedSci, MB BS, FIBiol, MFOM, FRCP (London), FRCP (Edinburgh)
Dr. R. W. Brimblecombe, PhD, DSc, FRCPath, FIBiol
Professor S. J. W. Evans, BS Hons, MSc
Dr. G. A. Jamal, MBChB(Hons), MD, PhD, FRCP (Glasgow)
Dr. M. K. Johnson PhD, BSc, ARCS, ARIC
Professor M. Lader, DSc, PhD, MD, FRCPsych
Dr. T. C. Marrs, MB BS, MSc, MD, MIBiol, DipRCPath (Tox), FRCPath, FIBiol
Dr. R. G. Rawbone, MB BS, LRCP, MRCS
Professor P. K. Thomas, CBE, DSc, MD, FRCP, FRCPath

The panel, which will act as a sub-committee to the Veterinary Products Committee, will hold its first meeting on 31 March. I look forward to receiving its advice on the issues it will be addressing.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 28 and 29 March; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: This meeting of the Council, at which I represented the United Kingdom, held a further lengthy discussion of the Commission's proposals for farm prices and related measures, including milk quotas, for 1994-95. The attitude that I took on these issues was the one that I explained to the House in the recent debate.

The Council reached no conclusions and will return to the subject at its next meeting. Because prices were not fixed, it was necessary formally to extend the 1993-94 marketing years for beef and milk: the Council so decided by unanimity.

I took the opportunity to refer to recent scare stories in the German press alleging a link between bovine spongiform encephalopathy and human health. I stressed that there was no scientific foundation for this claim, that the measures that had long been in place in the United Kingdom and in the Community were more than adequate protection, and that unilateral action to restrict trade in British beef and cattle would be illegal. I received strong support from the Commission and a number of other member states for my point of view.

The Council adopted several relatively minor measures, namely: a regulation permitting member states to buy up milk quota for redistribution, using funds previously set aside to compensate producers for reductions in quotas; a regulation concerning the use of sums previously agreed for assisting farmers in Portugal affected by drought; a regulation strengthening the controls on subsidised exports of certain processed products; a regulation providing for the levy-free import of certain quantities of wheat, beef, poultrymeat, pork and milling residues, previously agreed as part of the settlement of an earlier dispute with third countries concerning oilseeds; and a regulation providing for the import of a supplementary quantity of high quality beef in 1994. Belgium and Ireland voted against the last two measures and Italy against the one on export controls. The others were adopted unanimously.

Beef Exports

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has made at the Agriculture Council of 28 and 29 March about British beef exports.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: At the Agriculture Council on 28 March I raised our concerns about the threats from Germany of unilateral action against British beef and confirmed that my colleagues in the Council are standing firm in support of the Commission's position, with which we agree, that trade measures must be based on scientific knowledge of bovine spongiform encephalopathy. This knowledge is already fully reflected in the current trade rules.

I presented Commissioner Steichen with a dossier showing the damage which has already been done to United Kingdom exports by the German position. I made it clear that we cannot tolerate this when there is no justification whatsoever for the safety of our beef exports to be called into question. I pointed out that if member states behaved in this way it created a dangerous precedent and undermined the very foundation of free trade; there was no knowing which product from which country might next be similarly affected. Whilst Governments had to respond to public concerns they should do so in a responsible and measured way which reflected the known facts of the situation.

As the House is aware the Government believe that BSE was caused by the use of contaminated feed, on which action was taken by the ruminant feed ban in 1988. The feed hypothesis, made six years ago on the basis of a thorough epidemiological study, has recently been supported by preliminary findings from collaborative research begun in 1991, and due to run until 1996, which we are conducting with the EC Commission and the European Renderers Association. These early results show that the BSE agent can survive some rendering processes. When a report on this research is available it will be deposited in the Library of the House and I shall consult the Spongiform Encephalopathy advisory committee as the work progresses.

My representations in the Council were fully supported by the Commission and 10 other member states, who shared our view that the position taken by Germany was not sustainable.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Public Accounts Commission

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission, pursuant to his answer of 16 December, Official Report, column 797-98, what is the proposed time scale for the relocation of staff and work from Sheffield to London; which private sector firms are being invited to tender; what is the nature of the tendering process; and under what legislation the process is taking place.

Sir Peter Hordern: Decisions on the administration and organisation of the National Audit Office are a matter for the Comptroller and Auditor General to take within his budget, which is considered and approved by the Public Accounts Commission on behalf of the House. I have asked the Comptroller and Auditor General to write to the hon. Member.

Upper Waiting Hall Exhibitions

Mr. Bates: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the Crown Prosecution Service to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 18 April to Friday 22 April.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Overseas Visits

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz), of 24 February, Official Report, column 389, if he will now set out the cost of accompanying officials on the 21 official visits made; and what was the nature of (a) the bilateral discussions, (b) the international conferences and (c) the EC meeting to which he refers.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The cost of officials accompanying my noble Friend, Baroness Chalker of Wallasey, on her visits overseas during 1993 was approximately £116,000. In some instances the officials concerned have also been undertaking official duties in addition to providing support for the specific purposes of my noble Friend's visits; it is not possible to disaggregate the costings to reflect these occasions.

I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 14 July 1993, columns 499-504 for details of my noble Friend's visits from January to July 1993. Details of my noble Friend's visits between August and the end of December 1993 are as follows:

Lady Chalker's overseas travel August 1993—end December 1993

Pergau Dam

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what losses he estimates he might be liable for, if the overall contract price for the Pergau dam project were shown to be greater than if it had been awarded by open tender.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: None. Her Majesty's Government are not party to the contract between Tenaga Nasional Berhad—TNB—and the United Kingdom consortium, Kerjaya Balfour Beatty Cementation.

Thailand

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 15 March, Official Report, column 586, which company or companies are seeking support under the aid and trade provision for the project to improve the quality of drinking water supplies in Thailand.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I regret that this information is commercial and confidential.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 15 March, Official Report, column 586, when he expects to reach a decision on whether the project to improve the quality of drinking water supplies in Thailand should receive support under the aid and trade provision.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: A decision will be taken when ODA's appraisal of the project has been completed and we have complied with OECD consultation requirements.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 15 March, Official Report, column 586, what is the total cost of the project to improve the quality of drinking water supplies in Thailand; and what is the likely cost to the aid and trade provision of supporting this project.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The costs of the project cannot be finalised until the appraisal process is complete.

Sudan

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what agreement has been reached, following the Intergovernmental Administration on Drought and Development—IGADD—meeting on Sudan in Nairobi on 17 March, to allow full access to humanitarian agencies to give relief assistance to people in war affected areas; and which new areas are now to be accessible to international aid agencies.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: An agreement was reached on 23 March between the Government of Sudan and both factions of the Sudan People's Liberation Army on a number of principles designed to facilitate the delivery of relief assistance to all needy populations regardless of their locations. A copy of the agreement has been placed in both Libraries of the House. If the agreement holds, all war-affected areas should become accessible.

Liberia

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent humanitarian aid is now flowing in Liberia through the Ivory Coast access route and through Kakata.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Humanitarian aid convoys are presently moving freely along these routes.

Desertification

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on problems encountered, and progress made, in the current negotiations for a global convention to combat desertification.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The main problem encountered has been the completion of both a convention text and a regional instrument for Africa in the timescale set by the United Nations General Assembly. In the current round of negotiations some progress has been made on agreement of a convention text.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people claiming income support in the Doncaster area offices of the Benefit Agency in 1992 and 1993 were refused benefit by an adjudication officer; how many appealed; how many of those who appealed subsequently had their claim for income support allowed; and how many of those concerned had children.

Mr. Burt: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 29 March 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the appeals in the Benefits Agency's Doncaster District.

The full range of information you request is not readily available and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost. This is because statistics relating to the refusal of Income Support and those which would identify families with children are not routinely collected. To obtain all the relevant information would require a physical examination of all income support cases within the Doncaster District.

I am, however, able to provide records which show the number for income support appeals which are for January to December each year and are shown below.

	1992	1993
Appeals received	321	339
Appeals withdrawn	43	48
Appeals superseded	79	96
Appeals allowed	19	20
Appeals partially allowed	4	2

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what amount of income support payment is deemed to be designated for personal clothing needs.

Mr. Burt: Income support rates are intended to cover all normal day-to-day living expenses and no particular amounts are designated for specific purposes. Claimants are free to manage their benefit according to their own needs and preferences.

Income Support (Deductions)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households in the Doncaster area are having weekly deductions made from their income support for (a) electricity and (b) gas of (i) under £2 per week and (ii) in each £1 band above £2 per week up to £40 per week.

Mr. Burt: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 29 March 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many households in the Doncaster area are having weekly deductions made from their income support for (a) electricity and (b) gas of (i) £2 per week and (ii) in each £1 band above £2 per week up to £40 per week.

The full range of information requested is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. This is because figures are not routinely collected on a local basis and to obtain the full range of information requested would require a physical examination of all cases with deductions for electricity and gas in the Doncaster area.

However, the information which is available for the Doncaster area, is as follows:

	Number
Cases with deductions for electricity	374
Cases with deductions for gas	876

This information has been collected by the Doncaster District Office whose area boundary coincides with that of the Doncaster area. No further breakdown is available.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what arrangements are made for repaying moneys to absent parents who have been wrongly assessed by the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. John Spellar, dated 28 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency's arrangements for repaying money to absent parents where the maintenance assessment has been revised.

The Agency acts as an intermediary between two parties in the arrangement of child maintenance, and has no powers to recover monies which have been overpaid to the parent with care. However, provisions have been made in the Arrears, Interest and Adjustment of Maintenance Assessment Regulations (regulation 10) to adjust future payments of maintenance in order to correct an under or overpayment, where this can be done.

The parent with care is protected from a period of total loss of income by restricting the amount by which future payments of maintenance may be adjusted in order to correct overpayment. These provisions are normally applied by the Child Support Officer at the maximum rate of 1½ times the difference between the old and new assessment. However, where an absent parent makes representations about the level of adjustment a lesser rate can be considered.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Bow and Poplar can expect an answer from the Child Support Agency in reply to her letter to the Minister dated 14 December concerning the case of Mrs. W. A. Rex-Cain.

Mr. Burt: I understand that Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive of the Child Support Agency, replied to the hon. Member on 25 March 1994.

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will launch an independent investigation into the handling by the Child Support Agency of Mrs. Terri West's application for child maintenance support.

Mr. Burt: There are no such plans. My hon. Friend will understand that although I am unable to comment on an individual case, I should stress that either party to a child maintenance assessment has the right to seek a review, and following the review to seek leave to appeal to an independent child support appeal tribunal.

State Pension Age

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer of 19 July 1993, Official Report, column 74, in respect of the information contained in the figure from "Options for Equality in State Pension Age".

Mr. Hague: The Government Actuary's Department has revised the information contained in figure 7, page 77, of the "Options for Equality in State Pension Age" document for current pension age, age 60 and age 65. The information is contained in the table. These estimates do not include any national health service allocation. There are obvious difficulties in predicting developments so far into the future, including the need to make hypothetical policy assumptions, for example, concerning the conditions for contracting out. For these reasons figures for age 63 have not been updated and the results given should not be interpreted as precise estimates but as broad indicators of the financial effects.

Year	Current state pension age Per cent.	Age 60 Per cent.	Age 65 Per cent.
1994-95	18·25	—	—
2025	20·0	22·0	18·5
2035	19·8	21·5	18·7

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment;

(2) if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Hague: A number of organisations or individuals may be consulted about, or asked to submit names of, potential candidates for public appointments. Since June 1992 these have included:

The Association of British Insurers
The British Epilepsy Association
The Confederation of British Industry
Miss C. H. Dawes (Deputy Chairman of the Occupational Pensions Board)
Expert members of the Disability Living Allowance Board
The Forum of Private Businesses
The Government Actuary

The Secretary of State for Scotland
The Social Security Advisory Committee
The Department of Trade and Industry
The Trade Union Congress
HM Treasury
The Secretary of State for Wales

National Continence Week

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what projects his Department instigated in respect of National Continence Week.

Mr. Scott: As the Department of Health has the lead on this matter, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health, on 25 March, at column 463. This Department ran no such specific projects.

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Hague: The information requested is as follows. All appointments are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. Except where shown, appointments are for a three-year term and non-salaried.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons;

(2) what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Hague: Where an appointment gives access to classified information the need for security vetting will be considered.

Income-related Benefits

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate how many people receive part or all of their income by way of one or more of the income-related benefits.

Mr. Burt: Information is not available in the precise form requested. The number of people claiming each benefit is in the table.

Benefit	Recipients —May 1993
Income Support[1]	5,643,000
Housing Benefit[2]	4,530,000
Council Tax Benefit[2]	5,231,000
Family Credit[3]	515,000
Disability Working Allowance	3,184

[1]Does not include partners or dependants.
[2]Benefit Units.
[3]Figures are for September 1993.
Note: As individuals can be entitled to more than one income related benefit all figures are subject to overlap.

Medical Boards and Tribunals (Appeals)

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the current waiting targets, and current waiting times, for appeals to special medical boards and medical appeal tribunals.

Mr. Scott: The information requested on special medical boards is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Medical appeal tribunals are the responsibility of the president of the independent tribunal service. I am informed that the information is not available in the form requested. The table shows the target and current outturn for the time taken from lodgement of an appeal to the issue of the tribunal's decision.

Target	Outturn
15 per cent. in 4 months	18·6
40 per cent. in 6 months	46·5
90 per cent. in 12 months	79·9

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades, 1 to 7 and overall, in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Hague: The information for permanent staff employed by the Department, including its agencies, is in the table.

Grade (including equivalent professional and other grades)	(a) Women (as at 28 February 1994)		(b) Ethnic minorities[1] (as at 28 February 1994)		(c) Registered disabled[2] (as at 1 July 1993)
	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
Grade 2	0	0	0	0	0	0
Grade 3	3	18	*	8·3	0	0
Grade 4	3	33	0	0	0	0
Grade 5	29	24	*	2·3	0	0
Grade 6	73	23	21	12·2	0	0
Grade 7	152	22	7	1·4	4	0·6
All Grades	64,119	67	3,394	5·1	1,396	1·6

Notes:

[1] Ethnic origin representation is calculated by taking ethnic minority respondents as a proportion of all respondents to the Department's ethnic survey. The response rate as at 28 February 1994 was 63·2 per cent. Asterisks have replaced very small numbers to avoid identifying individuals.

[2] Figures for disabled staff are for full time equivalents and cover only those registered as disabled: there are other staff with disabilities who have chosen not to register.

Disability Working Allowance

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the number of applications for the disability working allowance, and the number accepted, for each month since the allowance was introduced; and what percentage of people with disabilities of working age this represents.

Mr. Scott: The available information is in the table. The survey of disability conducted by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, based on fieldwork conducted in 1985-1988 and published in 1989, suggested that there were around 2 million disabled people between the ages of 16 and 65. However many of these would be unlikely to qualify for disability working allowance because they were only slightly disabled or because their disability would prevent them from undertaking any work.

Occupational Deafness

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will approve the addition of occupational deafness to the list of prescribed injuries for which disablement benefit is payable.

Mr. Scott: Occupational deafness has been prescribed as a disease, in relation to certain occupational activities, since October 1974.

War Pensions

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what replies the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the Viscount Astor, has received from members of the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions to his letter of 15 March about tobacco and alcohol-related claims for war pensions and war widows' pensions; how many members of the committee had previously indicated, when they were consulted, their approval of his Department's proposals to amend the Service Pension Order; and what further action he will be taking.

Mr. Hague: One member of the central advisory committee has written in response to the letter of 15 March.

Eight members expressed approval of the proposals set out in the consultation letter of 4 January, three with reservations on points of detail.

In accordance with normal procedures for amendments to the Service Pension Order, the changes were made by Order in Council. That order was laid before the House on 25 March and came into force on 28 March.

Staff Sickness

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average loss of days worked per employee in sickness in (a) 1991, (b) 1992 and (c) 1993 for (i) staff in DSS benefit offices and (ii) staff employed by the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Hague: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Official Gifts

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if he has chosen to purchase any official gift since becoming Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister: That is a private matter.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 10 March, Official Report, column 319, if he will list those charities which have benefited from the proceeds of the sale of small gifts given to him and his predecessor.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 29 March 1994]: That is a private matter.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister how much has been spent by his Office on the provision of official gifts in each of the last three years.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 29 March 1994]: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Provision of official gifts £
1991	17,470
1992	21,241
1993	18,385

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if details of gifts received by Ministers in their official capacity and reported to the departmental permanent secretary are made available to the public; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 29 March 1994:] Gifts received by Ministers in their official capacity are dealt with in accordance with the procedures set out in "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". The details are not made public.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 10 March, Official Report, column 319, if he will state the amounts accruing to official funds from the sale of gifts from the official inventory in each year since 1985.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 29 March 1994]: The only sales have been those to the Prime Minister of the day. These have all been carried out in accordance with "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". It is not the practice to publish details.

Government Car Service

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Prime Minister what is the annual cost to the Department of the car service for Ministers; and how many vehicles are involved.

The Prime Minister [pursuant to his reply, 8 December 1993, c. 222]: The charge to my office for ministerial use of the Government car service during 1992-93 was £130,198. Two vehicles are involved.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Prime Minister what was the cost to his office in 1990-91 of use of the Government car service other than the vehicles for his ministerial use; and which persons other than Ministers had a car specifically allocated to them.

The Prime Minister: The charge to my office for official use of the Government car service in 1990-91 was £192,998. No cars were specifically allocated to individuals.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Prime Minister what was the annual cost to the Department of the car service for Ministers in 1990-91; and how many vehicles were involved.

The Prime Minister [pursuant to his reply, 14 December 1993, c. 561]: The charge to my office for ministerial use of the Government car service during 1990-91 was £75,954. Two vehicles were involved.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Prime Minister if he will quantify the cost of the factors which led to a fall in the cost of cars for Prime Minister's use since 1990-91; what change has taken place in the cost of cars for No. 10, other than for the Prime Minister's use, since 1990-91; and what changes have taken place in the rules governing their use.

The Prime Minister: Since my answers of 8 and 14 December 1993, a detailed examination has been carried out of the invoices from the Government car service over the period from 1990-91 to 1992-93, in particular to check on the allocation between ministerial and official use. This has produced some changes from the figures originally given to the hon. Member.

Since 1990-91, GCS costs have increased, and in addition GCS charges have been restructured to reflect the fact that it had been under-recovering its costs in 1990-91. These factors have affected the costs of the cars for ministerial use and of those for official use. In addition, for the Prime Minister's cars, the basis of funding the necessary security work has changed, and now falls on the No. 10 running costs budget; this has increased the costs of the Prime Minister's cars by some 60 per cent., on top of the 12 per cent. increase in GCS charges for long-term hire. For the cars for official use, there has been an increase in costs arising from a change away from the GCS providing 24-hour cover for the cars on long-term hire towards greater use of pool cars. There has been no change in the rules governing the use of official cars by staff in 10 Downing street.

The revised figures (net of recovered VAT) are as follows:

	Ministerial use £	Official use £
1990-91	75,954	192,998
1992-93	130,198	339,549

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Prime Minister when he will provide substantive answers to the questions from the right hon. Member for Swansea, West tabled for answer on 16 December and on 13 January relating to the costs of cars used by his Office.

The Prime Minister: I have done so.

Malaysia

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions took place between the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Defence prior to the Secretary of State's March 1988 visit to Malaysia about the range of subjects to be covered in the protocol; to what extent the question of civil aid was considered; what documentation is held at No. 10 Downing street and the Cabinet Office reporting on the progress of the negotiations in Kuala Lumpur; and how the Prime Minister's office was kept informed of the progress of the negotiations.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 March 1994]: In January 1988 my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence wrote to ministerial colleagues to secure agreement to the signing of a protocol covering the purchase of defence equipment by the Malaysian Government. This exchange made no mention of civil aid. No. 10 files confirm that the Prime Minister's office was informed about the negotiations in Kuala Lumpur, and the inclusion of the paragraph on civil aid, only after the protocol had been signed.

EDUCATION

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Forth: None.

Assisted Places

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 15 February, Official Report, column 678, if he will list in order the 20 independent schools in England which received most money during the 1993-94 academic year from his Department under the assisted places scheme with (a) the number of pupils covered by the assisted places scheme, (b) the number on that institution's school roll, (c) (a) as a percentage of (b) and (d) the fee charged for each pupil.

Mr. Forth: Information for the 1992-93 academic year, the latest for which complete data are available, is given in the table:

Advertising Campaigns

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 14 February, Official Report, columns 587-88, if he will place in the Library the results of the pre and post-campaign market research on each campaign listed.

Mr. Robin Squire: The market research listed in the answer of 14 February was commissioned for internal purposes only—for campaign evaluation and planning. It is analogous to the advice given by officials to Ministers. I am unable, therefore, to place the results in the Library.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 14 February, Official Report, columns 587-88, how many coupon and telephone responses were received and leaflets issued in respect of each campaign.

Mr. Robin Squire: The 1993 testing publicity campaign resulted in 24,000 telephone and coupon responses. A total of 2,100,000 copies of the leaflet "How is your child doing at school?" were issued.

The GM advertising campaign resulted in over 3,000 telephone and coupon responses. A total of over 125,000 booklets were issued.

The 1994 testing campaign is still running. By 25 March some 21,000 telephone and coupon responses had been received and 3,300,000 copies of the leaflet "National School Tests in 1994" had been issued.

For the 1993 publicity campaign for the charters for further and higher education, by the end of February 1994 a total of 52,000 telephone and coupon responses had been received and 1,700,000 charters had been issued. Charters are continuing to be requested.

There was no coupon or telephone service associated with the DFC Roadshow. Around 30,000 leaflets were issued.

Education and Training Grants

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was (a) the total money spent, (b) the percentage of that money allocated according to decisions made by Ministers on competitive bids and (c) the percentage of that money allocated according to some statistical measure of need in the last available operational year of the grants for education and training scheme.

Mr. Forth: The grants for education support and training programme for 1994-95 will support local education authority expenditure of £270·6 million, mainly at a grant rate of 60 per cent. Of this, £47·8 million—18 per cent.—was allocated on the basis of competitive bids from LEAs. All bids were carefully examined on their merits and each LEA's needs. The remaining £222·8 million was allocated by formula, but dependent on satisfactory bids from LEAs. All GEST grants are allocated subject to LEAs indicating their ability to take them up.

Books and Equipment

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much was spent by each local education authority on books and equipment, in constant prices, for each of the last five years.

Mr. Forth: Information on total expenditure by each local education authority on books and equipment for the years 1988-89 to 1992-93, in 1992-93 prices, is given in the following table.

Notes to table

[1]The figures for 1992-93 include estimates of expenditure for the LEAs. The 1992-93 figures are subject to final checking by the Department of Environment and the Department for Education.

1. figures are derived from local education authorities' returns of their spending to the Department of the Environment.
2. "N/A" indicates that a return has not been received from the local education authority or that the return is subject to further enquiries.
3. Real terms figures are at 1992-93 prices, repriced using the latest GDP (Market Prices) Deflator index.

Parental Choice

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will give figures, in total and for each local education authority, on the number of parents who secured the secondary school of their first choice for their child; and if he will give these figures for both the earliest and latest years for which they are available since 1964.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested for the academic years 1988-89 and 1991-92, the earliest and latest dates for which information is available, is given in the tables.

Asthma

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many children in the age range five to 11 years attend schools in England; and what percentage of these children is classified as suffering from asthma.

Mr. Forth: The information requested regarding numbers of children who have asthma is not collected centrally.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) if he will make a statement on his policy on the carriage of asthma ventilators on their person, at all times, on school premises by children in the age group five to 11 years;

(2) to what extent the carrying at all times of asthma ventilators by asthma suffering children of the age range five to 11 years, while at school is a matter to be decided by (a) the child's parents, (b) the school's head teacher or (c) other education authority groupings.

Mr. Forth: It is considered good health care practice for children with asthma, where possible, to manage their own condition as early as is consistent with their development. Teachers should, in consultation with parents and with the benefit of appropriate medical advice, do all that is reasonable to enable children to participate as fully as possible in school life.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, what major building projects since 1989, valued at over £1 million are being, or have been wholly or partly financed in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

Mr. Forth: There have been no major building projects at voluntary aided and special agreement schools since 1989, valued at over £1 million financed by this Department in any of the local education authorities cited above. The Department does not control the funding of projects at individual county and voluntary controlled schools. It is for authorities to decide their own capital expenditure priorities and to make the best use of the resources available to them.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to promote further the opting out of schools.

Mr. Patten: I intend to ensure that parents, governors and teachers have access to the factual information that they need about grant-maintained status in order to make an informed decision about whether it would be right for their school. I expect that in most cases the benefits will be very apparent.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Middle East

9. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of participating states and organisations in the middle east peace negotiations to discuss progress.

22. Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of participating states and organisations in the middle east peace negotiations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary visited Israel, the occupied territories, Lebanon and Jordon from 2 to 6 January and met the key figures involved in the peace process. He and I met Mr. Arafat's envoy, Nabil Shaath, on 3 March.

27. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in the middle east peace process.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom co-sponsored United Nations Security Council resolution 904 was adopted on 18 March. This calls for the implementation without delay of the Israeli-PLO declaration of principles. We hope for early agreement on Israeli withdrawal from Gaza and Jericho. We welcome the announcement that bilateral talks between Israel and Syria, Lebanon and Jordan will resume in Washington in April.

28. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Britain's support for the Washington accord in resolving the Palestine-Israeli conflict.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom co-sponsored UN Security Council resolution 904. This calls for the implementation without delay of the Israeli-PLO declaration of principles. Our aid to the occupied territories will amount to £20 million this financial year and £70 million for the next three financial years. We have also provided £85,000 to help fund surgeons and specialist medical equipment and supplies to treat the victims of the Hebron massacre.

Today we have provided £500,000 to the International Committee of the Red Cross for its operation in the occupied territories.

31. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Britain's role in bringing about a recommencement of the middle east peace negotiations.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom co-sponsored United Nations Security Council resolution 904. We have urged on all parties to the negotiations the importance of concluding a just, lasting and comprehensive settlement as soon as possible.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the chance of further progress on the middle east peace accord, until there is better protection of the Palestinians; and what representations he has made to the Israelis about this subject.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The details of an international presence and of security measures for the protection of Palestinians in the occupied territories are under discussion between Israel and the PLO. We hope negotiations on Israeli withdrawal from Gaza and Jericho will resume soon. I wrote to the Israeli ambassador drawing his attention to the statement on 7 March by European Union Foreign Ministers which called for protection of Palestinians in the occupied territories.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent he is involved in international discussions to supply an international security force for the occupied territories in the middle east; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We co-sponsored United Nations Security Council resolution 904 which called for an international or foreign presence. We are in close touch with interested parties on the follow-up to that resolution.

India

17. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions about human rights he had with the Indian Prime Minister on his recent visit to the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

18. Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what human rights issues he raised with the Indian Prime Minister during his recent visit to London.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed human rights with Mr. Narasimha Rao during his visit to Britain last week.

23. Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last had discussions with the Indian Government about human rights in the Punjab; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed human rights in India with the Indian Prime Minister during his visit to Britain earlier this month. The main focus of the discussion on human rights was, however, Kashmir.

East Timor

19. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on human rights in East Timor.

Mr. Goodlad: We believe the Indonesian Government have made progress in observing their human rights obligations. We are encouraging them to continue this positive trend and, in particular, to co-operate with the United Nations human rights mechanisms.

26. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Indonesian Government over the illegal occupation of East Timor.

Mr. Goodlad: We are encouraging Indonesia and Portugal to continue to co-operate with the United Nations Secretary General to find a solution to East Timor.

We hope the return to consensus language at this year's session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights will help provide an atmosphere conducive to progress at the next round of talks on the territory's future between Portugal and Indonesia under the Secretary-General's auspices in May.

European Union

20. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet his counterparts in the European Union to discuss greater political union.

Mr. Hurd: There are no plans for a meeting of European Union Foreign Ministers to discuss greater political union.

Falkland Islands

21. Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current position concerning discussions with Argentina about prospecting for oil in the waters surrounding the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We are considering the next steps for the development of the Falklands continental shelf. We shall be discussing the matter shortly with the Falkland Islands Government. In due course we would expect also to have discussions with the Government of Argentina.

Malaysia

24. Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made to restore trading relations with Malaysia.

Mr. Goodlad: We have been in close and frequent touch with the Malaysian Government, the business community and others both here and in Malaysia. We want to restore the flourishing state of our relations as soon as possible.

The Malaysian Government's concern has been about certain articles in the British press. I believe that they have reflected fully how much the Malaysians helped us in finding the missing British service men in Sabah. That assistance highlights the real relationship between our two countries.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 23 March, Official Report, column 294, if he will state the dates on which representations were made by the Government of Malaysia.

Mr. Goodlad [holding answer 29 March 1994]: No. The details of our relations with other Governments are confidential.

Turkey

25. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he hopes to discuss the question of human rights with the Turkish Government.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have no immediate plans to do so. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised human rights with the Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Turkey when he visited Ankara on 19 and 20 January. I stressed our concerns to the Turkish Minister for Human Rights in London recently.

Westminster Foundation for Democracy

29. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress the Westminster Foundation for Democracy is making.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In 1993-94, with a grant-in-aid of £2 million, the foundation embarked on 205 projects in 37 countries.

Kashmir

30. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the Indian and Pakistani Governments to discuss the situation in Kashmir.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the situation in Kashmir when he met the Indian Prime Minister earlier this month during his visit to Britain.

I last discussed the subject with the Pakistan Foreign Secretary in February.

Israel

32. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Israel relating to the disarming of Jewish settlers in the occupied territories following the massacre at Hebron.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I wrote to the Israeli ambassador drawing his attention to the statement on 7 March by European Union Foreign Ministers which called for protection of Palestinians in the occupied territories.

UNESCO

33. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement about the up-to-date position of the United Kingdom Government on the possibility of re-joining the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We continue to keep this issue under close review, but have not yet reached any decision.

Pacific Rim

34. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with EEC counterparts about relations with Pacific rim countries.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Relations with third countries are discussed on an ad hoc basis at Foreign Affairs Councils. We and our partners understand the growing political and economic importance of this part of the world —in 1992, 7·8 per cent. of United Kingdom exports went to the Asia Pacific region and, for the first time, the European Union traded more with east Asia than with north America. The EC has co-operation agreements with the Association of South-East Asian Nations and with China and one is currently being negotiated with Vietnam.

During the United Kingdom presidency we made a priority of developing the Community's relations with Japan, based on the arrangements for consultation as laid out in the EC-Japan joint declaration of 1991 and we continue to press for this to be consolidated. The Germans have stated that the strengthening of relations between the European Union and Asia will be a focal point of their presidency—including intensification of the European-Japanese dialogue, and examination of the options for concluding a co-operation agreement with the Republic of Korea, as well as the normal ministerial EC/ASEAN meeting scheduled for September. We have welcomed this.

European Union

35. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the enlargement of the European Union.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Member (1) to the replies given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 14 March, Official Report, columns 474-77 and to the hon. Member for Hertford and Stortford (Mr. Wells) on 21 March, Official Report, columns 11-12, (2) to my reply to the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 25 March, Official Report, columns 478-79, (3) to the reply of my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 22 March, Official Report, columns 120-22 and to the statement of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the House on 29 March, Official Report, columns 797-98.

Cyprus

36. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to Turkish and Turkish Cypriot authorities regarding the occupation of properties in northern Cyprus by Turkish settlers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Turkish Government and the Turkish Cypriots are aware of our position on this issue. The communique issued at last October's Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting expressed concern at the influx of Turkish settlers to Cyprus and emphasised that nothing should be done to change the demographic structure of the Island.

Asia and Pacific Rim

37. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what efforts are being made to reinforce the commercial sections of British embassies in Asia and the Pacific rim countries.

Mr. Goodlad: Since 1990, total export promotion effort at FCO posts in Asia and Pacific rim countries, measured in man years, has risen by 23 per cent.

This year alone we are creating 23 new frontline commercial jobs at our Asian and Pacific rim missions in Hong Kong, Tokyo, Osaka, Bangkok, Jakarta, Kuala Lumpur and Singapore and at the British trade and cultural office in Taipei.

In addition, discussions are well advanced for opening new commercial offices in Pusan in Korea and Nagoya in Japan, to be run by locally employed staff.

Hong Kong

38. Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the ambassador of the People's Republic of China to discuss the future of Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary last met ambassador Ma Yuzhen to discuss Hong Kong issues on 23 November. We wish to co-operate with China in the interests of a smooth transition for Hong Kong and full implementation of the Sino-British joint declaration.

Russia

39. Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he is taking to assist the progress of democratic and economic reform in Russia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have given our full support to the process of democratic and economic reform in Russia, and shall continue to do so, providing assistance through both bilateral and multilateral aid programmes.

Nigeria

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations have been made to the Government of Nigeria regarding the protection of human rights and the introduction of democracy in that country.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave on Monday 21 February at column 30 to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Parry).

Somalia

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit Somalia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no plans to visit Somalia. He last visited in September 1992, as part of an EC Foreign Ministers Troika who went to see personally the situation in Somalia. My noble friend, Baroness Chalker of Wallasey has no current plans to visit the country.

We welcome the latest Security Council resolution adopted on 4 February which underlines the international community's continuing commitment to assist the people of Somalia. The Somali people should now build on the momentum created by the agreement signed in Nairobi on 24 March by Ali Mahdi and General Aideed. We hope a process has started which will lead to the creation of a national reconciliation conference.

IAEA

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of the International Atomic Energy Agency's board of governors' meeting on 21 March; how Britain was represented; and what was the United Kingdom's stance at the meeting.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A resolution was passed by the IAEA board of governors on 21 March which expressed grave concern at North Korea's continued failure to comply with its safeguards agreement, and requested the agency's director-general to transmit the report on the most recent round of inspections to the UN General Assembly. We fully supported this resolution. Her Majesty's permanent representative at the United Kingdom's mission to the IAEA attended.

Mrs. Timmreck

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 24 March, when Mrs. Timmreck left St. Helena; how long she had been resident on the island; and whether any civil or criminal cases involving Mrs. Timmreck had been brought before her departure.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: When Mrs. Timmreck left St. Helena in August 1993, she had been on the island for 32 months from October 1990, except for two brief visits to Cape Town. Prior to that, following her first arrival on St. Helena in December 1985, she made four visits totalling 7½ months. No civil or criminal cases involving her had been brought before her departure.

Korea

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of the present military position between North and South Korea.

Mr. Goodlad: There is a high concentration of military forces on the border. There has been a steady shift of North Korean forces over the last decade which has led to the present deployment of 750,000-1 million troops near the border. This is a cause for anxiety, and increases the need for North and South Korea to pursue the dialogue between them.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Goodlad: None.

Iran

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) in which way the United Kingdom delegation voted in the United Nations on the question of the violation of human rights and on the situation of human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran, in March this year; and if he will make a statement.

(2) if he will make a statement on Iran's refusal to comply with international instruments on human rights, including the international covenant on civil and political rights; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We and our European partners condemn Iran's refusal to fulfil its obligations under international instruments of human rights. We were involved in the drafting and co-sponsored and voted in favour of the resolution on Iran introduced by the European Union at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in March. It reflected our concerns at Iran's human rights record and called on the Iranians to co-operate with the United Nations special representative on human rights in Iran.

Trade and Aid

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings he has had with representatives of the Indonesian Government to discuss trade and aid agreements with that country.

Mr. Goodlad: We regularly discuss a wide range of issues with the Indonesians, including trade, education, human rights, regional political and security matters, aid and economic issues.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs visited Indonesia in April last year. I will be visiting Indonesia myself after Easter.

EMPLOYMENT

Departmental Property

Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what property, leased or owned for the purposes of his Department, is not in current use.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Employment Group has an estate of 1,779 properties and holdings of which:

702 are occupied and are part of the Government Estate managed by Property Holdings;

902 are occupied and managed by the Department.

Some 175 properties managed by the Department are not in current use and are being marketed actively for sale or disposal.

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons.

Mr Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State takes into account the background and experience of candidates before making an appointment.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The appointment to public bodies for which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is responsible are listed in "Public Bodies 1993" a copy of which is available in the Library, with the additions of the Commissioner for Protection against Unlawful Industrial Action, and Investors in People (UK), which are new appointments.

Any remuneration attached to a post is also listed in "Public Bodies".

The information about terms of appointment and current appointees could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible apppointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State makes such inquiries as may be necessary before making an appointment.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment;

(2) if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State consults such organisations as are appropriate to the appointment in question.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The total number of ethnic minority appointments made by the Department to public bodies was given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1993", a copy of which is in the Library.

Information on ethnic minorities is collected in confidence, and it is not the Department's practice to release the details of the ethnic origin of individual members of public bodies.

Workplace Deaths

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the average length of time of each investigation by Health and Safety Executive inspectors in each region into each workplace death.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action was taken as a result of each workplace death investigation completed in the last 12 months in each region.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is not available in the form requested.

The following table shows the number of fatal injuries, provisional, reported to each region in the Health and Safety Executive's field operations division between 1 April 1992 and 31 March 1993 and how many of them have led to inspectors taking prosecution action to date.

HSE region	Number of fatal injuries reported	Of which resulted in prosecution action
Wales and South West	52	6
Home Counties	46	7
London and South East	48	5
Midlands	55	9
Yorkshire and North East	54	10
North West	46	8
Scotland	45	10

Information on any other action taken as result of each workplace death investigation is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many Health and Safety Executive investigations into workplace deaths were started in each year since 1983 in each region; and how many of these were completed within (a) one week, (b) two weeks, (c) one month, (d) two months and (e) longer than two months.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is not available in the form requested.

The Health and Safety Executive gives a high priority to the investigation of fatal injuries in the workplace. The following table shows the number of fatal injuries reported to HSE's factory, agricultural and quarries inspectorates from 1983 to 1992-93, provisional:

Year	Number of fatal injuries reported
1983[1]	472
1984[1]	485
1985[1]	518[2]
1986-87[1]	399
1987-88[1]	455
1988-89[1]	472
1989-90[1]	586[3]
1990-91	468
1991-92	368
1992-93	346[4]

[1] Excludes reports made to the Quarries Inspectorate.
[2] Includes 56 members of the public killed in the Bradford City FC fire disaster.
[3] Includes 95 reportable fatalities arising from the Hillsborough Stadium disaster.
[4] Provisional.

Information is not available on the length of time taken to complete investigations.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many Health and Safety Executive staff in each region are involved in the investigation of each workplace death.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is not available in the form requested. The number of Health and Safety Executive staff involved in the investigation of each workplace death varies according to the technical, medical and scientific expertise required during the investigation.

Productivity Rewards

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 11 March, Official Report, column 433, concerning rewards for productivity, what steps he has taken to ensure that the decisions referred to in his first paragraph are taken on a level playing field.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Government policy remains that decisions on pay and related matters are for the employers and workers concerned to make in the light of their particular local circumstances, without Government intervention.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 11 March, Official Report, column 433, concerning rewards for productivity, whether he will publish a table showing the annual increase in output per person employed for the whole economy less manufacturing together with the figures for the whole economy and manufacturing.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The annual increases in ouput per person for the whole economy and manufacturing, since 1979, are given in the table. Figures for the whole economy less manufacturing are not calculated.

	Manufacturing	Whole economy
1979	0·3	1·4
1980	–3·8	–1·3
1981	3·3	2·4
1982	6·3	3·9
1983	7·6	4·6
1984	5·3	0·3
1985	3·3	2·9
1986	3·6	3·8
1987	5·6	2·8
1988	5·6	1·6
1989	4·4	–0·2
1990	1·9	–0·1
1991	1·4	0·5
1992	4·8	2·2
1993	5·5	3·5

Offshore Safety

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many improvement notices the offshore safety division of the Health and Safety Executive has instigated since taking over this responsibility; and if he will list each company and installation to which such notices have been issued.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Some 41 improvement notices have been issued by the offshore safety division of the Health and Safety Executive since taking over responsibility for offshore safety. The companies and installations are listed in the following tables:

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many recommendations for prosecution under the provisions of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 the offshore safety division of the Health and Safety Executive has instigated; and if he will list the companies and installations to which such recommendations have applied.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Since 1 April 1991, prosecutions have been instigated by the procurator fiscal in Scotland in 22 cases, following receipt of a report from the Health and Safety Executive. One of these was subsequently abandoned. One case has been prosecuted in England. Details are set out in the following tables:

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many improvement notices, prohibition notices and pending prosecutions were outstanding when the offshore safety division of the Health and Safety Executive took over responsibility for those matters from the Department of Energy; which (a) companies and (b) installations they applied to; and how many are still outstanding.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No improvement notices or prohibition notices were outstanding when the Health and Safety Executive took over responsibility for offshore safety. In England, no pending prosecutions were outstanding at that time. Decisions on prosecutions in Scotland are solely the responsibility of the procurator fiscal and the Crown Office for Scotland.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what further changes he proposes to make to improve health and safety on offshore installations.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Health and Safety Executive is reviewing a large number of safety cases and discussing with individual owners and operators of installations any improvements which may need to be made.

In addition, the Health and Safety Commission has put in hand a review of offshore health and safety legislation with the aim of modernising and streamlining provision, and replacing or revoking existing prescriptive requirements. New goal-setting regulations are being developed, in line with Lord Cullen's recommendations, to cover fire and explosion, emergency response, management and administration; and design and construction.

Consultants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will provide a table showing the contracts currently being worked on for his Department by Coopers and Lybrand, Ernst and Young, Price Waterhouse, KPMG Peat Marwick, Grant Thornton, Robson Rhodes, BDO Binder Hamlyn, Levy Gee, Hacker Young, Pannell Kerr Forster and Stoy Harward.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Jobplan Workshops

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what monitoring arrangements of the standard of jobplan workshop courses is in place; what complaints about such courses have been received; if he will summarise the nature of the complaints; what arrangements there are for complaints to be made and taken into account in the running of the workshops; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. A. G. Johnson to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 30 March 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about arrangements to monitor Jobplan Workshops and the nature and handling of complaints about their delivery. I am replying in the Chief Executive's absence.

It may be helpful if I explain that Jobplan is designed to help people who have been unemployed for some time compete for jobs and opportunities. During the workshop, which lasts for one week, clients are able to take a fresh look at their situation, review their strengths and skills and set themselves clear and achievable job goals. The workshop was developed to accommodate people with varying experiences and backgrounds. During the workshop, people have the opportunity for personal reviews as well as undertaking group work. Since April 1993, over 270,000 people have attended Jobplan.

Jobplan is delivered by organisations in the public, private and voluntary sectors on the Employment Service's (ES) behalf. Contracts are awarded following a competitive tendering exercise.

A full specification is issued to all prospective contractors. This specification, and a manual which sets out how the programme is to be run, forms the basis against which subsequent monitoring and assessment of the provider is undertaken.

At the end of each workshop, management information is collected and sent to the ES. This covers the number of people who have taken part in the workshop and the action they have decided to take at the end. This information is used by people in the ES to assess the performance of the provider and the value for money that is being achieved. Participants are issued with review sheets at the end of the workshop and invited to comment on the delivery of the workshop. These provide us with further information about the quality of the workshop.

A schedule of monitoring visits is drawn up for each contract to ensure that workshops are inspected regularly. We will observe workshop sessions and assess whether the provider is delivering the workshop to the appropriate standard and quality. The findings of these visits are discussed with the provider and their leaders and where remedial action is required, the provider will be asked to take the action within a specified time. We will later review to ensure that any problems have been put right.

As part of the Citizens Charter we have established, in the Jobseekers Charter, a suggestions and complaints procedure which enables people to comment on the quality of the service they have received. Providers are contractually obliged to follow the principles of the Jobseekers Charter, which amongst other things, requires them to have posters and leaflets on display so that people who wish to complain or make suggestions may do so easily. The responsibility for answering these lies initially with the provider who is required to reply to the person within seven days.

Should someone who has complained feel that their complaint has not been satisfactorily answered, they can approach our local managers for redress. Where complaints are made to the provider or to the local manager the focus is on setting things right locally. We do not collect statistics centrally but, of course, the contract managers pay close attention to the number and nature of complaints when workshops are re-tendered. In some cases complaints are also made through an MP or directly to the Secretary of State for Employment. We have central statistics on these. Since April 1993, seven people have written to complain about the standard of delivery of the workshop and three have written to say that they felt that the workshop was not helpful to them. I am sure you will agree that as a proportion of the 270,000 people who have taken part, this number of complaints is remarkably low.

I am also encouraged that a number of people who have attended workshops have written to say how useful the workshops have been in their search for work and how positive they found the experience. I am attaching a sample of the comments that have been made about Jobplan.

I hope this is helpful.

What people say about Jobplan

"Very helpful—I was lost and stranded until I attended Jobplan."

"I was dubious about what Jobplan could offer but found the workshop of immense benefit to me—full marks—it was just what I needed."

"The personal interview was the most helpful thing I've had. There are courses I didn't know about and I've applied for one of them."

"I found it to be rewarding and enlightening and would not hesitate to recommend it to anyone seeking work."

"I wish this had been offered to me a year ago."

"It's a lot better than I thought. I'm glad we can make choices for ourselves."

"I was really nervous before I came here, but now I'm glad I was told about it."

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities or (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is set out in the following table:

Staff in the Employment Department (ED) Group

Grade	Women staff at 1 April 1993		Ethnic minority staff at 1 April 1993		Registered disabled staff at 1 July 1993
	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number G1-G7	Percentage G1-G7
Grade 2	1	20·0	0	0·0
Grade 3	1	4·0	0	0·0
Grade 4	0	0·0	0	0·0
Grade 5	22	20·2	0	0·0
Grade 6	17	12·0	1	0·7

All Staff	42,659	67·2	3,669	[1]6·2	2,020·5	3·4

[2] Separate information by grade for registered disabled staff is not available above Grade 7. Registration is voluntary therefore the ED Group employs more disabled people than are counted.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 861, what is his assessment of the reasons for the fall in the number of hours worked; and what effect he expects economic recovery to have on this fall.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The fall in total hours worked by manufacturing operatives since 1989 is due to two main factors. First, a short-term, cyclical fall in demand for labour due to the economic recession. Secondly, the longer-term movement of jobs away from manufacturing and into services. The Department does not forecast changes in hours worked.

WALES

Agricultural Development Advisory Service

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Welsh farmers asked the Agricultural Development Advisory Service for advice in the year (a) before and (b) after fees were introduced.

Mr. Redwood: This is a matter for the ADAS agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from J. M. Walsh to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 30 March 1994:

The Minister of State for Wales has asked me to reply to your Question on how many Welsh farmers asked the Agricultural Development Advisory Service for advice in the years (a) before and (b) after fees were introduced.

Part (a) of your question refers to the ADAS financial year 1986-87 (1 April to 31 March). Up to and including this period ADAS did not keep records of how many Welsh farmers asked ADAS for advice.

Part (b) of your question refers to the financial year 1987-88 during which ADAS first charged some of the beneficiaries of its services as a result of a policy decision to make ADAS more financially accountable.

Management Information Systems were new and undeveloped at this time and information is therefore limited. I am only able to tell you that out of 13,000 full time farm holdings in Wales (source: 1993 Agricultural Census) ADAS issued approximately 7,000 invoices to Welsh customers.

I would also estimate that there was no significant fall in customers after charging was introduced as our evidence indicates that charging for our consultancy services "added value" in the perception of some of our customers and certainly attracted a new type of farming customer to complement existing customers.

M4

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated cost of (a) introducing variable text signs on the M4 in south Wales and (b) employing a road manager for the M4.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The cost of upgrading the motorway signed infrastructure to provide variable text signs, as seen on the M25, would be between £8 million and £10 million. On the issue of road management, I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 14 March, Official Report, column 526.

Housing

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how his proposals for access to local authority and housing association tenancies will ensure that decisions over housing tenancies will remain under the control of local authorities.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Local authorities exercise nomination rights by agreement over elements of the housing association stock. In allocating their own tenancies, councils are expected to take account of relevant legislation and of good practice advice. Similar considerations would apply under the Government's recent proposals for change.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the extent to which rent bonds and guarantees increase in the private housing sector when private sector landlords know that local authorities will be responsible for such payments.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: These schemes are run by local authorities. No such indications have been reported to the Welsh Office.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total cost of official entertaining in his Department in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. Redwood: The amounts spent by the Welsh Office on official hospitality were:

1990-91	45,419
1991-92	35,982
1992-93	38,382
[1]1993-94	26,375

[1] To 25 March 1994.

The number and cost of individual receptions could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sheep Annual Premium

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales by what date he expects all applications for sheep annual premium in the current year to be paid out.

Mr. Redwood: Almost 90 per cent. of claimants for the 1993 sheep annual premium in Wales have received the two advances of payments. The balance of the premium should be paid by June. Most of the unpaid claims await the resolution of queries and some require farm visits. Priority is being given to clearing these cases as quickly as possible.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by county how many applications for payment of sheep annual premium he has received in the current year; and what proportion in each county remained unpaid on 1 March.

Mr. Redwood: The information, which is available only on an administrative area basis, for the week ending 4 March, is as follows:

	Gwynedd/ Clwyd	Dyfed	Powys/ Gwent/ Glamorgans
Application for 1993 premium	5,701	5,101	6,676
Proportion unpaid on 1 March 1993 (per cent.)	9	20	9

Oscar Ceremonies

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will seek from the respective chairmen of (a) the Welsh Development Agency, (b) the Welsh Tourist Board, (c) S4C and (d) BBC Wales the number of their respective employees who visited the recent Oscar ceremonies in Los Angeles; what was the cost in each case for the staff visits to Los Angeles; and if the cost will be borne by the Exchequer or in the case of (d) be a charge on the television licence.

Sir Wyn Roberts: No. Such operational matters are for the respective organisations concerned.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give a table showing the amount of (a) Welsh Office grant and (b) self-generated income which financed each TEC in each year since their inception in (i) cash prices and (ii) 1993-94 prices.

Mr. Redwood: The amounts of income received by the seven TECs in Wales for delivering their training and enterprise activities under contract with the Welsh Office together with other income generated for the three years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93 are shown in the published audited annual accounts of TECs, copies of which are in the Library of the House. The figures for 1993-94 are not yet available.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was (a) the budget and (b) the outturn for each of the TECs for each year since their inception in (i) cash prices and (ii) 1993-94 prices.

Mr. Redwood: Much of the information requested has been provided to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms Short), in my letter dated 10 February 1994, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House. I will write to the hon. Member in the new financial year when the further information requested is available.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many training weeks were undertaken by each of the TECs in each year since their inception; and how many training weeks are expected to be undertaken in the current year.

Mr. Redwood: The information requested is in the table. The statistics for 1993-94 refer to planned training weeks, whereas the figures for earlier years are training weeks delivered. Training for work replaced employment training and employment action in April 1993.

Training weeks provided 1991-92 to 1993-94

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many neighbourhood watch schemes there are in operation in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: At 31 December 1993 there were 5,748 neighbourhood watch schemes operational in Wales.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many neighbourhood watch schemes were initiated in each year since 1989.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is included in the table.

	Total schemes	Initiated in-year
1989	2,856	n.a.
1990	3,162	306
1991	3,857	695
1992	4,971	1,114
1993	5,748	777

European Charter on Minority Languages

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the Government will decide whether or not to become a signatory to the European charter on minority languages; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Government will make a decision on this matter in due course.

Health Service Expenditure

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the projected expenditure for each (a) health authority, (b) family health services authority and (c) national health service trust for 1994-95;

(2) on which date spending levels for 1994-95 were communicated to each (a) health authority, (b) family health service authority and (c) national health service trust; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend announced the provisional cash allocations for 1994-95 for health authorities and family health services authorities and the provisional external financing limits for NHS trusts on 16 March. Health authorities and family health services authorities will provide information relating to their income and expenditure planning intentions for 1994-95 —indicating how these will be contained within the cash allocations notified—in their final health plans which are due for submission to the Department by 16 April. NHS trusts will similarly provide information relating to their expenditure plans in their final 1994-95 operational plans which are due for submission by 30 April.

Water Pollution

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a statement concerning the discharges into the Irish sea, Liverpool bay and the Dee estuary from industries and the impact upon beaches and health and safety of local communities of these discharges;

(2) if he will prepare and publish a report on the discharge by dangerous and impure substances into Liverpool bay and the River Dee estuary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Discharges into inland and coastal waters are controlled by the National Rivers Authority under the Water Resources Act 1991 and by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution under the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Under this legislation, details of consents and authorisations, and the results of subsequent monitoring, are kept on public registers.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food monitors contaminants in the aquatic environment and the latest results are published in Aquatic Environment Monitoring Reports Nos. 36 and 38.

Waters on the United Kingdom coastline that are popular for bathing come within the scope of the EC bathing water directive 76/160/EEC which sets water quality standards intended for the protection of public health. The water industry is currently undertaking a major investment programme to improve its discharges into coastal waters to ensure that bathing waters consistently meet these standards.

Local Government Boundaries

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the area of the pre-1974 counties of Anglesey, Caernarfonshire and Merionethshire, Cardiganshire, Carmarthenshire, Denbighshire, Flintshire, Monmouthshire, Pembrokeshire and the present county of Powys will be included within the boundaries of the counties of the same name proposed in the Local Government (Wales) Bill [Lords].

Mr. Redwood: All the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The present county of Powys would be wholly included in the new county of that name.

National Health Service Staff

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many qualified NHS nurses and midwives, unqualified NHS nursing staff and nursing learners there were in 1989, 1990, 1991, 1992 and 1993 in (a) numbers and (b) as a percentage of the total NHS nursing and midwifery staff.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is given in the table.

Nursing and midwifery staff in post (whole-time equivalents) as at 30 September[1]

	Qualified		Unqualified[2]		Learners[3]

1993[5]	17,912	68·3	7,220	27·5	1,033	3·9

[1]Includes staff employed by the Welsh Health Common Services Authority.
[2]Staff paid as grade A, B or nursery staff.
[3]Since the autumn of 1991 student nurses have been reclassified as students and are no longer included in the NHS staff figures. Staff included here are students finishing courses begun before this date. However at 1 October 1993 there were about 1,900 Project 2000 nursing students in Wales.
[4]Excludes staff paid on local payscales whose staff group cannot be identified centrally.
[5]In addition there are 72 whole-time equivalent nursing staff for whom no grade details are known centrally. The percentage shown do not, therefore, add to 100 for 1993.

Cardiff Bay Barrage

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Cardiff Bay development corporation and with Balfour Beatty Costain Construction consortium in relation to the start date of the barrage construction contract and the complaints by the environment directorate of the European Union, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds and the World Wide Fund for Nature regarding the Cardiff bay barrage and the Cardiff bay site of special scientific interest.

Mr. Redwood: I have had no such discussions with Balfour Beatty Costain. The chairman of the development corporation has been kept fully informed of the position regarding the complaint to the European Commission.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial controls he proposes should apply to councils during the suspension of compulsory competitive tendering because of local government reorganisation.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The suspension of compulsory competitive tendering does not affect the duty for councils to achieve a specified rate of return under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980, or my right hon. Friend's powers to take action in cases of failure to achieve the rate of return.

The suspension of CCT means that, for principal councils in Wales, there would be no requirement to achieve a specified financial objective, or any sanctions in case of failure, for work which is currently a "defined activity" for the purposes of the Local Government Act 1988.

The Government propose to bring forward an amendment to the Local Government (Wales) Bill to provide that, notwithstanding the suspension of CCT, authorities should continue to be under a duty:

—to keep accounts for this work;
—to submit returns to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State; and —to achieve a specified financial objective.

The amendment would also give my right hon. Friend the power to act in the event of failure to achieve the specified financial objective. The obligations and powers sought would have retrospective effect, from 1 April 1994, but would not differ from those which currently apply.

Local authorities will be informed of the detail of the Government's proposal.

Health Authorities (Restructuring)

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will publish his proposals to restructure health authorities in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: I have today written to Welsh Members enclosing a copy of a consultation paper which I have published, setting out a range of proposals, including my preferred option. I have also arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of the House. Comments on the proposals have been invited from a wide range of interested bodies.

Ancient Monuments Board

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to publish the next report of the Ancient Monuments Board for Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The 39th annual report of the Ancient Monuments Board for Wales has been published today. The report covers the financial year 1992-93 and copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

SCOTLAND

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Lang: This information can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Lang: There is no set list of organisations or individuals that are consulted about appointments to bodies which are sponsored by my Department, although there may be specific legislative requirements regarding consultation in relation to appointments to a particular body.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons.

Mr. Lang: Appointments are made on the basis of aptitude and merit. No central record is kept of the political affiliation of those appointed to public bodies.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Lang: There are no formal procedures. Given the qualities required of the holders of such posts however it is in practice unlikely that an individual with extreme political views would be appointed where his or her views would be relevant to the responsibilities of the post.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Lang: The Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies" lists those public bodies sponsored by my Department at 1 April each year and indicates the number of appointments which I make to each body at 1 September. This publication also shows the level of remuneration, if any. Copies of the latest edition of this publication are available in the Library of the House. Information about the current appointees to these bodies is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take action to prevent national health service trusts reducing the take-home pay of their work forces.

Mr. Stewart: Trusts are free to negotiate terms and conditions with their employees. Take-home pay of the staff of an NHS trust is a matter between the staff concerned and the trust as an employer.

Training

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has about the specific skills being learnt by people on Government training schemes for young people or the unemployed; and what assessment his Department has made of the extent to which these meet Scotland's training needs.

Mr. Stewart: Information about the specific skills being learnt by people on Government training schemes for young people or the unemployed is not available. It is the responsibility of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise to deliver, through their respective networks of local enterprise companies, Government training schemes, with the aim of providing young people and unemployed adults with the skills, vocational qualifications and work experience to meet the needs of local labour markets.

Schools (Opting Out)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many current applications he has before him from schools seeking to opt out of local authority control.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: One, namely the application from St. Mary's episcopal primary school, Dunblane, on which additional information from the St. Mary's school board has been requested in order that its application can be further considered.

Royal Scottish National Hospital

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment he made of the financial viability of the Royal Scottish national hospital management application for trust status before giving it approval;

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of a detailed statement of the financial accounts of the Royal Scottish national hospital trust since its inception;

(3) if he will conduct a thorough investigation into the finances of the Royal Scottish national hospital before deciding on the application for merger with Forth Valley Healthcare;

(4) if he will arrange for an independent inquiry into the finances of the Royal Scottish national hospital trust.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 March 1994]: A thorough assessment of the finances of the Royal Scottish national NHS trust involving financial consultants was made during the public consultation period on the hospital's trust application. Trust status would not have been granted if the hospital had been considered not to be financially viable. The trust is required to make monthly financial monitoring returns to the management executive and these show that the trust is on course to meet its year end financial targets for the first year of its operation. The trust must also produce an annual report including accounts in respect of its first year of operation by September 1994. This is a public document which will be obtainable from the trust.

In order to inform my noble and learned Friend's decision on the merger application, a thorough assessment of the finances of the Royal Scottish national hospital and Forth Valley Healthcare will be conducted by independent financial consultants in conjunction with the management executive. There are no reasons for any further investigation or independent inquiry.

Trade Descriptions

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prosecutions there have been in the past 10 years under section 14 of the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 for knowingly or recklessly making a false statement about the provision of business; and what was the penalty in each case of guilt being established.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The information requested is not separately identifiable within the Scottish Home Office and Health Department's classification of crimes and offences.

Hospital Staff

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the numbers of nurses, doctors, administrative staff, senior managers and domestic staff employed in each hospital (a) at the nearest available date and (b) three years ago.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is not collected as part of the workforce data set submitted centrally by the NHS in Scotland. Limited statistics are available in section 2A of "Scottish Health Service Costs" for the years 1991-92 and 1992-93, copies of which are held in the House of Commons Library. Data for earlier years are not published in SHSC in the exact form required.

Coastal Quarries

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will publish the national planning guidelines on coastal quarries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 29 March 1994]: My right hon. Friend intends to publish a national planning policy guideline on land for mineral working as soon as possible. This will include guidance on coastal quarries.

Patients Charter

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to extend patients charter maximum waiting times guarantees to include the waiting time for the first out-patient appointment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 29 March 1994]: Maximum waiting times guarantees covering the time from GP referral to first out-patient appointment were introduced in Scotland in April 1993.

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what steps the Greater Glasgow health board took to satisfy itself that Executive Healthcare was not dependent on financial support from related companies before allocating contracts to the company;

(2) if he will investigate the time taken for Greater Glasgow health board's evaluation of tenders for contracts at Glasgow royal infirmary and Glasgow royal maternity hospitals;

(3) what steps the Greater Glasgow health board has taken to satisfy itself about the past history of Executive Healthcare and its parent company or any associated companies.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 29 March 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the replies which I gave her on 29 March, Official Report, column 715.

Executive Health Care

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will carry out a study of the pay and conditions of the staff employed on contracts currently held by Executive Healthcare at Carstairs in comparison with their previous employment.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 29 March 1994]: No. Pay and conditions of service are matters entirely between Executive Healthcare and its employees.

Family Mediation and Conciliation Services

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to give financial support to family mediation and conciliation services in the next financial year; and if he will make a statement on his office's attitude to such services.

Mr. Stewart: Family Mediation Scotland will receive a grant of over £56,000 in 1994-95 as part of a three-year award under section 10 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968. In addition, four local services—Borders, Central, Tayside and Western Isles—will receive grant in 1994-95 as part of three-year awards. The precise amounts are still being worked out with the organisations concerned.

We have received letters of support for the mediation services from throughout Scotland and the award of grants is an indication of how we value their worthwhile work of mediation.

Child Care Law

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce legislation relating to child care law and policy in the present parliamentary session.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend has no plans to promote legislation this Session beyond that already indicated in the Queen's Speech.

Adoption

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what future arrangements he plans for adoption agencies and prospective adopters; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what specific proposals he has to ensure that adoption services are part of the full range of child care services which will require to be provided by each of the new local authorities;

(3) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the arrangements for adoption following local government re-organisation; what co-ordination there will be; who will provide funding; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what arrangements he intends making to ensure that children have the opportunity of adoption in each of the new local authority areas.

Mr. Stewart: Adoption is, and will continue to be, an important part of the range of services available for the care of children. Adoption law has been subject to extensive review and consultation in Scotland over the last few years and we propose to publish a policy statement shortly.

Reorganisation of local government will clearly involve some restructuring of services and every care will be taken to ensure that services available now will be maintained, including those provided by adoption agencies. The strategic child care plans which are to be developed from the proposals in the White Paper "Scotland's Children" are of direct relevance in this context. Scottish Office officials have had preliminary discussions about reorganisation with the British Agencies for Adoption and Fostering which are grant aided by the Government and which have an important national role to play in the development of adoption services.

Record Office

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the targets he expects the Scottish Record Office to achieve in 1994-95.

Mr. Lang: I have set the Scottish Record Office the following key targets for 1994-95:

to reduce the unit cost of preserving and making available the records of Scotland by 7 per cent. (omitting the start up costs of the new repository building);

to increase the number of catalogue entries available for public scrutiny on the electronic system from 116,000 in 1993-94 to 119,000;

to maintain the standards of reader services;

material in some building produced for readers in 30 minutes or less in 90 per cent. of cases;

90 per cent. of photocopying for legal customers produced in 24 hours;

95 per cent. of correspondence dealt with in 10 days;

while absorbing an expected 2 per cent. increase in demand; and to complete and occupy the new repository building within budget by 31 March 1995.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, how many Forestry Commission woods have been sold off since 1981; and in how many of those sold all prior public access have been preserved.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 March 1994]: Between July 1981 and 31 December 1993 the Forestry Commission sold over 2,000 individual areas of forestry land.

Access along public rights of way is not, of course, affected by a change of ownership and so any rights of way through these woodlands are still freely available. In addition, the commission offers to make access agreements with local authorities before woodlands are sold; these agreements ensure that full public access is maintained.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his latest estimates of the transition cost of local government reform.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 23 March 1994]: The transitional cost of reorganisation of local government is estimated at between £120 million and £194 million for a 30-council structure.

Purchasing Health Boards

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each purchasing health board in Scotland, the figures for revenue funding in 1992-93, 1993-94 and 1994-95, and the estimated figures for 1995-96 and 1996-97; and if he will identify the changes for each health board's revenue budget resulting from the replacement of the resource allocation working party system of determining funding allocation.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 23 March 1994]: Revenue funding is as follows:

Health Board	1992-93 £ million	1993-94 £ million	1994-95 £ million
Argyll and Clyde	220,019	231,224	242,301
Ayrshire and Arran	172,159	183,530	193,226
Borders	54,717	58,374	62,855
Dumfries and Galloway	78,616	81,524	86,965
Fife	158,314	171,020	178,766
Forth Valley	127,242	138,154	142,756
Grampian	254,470	271,938	277,805
Greater Glasgow	562,296	586,662	577,370
Highland	108,666	112,182	120,336
Lanarkshire	239,761	258,272	262,876
Lothian	405,413	405,131	418,193
Orkney	11,209	12,525	12,731
Shetland	12,898	14,494	14,789
Tayside	241,455	242,979	243,375
Western Isles	20,929	23,012	25,525

(Note:

1. The allocations for 1993-94 and 1994-95 are exclusive of the provision for AIDS, artifical limbs and appliance centres and breast cancer screening services which are now funded as national services.
2. The 1994-95 allocation excludes funding for doctors in training, which is now funded through the Scottish Council for Post-graduate Medical and Dental Education, and includes funding for ambulance services which were previously funded through the Common Services Agency.
3. Initial allocations for 1994-95 are shown. Further allocations will be distributed to Health Boards later in the year for a number of specific services.)

Estimated figures for 1995-96 and 1996-97 are not available.

Details of allocations based on the resource allocation working party system are not available. It is not therefore possible to identify the changes to Health Board Revenue budgets resulting from the replacement of the system of determining funding allocation.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Policing Structures

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will issue his consultation document on policing structures.

Sir John Wheeler: I am today issuing a paper entitled "Policing in the Community" which examines policing structures in the light of the considerable changes which have occurred in the Province since the present system was established a quarter of a century ago.

The existing structures have stood under the most difficult circumstances, but it is now time to examine the best means of further improving the effectiveness of the police service, while ensuring that it is properly accountable to the whole community. The paper proposes a strengthened framework for policing in Northern Ireland, by clarifying responsibilities and lines of accountability between the Secretary of State, the Police Authority and the Chief Constable. I believe that these changes will secure substantial improvements in the effectiveness and responsiveness of the arrangements for policing in Northern Ireland.

I have invited comments on the paper by 31 May 1994.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Sir John Wheeler: At 1 January 1993, there were 12,989 female staff in Northern Ireland civil service, which is 43 per cent. of the service. There were 1,282 staff—4·3 per cent. of the service—who self-reported a disability and, of these, 463—1·5 per cent. of the service—were, or had been, registered as disabled. The Northern Ireland civil service does not monitor the ethnic origin of its staff.

The number and percentage of female staff and staff with disabilities in each grade—1 to 7—was:

Grade	Number of Females	Per cent. Females	Number who self-reported a disability (SED)	Per cent. SRD	Number registered as disabled (RD)	Per cent. RD
1	—	—	—	—	—	—
2	—	—	—	—	—	—
3	1	2·5	1	2·5	1	2·5
4	—	—	—	—	—	—
5	13	7·5	8	4·0	—	—
6	61	17·3	11	3·1	3	0·9
7	100	11·4	20	2·3	3	0·3

In addition, 77 civil registered disabled people are currently working in the Northern Ireland civil service under the sheltered placement scheme.

At 1 March 1994 there were 108 female staff in the Northern Ireland Office, HCS, which represents 52 per cent. of the Department. The number in grades 1 to 7 was as follows:

Percentage of Women in Grades 1 to 7

Grade	Number	Percentage
5	0	—
7	5	20

Some 16 per cent. of the Department are from the ethnic minorities, London only, and none of the staff are registered disabled.

Institute of Irish Studies

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the hon. Members who have written to him asking for the funding of a chair at the institute of Irish Studies at the University of Liverpool; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have received only one such letter on this subject, from the hon. Gentleman himself. I hope to be in a position to reply to that letter very shortly.

Fisheries Policy

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last discussed fisheries policy with (a) the Republic of Ireland and (b) the Scottish Office; and if he will make a statement about co-operation on fisheries policy with both the Republic and Scotland.

Mr. Ancram: The last occasion on which fisheries policy was discussed with the Republic of Ireland by Northern Ireland Office Ministers was at the Anglo-Irish conference held in Dublin on 28 January 1994 when inland fisheries was the economic and social item on the agenda. United Kingdom sea fisheries policy is co-ordinated by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the last occasion when all EC Fisheries Ministers met was at the 20 to 21 December Fisheries Council when the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food led the United Kingdom delegation on behalf of the whole of the United Kingdom including Northern Ireland. The next meeting of the Council will be on 12 April. Officials of the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland are in constant dialogue with their colleagues in the other United Kingdom Fisheries Departments including the Scottish Office and as necessary with the Department of the Marine in Dublin. My noble Friend, Baroness Denton, has as recently as 23 March written to United Kingdom colleagues about aspects of fishery policy as they affect the Northern Ireland industry.

University Students

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Northern Ireland students are receiving university education in (a) Scotland and (b) the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Ancram: In 1992-93, the latest year for which information is available, the numbers of Northern Ireland students receiving university education were 2,401 in Scotland and 761 in the Republic of Ireland.

Water and Sewerage

Mr. Wolfson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has for attracting private sector finance into the water and sewerage capital works programme in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: The purpose of the Government's private finance initiative is to encourage the involvement of the private sector in the provision of high quality, good value public services. As such it offers real benefits to the public by promoting efficiency and improving services by harnessing the private sector's expertise. As part of the initiative, the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland has appointed Price Waterhouse to carry out a study into the scope for attracting private sector finance to the Department's water and sewerage construction and improvement programme. The study, which is expected to take three months to complete, will begin in early April 1994. The consultants have been asked to advise on the most appropriate mechanisms for securing and utilising private finance, to identify schemes where private finance could play a part and to identify the detailed requirements for taking forward any particular projects.

Mr. Thomas Francis Doheny

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the basis of the prosecution against Mr. Thomas Francis Doheny in March 1993; on what basis his home was raided by police officers acting on a warrant granted to the Royal Ulster Constabulary; what was the source of authorisation for the issue of warrants against him (a) in Ulster and (b) in the United Kingdom; and who gave backing for the warrant for execution in the United Kingdom.

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 29 March 1994]: A warrant was sought and issued for Mr. Doheny's arrest based on a complaint about the theft of a vehicle. This warrant was duly executed in England by virtue of section 38 of the Criminal Law Act 1977.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the investigation into the case of Mr. Thomas Francis Doheny referred to in the letter of 9 March from the Northern Ireland Office to Mr. M. O'Brien of the Committee on the Administration of Justice to be completed; if the report of the investigation of the case will be made available on publication; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 29 March 1994]: The investigation of Mr. Doheny's case has been completed and a file is currently with the Director of Public Prosecutions. Reports of such investigations are not published.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his customary practice for Northern Ireland in suspending the issue of warrants for imprisonment upon convicted persons for a number of hours following such convictions; what is the purpose of such delays in issue; what is the frequency of instances where the issue of warrants upon convicted persons is delayed; and if he will make a statement on the operation of those principles in the case of Mr. Thomas Francis Doheny, convicted in the petty sessions district of Omagh on 12 March 1993.

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 29 March 1994]: The decision to delay the issue of a warrant in any particular case is a matter within the discretion of the resident magistrate and it would not therefore be appropriate for me to comment. The frequency of instances where such delays are applied is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Lord Chancellor to answer. However, I understand that the information is not available in the form requested and to extract it would incur disproportionate cost.

Terrorism

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide a table showing the number of cases dealt with by (a) magistrates courts (b) trial by jury and (c) judges sitting alone under the provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism Acts in each year since 1983; and how many and what percentage in each category were recorded as (i) guilty pleas, (ii) convictions after not guilty plea and (iii) acquittal.

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 29 March 1994]: The following tables provide, for each available year, information on the number of defendants dealt with (a) by magistrates' courts, and (b) by the Crown court. Information is provided on the numbers and percentages of guilty pleas recorded, convictions following not guilty pleas and acquittals. The 1993 figures are not yet available for publication.

Crown court figures have been divided into scheduled and non-scheduled business according to schedule 1 to the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1991.

Subject to the approval of the Director of Public Prosecutions, some scheduled offences can be tried at magistrates' courts. These tend to be of a less serious nature and are included within the figures for all offences dealt with at magistrates' courts. They could be identified separately only at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Public Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment;

(2) what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons.

Mr. Howard: Where appointments are made to posts for which security clearance is necessary, the normal procedures set out in the then Prime Minister's statement of 24 July 1990 will apply. As the Prime Minister announced on 23 March, these procedures are currently under review.

Chairmen and deputy chairmen of public boards and other full-time members of boards are expected to show a degree of detachment from political activities. Rules for the guidance of members of public boards are listed in annex 7A of the "Guide on Public Appointments Procedures", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Howard: Details of principal appointments for which I have overall responsibility are as follows:

Chairman of Alcohol Education and Research Council
- (a) Mr. Charles Wardle MP
- (b) Expenses only
- (c) 3 years, extendable to 6 years
- (d) Vacant

Chairman of panel of advisers on deportations made at my personal direction under section 3(5)(b) of the Immigration Act 1971.
- (a) Mr. Charles Wardle MP
- (b) Expenses only
- (c) 3 years
- (d) Lord Lloyd of Berwick

Chairman of Criminal Justice Consultative Council
- (a) Mr. David Maclean MP
- (b) No remuneration
- (c) 3 years
- (d) Lord Justice Rose

Information about other appointments, including chairmen of boards of visitors and local review committees, could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Howard: As at 1 September 1993, of 1,875 appointments to Home Office non-departmental public bodies where the ethnic origin of the appointee was known, 4·2 per cent. of appointees were Asian and 3·6 were black. An undertaking was given when the information was collected that individuals would not be identified.

South Yorkshire Police

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were available in (a) the South Yorkshire police authority area and (b) by each division for beat duties in 1993; what are the projected figures for the current year; and what are the comparable figures for those allocated to desk duties.

Mr. Charles Wardle: At the end of 1993, 1,694 officers were deployed to beat duties in the South Yorkshire police area as a whole. Information is not held centrally on deployments at divisional level, or on projected deployments. Data held on other police activities do not distinguish the proportion allocated to desk duties.

Schizophrenia

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to ensure that severely disturbed victims of schizophrenia in need of treatment are not kept in police cells in lieu of psychiatric care.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The codes of practice issued under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 require police custody officers immediately to call the police surgeon to examine a person in their custody who appears to be suffering from a mental disorder. Persons who are detained under section 136 of the Mental Health Act 1983 for their own protection or for that of others should be assessed as soon as possible by a psychiatrist and an approved social worker to ensure that they receive any necessary care and treatment. Under section 136 the police are empowered to remove persons to a place of safety, which the Government recommend should be a hospital rather than a police station, with a view to providing appropriate facilities for the care of the mentally disordered.

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will increase the funding for the course on mental illness run for police officers by the National Schizophrenic Fellowship; and what plans he has for improving the training in mental illness available to police officers generally.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I understand that the Association of Chief Police Officers is currently in touch with the National Schizophrenic Fellowship and is looking at ways of funding a national training video. The Home Office intends to issue further guidance shortly to those working in the criminal justice system generally about dealing with cases involving mentally disordered persons. In particular, chief officers of police will be asked to examine existing force policy and practice, including current training provision.

Blakenhurst Prison

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners rioted at Blakenhurst prison, Birmingham, on or around 24 February: why it was necessary to call in the Prison Officers Association to rescue the situation; and how many other riots or disturbances have occurred at privately run prisons.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Michael Meacher, dated 30 March 1994:

HM PRISON BLAKENHURST

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the incident at Blakenhurst prison on 24 February.

A total of 111 prisoners was in the particular houseblock where the incident occurred, but not all were actively involved in the subsequent events.

No member of the Prison Officers Association was called or required to attend the incident, other than any Blakenhurst staff who may be members of the Association. Sixty-one prisoners were transferred temporarily to other prisons establishments. This is normal practice in such an event and Blakenhurst, as an integral part of the Prison Service, has received prisoners from other establishments when they have experienced difficulties.

You also requested information on disturbances at the contracted out prisons. Details of incidents, including acts of concerted indiscipline, at Wolds between the opening of the prison and 29 June 1993 have already been provided to Parliament (Official Report: 26 July 1993, column WA 75-79). Since that time there have been three instances of concerted indiscipline, making a total of 28 incidents in all. There have been a total of seven acts of concerted indiscipline at Blakenhurst since its opening.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Prison Service is to withhold any part of the payment to United Kingdom Detention Services Ltd. in respect of the contract to manage Blakenhurst prison; how much money is to be withheld; and for what reason.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 30 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Blakenhurst prison.

It is intended to take an appropriate financial remedy under the terms of the contract in relation to the incident on 24 February. The amount has not yet been finally settled.

Brian Charrington

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what part will be played by his Department in the investigation by Thames Valley police into the conduct of the Brian Charrington case by Cleveland police force.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None.

Vehicles (North Yorkshire Police)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many vehicles leased to the north Yorkshire police are currently mothballed; why these vehicles are not being used to police the county; from whom the vehicles are leased; how much it has cost to replace the mothballed vehicles with other vehicles; how much it would have cost under the terms of the leasing agreement to keep on using the leased vehicles; and whether he intends to issue advice to chief constables about the terms for leasing vehicles.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The procurement and use of police vehicles is a matter for chief officers of police and their police authorities.

Guidance notes providing advice on vehicle fleet management, including leasing arrangements, have been issued by the Treasury's central unit on procurement. Copies of the relevant notes—Nos. 24a to 24e and 37—are available in the Library.

Youths (Reoffending)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what are the reoffending rates for the various different forms of treatment of convicted youths up to the age of 18 years; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what are the reoffending rates for youths sentenced to periods of detention in (a) prisons and (b) other forms of detention; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The available information is for reconvictions within two and four years of commencement of probation or community service orders and within two and four years of discharge from Prison Service establishments. Reconviction statistics relate to "standard list" offences as defined in appendix 4 of "Criminal Statistics England and Wales, 1992", Cm 2410. Estimates of reconviction rates are shown in the table for samples of males aged 17 or under when they commenced supervision under the probation service in 1987 and for a sample of males discharged from Prison Service establishments in 1987 aged 17 or under on sentence.

Asylum Seekers (Sudan)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reconsider his decision to return unsuccessful asylum seekers to Sudan; and what account he has taken of the human rights situation in that country.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Circumstances in both northern and southern Sudan, including the human rights situation, are kept under continual review, but we see no reason at present to change our practice on returning unsuccessful asylum seekers to Sudan.

Young Offenders (Employment)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of young offenders finds gainful employment upon release from (a) prison and (b) other custodial sentences.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: This information is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Police Officers (Assaults)

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many assaults upon police officers are recorded in each of the years 1980, 1985, 1990 and 1993 in total and by constabulary using (a) automatic weapons, (b) knives or (c) other weapons.

Mr. Maclean: The information is not collected centrally.

Civilian Hours

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours per week are worked by civilians in functions which were previously police jobs (a) in total and (b) per person.

Mr. Charles Wardle: These figures are not kept centrally and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

Transferred Police Functions

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what functions formerly performed by the police service have been transferred to (a) traffic wardens and (b) civilians since 1980.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The powers of traffic wardens to carry out certain police functions in relation to traffic offences are set out in the Functions of Traffic Wardens Order 1970. This was amended on 1 June 1993 to enable wardens to authorise the clamping or removal of illegally parked vehicles and to empower them to deal with endorsable parking offences.

No police functions have been formally transferred to civilian staff. It is the responsibility of chief officers to allocate staff to suitable posts.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what jobs are currently performed by civilians which previously were police functions.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The specific information sought is not held centrally. However, a number of areas have been identified in which civilian staff could provide support services to police officers and these are listed. It is, of course, for chief officers to decide how best to organise their staff.

Slopping-out

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each prison in England where slopping-out is still in practice; and if he will state his plans and estimated date for ending slopping-out for each prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 30 March 1994:

ACCESS TO SANITATION

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the Prison Service's programme to end slopping-out.

Only 27 of 131 establishments are without 100 per cent. access to sanitation throughout 24 hours but, as you will note from the following table, in many cases this involves small numbers of cells. The dates in the table are the dates on which we currently plan to take the last of these cells at each establishment out of use for the installation of sanitation, at which point slopping-out will end at those establishments. Population changes and other operational factors may require adjustments to some of those dates, which are kept under regular review.

The Prison Service continues to give very high priority to completing the sanitation programme as planned. Ninety per cent. of prisoners now have 24 hour access to sanitation and this should increase to over 95 per cent. by December 1994. We aim to achieve 100 per cent. access nationally by February 1996.

Competitive Bids

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the total money spent, (b) the percentage of that money allocated according to decisions made by Ministers on competitive bids and (c) the percentage of that money allocated according to some statistical measure of need in the last available operational year of (i) safer cities, (ii) section 11 grants, (iii) ethnic minority business initiative and (iv) ethnic minority grant.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Safer Cities estimated out-turn for 1993-94 is £6 million. I am unable to give precise figures until the tendering process for the second phase of safer cities projects is complete. All safer cities projects have been chosen having regard to statistical data on crime rates.

Section 11, Ethnic Minority Business Initiative, Ethnic Minority Grant: In the 1992-93 financial year, £129 million was spent under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966, £4 million under ethnic minority grant and £0·4 million under the ethnic minority business initiative. In all instances, grant is allocated to projects approved for funding strictly on the basis of the assessment of particular need identified in an application, and of the objectives and targets set out for addressing that need.

Hospital Visits

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hospital visits have been allowed to prisoners from (a) Durham, (b) Frankland and (c) Low Newton Prisons, in each year since 1979.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Jerry Steinberg, dated 30 March 1994:

I have been asked to reply to your Question seeking information about hospital visits by prisoners from Durham, Frankland and Low Newton since 1979.

Central statistical information about health care services is available only from 1985. The available information is as follows:

Year	Durham Male	Durham Female	Frankland	Low Newton Male	Low Newton Female
[1]1985	252	22	114	98	18
[2]1985	40	5	12	5	5

Firefighters

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many firefighters have been (a) injured and (b) killed in London in the line of duty in each year since 1980.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information is given in the following table.

Number of London fire brigade firefighters seriously injured[1] or killed in the line of duty, 1980-92

	Fatalities	Serious injuries
1980	1	154
1981	2	147
1982	—	141
1983	1	184
1984	1	86
1985	—	164
1986	—	134
1987	1	152
1988	—	151
1989	—	133
1990	—	133
1991	2	139
1992	1	132

[1] Serious injuries are defined as those which result in absence of duty for at least one month.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Howard: From the information available, no Proton cars have been purchased by the Home Office in any of the last 10 years.

Paedophile Records

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the paedophile records that were recently sent to the national criminal intelligence service from the Metropolitan police are now still with the national criminal intelligence service.

Mr. Charles Wardle: A card index system, containing in excess of 3,000 names, was transferred to the national criminal intelligence service by the Metropolitan police in April 1992. These records are in the process of being entered onto a computer database. So far, 1,466 computer records, some containing many names, have been created and 150 names have been weeded.

Traffic Videos

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 31, (1) if he will make it his policy to issue guidelines to police forces regarding the sale of road traffic video footage to private companies;

(2) when the traffic committee of the Association of Chief Police Officers is to consider the sale of road traffic videos to private companies;

(3) if he will discuss with the traffic committee of the Association of Chief Police Officers the use and disposal of road traffic video footage;

(4) what representations he has had from chief police officers regarding the use of this road traffic video footage;

(5) how the moneys received from the disposal of road traffic video footage can be utilised;

(6) by what criteria he decided that the release of police traffic videos is an operational matter for chief police officers.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Guidance is issued to chief officers of police on the disclosure of information in respect of criminal and civil proceedings. However, chief officers retain an absolute discretion, subject to the direction of a court, to disclose or provide other information from police records. The provision of road traffic video footage is similarly a matter for chief officers. I understand that none of the police forces concerned received money for supplying footage. My right hon. and learned Friend does not intend to issue guidelines on the matter nor does he plan to discuss it with the traffic committee of the Association of Chief Police Officers. That committee will be considering the issue at its next meeting on 11 May. I have not received any representations from chief officers about the matter.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons who have applied for asylum in the United Kingdom are currently held in detention; what was the figure a year ago; and if he will list those establishments which are used regularly for such detention.

Mr. Charles Wardle: On 21 March 645 people who had applied for asylum at some stage were held in detention. Information on the number of asylum seekers held in detention a year ago is not available.

The establishments which regularly hold the greatest numbers of immigration detainees are as follows:

Immigration Service Accommodation
- Campsfield House
- Harmondsworth
- The Beehive, Gatwick Airport
- Queen's Building, Heathrow
- Manchester
- Stansted

Prison Service Accommodation
- Birmingham
- Blakenhurst
- Canterbury
- Dover
- Haslar[1]
- High Down
- Holloway
- Pentonville

[1] Haslar Holding Centre is primarily an Immigration Detention Centre, although managed by the Prison Service.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons, held in detention, who have applied for asylum in the United Kingdom are currently refusing to eat; what arrangements are made for such people to be seen by a doctor or to have access to standard hospital facilities; how many detainees held at Campsfield house are currently refusing to eat; how many detainees have been dispersed from Campsfield house to other establishments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: On 28 March, 69 detainees were refusing food, 22 of whom were located at Campsfield house.

Between 18 February and 28 March 87 detainees left Campsfield house. Of these, 27 were released on temporary admission or bail, 22 were sent to other establishments and the remaining 38 were removed from the United Kingdom.

Detainees in immigration detention centres have access on a daily basis to a resident or visiting doctor. The Prison Service is responsible for providing similar access to a doctor for those Immigration Act detainees accommodated at prison establishments. Depending on the circumstances of the case, a detainee who requires medical attention beyond that which can be provided in an immigration detention centre may be transferred to a prison hospital or outside hospital.

Illegal Drugs

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the quantities and estimated value of drugs seized by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and the police for the last three years for which figures are available; and what estimate he made for the quantity and value of drugs illegally used for those years.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested with regard to the quantity of controlled drugs seized by Her Majesty's Customs and the police respectively is contained in tables S1.2 to 1.7 of the supplementary tables to the Home Office Statistical Bulletins "Statistics of drugs seizures and offenders dealt with, United Kingdom" (1990-92), copies of which are in the Library.

In addition, Her Majesty's Customs informed us that the following quantities of controlled drugs were seized by them during 1993:

	Amounts in kilogrammes
Heroin	561
Cocaine	748
Amphetamines	1,096
Cannabis (all forms)	53,137

Data for 1993 for police forces will be published later in the year. The combined estimated value of police and Customs drugs seizures is not availble. Since drug misuse is by its nature a clandestine activity, there is no information on the estimated quantity and value of drugs actually used.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Moss Side, Manchester in respect of the control of illegal drugs; and what new initiatives will emerge as a result of his visit to Moss Side, Manchester.

Mr. Howard: I have written to the hon. Member today.

Prisoners (Costs)

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost of keeping a prisoner in (a) a privately run prison and (b) a state prison; and if he will give a detailed breakdown of these costs.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Andrew Welsh, dated 30 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the costs of keeping a prisoner in (a) a private run prison and (b) a state prison.

In 1992-93 the net operating costs per prisoner place per week were £333 in Wolds remand prison and £466 in the directly managed prison system, which included a range of different types of establishment.

The costs in directly managed establishments break down as follows:

Prisoner control	191
Prisoner care	70
Prisoner occupation	50
Escorts of prisoners	16
Building services	44
Administration costs	95
	466

It is not possible to give a detailed breakdown of the costs for Wolds: the contractors are paid an agreed sum for a total service.

Fuel Subsidies

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what subsidies privately run prisons receive towards the cost of electricity or gas.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Andrew Welsh, dated 30 March 1994:

CONTRACTED OUT PRISONS: UTILITY COSTS

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about any subsidies which privately run prisons receive towards the cost of electricity or gas.

No such subsidies are paid. The contractor who manages Blakenhurst prison pays these costs under the operating contract. This will also be the case at Doncaster when it opens in June. The position at Wolds prison is temporarily a little different, however, in that there the costs of gas and electricity are currently met directly by the Prison Service. This reflects the fact that Wolds' unique design made it impossible at the outset to set benchmark levels for consumption, and therefore cost, in the contract. They have, however, been included in the published total operating costs of the prison and in the published comparative cost analyses contained in the Prison Service Annual Report. Now that energy consumption levels are known, arrangements are in hand to amend the contract so that these costs become the contractor's responsibility.

The efficient use by contractors of public utilities is monitored by the Prison Service controllers who are assisted by the Prison Service Energy Management Group.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 23 March, Official Report, column 223, if he will list the number of contracts and their cost with management consultants in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Charles Wardle [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The Home Office let 70 contracts to management consultants during 1993-94. The total cost was £3,489,463.

ENVIRONMENT

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Baldry: In November 1992, the Department commissioned Succession Planning Associates, a firm of executive search consultants, to identify women and ethnic minority candidates suitable for appointment to DOE-sponsored public bodies and now maintains a list of the names they obtained. The consultants approached a wide range of organisations and individuals in order to draw up their list. In addition, the Departtment usually asks the public appointments unit of the Cabinet Office for information on possible candidates. The Department welcomes inquiries from people interested in serving on the boards of its non-departmental public bodies.

Individuals from all walks of life may approach the Department and appointments are made on the basis of aptitude and merit. The Department has produced a form for self-nomination which is issued on request.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Baldry: The Department follows the advice on consultation set out in the Cabinet Office's "Guide on Public Appointments Procedures", a copy of which is held in the House of Commons Library. In addition to consulting in accordance with the guide, the need for any wider consultation is borne in mind depending on the individual circumstances of the particular appointments under consideration.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Baldry: A list of the appointments to nationalised industries and non-departmental public bodies, and their salaries, is published annually in "Public Bodies", a copy of which is held in the House of Commons Library. Other appointments by the Secretary of State, and their salaries, were listed in my answer of 1 March to the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Dr. Wright). No central record is maintained of names of the persons currently appointed, who number over 900, or the terms of their appointments.

All appointments are the responsibility of the Secretary of State, other than those identified as exceptions in "Public Bodies" and my answer of 1 March to the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood, Official Report, columns 638-39.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment;

(2) what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left wing organisations, (b) extreme right wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons.

Mr. Baldry: The Department has no procedures for obtaining or storing information about political views. Nomination forms provided by the Department and the public appointments unit of the Cabinet Office do not contain questions about candidates' political affiliations. The aim of the appointment system is to obtain candidates who, on the basis of merit and experience, are considered the most suitable for the posts in question. Information to assist the Department is obtained from the nomination form, followed by shortlisting and interview, the taking-up of references and advice from other Government Departments.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make available in a form useful to local authorities the programme used for calculating standard spending assessments.

Mr. Baldry: Standard spending assessments are calculated in accordance with the methodology set out in the local government finance report. Local authorities already receive from my Department all the information they need to calculate their own standard spending assessments. My Department will discuss with the local authority associations whether other ways of presenting this material would be useful.

European Environment Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he plans to put to the European Environment Council in Brussels on 24 to 25 March.

Mr. Gummer: I represented the United Kingdom at the Environment Council on 24 and 25 March. My hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside also attended on 24 March.

The Council unanimously agreed, on the basis of a United Kingdom text, a common position to ban the export of hazardous waste to non-OECD countries by 31 December 1997.

In a separate discussion of the draft directive on landfill waste the Council concentrated on the scope of the directive and the question of exemptions. I pressed our views on the environmental advantages of controlled disposal of certain difficult and non-hazardous waste together—"co-disposal"—but overall little progress was made and the Council referred the topic back to the Committee of Permanent Representatives—COREPER—for further work to prepare for the June Council.

In discussion of an amendment to the birds directive I secured assurances that the proposal would not reduce the level of protection for birds and that scientific and conservation criteria would be used in implementing it. The proposal will now be put to the European Parliament.

An amendment to the directive concerning noise from earth moving machinery was adopted after a vote in which the United Kingdom abstained. A unanimous decision was reached on the four year programme—1994-1997—on official statistics of the environment. The Council also agreed a common position on a minor amendment to the large combustion plants directive—88/609/EEC.

The Council agreed conclusions on climate change which urged all member states to complete by 1 May 1994 the national programmes aimed at limiting CO_2 emissions that they are required to prepare under the climate change convention and the Community's own monitoring mechanism. We published the United Kingdom programme on 25 January. The Council also decided to establish a working group to examine various aspects of Community approaches to the use of carbon and energy taxation to limit CO_2 emissions.

There was a useful orientation debate on the proposed directive on integrated pollution prevention and control. I welcomed the aims of the directive and was supported in this by most other member states. The draft directive will now be considered further in the environment working group.

The Council also adopted a resolution on integrated coastal zone management, and in a short discussion of the Commission White Paper, "Growth Competitiveness and Employment", the Commissioner outlined ideas for taking things forward in the coming months.

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Gummer: The figures requested are (a) 0 per cent. and (b) 2·8 per cent. I am unable to list the individuals' names as the Department's survey of the ethnic origins of appointees is voluntary and on the understanding that the information collected will be used for statistical purposes only.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what considerations underpinned the omission from paragraphs 3.4.14 to 3.4.18, at page 54 of the United Kingdom report to the Commission on Sustainable Development 1994, in management of radioactive waste of Her Majesty's Government's policy to return to countries of origin reprocessing radioactive waste arising from the reprocessing of imported spent nuclear fuel to Sellafield and Dounreay.

Mr. Atkins: It was an editorial decision. As I made clear in the reply which I gave to the right hon. Member on 15 March, Official Report, column 579, the Government intend that British Nuclear Fuels plc should exercise its options for the return of reprocessing waste to the country of origin.

Pollution (Appeals)

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals under section 10 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 are awaiting determination and what were the dates on which each of those appeals was lodged.

Mr. Atkins: A total of 60 appeals under section 10 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 are currently before my right hon. Friend for determination. The dates on which the appeals were lodged are as follows:

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what effect he expects the additional grounds for appeal and the need to establish precedents to have on the incidence of waste licensing appeals following the introduction of the new waste management licensing system on 1 May;

(2) what assessment he has made of the time taken to deal with appeals under section 10 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974;

(3) how many staff are employed in his Department on appeals made under section 10 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974; and what proportion of their time was spent thereon in the periods (a) 1 March 1993 to 31 August 1993 and (b) 1 September 1993 to 28 February 1994;

(4) what steps he is taking to expedite determination of (a) current appeals made under section 10 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 and (b) future appeals made under section 43 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 from 1 May.

Mr. Atkins: The administration or determination of appeals forms part of the duties of four members of staff within the Department's waste management division. Members of staff in the Department's planning inspectorate—PINS—are also employed on appeals where they take the form of a hearing. The proportion of staff time spent on the administration or determination of appeals, and the administration and conduct of hearings, depends on a number of factors and varies from day to day. The time taken to determine appeals also depends on factors such as the time taken by the parties to provide written representations or their availability to attend a hearing. It is the Department's aim to deal with all appeals expeditiously and wherever possible to improve on the time taken to determine them.

Responsibility for the administration of appeals which are to be determined on the basis of written representations will be transferred from waste management division to PINS on 1 May 1994 when the new waste management licensing system under part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 comes into force. PINS' duties will include responsibility for appeals made under section 43 of the 1990 Act and, where appropriate, appeals under section 10 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974.

Section 43 of the 1990 Act will widen the grounds on which an appeal may be made against a waste regulation authority's decision. However, sections 35(8) and 74(5) require authorities to have regard to any guidance issued to them with respect to the discharge of their functions. The guidance which we intend to issue under sections 35(8) and 74(5) should ensure that proportionately fewer appeals need to be made under section 43 of the 1990 Act than has historically been the case under section 10 of the 1974 Act.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals under section 10 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 have been determined in the periods (a) 1 March to 31 August 1993 and (b) 1 September 1993 to 28 February 1994.

Mr. Atkins: Eight appeals under section 10 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 were determined in the period 1 March to 31 August 1993; and two appeals were determined in the period 1 September 1993 to 28 February 1994.

Unitary Authorities

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library all submissions and other comments made to him on the most workable formula for the discharge, through joint working, of strategic functions and planning by new or proposed unitary authorities.

Mr. Baldry: We have received a large number of representations on the general issue of joint working, including those received in response to our 1992 consultation exercise on the policy guidance to the Local Government Commission. These could not be assembled except at disproportionate cost. We have said, however, that when we lay implementation orders for each area where the Local Government Commission recommends change to the structure of local government, we will place in the Library a summary of all representations received by the Secretary of State about the recommendations. Individual representations will be made available if requested unless the writers intended their views to be treated in confidence.

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those people and organisations he has consulted as to the most workable formula for the discharge, through joint working, of strategic functions and planning by new or proposed unitary authorities.

Mr. Baldry: It is for the Local Government Commission to consider, for each area that it reviews, whether or not joint working between any proposed unitary authorities is necessary for particular functions. A list of those persons and organisations whom the Commission is required to consult on its draft recommendations is included in our procedure guidance to the Commission, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the strategic functions on which he has consulted as to their discharge, through joint working, by new or proposed unitary authorities.

Mr. Baldry: Annex B of the Department's policy guidance to the Local Government Commission sets out considerations relevant to structural change for a range of local government functions. That guidance, which was issued after an extensive consultation process, draws attention to options for joint working, particularly in relation to strategic planning. A copy of the guidance is in the Library.

Council Tax

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals against council tax banding and valuation are currently outstanding (a) in total and (b) in each valuation district.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson), on 23 March, Official Report, column 276.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall, in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Gummer: The following information covers non-industrial staff in my Department—excluding PSAS—as at 1 March 1994:

	Total staff	Women		[1]Ethnic minority		[1]Disabled
		Men	Number	Per cent.	Number	Per cent.	Number	Per cent.
Grade 3	34	30	4	12·0	0	0·0	0	0·0
Grade 4	7	7	0	0·0	0	0·0	0	0·0
Grade 5	140	119	21	15·0	1	0·7	1	0·7
Grade 6	322	293	29	9·0	1	0·3	0	0·0
Grade 7	788	654	134	17·0	11	1·4	7	0·9

	Total staff	Men	Women		[1]Ethnic minority		[1]Disabled
			Number	Per cent.	Number	Per cent.	Number	Per cent.
OVERALL TOTAL	6,582	3,909	2,673	41·0	501	7·6	142	2·2

[1] Figures are based on voluntary responses to staff surveys. The response rate to the ethnic origin survey is 91 per cent. Respondents to the disability survey include registered and non-registered disabled staff.

House Improvement Grants

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many mandatory house improvement grants have been made available in the areas covered by the five district councils on Merseyside during the past financial year; how many applications were received; how many homes remain in the pipeline awaiting renewal; when he expects to make an announcement concerning the targeting of house improvement grants into designated renewal areas; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Information on the number of mandatory renovation grants made available by the five Merseyside district councils during 1993-94 is provided to my Department through local authority quarterly monitoring returns. The number of returns received to date and the number of grants approved is shown in the table.

1993-94	Number of returns	Grants approved
Knowsley	2	97
Liverpool	2	361
Sefton	—	—
St. Helens	3	158
Wirral	3	143

My Department does not hold statistics of renovation grant applications made to authorities or of applications still under consideration. The Government will announce their conclusions on the future of private sector housing renewal programmes following last year's consultations in due course.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the single regeneration budget he expects is likely to support bids from local partnerships as mentioned in paragraph 5.9 of the Department's annual report.

Mr. Baldry: The first round of bidding for single regeneration budget funding will be for new initiatives starting in 1995-96. On current plans, the total budget will be worth over £1·3 billion in 1995-96 and it is expected that about £100 million will be available to support new bids. Following the recent public consultation exercise, bidding guidance will be published soon.

Urban and Housing Programmes

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was (a) the total money spent, (b) the percentage of that money allocated according to decisions made by Ministers on competitive bids and (c) the percentage of that money allocated according to some statistical measure of need in the last available operational year of (i) city challenge, (ii) urban programme, (iii) inner city task forces, (iv) city action team, (v) English partnerships, (vi) urban development corporations, (vii) the docklands light railway, (viii) estate action and (ix) housing action trusts.

Mr. Baldry: The total amount of funding provided by my Department under each of these support regimes for the financial year ending March 1994 is estimated to be:

		1993-94 estimated out-turn (£m)
(i)	City Challenge	223·2
(ii)	Urban Programme	173·0
(iii)	Inner Cities Task Forces	18·0
(iv)	City Action Teams	3·4
(v)	English Partnerships	161·9
(vi)	Urban Development Corporations (including Docklands Light Railway)	380·8
(vii)	Estate Action	356·0
(viii)	Housing Action Trusts	78·1

City challenge and the £20 million urban partnership fund—which forms about 12 per cent. of the urban programme in 1993-94—targeted resources on projects selected by competition among the local authorities in the 57 urban priority areas. Local housing authorities also compete for estate action resources. The other support regimes operate in the most deprived urban areas, run-down council housing estates, and areas of concentrated or extensive dereliction. Since resources are limited, assistance is concentrated on projects which are likely to provide the best value for money.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish his response to the Environment Committee's report on standard spending assessments.

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend has today laid before the House the Government's responses to the Environment Committee's first report on standard spending assessments. Copies of the response have been placed in the Library and the Vote Office.

The Environment Committee's recommendations will be reflected in the development work on SSAs which we will undertake in partnership with the local authority associations in 1994 and in the longer term.

Dumplington Scheme

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now refrain from participating in the appeal hearing due to be held in the Appeal Court, against the granting of planning permission for the Dumplington scheme in Greater Mancester.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 29 March 1994]: No.

Lewisham

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he or his Ministers last visited Lewisham, East; with whom they met and for what purpose; and if he intends to inform hon. Members when he visits their constituencies.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 29 March 1994]: All Ministers in the Department of the Environment customarily inform hon. Members when they are visiting their constituencies on official business. My hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Planning has not recently visited Lewisham, East on official business.

Environmental Technology and Management

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution his Department made to the Employment Training '94 exhibition on environmental technology and management held in Birmingham from 22 to 24 March.

Mr. Atkins: Both the energy efficiency office and Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution took stands at ET '94 in Birmingham to promote the benefits of energy efficiency, and to explain the work of HMIP on pollution control. One of our pollution inspectors also presented a talk.

Playgrounds, Leicestershire

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many and what percentage of playgrounds in Leicestershire comply with British Standards Institute BS 5696; and if he will publish a list of playgrounds which do not comply.

Mr. Sproat: I have been asked to reply.

This Department has policy responsibility for playground safety and issues guidelines advising local authorities and others on relevant playground standards including BS 5696 and the German DIN 7926 standard. Compliance information on individual playgrounds is not held centrally.

London Senior Regional Director

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the duties of the senior regional director for London; what support staff he will have; where he will be based; what will be the cost of this area of administration; what are the geographical boundaries of his administration; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The duties of the regional director will be those set out in my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State's, reply to the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing) on 8 February, Official Report, column 146. The regional director will be supported by some 320 staff and contributing Departments are now finalising administrative budgets for the new office. A decision on the operational base of the regional director will be made in the very near future. The regional director and his office will be responsible for the Greater London area.

Incineration

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to respond to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's report on incineration.

Mr. Atkins: The Government have welcomed the report by the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution on the incineration of waste as a clear and comprehensive analysis of the role of incineration as a waste management option. A full response by Government to the report will be published later this year.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he is making to improve the tendering process for local authority waste disposal contracts under the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Atkins: Competitive tendering for waste disposal under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 generally works well and there are no plans to change the requirements of the 1990 Act. However, my Department is working on updated guidance to local authorities which will re-emphasise the importance of taking environmental factors into account in that process, such as the benefits of the waste-to-energy option in appropriate locations. We hope to consult on draft guidance later this year.

Cash Limits

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he proposes to his Department's cash limits for 1993-94.

Mr. Gummer: I propose to make the following changes:

1. The DoE/OES (other environmental services) non-voted cash limit will be increased by £2,676,000 from £45,000,000 to £47,676,000. This increase will be matched by a corresponding reduction in the DoE/NT (new towns) non-voted cash limit. The switch reflects local authority contributions to the Commission for the New towns under road cost sharing agreements. The increase in provision on the DoE/OES cash limit will be used to provide supplementary credit approvals to local authorities to cover their capital contributions to the Commission for the New Towns.

2. The DoE/LACAP (local authority capital) non-voted cash limit will be increased by £99,577,000 from £2,457,808,000 to £2,557,385,000. The increase will be matched by a corresponding reduction in the DoE/NT cash limit. This results from the provision of additional supplementary credit approval resources to Basildon district council to facilitate the bulk transfer of rented housing stock between the Commission for the New Towns and the council. It also includes provision for Milton Keynes borough council and Wrekin district council to purchase residual rented housing stock from the commission.

3. The DoE/NT (New Towns) non-voted cash limit will be reduced by £102,253,000 from –£96,325,000 to –£198,578,000. This is the result of reductions of £2,676,000 and £99,577,000 resulting from additional receipts from local authorities financed by the cash limit increases described above.

4. The cash limit for class VII, vote 8 (revenue support grant, payments of non-domestic rates, Valuation Office services, etc., England) will be reduced by £35,000 from £28,808,113,000 to £28,808,078,000. This reduction is due to a saving on the council tax preparation grant resulting from lower than expected claims. This saving will be used to offset increased expenditure within the new control total on class VII, vote 12 (community charge grants, council tax transitional reduction grant, rate rebate grants, emergency financial assistance to local authorities, non-domestic rates outturn payments, etc., England), to meet claims for emergency assistance to local authorities. The increase within vote 12 is being met by virement from voted expenditure not included in the new control total.

All increases will be offset by reductions in other cash limited expenditure and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Birch Coppice

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 15 March, Official Report, column 578, when a decision was made not to comment on the merits of a decision or the process by which it was reached.

Mr. Baldry: This is a longstanding position to preserve the integrity of planning decisions.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) pursuant to his answer of 15 March, Official Report, column 578, what steps he has taken to ensure that parties in respect of the Birch Coppice opencast application have the opportunity to make a submission based on the case and therefore on the mineral planning guidance note on which any decision is to be based;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 15 March, Official Report, column 578, when he proposes to make a final decision on the Birch Coppice opencast application;

(3) by what date he expects the decision on Birch Coppice to be made;

(4) what procedures have to be complied with in the specific case of the Birch Coppice opencast application in north Warwickshire before a decision can be made;

(5) what arrangements he has made to seek representations from relevant parties on any further decision on opencast at Birch Coppice in Warwickshire;

(6) what sort of evidence will be sought by the public inquiry due to take place before a decision into opencast at Birch Coppice can be made;

(7) if his Department will write to all the objectors involved in the public inquiry in 1991 into the Birch Coppice opencast application to tell them that the decision may be reached on a basis other than that on which the original inquiry was conducted.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on Monday 28 March, Official Report, columns 488-89.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer on 15 March, Official Report, column 578, how many exceptions there have been to his policy of not answering questions on the merits of, or process leading to, decisions in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Baldry: None of which I am aware.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much his Department has spent on getting legal advice on the opencast decision at Birch Coppice in Warwickshire (a) from external sources and (b) from sources within his Department.

Mr. Baldry: Approximate figures to date are (a) £2,000 and (b) £1,000.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the available information on the total cost to his Department to date in dealing with all matters relating to the Birch Coppice opencast application.

Mr. Baldry: No records have been kept of this information.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek a statement from (a) North Warwickshire borough council and (b) Warwickshire county council on the amounts they spent on the Birch Coppice public inquiry on 30 July to 23 August 1991; and how much the Birch Coppice inquiry cost the applicants and his Department.

Mr. Baldry: No.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 15 March, Official Report, column 578, on which version of mineral planning guidance 3 he expects to base his decision on Birch Coppice.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 15 March, Official Report, column 578.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether it is his practice to take legal advice before announcing a decision on opencast applications; and whether his Department obtains legal advice from other Departments on opencast decisions as a matter of practice.

Mr. Baldry: Consideration is given on a case-by-case basis for the need to seek legal advice. My Department does not obtain legal advice from other Departments on opencast decisions as a matter of practice.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many lawyers are employed in his Department (a) generally and (b) dealing with opencast decisions; and how many lawyers in his Department have given legal advice on opencast decisions in each of the last three years.

Mr. Baldry: (a) 43 full time equivalents.

(b) Currently and at any one time over each of the last three years, two lawyers have been available to give legal advice on opencast decisions.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans and provision he has made to compensate persons prejudiced by his decision of 24 February on the Birch Coppice opencast inquiry.

Mr. Baldry: None.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what compensation his Department has paid out in each of the last 10 years as a result of maladministration of any sort during the planning process.

Mr. Baldry: Compensation was paid out in four of the last 10 years. This is broken down as follows: 1986, £8,804, 1987, £2,410·75, 1988, £6,710 and 1993, £1,322.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department takes to ensure citizens are informed of their rights to redress if the Department makes an error during the planning process.

Mr. Baldry: All appellants are sent a copy of "Planning Appeals—A Guide" which explains the process for High Court challenges and investigations by the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration. Interested parties who write to the Department are informed of these rights.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions has he had concerning the costs to councils, British Coal and objectors of his decision of 24 February to set aside his decision of 2 August 1993 on Birch Coppice in Warwickshire.

Mr. Baldry: None.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 15 March, Official Report, column 578, if he will set out in respect of each of the responsibilities of his Department those matters on which it is his practice not to answer parliamentary questions.

Mr. Baldry: The general practice of this and previous administrations is described on page 292 of the current edition of "Erskine May".

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 15 March, Official Report, column 578, regarding the Birch Coppice opencast decision, which mineral planning guidance note was in force on 2 August 1993.

Mr. Baldry: Mineral planning guidance note 3 (1988) as amended by the interim planning guidance for opencast coal issued on 25 March 1993.

Environmental Impact Assessment Procedures

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a list of approved or suitably qualified bodies available to carry out environmental impact assessment studies.

Mr. Baldry: The Department does not maintain a list of approved or qualified persons suitable to prepare environmental statements.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance his Department has issued on environmental impact assessment procedures to local authorities, other statutory bodies, non-governmental bodies funded by central Government practitioners and other bodies or individuals.

Mr. Baldry: The Department has issued the following guidance on environmental assessment:

—Circular 15/88 "Environmental Assessment", dated 12 July 1988

—Circular 7/94 "Environmental Assessment: Amendment of Regulations", dated 18 March 1994

—a booklet "Environmental Assessment: A Guide to the Procedures", 1989

—a free leaflet "Environmental Assessment", 1989.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors should be taken into account in environmental impact assessment studies in cases where proposed developments would have an effect on the local environment.

Mr. Baldry: Where a project which is the subject of a planning application requires environmental assessment, the Town and Country Planning (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988 provide that the environmental statement submitted by the applicant shall include a description of the likely significant effects on the environment. These include the impact on human beings, flora, fauna, soil, water, air, climate, the landscape, material assets and the cultural heritage. The statement must also describe the measures envisaged to avoid, reduce or remedy any significant adverse effects.

Basle Convention

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the implications for United Kingdom waste management policy of the decisions taken at the recent review meeting of the Basle convention.

Mr. Gummer: The major issue considered at the second meeting of the conference of the parties to the Basle convention which took place between 21 and 25 March was a proposal to ban movements of hazardous waste from OECD to non-OECD countries. The Government entered the negotiations with two objectives: the first objective, shared with environmentalists, was not to allow the export of wastes for recovery to those non-OECD countries which were unable to manage wastes in an environmentally sound manner. The second objective was to protect legitimate trade in secondary raw materials with non-OECD countries wishing to import hazardous wastes for recovery. During the negotiations the G-77 countries were unanimous in their view that a ban was the best way to protect the environment in non-OECD countries. In view of this unanimous position the Government decided, along with their EC and OECD partners, to agree to a ban. The Government welcome the decision, which was adopted by consensus.

The decision prohibits immediately all movements of hazardous waste for final disposal from OECD to non-OECD states, and prohibits from 31 December 1997 all movements of hazardous wastes for recycling or recovery from OECD to non-OECD states. Movements for recycling or recovery can continue until 31 December 1997 if a non-OECD country allows such imports and has provided information about the categories, quantities and management of acceptable waste imports to the Basle secretariat. The decision will be implemented in the United Kingdom under the Waste Shipments Regulation and will take effect when the United Kingdom becomes a party to the convention on 8 May.

The conference also decided to develop guidance to assist states on the question of what constitutes hazardous waste under the convention. The guidance will be presented to the third meeting of the conference of the parties to be held in September and October 1995. The United Kingdom intends to play an active part in this work. The Government consider that non-hazardous wastes are an important source of business both to OECD and to non-OECD states and ought not to be affected by the decision taken.

"Decision

Recalling the request of the G-77 countries at the First Meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Basel Convention in Uruguay, 30 November—4 December 1992, for the total ban on all exports of hazardous wastes from OECD countries to non-OECD countries.

"Recognising that transboundary movements of hazardous wastes from OECD to non-OECD States have a high risk of not constituting an environmentally sound management of hazardous wastes as required by the Basel Convention.

"1. Decides to prohibit immediately all transboundary movements of hazardous wastes which are destined for final disposal from OECD to non-OECD States;

"2. Decides also to phase out by 31 December 1997, and prohibit as of that date, all transboundary movements of hazardous wastes which are destined for recycling or recovery operations from OECD to non-OECD States;

"3. Decides further that any non-OECD State, not possessing a national hazardous wastes import ban and which allows the import from OECD States of hazardous wastes for recycling or recovery operation until 31 December 1997, should inform the Secretariat of the Basel Convention that it would allow the import from an OECD State of hazardous wastes for recycling or recovery operations by specifying the categories of hazardous wastes which are acceptable for import; the quantities to be imported; the specific recycling/recovery process to be used; and the final destination/disposal of the residues which are derived from recycling/recovery operations;

"4. Requests the Parties to report regularly to the Secretariat on the implementation of this decision, including details of the transboundary movements of hazardous wastes allowed under paragraph 3 above. Further requests the Secretariat to prepare a summary and to compile these reports for consideration by the Open-ended Ad Hoc Committee. After considering these reports, the Open-ended Ad Hoc Committee will submit a report based on the input provided by the Secretariat to the Conference of the Parties of the Convention;

"5. Requests further the Parties to cooperate and work actively to ensure the effective implementation of this decision."

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce his decisions on the extension of compulsory competitive tendering to local authorities' security work, management of on-street parking and vehicle management.

Mr. Baldry: My Department received 90 responses to the consultation paper issued on 16 November 1993 from local authorities and other interested parties. We are considering carefully the comments made. I expect to lay the necessary draft statutory instruments before the House shortly.

It is widely accepted that competition is the best guarantee of value for money in public service provision. I am keen to see local authorities press ahead with competitive tendering for these services as soon as possible. Neverthless, I recognise that they must be allowed adequate time to prepare for tendering and to conduct a fair and even-handed competition.

We would expect the tendering process to take up to 12 months, and authorities will need a little time to prepare for market testing once the statutory instruments have come into force. The date originally proposed for vehicle management in England, 1 April 1995, would not allow authorities adequate time and I have therefore decided to defer the start date for this work until 1 October 1995. This brings vehicle management into line with security work, where I intend the start date to remain 1 October 1995. After this date, the in-house team will not be able to carry out this work unless they have won it in competition. I anticipate that authorities will begin inviting tenders in the autumn of this year. As I told the House on 15 December, Official Report, columns 734-35, CCT for all new services will be introduced in shire areas following the local government review.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Transport in London has today made a separate announcement about the implementation timetable for CCT for the management of on-street parking services.

Old Mineral Permissions

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the consultation paper on the reform of old mineral permissions.

Mr. Curry: The consultation paper on reform of old mineral permissions granted between 1948 and 1981 is to be published today.

This consultation paper follows on from the options paper issued by my Department two years ago in March 1992 as part of the review of the operation of the Minerals Act 1981. That paper received a wide ranging and diverse response which has informed today's specific proposals for reform.

The Government recognise that minerals are vital to our economy and I am very pleased that the minerals industry recognises that it has a duty to the public to operate to high environmental standards and to be considerate neighbours to those communities most affected by mining. We want to develop and extend the good work done by the industry and are determined to secure improved operating and environmental standards for all old mining permissions granted between 1948 and 1981.

One of the points made most forcibly to us in the response to the 1992 paper was the need to establish a level playing field between minerals operators regardless of the date when their permissions were granted. At the moment holders of modern permissions and reformed IDO permissions granted between 1943 and 1948 are perceived to be at a disadvantage. We are determined to update standards as a whole across the range of these permissions and are concerned that quicker action has not been taken under the existing powers introduced by the Minerals Act 1981. We are therefore proposing a statutory timetable for reviews and for the updating of conditions. There are also particular proposals for dealing with ancillary mining development, compensation, and change to the 2042 expiry date for pre-1982 permissions as well as consideration of other issues including minerals waste tipping.

Conservation Areas

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what conclusions he and his right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for National Heritage, have reached on the response to last July's consultation paper on planning controls in conservation areas.

Mr. Curry: We accept that conservation areas merit protection from unharmful change. We aim to achieve this objective without unreasonable restrictions on house-owners or unacceptably increasing the workload of local planning authorities.

We have concluded that each planning authority should be enabled to identify conservation areas which merit additional protection and to introduce stricter control in those areas. We propose a new power for planning authorities to make a direction withdrawing "permitted development" rights for a prescribed range of development materially affecting some aspects of the external appearance of dwelling houses, such as doors, windows, roofs and frontages. There would be no requirement to obtain the Secretary of State's approval for a direction but authorities would have to publicise their proposals in advance and have regard to the views of local people. We shall be consulting about the detailed arrangements but hope to include the new power in amendments to the General Development Order to be laid before Parliament as soon as possible.

Drinking Water

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the drinking water inspectorate has completed its consideration of the report of the review of the process of technical audit of water companies, carried out by the late Professor Stott; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: I am pleased to announce that the drinking water inspectorate has today published its response to the report of the independent review of the technical audit process. I have placed a copy of the inspectorate's response in the Library.

Professor Stott confirmed the validity of the system and methods devised and developed by the inspectorate for checking the compliance of water companies and the regulatory requirements. His main recommendation was that water companies should develop quality assurance systems to assist them in meeting their statutory obligations consistently and to enable the inspectorate to determine whether the statutory requirements have been met.

The inspectorate agrees that quality assurance systems should become more widespread as a means of ensuring consistently high quality drinking water. As such systems are introduced the inspectorate will adapt its techniques of inspection so that it can be satisfied that those systems are fully observed and that they remain appropriate for delivering wholesome drinking water and protecting public health.

Waste Imports

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his future policy on the importation of wastes for treatment and disposal into the United Kingdom subsequent to the new powers available to him to prohibit waste imports after 6 May.

Mr. Atkins: I have nothing to add to my answer of 7 March to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond), Official Report, column 43.

European Environment Council

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what decisions were made at the March meeting of the European Council of Environmental Ministers on (a) the environmental appraisal of goods to be traded under the general agreement on tariffs and trade and (b) the EC birds directive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Council did not discuss the question of environmental appraisal of goods to be traded under GATT. The Council considered an amendment to the birds directive to clarify the arrangements for protecting birds. My right hon. Friend obtained important assurances that this proposal would not reduce the level of protection for birds and that scientific and conservation criteria would be used in implementing the proposal. The amendment will now be referred to the European Parliament for consideration.

Coal Industry Bill

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the National Rivers Authority regarding the Coal Industry Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: My Department is in regular contact with the National Rivers Authority about the pollution which might result from colliery closures and is aware of its views. The Coal Industry Bill is a matter for my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what new guidance he proposes to give to local authorities when their waste disposal contracts are tendered;

(2) what support he proposes for the United Kingdom waste to energy industry;

(3) what assessment he has made of the environmental benefits of integrated waste management schemes incorporating waste to energy;

(4) what plans he has to incorporate targets for energy from waste within revised recycling targets for local authorities.

Mr. Atkins: In its report on incineration published last year, the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution concluded that there are significant environmental benefits in integrated waste management schemes incorporating waste to energy. It recommended that such schemes should play an increasingly important role in our future waste management practices. The Government broadly welcome the conclusions of the Royal Commission in this respect and we are preparing a detailed response which I hope will be completed in the summer.

In the meantime, the Government are taking steps further to encourage the development of incineration with energy recovery in the United Kingdom. In general, waste to energy schemes should be operated on a normal commercial basis. However, the Government recognise the environmental benefits of using waste as a renewable fuel source and so support waste to energy schemes through the non-fossil fuel obligation, under which operators can be paid a premium for the electricity they generate. A third NFFO order was announced last July. In addition, my Department is currently reviewing the guidance given to local authorities on tendering for waste disposal contracts. The updated guidance will re-emphasise the importance of taking environmental factors into account in that process, such as the benefits of the waste to energy option in appropriate locations. We hope to consult on draft guidance later this year.

We have no plans to revise our target for local authorities to recycle 25 per cent. of household waste by 2000 to include targets for waste from energy.

River Cleaning

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will commission a new and independent study into the cost of cleaning up rivers and water supplies to comply with European Union legislation.

Mr. Atkins: The costs of meeting current obligations arising from European Community legislation for cleaning up rivers and water supplies fall in the main to water companies. These costs are currently being assessed by the Director General of the Office of Water Services as part of his periodic review of water price limits.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total cost of official entertaining in his Department in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. Gummer: The total cost of official entertainment in the years from 1 April 1990 was £313,200 and is included in the running cost expenditure for my Department which is published every year in the annual report; figures for 1993-94 are not yet available. The entertainment budget is used for a variety of functions including receptions. Separate figures are not kept for individual functions.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many countries had submitted their sustainable development plans to the United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development by 21 March ; and to whom Her Majesty's Government have made available the United Kingdom sustainable development report in addition to the United Nations Commission.

Mr. Atkins: I understand that 22 countries, including the United Kingdom, have submitted their reports to the United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development. Copies of the United Kingdom's report have been placed in the Library and are being sent to all member countries of the Commission on Sustainable Development and to other interested parties. Further copies are available from the Department of Environment.

Oil Pollution, Bournemouth

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 833, on oil pollution at Bournemouth, what evidence he has that the incidence of such pollution is more frequent at and around bank holiday periods; and if he will consider the monitoring of the English channel during such periods.

Mr. Atkins: The Government have no evidence that incidences of oil pollution are more common at bank holiday periods. Surveillance for oil pollution in the English channel and elsewhere around the United Kingdom coast is already carried out.

Greenhouse Gas Emissions

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the packaging producer responsibility group on the role of converting waste to energy in meeting national environmental targets on greenhouse gas emissions.

Mr. Atkins: Incineration of packaging waste to recover energy plays a significant part in the producer responsibility for industry group's proposals set out in its plan of 7 February, a copy of which is in the Library. The report of the group's technical committee on waste to energy reflects the view of the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution that increased incineration of waste, with energy recovery, could make a significant contribution to reducing emissions of greenhouse gases. We are considering with the group, and other interested parties, how the 7 February plan can best be taken forward.

Cardiff Bay

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has received from the Environment Directorate of the European Union in relation to a delay in adjudicating on the complaint by the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds and the World Wide Fund for Nature regarding the Cardiff Bay barrage and the Cardiff Bay site of special scientific interest.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 1 March, Official Report, column 643.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list (a) the 10 authorities which gained most proportionate to population from the use of residents of non-self contained accommodation as an indicator for the purpose of standard spending assessment distribution, (b) the amounts gained and (c) the effect on Coventry's standard spending assessment of the use of this indicator;

(2) if he will list (a) the 10 authorities which gained most proportionate to population from the use of housing benefit claimants as an indicator for the purpose of standard spending assessment distribution (b) the amounts gained and (c) the effect on Coventry's standard spending assessment of the use of this indicator;

(3) if he will list (a) the 10 authorities which gained most proportionate to population from the use of residents at non-self contained or non-permanent accommodation as an indicator for the purpose of standard spending assessment distribution (b) the amounts gained and (c) the effect on Coventry's standard spending assessment of the use of this indicator;

(4) if he will list (a) the 10 authorities which gained most proportionate to population from the use of households living in rented purpose built flats as an indicator for the purpose of standard spending assessment distribution (b) the amounts gained and (c) the effect on Coventry's standard spending assessment of the use of this indicator;

(5) if he will list (a) the 10 authorities which gained most proportionate to population from the use of elderly living in rented accommodation as an indicator for the purposes of standard spending assessment distribution (b) the amounts gained and (c) the effect on Coventry's standard spending assessment of the use of this indicator;

(6) if he will list (a) the 10 authorities which gained most from the use of children in rented accommodation proportionate to population as an indicator for the purposes of standard spending assessment distribution (b) the amounts gained and (c) the effect on Coventry's standard spending assessment.

Mr. Baldry: The information is provided in the tables. However, there are some important technical points relating to the interpretation of the figures provided.

In a simple arithmetic sense, it is possible to say how much of an authority's standard spending assessment arises from a particular indicator. In most cases, it is simply a matter of multiplying the value of the indicator in that particular authority by the weighting, and scaling factor, attached to it in "The Local Government Finance Report (England) 1994-95 [HC 179]". This is the basis for the figures in the tables.

But there are two important qualifications to the results of those calculations. One is general. The other applies specifically to four indexes reflecting social and economic conditions: the social index, the other social services index, the economic index and the children in need index.

The general qualification is that the simple arithmetic calculation does not show how much better off or worse off the authority is as a result of that particular indicator being included in the formula. It would do so only if the rest of the formula remained unchanged when that indicator was removed. But it would not remain unchanged, because that would normally lead to a reduction in the national total of SSAs. To maintain the national total, there would have to be other compensating changes in the SSA formula. This would not be a simple scaling up of the factors; it would be usual to draw on statistical analyses to determine the weights on the remaining indicators. The weights would be likely to change differentially, to make good, as far as possible, the effect of the indicator which had been left out. In practice, if one indicator was left out of the analysis, it might well be appropriate to bring in some other similar indicator in its place.

In other words, to find out how much an authority is advantaged or disadvantaged by a particular indicator would require the production of a hypothetical SSA in which that indicator had been omitted, but in which other compensating changes had been made. There is no basis on which such a hypothetical SSA formula could be defined conclusively. Consequently, there is no basis for saying conclusively how much an authority gained or lost by the adoption of an indicator in the actual SSA formula.

The specific qualification relates to the indicators which are within the indexes reflecting social and economic conditions. All the general qualifications apply equally to the components of these indexes. But, in addition, the indexes are unlike other indicators in that they are not intended to reflect the total amount in SSAs attributable to social and economic conditions, but are only the amount by which the relevant part of an authority's SSA is increased or decreased from a national average because of those conditions.

The figures in the tables have been calculated by applying the weighting and scaling factor for each indicator to the data for that indicator for the authority mentioned. The figures exclude any area cost adjustment. In each case, the amount for Coventry is shown for comparison.

TREASURY

VAT on Fuel (Advance Payments)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the revenue lost to the Exchequer by advance payments of VAT by customers of utility companies now subject to VAT from April.

Sir John Cope: Some loss through advance payments was anticipated on this, as on other tax adjustments, and was taken into account in the Budget calculations. It is too early to say what the actual effect on revenue will be.

Taxpayers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number and percentage of (a) basic rate and (b) higher rate tax payers in each English county, metropolitan district and London borough for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Dorrell: The table provides estimates for each English county for 1991-92, the latest available year for which information can be provided below the United Kingdom level. I regret that information is not available for metropolitan districts and London boroughs.

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information the Treasury holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons.

Mr. Nelson: All relevant background and experience is taken into account when considering individuals for appointment to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what procedures the Treasury has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Nelson: The Treasury takes all reasonable steps to ensure that all relevant background and experience is taken into account when a Minister has to approve a person or shortlist for an appointment.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the organisations and individuals outside the Treasury who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Nelson: The public appointments unit is sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the shortlist for appointment or the person appointed.

Foreign Assets

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the assets (a) in total and (b) per head of population of (i) El Salvador, (ii) Nepal, (iii) Paraguay, (iv) Benin, (v) Togo, (vi) Sierra Leone, (vii) Mauritius, (viii) Burundi, (ix) Rwanda, (x) Haiti, (xi) Chad, (xii) Albania, (xiii) Barbados, (xiv) Malta, (xv) Botswana, (xvi) Ukraine, (xvii) The Gambia and (xviii) Mongolia.

Mr. Nelson: Information on most countries' GNP and per capita GNP is available from various published sources, including the World bank's annual world development reports and the OECD's annual "Geographical distribution of financial flows to developing countries", copies of which are held in the Library.

Private Sector Debt

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total United Kingdom personal private sector debt; and what is the total United Kingdom personal private sector debt per household.

Mr. Nelson: Total indebtedness of the personal sector —which includes unincorporated businesses and private non-profit making bodies, as well as households—was £499 billion in September 1993. Figures for household debt are not available. The number of households in the United Kingdom was 22·4 million in April 1991. Both figures are the latest available.

Household Debt

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average level of household debt for each year since 1979.

Mr. Nelson: Debt figures for the personal sector—which includes unincorporated businesses and private non-profit making bodies, as well as households—are available from the Central Statistical Office database. Separate figures for the household sector are not available.

Exchange Rate

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the reasons why the nominal exchange rate against the ecu in January was only 2 per cent. less than in December 1989; what was the corresponding reduction/increase in the real exchange rate against the ecu based on (a) relative producer prices, (b) relative export unit values and (c) the terms of trade for manufacturers: and what has been the effect on output and employment in manufacturing industry.

Mr. Nelson: Movements in the nominal exchange rate between currencies reflect many factors in the countries concerned, including relative growth rates, cyclical positions and inflation prospects. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 21 March 1994, Official Report, column 15, which provides references to data which can be used to calculate the information requested. In the same answer I made a statement about the effect of the real exchange rate on output and employment in manufacturing industry, to which I also refer him.

Personal Investment Authority

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the appointment of Mr. Joe Palmer as chairman of the Personal Investment Authority.

Mr. Nelson: A number of representations have been received. However, the appointment of the chairman of the Personal Investment Authority is a matter for the board of the authority.

Taxation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received concerning the effect Government tax policies will have from the beginning of April on the economic well-being of the average family with two children and one spouse on average male earnings.

Mr. Dorrell: Treasury Ministers have received a number of representations concerning the effects of the Government's tax policies on the living standards of families.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received concerning the cost to the average family of the cumulative tax increases announced since March 1993.

Mr. Dorrell: Treasury Ministers have received a number of representations.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the tax burden of a married couple on typical earnings and with two children.

Mr. Dorrell: A single-earner couple with two children on average earnings is likely to pay under 22 per cent. of its gross earnings in income tax and national insurance contributions in 1994-95. Under the last Labour Government it paid 23 per cent. on average.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the change in the tax burden for a married couple on typical earnings, and with two children, since 1978-79 is accounted for by increases and extensions in VAT.

Sir John Cope: The change in the tax burden since 1978-79 has been determined by a range of factors, including the growth in real earnings as well as changes in the tax system. Reliable estimates of the contribution of changes in the rate and coverage of VAT are not available.

Shareholders

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will instruct the Bank of England to ensure that individual shareholders in public companies continue to receive company reports and so on, and share certificates in any new trading system for the stock exchange.

Mr. Nelson: I take it that the hon. Member is referring to the proposed paperless share settlement system called CREST. The Bank of England has designed CREST to permit individual shareholders, if they wish, to participate in CREST while remaining on the company register and so receive company reports, etc. direct from the companies in which they hold shares. Moreover, membership of the system will be voluntary, so that any shareholder may instead continue to hold share certificates and remain on the company register. This may be a simpler option for the less active smaller investor.

Indirect Taxation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people with earnings so low that they do not pay income tax will be affected this month by increases in indirect taxation.

Sir John Cope: It is not possible to determine the number of individuals with earnings but not paying tax who will be affected by indirect tax increases.

VAT

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new businesses have been registered for VAT in each of the last five years in (a) Milton Keynes, (b) Bedford and (c) Luton.

Sir John Cope: Customs hold registration information by local office. The local VAT office at Bedford covers Milton Keynes. The number of new businesses registered for VAT in Bedford and Luton in each of the last five years is as follows:

Year	New registrations at the Bedford office	New registrations at the Luton office
1989	3,222	2,574
1990	2,909	2,200
1991	2,160	2,320
1992	1,784	2,166
1993	1,912	2,084

Stable Prices

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 1 March, Official Report, column 665, what priority he accords to stable prices; and what is the connection between that and (a) each of the priorities indicated in his answer and (b) reducing unemployment.

Mr. Nelson: Low inflation on a permanent basis is an essential condition for sustained economic growth and higher living standards. But in itself it is not enough. Combined with the Government's policies to improve the functioning of the labour market, and the operation of markets more generally, it will contribute to a lasting fall in unemployment.

Low Incomes

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to compensate the poorest 10 per cent. of wage earners, following the changes announced in last year's Budget which came into effect this month.

Mr. Portillo: Since 1979 those in the lowest decile of adult male full-time earnings have enjoyed a real increase in take home pay of 18·2 per cent.

Flower Growers

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evidence there is that mainland European flower growers are selling produce into British markets and evading taxation.

Mr. Dorrell: I am unaware of any evidence of tax evasion in this area. But the revenue departments are always prepared to investigate such evidence if brought to them.

Decentralisation

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to revise his policy on the devolvement and decentralisation of Government functions and activity to the regions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The policy remains as set out in the relocation guidelines, as updated in January 1993, a copy of which is in the Library of the House of Commons.

Mortgage Interest Relief at Source

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people received MIRAS in 1988; and what was the total cost to the Exchequer.

Mr. Dorrell: About 9·2 million single people or married couples received mortgage interest relief in 1988-89 at a total cost of £5·4 billion.

Industrial Building Allowance

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much revenue is forgone by allowing industrial building allowance to extend to office and retail premises for sporting and recreational facilities;

(2) if he will publish an estimate for the latest year for which information is available of the value of industrial building allowances against corporation tax due on buildings associated with the provision of sporting and recreational facilities to employees.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the industrial building allowance is available for workplace nurseries in workplaces other than factories and warehouses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Industrial building allowances may be available for workplace nurseries within premises which are in use for the purposes of a trade carried on in a factory, or for other purposes defined in sections 18 and 19 of the Capital Allowances Act 1990.

Workplace Nurseries

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many employers have workplace nurseries;

(2) how many employees get the benefit of tax relief for workplace nurseries.

Mr. Dorrell: Information is not available centrally on the number of nurseries. It is estimated about 20,000 employees had a full-time or part-time place for their children in a workplace nursery in 1991.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish an estimate for the latest year for which information is available of the revenue raised from income tax charged on the benefit in kind to employees who make use of child care facilities paid for by their employers other than tax-exempt workplace nurseries.

Mr. Dorrell: It is estimated that in 1993-94 the tax charged was about £5 million.

Vice President Gore (Meeting)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 446, what agreements were reached on environmental matters during dinner with Vice President Gore on 14 March; and what decisions he took consequently to that dinner.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: None. The discussion was an internal exchange of views and was not intended to be the occasion for decisions on specific issues.

Privatisation Costs

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what expenditure it is proposed to incur in order to finance privatisation costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Expenditure will be needed to cover:

(i) the initial costs of advisers, estimated at £2,000,000, in connection with the forthcoming sale of shares in the two Generating Companies;

(ii) expenditure, estimated at £600,000, in connection with the Treasury's sale of privatised companies' debt this year.

Parliamentary approval of these new services will be sought in the 1994-95 main and summer supplementary estimates for Her Majesty's Treasury's sale or sales of residual Government shareholdings and Government holdings of privatised companies' debt vote (class XVII, vote 16). Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £2,600,000 will be met by repayable advances from the contingencies fund.

European Union (United Kingdom Payments)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the additional payments the United Kingdom will be obliged to make to the European Union in (a) 1994-95, (b) 1995-96 and (c) 1996-97 as a result of the imposition of VAT on domestic fuel.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 25 March 1994]: The contributions made to the EC Budget under the Community's VAT—or "Third"—resource are made on the basis of a harmonised VAT base, designed to ensure that variations in VAT coverage and rates do not affect contributions. The Community's GNP—or "Fourth"—resource is based on GNP at market prices, and the imposition of VAT on domestic fuel is likely to increase very slightly United Kingdom payments under this heading. The EC budget is only established one year in advance so estimates of future payments are necessarily uncertain and the amounts will depend on the detailed circumstances of the EC budget in each year and the overall growth in EC GNP in general and United Kingdom GNP in particular.

Fuel Consumption

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what advice Her Majesty's Customs and Excise has given to British Gas and the regional electricity supply companies setting out options for apportioning bills for supplies consumed before and after the day when VAT is introduced;

(2) if he will publish details of the agreements negotiated by British Gas and the regional electricity supply companies with Her Majesty's Customs and Excise regarding the calculation of fuel consumed after 1 April on the basis of warmer weather; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 28 March 1994]: Apportionment can be based on meter readings taken on 31 March. Customs have also agreed that it would be acceptable to apportion bills by using the ratio of the number of days before and from 1 April or by applying weighting factors of 1·75:1 for electricity and 2·5:1 for gas. The actual method of apportionment chosen is a commercial matter between the individual suppliers and their customers.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what advice is given to consumers who believe that the apportionment of their electricity or gas bills for fuel consumed before and after 1 April 1994 is not fair or reasonable; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 28 March 1994]: Consumers should approach their supplier with evidence that would support a different apportionment.

European Investment Bank Loans

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the level of allocation of European Investment bank loans for projects in the United Kingdom in 1993 changed from previous years; and what were the reasons for the difference.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 29 March 1994]: The following is the information:

European Investment Bank lending in the United Kingdom (Loan signatures)

Year	£ million	Million ecu
1993	1,502	1,929
1992	1,796	2,407
1991	1,467	2,091
1990	1,365	1,893
1989	1,084	1,623

Figures for European Investment bank lending in the United Kingdom, over the past five years, are shown in the table. It should be noted, however, that these do not reflect a pre-planned lending programme, with fixed amounts allocated in advance to lending in the United Kingdom.

The European Investment bank has a dual character, as both a development institution, and as a bank. It lends to capital investment projects which must both, contribute to the development of the Community, and meet normal banking criteria, especially that of financial viability. As a consequence, it does not attempt to set overall, national, or sectoral targets for lending, but rather responds to market demand, considering every application for a loan on an individual basis, against its objectives.

The annual outturn figures published by the European Investment bank reflect this process, but they can also be influenced by decisions by the bank and promoters as to exactly when they will choose to sign for a loan, once it has been approved. Delays in signing agreed loans over a year end can have a significant impact on the figures. This occurred in 1993, when, for this reason, an increase in approvals of loans was not matched by a corresponding increase in loan signatures.

HEALTH

Medicines (Advertising) Regulations

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she intends to make the Medicines (Advertising) Regulations under section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972.

Mr. Sackville: This is currently under consideration.

Hospital Staff, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the percentage ratio of trained nurses to the number of in-patients in the Doncaster area national health service hospitals for (a) 1982-83, (b) 1984-85, (c) 1990-91, (d) 1991-92 and (e) 1992-93.

Mr. Sackville: The information available is shown in the table:

In-patients[1]	48,867	49,856	50,984
Qualified nurses[2] in Doncaster Health Authority area at 30 September	1,380	1,350	1,350
Ratio nurses:in-patients	1:35	1:37	1:38

[1] In-patient figures are calculated by adding together ordinary admissions and day cases.
[2] The figure for qualified nurses excludes community nurses and midwives.

Planning Forums (Representation)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representation there is of disabled people, carers of disabled people, parents of disabled children and disabled children on the planning forums of each local authority in England.

Mr. Bowis: Local authorities are obliged by law to consult service users and carers on their community care plans. It is for each authority to determine how best to consult and involve people.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the targets for improvements in mental health services which she has asked the national health service executive to monitor with regard to the care of patients in the special supervision group identified by the Ritchie report.

Mr. Bowis: From April 1 1994, providers of mental health services will be required to establish supervision registers of those patients with a severe mental illness, who may pose a significant risk to themselves or others. The national health service executive will monitor the introduction of the registers to ensure that all patients in contact with the specialist psychiatric services have been assessed for inclusion on local registers by October 1994. The executive will also be monitoring provider units to ensure that all patients in contact with the specialist psychiatric services are subject to the care programme approach.

Child Guidance Clinics

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many child guidance clinics were operating in 1985 and in each year since 1990.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Children's In-patient Units

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children's in-patient units were operating in 1985 and in each year since 1990.

Mr. Bowis: The information available is shown in the table.

	Number of units	Number of beds
1990-91	427	14,458
1991-92	[1]306	14,436
1992-93	295	14,152

[1] Before 1991-92 information was collected by hospital site. Thereafter, as a result of National Health Service re-organisation, some individual hospital sites were aggregated under larger hospital and community units. The overall number of beds is therefore shown for comparative purposes.

Figures for 1985 are not comparable as they were then collected by consultant speciality—not by numbers of designated children's beds and units.

Junior Doctors

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the average hours contracted for junior doctors in each EU country.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the results of her new deal initiative for junior doctors.

Dr. Mawhinney: We receive regular reports on junior doctors' hours from regional task forces. Between September 1990 and September 1993 the number of junior doctors and dentists contracted for more than an average of 83 hours a week fell from over 13,300 to 91, a reduction of 99 per cent. This is a remarkable achievement. The remaining few posts are being tackled as a priority.

From August 1992 to September 1993 the number of those working in hard-pressed on-call posts contracted on average for between 73 and 83 hours a week fell from over 10,200 to 7,800, a 24 per cent. reduction. We announced in December last year that eliminating the remaining posts in this category is a priority in 1994.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to ensure that hospital trusts abide by her new deal for junior doctors.

Dr. Mawhinney: Our regional task forces work very closely with trusts and authorities to monitor progress and support local action to reach the new deal targets. Task forces receive regular detailed reports from all units and, in turn, submit returns to the ministerial group on junior doctors' hours.

I and the chief executive of the national health service have also written respectively to chairmen and chief executives of trusts and authorities to re-affirm the Government's commitment to eliminating hard-pressed on-call posts contracted for more than 72 hours a week. This is a priority for 1994 and we have issued a detailed action plan to all regions, trusts and authorities.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to issue guidelines on minimum sleep for junior doctors within 24 hour and seven day periods.

Dr. Mawhinney: The guidance on the new deal for junior doctors issued in June 1991, copies of which are available in the Library, advises that those working on on-call rotas should have a reasonable expectation of eight hours rest during a period of 32 hours on duty, principally within the on-call period. Where possible the greater part of this rest period should be continuous. For junior doctors working on partial shifts there should be a reasonable expectation of four hours rest during a duty period of 16 hours. Those on full shifts should also be allowed reasonable time for natural breaks during their working time. The implementation of this guidance forms part of our overall policy of reducing junior doctors' hours of work as part of the new deal. No further guidance is necessary.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many junior doctors in each region are working more than 72 hours per week; and what plans she has to ensure that no doctor works more than 72 hours by her target date of 1 January 1995.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information on the number of hours worked by junior doctors is not available centrally. The number of junior doctors and dentists contracted for more than an average of 72 hours a week in England, by region, is:

Posts contracted for over 72 hours per week at 30 September 1993 (England)

Region	Number
Northern	780
Yorkshire	1,381
Trent	550
East Anglian	517
North West Thames	729
North East Thames	1,229
South East Thames	762
South West Thames	801
Wessex	520
Oxford	532
South Western	327
West Midlands	925
Mersey	783
North Western	1,369
England	11,205

Notes:
(i) Figures derived from the reports of the 14 English Regional Task Forces.
(ii) SHAs included in the figures for the Thames Regions.

Our priority is to eliminate all hard-pressed on-call posts contracted for an average of more than 72 hours a week by 31 December 1994. To this end I and the chief executive of the national health service have written respectively to chairmen and chief executives of trusts and authorities to re-affirm the Government's commitment to this target. Detailed guidance—EL(94)17—has also been sent to regions, authorities and trusts which provides a plan for action for the remainder of 1994. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

We are also providing in 1994-95 an extra £11·6 million from central funds to create at least 125 new consultant posts and for local initiatives to help the new deal. This will bring the total number of new posts for senior doctors created to reduce hours since the new deal was launched in 1991 to 750.

Orthopaedics

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what difficulties are being experienced in hospitals in the Hillingdon area in appointing suitable candidates to fill consultant posts in orthopaedics; what steps she is taking to increase the number of doctors qualifying in this specialty; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: At the last review of trauma and orthopaedics by the joint planning advisory committee—JPAC—in February 1993, the senior registrar national target was increased from 181 to 210 posts, and the career registrar national target from 153 to 202 posts. We are confident that all these posts will be funded within the target timescales. This should increase the number of suitable candidates to fill consultant vacancies.

My hon. Friend may wish to consult the chairmen of national health service trusts in Hillingdon for local details.

Fostering Respite Care

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of authorities offer fostering respite care.

Mr. Bowis: Information available centrally relates to local authorities who have provided children with a series of short term placements with foster carers under one agreement. Such placements generally relate to respite care if parents need relief, either from caring for a disabled child or for other reasons, or because a child is at risk of harm from their own behaviour.

In the period 14 October 1991 to 31 March 1992, 76 authorities—78 per cent. of those submitting returns—looked after children in this way.

Redundant Health Facilities

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the amount spent by health authorities in keeping redundant hospital and other redundant health facilities wind and water tight and safe from vandalism and theft.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally. Regional health authorities, and national health service trusts, are responsible for property management.

Asthma

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children aged five to 11 years have died following acute asthma attacks in each health region in England since 1990.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Number of deaths from asthma (ICD[1] 493) in each health region of England for the grouped ages of 5 to 11, 1990-92

[1] International Classification of Disease, 9th Revision.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many asthma-related deaths of children aged five to 11 years there have been on school premises in the current academic year in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Figures for the current academic year are not available. There were four deaths recorded for this age group in 1992 in England and Wales but none occurred on school premises. Information relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her policy on the immediate availability of ventilators for children suffering from asthma aged (a) under 5, (b) 5 to 11 and (c) 11 to 18 years.

Mr. Sackville: I understand that the hon. Member is referring to the immediate availability of portable inhalers which are prescribed for asthma sufferers to help control their condition. Our advice is that children should have immediate access to the medication they require, and that in consultation with parents and with appropriate medical advice, children should be encouraged to manage their own medical condition as early as is consistent with their development.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of asthma were reported in each health region for each year since 1979.

Mr. Sackville: The information available, which derives from hospital in-patient data and which does not cover all cases of asthma, is shown in the table. The 1979 to 1985 data are based on a survey of discharges and deaths in hospital, and the figures for 1989-90 and 1990-91 are based on finished consultant episodes. The first year of published data from the hospital episode statistics is 1989-90. The reason for the increase over the period 1979 to 1990-91 is not known, but some proportion of the increase can be attributed to a change in diagnostic practice.

Figures were not collected in 1986. As 1987-88 was the first year of changing to the, then, new Körner system there was considerable under reporting and the resultant data are incomplete in certain important areas.

Emergency Contraception

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total annual cost to the national health service of prescriptions for emergency contraception.

Mr. Sackville: There is only one product under this category of drug. The information requested is therefore commercially confidential to the manufacturer and cannot be disclosed.

Care Orders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of homeless people aged under 16, 16 to 18 and 18 years or more have had care orders at some time in the past; and what is the national average percentage of children who have care orders.

Mr. Bowis: The Department does not collect information about the whereabouts of children once they have ceased to be looked after by a local authority. The number of children subject to care orders at 31 March 1992 in England, as a percentage of the estimated total number of children aged under 18 years, was 0·33 per cent.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were received into care because of homelessness in each of the 10 years preceding the implementation of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977.

Mr. Bowis: The information available centrally relates to the number of children in England taken into care on a voluntary basis because their families were made homeless. Figures for the 10 years preceding 1977 are in the table.

BCG Vaccination

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's target for coverage of BCG vaccination; and if she will list those district health authorities and regional health authorities not reaching those targets.

Mr. Sackville: There is no target for coverage of BCG immunisation. The Government recommend that BCG be offered to all school children between the ages of 10 and 14 years and also to new immigrants from countries with a high prevalence of the disease; to their newly born children; and to certain other higher risk groups which are listed in "Immunisation against infectious disease", copies of which are available in the Library. About 75 per cent. of school children are immunised each year whilst a further 5 to 7 per cent. are already tuberculin positive and, therefore, do not require immunisation.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to include the BCG vaccination in the targets for general practitioners.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 5 November 1993 at column 536.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which districts no longer carry out routine school programmes for BCG vaccination; how many children were vaccinated for BCG in each of the last five years; and what percentage of children have had BCG vaccination by the target date in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: We understand that 15 health authorities have discontinued the school's BCG immunisation programme but details are not available centrally.

The number of children immunised with BCG in the last five years is shown in the table:

Children given BCG vaccination by age in the years 1988-89 to 1992-93

	Number of vaccinations (thousands)
	Total	Under 1	1-9	10-13	14-15

1992-93	393·6	43·9	4·1	262·8	82·8

[1]The school BCG programme was suspended in 1989 as there were insufficient supplies of BCG vaccine.

The percentage of children which have had BCG immunisation in each of the last five years is not available.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's policy on BCG immunisation of neonates; how many district health authorities and regional health authorities are without policies in BCG immunisation of neonates; and how many offer BCG immunisation of neonates.

Mr. Sackville: The Government's policy on the BCG —Bacille-Calmette-Guérin— immunisation of neonates is as set out in the memorandum, "Immunisation against infectious disease" copies of which are available in the Library. It is recommended that all babies born to immigrants to the United Kingdom who have come from countries with a high prevalence of tuberculosis are immunised with BCG. Eighty per cent. of districts, including 14 of the 15 of those who have stopped the schools immunisation programme, offer BCG to neonates. Thirty-one districts do not offer BCG to neonates.

Commissioning Agencies

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will provide a list of commissioning agencies and the health authorities that they cover.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is currently being collected.

Vaccination Methods

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has on the extent to which pre-filling syringes to be used in vaccinations reduces anxiety in patients.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall in her Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Sackville: The information shows the position on 23 March 1994.

3. Numbers of staff from ethnic minorities relate to those responding to the Department's ethnic origin questionnaire.
4. The figures for disabled people are for Registered Disabled People only.

Family Centres

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to develop the network of family-based centres to help families in crisis.

Mr. Bowis: The Government fund local authorities, through the revenue support grant, to safeguard and promote the welfare of children in need by providing a range of appropriate services, including family centres.

They make their own decisions on the allocation of resources available to them. Local authorities have a duty to provide family centres as they consider appropriate, either themselves or through working jointly with other organisations including voluntary bodies.

The Department has funded the family centre network for a number of years with the aim of promoting the family centre approach. It also funds other voluntary organisations which run family centres with the support of local authorities and, in some cases of health authorities.

Behavioural Difficulties

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to establish an inter-departmental agency to co-ordinate responses to children with behavioural difficulties.

Mr. Bowis: None.

Young People (Support)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to increase funding for aftercare support for young people leaving residential care.

Mr. Bowis: It is for local authorities to determine their priorities and the level of funding to be allocated from within their overall budget.

Passive Smoking

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the findings of the most recent research she has commissioned on the health risks in terms of morbidity and mortality of passive smoking.

Mr. Sackville: The available evidence on the health effects of passive smoking is summarised in paragraph 2.13 of "Smoke Free For Health" which was published in February 1994. Copies of the report are available in the Library.

The Scientific Committee on Tobacco and Health will be reviewing the available research findings on this issue at the earliest opportunity.

Adoption

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the length of time a child is fostered prior to adoption.

Mr. Bowis: No definitive timescale can be given about the length of time a child might spend in foster care prior to adoption. A placement can be made only when all the important factors of the child's circumstances and needs have been carefully considered as well as the availability of prospective adopters to meet those needs.

Nurses (Smoking)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has of the percentage of nurses who smoke.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally. The Government are committed to ensuring that the whole of the health service works towards a virtually smoke-free environment for staff, patients and visitors.

Immunisation

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the relative costs of delivering immunisation by prefilled syringe and by the traditional method of vial, syringe and needle.

Mr. Sackville: Some vaccines are supplied in pre-filled syringes; the costs are matters of commercial confidence.

Vaccinations

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the latest average national targets being achieved by general practitioners for measles, mumps and rubella —MMR—polio, diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis vaccinations.

Dr. Mawhinney: At 1 October 1992, 88 per cent. of general practitioners had achieved the higher target and 7 per cent. had achieved the lower target.

Drug Companies

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to issue further guidelines on the relationship between general practitioners and drug company representatives.

Mr. Sackville: We have no plans to issue guidelines on the relationship between general practitioners and drug company representatives. Advice on professional conduct is a matter for the General Medical Council Ethical committee.

Care

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on children aged 16 to 18 years and young adults and after care within families.

Mr. Bowis: The Children Act provides a flexible framework of powers which enable local authorities to tailor support to the needs of the individual child leaving care.

Care Orders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans or guidelines she has for ensuring that children, subject to care orders, return to a family environment as soon as possible.

Mr. Bowis: Part III of the Children Act 1989 emphasises the duty on local authorities to provide services to support parents in bringing up children in need in their own home and to work in partnership with parents in looking after children away from home. The Children Act "Guidance and Regulations Volume 3", on family placements, contains guidance on the planned return of a child to his family after a placement with another carer under a care order. This takes into account the views of parents along with the views of the child—where he is of sufficient understanding—so far as this is practicable and in the best interests of the child.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children in each year of age up to 18 years with care orders are (a) placed with foster families, (b) in homes and (c) in neither; and how many are placed with foster families who are relatives.

Mr. Bowis: Information available centrally is shown in the table.

Hospital Records

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what legislation is in place to safeguard (a) hospital medical records and (b) administrative hospital records; what provisions are made to send them to a central depository or local archives; what differences there are for NHS trusts; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Medical and administrative records of national health service authorities, hospitals and trusts in England and Wales are covered by the Public Records Acts 1958 and 1967. The safe keeping and archiving of these records is the responsibility of individual NHS bodies, under the guidance of the Public Record Office. Advice on this was given to the NHS in health circular HC(89)20, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Hospital records selected for permanent preservation are kept in places of deposit appointed by the Keeper of Public Records on behalf of the Lord Chancellor under section 4(1) of the Public Records Act 1958, the great majority of which are local authority record offices.

Cancer Treatment

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has conducted into which cancers are better treated in a specialist cancer centre and for which cancers where it makes no difference.

Mr. Sackville: On the basis of research undertaken by the childhood cancer research group, funded by the Department at the University of Oxford, the survival rates of children with acute lymphoblastic leukaemia—the most common form of childhood leukaemia—are found to be higher at centres treating larger numbers of patients.

For acute myeloid leukaemia, survival rates in children treated at specialist teaching hospitals were found to be higher.

For several other types of childhood cancer, survival rates were better when children were treated at specialist paediatric oncology centres.

Whether adult cancer patients are better treated in specialist centres, is one of the principal issues being addressed by the Government's Chief Medical Officer's expert advisory group, which is carrying out an overall examination of cancer services.

GP Fundholders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many fundholders have informed her that they would go private if the system were ended.

Dr. Mawhinney: The recent Kings Fund Institute report, "Evaluating the NHS Reforms", states that the abandonment of fundholding

". . .would probably lead to a substantial exodus from the NHS of fundholders setting up private insurance based HMOs".

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has that non-fundholding general practitioners plan to go private.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the provisional figures for (a) the total general practitioner fundholding budget, (b) the total savings in real terms and (c) the total management cost of general practitioner fundholding in real terms in 1992-93.

Dr. Mawhinney: Provisional figures suggest that in 1992-93 general practitioner fundholders achieved savings of £30 million on budgets totalling about £805 million. The management allowance costs for these fundholders was about £19 million.

Laxatives

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths are caused by laxatives every year.

Mr. Sackville: No deaths were recorded due to laxative poisoning—ICD[1] 973.1, 973.2 and 973.3—or due to adverse effects in correct usage—ICD E943.1, E943.2 and E943.3—from 1990 to 1992 in England and Wales.

[1] International Classification of Disease (9th revision).

Diphtheria

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the incidence of diphtheria in EC countries in each year since 1991; and how many cases of diphtheria have been recorded in each year since 1988 in England and Wales.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

[1] Data for 1992 are provisional.

The information relating to European Community countries is not available.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to introduce a booster vaccination for diphtheria.

Mr. Sackville: We are currently considering the introduction of a booster dose.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths from (a) diphtheria and (b) hepatitis B have occurred in the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Drugs Advertising

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which drugs and medicines cannot be advertised by law; and how many deaths are caused each year by such drugs;

(2) what rules govern the advertising of laxatives on television.

Mr. Sackville: Licensed medicines may be advertised under the control of the Medicines Act 1968 and supporting regulations. Those available without prescription may be advertised to the public including by television.

Information on the overall number of deaths caused by drugs is not available.

Water Births

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking, in addition to commissioning the Oxford perinatal epidemiology unit study, to determine the safety for the baby of labour or delivery in water; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Department is currently considering proposals for research into outcomes for babies whose mothers have delivered or laboured in water and will make a decision as soon as possible.

Tobacco Advertising

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect in advertising terms of tobacco-sponsored events on television and the effect of banning such indirect advertising on the consumption of cigarettes.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department of Health discussion document "Effect of tobacco advertising on tobacco consumption" reviewed the available evidence in this area. It made no assessment of either the effect in advertising terms of tobacco sponsored events on television or of the effect of banning indirect advertising on cigarette consumption. Copies of the report, published in October 1992, are available in the Library.

Sterilisation

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the present fees to surgeons performing (a) a vasectomy and (b) a female sterilisation procedure in the NHS.

Dr. Mawhinney: The family planning fees effective from 1 April 1994 are:

	Operating fee £	Anaesthetist's fee £
Fee per case of male sterilisation performed
a. As a separate procedure	74·25	36·65
b. During the course of another procedure	50·25	24·30
Fee per case of female sterilisation performed
a. As a separate procedure	100·45	49·05
b. During the course of another procedure	67·15	32·75

Temazepam

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to ban temazepam capsules.

Mr. Sackville: The licensing authority has no plans to ban temazepam capsules. The matter currently under review by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department is whether temazepam should be rescheduled under the Misuse of Drugs Regulations 1985.

Psychiatric Beds

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average daily cost to the NHS of using (a) a private psychiatric hospital bed and (b) an NHS psychiatric hospital bed in each of the last five years.

Mr. Bowis: The average daily cost to the national health service of using a NHS psychiatric hospital bed in each of the last five years is shown in the table. The annual accounts and financial returns of health authorities do not separately identify expenditure incurred specifically on the purchase of healthcare outside the NHS.

   a. Figures prior to 1991-92 include only direct costs. From 1991-92 they additionally include:
      (i) Overheads
      (ii) Capital charges
   b. Changes in accounting practice.

Nurse Redundancies

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the number of nurses likely to be made redundant by the reorganisation in London health services; and how much money is earmarked for retraining them.

Dr. Mawhinney: The number of redundancies will depend on action taken within individuals trusts and units.

An initial sum of £200,000 has been made available for retraining nurses affected by the changes in London. Additionally, the London implementation group is developing retraining programmes for displaced hospital staff who wish to work in primary and community care.

National Lottery

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances NHS trusts will be allowed to prevent the sale of national lottery tickets from outlets on their premises.

Dr. Mawhinney: This will be a matter for individual national health service trusts.

Sex Education

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those AIDS, sexual health and sexual education projects funded by the Department of Health together with the size of any grants or loans made by her Department in each year since 1990.

Mr. Sackville: Funding in the area of HIV-AIDS and sexual health falls into two categories, allocations to health and local authorities and to the voluntary sector. These all include a proportion of funds for prevention initiatives. Since 1990 the following amounts have been made available:

£ million

	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93	1993-94	1994-95
Health Education Authority/National AIDS helpline	10.00	11.00	11.225	11.506	[1]—
Health Authorities	127.5	137.3	181.5	214.4	228.0
Local Authorities	9.8	10.2	15.3	12.4	12.98
Voluntary Organisations (HIV)	1.80	1.90	1.987	1.927	1.789
Voluntary Organisations (Sexual Health)	.228	.253	.294	.293	.283

[1] To be settled.
A list of individual projects is not available centrally.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the work of her Department, the national health service and the Health education authority to improve the sexual health and sex education of homosexual men and lesbians.

Mr. Sackville: The Government have developed a comprehensive approach to limit the spread of HIV and other sexually transmitted diseases as well as providing treatment and care to those affected. The prevention strategy takes account of a range of sexual behaviours and seeks to discourage practices which carry a risk of HIV infection. The Health Education Authority, national AIDS helpline, voluntary organisations and the national health service all contribute in many ways to this approach.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints regarding private or voluntary nursing homes were received in each district health authority for each year since the implementation of the Registered Homes Act 1984.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private or voluntary nursing home beds, and how many private or voluntary nursing homes, were registered with each district health authority for each of the last five years.

Mr. Bowis: This information will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many whole-time equivalent nursing staff were allocated to registration and inspection duties under the Registered Homes Act 1984 within each district health authority for each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: Health authorities are responsible for the registration and inspection of all independent nursing homes in their area. The number of nurses employed on registration and inspection is a decision for each health authority.

Dental Services

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been deregistered for NHS dentistry treatment in each of the health authority areas within the south West region for the last 52 weeks for which figures are available; and what these totals represent as a proportion of the total population in each case.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information will be placed in the Library. At 30 September 1993 there were 22 more dentists in contract with family health services authorities in South Western region than at 30 September 1992.

Cancer Diagnosis

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines are in place on the training of general practitioners and nurses in cancer diagnosis.

Dr. Mawhinney: Cancer is recognised as a major cause of morbidity and death. As such the diagnosis and treatment of the various forms of cancer figures prominently in the education and training at all stages of a doctor's career.

Nurses are not trained in the diagnosis of cancer which is a medical responsibility.

Breast Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many specialist breast care nurses are employed in the national health service, by region.

Mr. Sackville: There is no specific occupation code for breast care, therefore any nurses working within this area are not separately identifiable.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she plans to change the national health service trusts external finance limit for 1993-94.

Dr. Mawhinney: The external finance limit for national health service trusts in England will be increased by £10,993,000 for 1993-94 from £319,013,000 to £330,006,000, reflecting the take up of agreed end year flexibility entitlement. This will be charged to the reserve and therefore will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Consultancies

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the money spent on all types of consultancy by her Department in 1992-93 was spent by (a) the national health service management executive, (b) by regional health authorities and (c) by centrally run patient services.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 28 March 1994]: Expenditure on consultancy funded from the administration vote of the Department for the national health service management executive in 1992-93 was £6,765,821. Consultancy expenditure incurred from centrally held budgets funded from the hospital and community health services vote is not separately identifiable.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Joy Gardner Case

Mr. Allen: To ask the Attorney-General when the Crown Prosecution Service will bring forward recommendations on the possible prosecutions of those officers involved in the Joy Gardner case; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service is at present considering the evidence which has been obtained as a result of the recent police investigation. I am not yet able to say when a decision will be taken.

Building Projects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General what major building projects, valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed since 1989 in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department.

The Attorney-General: None.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 31 March 1994

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Child Witnesses

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many pre-recorded pre-trial interviews, in line with the Criminal Justice Act 1991 and the "Manual of Good Practice", have been made since the coming into force of the Act; how many have been presented in evidence in child abuse cases; and how many have been refused as evidence.

Mr. John M. Taylor: It is estimated that between the date of implementation of the relevant provisions in the Criminal Justice Act 1991—1 October 1992—and 30 September 1993, in excess of 14,000 interviews with child witnesses have been recorded on videotape. Between 1 October 1992 and 1 January 1994, there were 306 applications to submit a pre-recorded videotaped interview with a child witness under section 32A of the Criminal Justice Act 1988, as amended by section 54 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991. In 109 cases the tapes were shown in court. Applications to submit pre-recorded evidence have been refused in only 10 cases.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what measures are being taken by courts in Liverpool to protect child witnesses with particular reference to use of screens, television link equipment and pre-recorded interviews; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Two sets of television links and video playback equipment are in place in the Crown court sitting at Liverpool combined court centre. Arrangements can be made for screens to be available at the Crown and County court in Liverpool if required. All magistrates courts in Liverpool have access to screens and video playback equipment, and the youth court is equipped with TV links. When necessary, child witnesses appearing before the magistrates may use the television links in place at the Crown court centre.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which courts in Liverpool have child liaison officers to protect child witnesses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: There is a designated child liaison officer for every Crown court centre, including the one at Liverpool combined court centre.

SCOTLAND

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of public appointments made by his Department in 1993 were of (a) Asians and (b) black people; and if he will list their names.

Mr. Lang: Except for children's panels where ethnic origin is neither sought nor recorded, as far as I am aware, no Asian or black people were appointed in 1993 to the bodies sponsored by the Scottish Office and listed in "Public Bodies 1993".

Traffic Orders

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many temporary traffic orders were made by local authorities in each year since 1985 under section 14 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 to restrict or prohibit the use of footpaths or bridleways for which the Scottish Office gave consent under section 15(2) of that Act for an extension of the period for which the order was in force.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Temporary traffic orders affecting footpaths and bridleways are not identified separately from those affecting road traffic and the information could be supplied only at a disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Lang: The number and percentage of officers in grades 1 to 7, including grade equivalents, and overall in the Scottish Office, its executive agencies and associated departments, excluding the Scottish prison service, who were (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, are shown below:

Number and percentage of officers who are women—position as at 1 April 1993

Grade (and equivalents)	Women	Percentage
3	4	16·7
4	3	16·7
5	17	12·7
6	37	18·5
7	80	17·1
All Grades (Headcount)	2,811	42·2

Notes:

At April 1993, the total number of respondents to my Department's Ethnic Monitoring Survey who described themselves as belonging to an ethnic minority was 29 or 0·5 per cent. of the total number of respondents. Of that number 3 were at Grade 7 level and above.

At 1 July 1993, there were 2 registered disabled persons at Grade 6 level and one at Grade 7 level which represents 1 per cent. and 0·2 per cent. respectively of staff in these grades. There were 87 registered disabled persons (1·3 per cent.) who were recorded as employed in my Department.

Motorists (Culpable Homicide Charges)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many drivers of motor vehicles have been charged with culpable homicide in the last 20 years for which information is available; how many such charges have proceeded to trial; and how many convictions have resulted.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not available. However, I understand that there are very few such prosecutions—no more than one or two per year on average.

Full-time Employment

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the definition in terms of hours of a full-time job in 1979 and what is it now; and if he will list the changes in definition with their dates and the reasons for them.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have been asked to reply.

For the purposes of collecting and producing statistical information, a full-time worker is defined, in terms of hours worked, as an employee who works more than 30 hours per week, excluding overtime. For teachers and academics this is modified to 25 hours or more per week.

This definition has been used consistently since before 1979.

PRIME MINISTER

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister how many Proton cars were purchased by the Cabinet Office in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

The Prime Minister: None.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Prime Minister what was the total cost of his official entertaining in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his office's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

The Prime Minister: The total cost of official hospitality by my office, for each year since 1990-91, is as follows:

Year	Cost £
1990-91	23,830
1991-92	40,976
1992-93	30,023

An outturn for 1993-94 is not yet available.

Former Prime Ministers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what restrictions govern the spending by former Prime Ministers of their annual allowances;

(2) if he will list the total allowances paid to each former Prime Minister in each year since 1991;

(3) what mechanisms are in place to monitor the use of allowances paid to former Prime Ministers.

The Prime Minister: On 1 April 1991, I introduced an allowance to assist former Prime Ministers with the continuing heavy burden of office and secretarial costs arising from their special position in public life. The allowance is similar in purpose and amount to the parliamentary office costs allowance but is paid in respect of public not parliamentary duties.

The total payments from the allowance are as follows:

Year	Payments £
1991-92	88,956
1992-93	124,981
1993-94	[1]130,000

[1] Estimate.

I do not think it right to disclose the amounts claimed by individual former Prime Ministers, any more than the House discloses details of claims by individual Members under the office costs allowance.

Payments from the allowance are subject to the same scrutiny and controls as other payments from voted monies.

Local Government Legislation

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the Acts of Parliament and Consolidation Acts that affect local government which have been introduced by his Department since 1990.

The Prime Minister: None.

Injunctions

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions, and when, since January 1990 the Government have met costs of injunctions against publications; at what cost; against which publications and on behalf of which Departments or Ministers.

The Prime Minister: There are no centrally held records of such cases.

Interception of Communications Act 1985

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Prime Minister when the annual report of the commissioner appointed under the Interception of Communications Act 1985 will be laid before the House; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: A copy of Sir Thomas Bingham's second annual report, for 1993, has been laid before the House today in accordance with section 8(7) of the Interception of Communications Act 1985. The confidential annexe to the report has been excluded from that copy in accordance with section 8(8) of the 1985 Act. I am grateful to the commissioner for his report. I note in particular his observations that the Secretaries of State take great care to satisfy themselves that the warrants are necessary for the purposes stated in the Act, and that the system for the issue of warrants is working as intended by Parliament.

Sir Thomas Bingham's appointment as commissioner will end on 10 April. I am grateful to him for the work he has done in that capacity. He will be succeeded, with effect from 11 April, by Lord Nolan.

Security Service Act 1989

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Prime Minister when the annual report of the commissioner appointed under the Security Service Act 1989 will be laid before the House; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: A copy of Lord Justice Stuart-Smith's fourth annual report, for 1993, has been laid before the House today in accordance with section 4(6) of the Security Service Act 1989. The confidential annexe to the report has been excluded from that copy in accordance with section 4(7) of the 1989 Act. I am grateful to the commissioner for his work in reviewing the issue of warrants and in providing assistance to the tribunal as provided in the Act. His report confirms that he is satisfied that the Secretaries of State have exercised their warranty powers in accordance with the provisions of the 1989 Act.

Sarajevo

Mr. Bates: To ask the Prime Minister what progress has been made with the initiative which he and President Clinton announced for the reconstruction of Sarajevo.

The Prime Minister: The draft report of the United Kingdom-United States civil planning mission for Sarajevo is now available. It is being circulated widely among donors, and President Clinton and I hope to transmit the final version to the United Nations Secretary-General shortly. I shall place a copy in the Library of the House.

When I was in Sarajevo, I announced a United Kingdom contribution of £5 million for the most immediately needed activities. These are under way. They include help to restore electricial power more widely in Sarajevo, immediate repairs to the gas system to enable domestic gas consumers to use their facilities again safely, the extension of the tram system, and a programme of help to the hospitals in Sarajevo to support the work which is being done there.

I am pleased to say that the United States is making available a similar immediate contribution. Discussions are now taking place with the United Nations and other donors on how best to take forward the recommendations in the report.

Union (Scotland)

Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on Scotland's position in the Union.

The Prime Minister: The Government stand firmly behind Scotland's place in the Union. That is the basis on which we fought the last election and, as a result, were the only party to increase both our share of votes and number of seats in Scotland.

I intend to continue to reaffirm the Government's commitment to Scotland's position at every possible opportunity, including during future visits to Scotland.

I regret that, in answering a question from the hon. Member for Glasgow, Shettleston (Mr. Marshall) on 10 March, I stated that the data for the opinion poll to which he referred were collected before my most recent visit to Scotland. I subsequently ascertained that they were collected after the visit.

Council of Europe

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Prime Minister what changes there are to the United Kingdom delegation to the Council of Europe and the Western European Union.

The Prime Minister: Baroness Lockwood has resigned as a substitute member of the delegation, and has been replaced by Baroness Gould of Potternewton.

Iraq (Pharmaceutical Products)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 16 March, Official Report, column 704, what action he is taking on the document concerning pharmaceutical products required in the valleys of the Tigris and Euphrates, and on the provision of water pumps and water filters to Baghdad.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 March 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 23 March, Official Report, column 260.

Institute of Irish Studies

Mr. Parry: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the hon. Members who have written to him asking for his support for the funding of a chair at the institute of Irish studies at the university of Liverpool; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 March 1994]: I have received representations from the hon. Member. I will reply in due course.

Friendly Countries

Mr. Byers: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) of 23 March, Official Report, column 259-60, if he will list those countries and Governments presently regarded as friendly.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 March 1994]: These countries would include all those which share our objective of seeking a stable international order characterised by the peaceful settlement of disputes, the international rule of law, non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and good government and respect for human rights.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farming Incomes

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of all farming incomes in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the EC has been made up by subsidies in each year since 1990; and what is her estimate for each of the next three years.

Mr. Jack: Total income from farming is a net figure arrived at by subtracting gross input from gross output, of which subsidy payments are a part, and then taking into account land and labour costs, depreciation and interest charges. The table below expresses CAP expenditure as a percentage of farmers' total output for both the United Kingdom and the European Union. National payments to farmers by other member states are not readily available and so, to make comparisons meaningful, such payments are not included in the United Kingdom figures. Estimates for future years are not available.

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what information her Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons;

(2) what procedures her Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Jack: In making appointments, we look carefully at a range of criteria including merit, experience and suitability to ensure that the most appropriate people are appointed for the job. Information held by the Ministry in respect of individuals relate to these qualities.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Jack: Information about ministerial appointments, including appointments attracting salaries, to public bodies sponsored by this Ministry are given in "Public Bodies 1993". Except where otherwise stated in that publication, appointments are made by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food either solely, or jointly with the Ministers of other Departments. All appointments are normally made for a three-year term and the names of appointees are generally made public by means of MAFF news releases.

Details of public bodies subject to joint appointments are given in the table and the names of the appointees to those bodies were given in the answers to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Walton (Mr. Kilfoyle) in the Official Report, references as shown.

Lettuce Imports

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action she is taking to assess the extent to which dumping of Spanish iceberg lettuce on the British market is undermining British growers; and what corrective action she is prepared to take.

Mr. Jack: Lettuce prices on United Kingdom markets are currently extremely low, largely as a result of over-supply within the Community. However, as I told the hon. Gentleman during the debate on the common agricultural policy on 24 March, if he can provide firm evidence to support these claims of unfair competition we will pursue the matter vigorously with the Commission and the member states concerned.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall in her Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities or (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Jack: The information for MAFF and its executive agencies is as follows:

Grade equivalent	Women		From ethnic minorities		Registered disabled people
	Number	Percentage of total staff	Number of respondents to questionnaire	Percentage total of all respondents to questionnaire	Number	Percentage of total staff
1	—	—	—	—	—	—

All staff	4,857	46·0	426	4·4	159	1·6

Notes:

1. Figures for women and ethnic minorities are on a "head-count" basis and cover non-industrial staff as at 1 April 1993. The ethnic minority figures derive from a voluntary ethnic questionnaire and the response rate on that date was 94 per cent.
2. Figures for women exclude 11 officers on loan or seconded to other Government Departments.
3. Figures for registered disabled persons are on a full-time equivalent basis and cover non-industrial and industrial staff as at 1 July 1993. The figures do not include staff with disabilities who have chosen not to register as disabled.
4. All figures exclude casuals or seasonal staff.

Sheep Annual Premium

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list by county how many applications for payment of sheep annual premium she has received in the current year; and what proportion in each county remained unpaid on 1 March.

Mr. Jack: The table shows for each county the total number of claims under the 1994 sheep annual premium scheme lodged with the Ministry. No claims have been paid as at 1 March. It is expected that the first advance payment will be made in the autumn in the usual way.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by what date she expects all applications for sheep annual premium in the current year to be paid out.

Mr. Jack: I expect payments under the 1994 sheep annual premium scheme to be completed by June 1995.

Salmon

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether, in the context of her consideration of a proposal to postpone the opening date of the north-east coast salmon drift net fishery, she will also consider the proposal made by netsmen that the season should be extended to the end of September.

Mr. Jack: I can confirm that my right hon. Friend has received a request from the National Federation of Fisherman's Organisations to extend the season for the north-east coast salmon drift net fishery if the opening date is postponed; this will, of course, be looked at carefully.

Central Science Laboratory

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the future of the Central Science Laboratory.

Mr. Soames: An enlarged and strengthened Central Science Laboratory agency is being launched on 1 April. This results from the merger of the CSL agency and the food science laboratories at Norwich and Aberdeen.

The new agency will be equipped to provide my Department with a range of scientific services and research and development to protect the food chain from the field to the consumer. The merger will produce significant benefits in terms of efficiency with a reduction in overheads and the more cost effective use of equipment and facilities. The enlarged agency will be better placed to respond to the challenge of competitive tendering in relation to the commissioning of research and development by my Department and the market testing of services.

A copy of the agency's framework document is being placed in the Library of the House.

Clenbuterol

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the testing of pig liver pâté for Clenbuterol.

Mr. Soames: Following the publication in October 1993 of a report by Somerset county council that traces of Clenbuterol had been found in samples of pig liver pâté manufactured in Belgium, sampling of pâté across the United Kingdom was increased under the retail animal products survey. Between September and November 1993, 71 samples of pig liver pâté, of which 48 were manufactured in Belgium, were purchased from retail outlets throughout the United Kingdom and screened for residues of Clenbuterol. The results of the first 25 samples, which showed no evidence of contamination with Clenbuterol, were announced in a written answer on 26 October 1993, Official Report, columns 562-63. Analysis of the remaining samples has been completed. None has shown any evidence of contamination with Clenbuterol.

ENVIRONMENT

Freephone and Freepost

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the use of freephone and freepost facilities currently being operated by his Department; how much these facilities are costing; for what purposes these facilities are being used; and how much his Department has spent on operating freephone and freepost facilities in each financial year since 1979.

Mr. Baldry: My Department operates a freephone information service which gives information on current air pollution levels. The telephone number is 0800 556677.

Costs for	£
1992-93	29,629
1993[1]	38,588

[1] To date.

A freephone inquiry service was operated for the duration of the rent to mortgage advertising campaign, from October 1993. The purpose of the service was to assist the public in obtaining a leaflet giving further information about the scheme. The costs of the freephone service were £16,036. A freepost facility for the same purpose cost an additional £1,995.

A freepost reply service was used for the questionnaires enclosed in the document "London: Making the Best Better" at a cost of £2,750.

My Department also operates a general freepost service which can be used for inquiries and replies to major publicity campaigns. In the financial year 1993-94 the cost of this service has been approximately £4,950.

There were no costs for freepost or freephone services in 1992-93 except for the air quality line above.

Information on the years prior to 1992-93 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Pollution

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assistance his Department has given to companies to inform them of their charter rights in regard to Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mr. Atkins: On 22 March HMIP launched its charter in the shape of a booklet "Pollution Prevention—Our Common Concern". Some 30,000 copies have been printed.

The launch was made at the ET '94 exhibition at the national exhibition centre in Birmingham, where HMIP had a stand. By the end of the exhibition 1,200 copies had been taken by visitors, many of them from industry.

In addition, copies have been sent to every local authority, trade associations, environmental groups, and to every Member of this House. It was also the subject of a full press release to all national and regional media.

Copies are also available in every HMIP regional office, and pollution inspectors have been tasked to ensure that every company they inspect or visit receives a copy.

The HMIP charter is also referred to in the DOE Publication "Your Council and the Environment" and in the HMIP booklet "Protecting Britain's Environment".

The full tex of the charter will shortly become available to the public via the new "ECOFACTS" 24-hour a day phone-in, fax-out line, as part of a battery of HMIP information including an index to the public registers held at regional offices.

Initial reaction to the publication has been very encouraging.

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the distance between each station on the proposed Lewisham extension of the docklands light railway assuming that (a) the planned stations at Island Gardens and Cutty Sark are constructed and (b) there is no intermediate station between Mudchute and Greenwich.

Sir George Young: The approximate distance in metres between stations on the proposed Lewisham extension is as follows:

	Metres
Mudchute to Island Gardens	400
Island Gardens to Cutty Sark	700
Cutty Sark to Greenwich	700
Greenwich to Deptford Bridge	700
Deptford Bridge to Elverson Road	800
Elverson Road to Lewisham	550

If there were to be no intermediate station between Mudchute and Greenwich, the distance between those stations would be 1,800 m, of which 400 m would be under the River Thames.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average distance between stations on (a) the original docklands light railway, (b) the Beckton extension of the docklands light railway and (c) the proposed Lewisham extension of the docklands light railway including the planned stations at Island Gardens and Cutty Sark.

Sir George Young: The average distance in metres between stations on (a) the original docklands light railway, including the extension to Bank, is 880; on (b) the Beckton extension, including Canning Town, which is under construction, is 700; on (c) the proposed Lewisham extension including the planned stations at Island gardens and Cutty Sark, is 640.

Local Government Legislation

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the Acts of Parliament and Consolidation Acts that affect local government which have been introduced by his Department since 1990.

Mr. Baldry: The following Acts of Parliament which affect local government have been introduced by the Department of the Environment since 1990. The list also includes consolidation Acts in respect of which the Department has responsibility, and legislation introduced before 1990 but receiving Royal Assent since then.

* Town and Country Planning Act 1990 (c.8)
* Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990 (c.9)
* Planning (Hazardous Substances) Act 1990 (c.10)
* Planning (Consequential Provisions) Act 1990 (c.11)

Ombudsman Service (Housing Association Tenants)

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the cost of establishing the housing association tenants ombudsman service; how much the operation of the service will cost; how these costs are broken down; how many staff are employed by the service; and what is its current remit.

Sir George Young: The ombudsman service for housing association tenants became operational in November 1993. The operating budget is as follows:

	1993-94 £'000	1994-95 £'000	1995-96 £'000
Staff costs	150	227	227
Non-staff costs[1]	79	145	143
Mediation/Legal, other Operational costs	103	123	110
	332	495	480

[1] In 1993-94, there was an additional sum of £24,000 to set up premises.

The total staffing complement available to the ombudsman service is seven.

The main remit of the ombudsman service is to deal fairly and effectively with complaints about maladministration by registered housing associations. The service considers complaints from housing association tenants, applicants for a housing association tenancy and people receiving housing management services from an association.

Waste Shipments Directive

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what draft circulars he has recently released to waste regulation officers on the proposed changes to United Kingdom legislation required to meet obligations under EC directive 259/93 on waste shipments by 6 May.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Brentford and Isleworth (Mr. Deva) on 2 March, Official Report, column 714.

Asthma

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the extent of a link between the incidence of asthma and (a) air pollution in general and (b) oxides of nitrogen; and what steps he is taking to reduce air pollution in general and the amount of nitrogen oxide in the atmosphere.

Mr. Atkins: The Government are continuing to assess the links between air pollution and asthma, with the assistance of its advisory bodies on the health impacts of air pollution. At present it appears that while the causes of asthma remain unclear, air pollution can aggravate attacks in those already with the condition. The health effects of oxides of nitrogen were considered in a report by the Department of Health's advisory group on the medical aspects of air pollution episodes—MAAPE—published in November 1993, a copy of which has been deposited in the Library.

The systems for control of industrial emissions established in the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and increasingly stringent vehicle emission controls are expected to secure significant reduction in the level of most pollutants over the next 10 years. Emissions of nitrogen oxides will be reduced in line with the United Kingdom's commitments under the Sofia protocol to the United Nations Commission for Europe convention on transboundary air pollution, signed in November 1988.

I propose shortly to publish a discussion paper as the first stage of a consultative process on measures to secure further improvement in air quality.

Opencast Mining

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what policy he has on subsequent applications for opencast being made for the same site after planning permission has been refused; and what period of time must elapse before a reapplication may be made.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on Monday 28 March, Official Report, columns 493-94.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on whether very special circumstances must be shown by the applicant before compulsory rights orders may be granted under the Opencast Coal Act 1958 for a second application to be granted for the same site.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on Monday 28 March, Official Report, column 494.

Biodiversity

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the members of the biodiversity action plan steering group; what are its terms of reference; and when he expects it to publish costed targets for key species and habitats.

Mr. Atkins: I expect to make an announcement shortly on membership of the group. The status and remit of the group are set out in paragraph 10.40 of "Biodiversity: the UK Action Plan" (Cm 2428) a copy of which is in the Library.

The plan commits the Government to publishing costed targets to key species and habitats during 1995.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are being taken to improve the accessibility of wildlife data and encourage public awareness and involvement in conserving biodiversity.

Mr. Atkins: These are matters which are being taken forward on a broad front by the Government, the countryside agencies and non-governmental organisations, and which are among the issues to be addressed by the biodiversity action plan steering group.

European Environment Agency

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many nominations he has received by organisations wishing to contribute to the European Environment Agency as (i) a topic centre or (ii) as part of a national information network.

Mr. Atkins: Some 104 organisations have expressed interest in both topic centre status and in participating in the national information network. A further 50 organisations have said they want to be considered as topic centres and another 28 are seeking to join the national information network.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received nominations from (i) English Nature, (ii) Scottish Natural Heritage, (iii) the Countryside Council for Wales or (iv) the Joint Nature Conservation Committee to contribute to the European Environment Agency as a topic centre or as part of a national information network.

Mr. Atkins: All four organisations have said they want to contribute to the work of the European Environment Agency both as information network participants and as topic centres.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what moneys are available for urban and regeneration expenditure for 1994-95; how much is available under each of the 20 targeted Government programmes contained within the single regeneration budget; what were the corresponding figures for each year since 1988-89 in cash terms and at current prices; and what is the planned expenditure for 1995-96 and 1996-97 in cash terms at current prices.

Mr. Baldry: Planned funding by my Department on urban and regeneration expenditure in 1994-95 is as follows:

	£ million
Urban Development Corporations	286
Housing Action Trusts	88
English Partnerships	181
Estate Action	373
City Challenge	[1]213
Urban Programme	83
Task Forces	16
City Action Teams	1
Safer Cities	4
Section 11 (part)	60
Ethnic Minority Grant/Business Initiative	6
Programme Development Fund	3
TEC Challenge	4
Local Initiative Fund	29
Business Start Up Scheme	70
Education Business Partnerships	2
Compacts	6
Teacher Placement Service	3
Grants for Education Support and Training	5
Regional Enterprise Grants	9
TOTAL: Single Regeneration Budget	1,442
Manchester Regeneration	23
Special Grants Programme	2
Coalfield Areas Fund	2
TOTAL:	1,469

Note: [1] Programme also supported by £19 million from the Housing Corporation.

Information on expenditure in previous years for my Department's programmes can be found in the departmental annual reports and public expenditure White Papers, copies of which are in the Library of the House. Information on previous years' expenditure for the programmes transferring to the single regeneration budget from the Home Office, the Employment Department, the Department of Education and the Department of Trade and Industry will be contained in their respective departmental annual reports.

In 1994-95, the single regeneration budget will largely operate through arrangements in place for the existing 20 programmes being brought together. Commitments under these programmes will be met for 1994-95 and later years. For 1995-96 and beyond, the non-departmental public bodies supported by the budget—English Partnerships, housing action trusts and urban development corporations—will, as now, receive specific allocations; and the rest of the budget will be combined.

On current plans, the budget will be worth some £1·3 billion in each of 1995-96 and 1996-97. The Department of the Environment's 1994 annual report provides more detailed information.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what moneys are available for local authorities to bid for and are uncommitted from the urban and regeneration expenditure for 1994-95; how much is available under each of the 20 targeted Government programmes; and what are the corresponding figures for 1995-96 and 1996-97 in cash terms and at current prices;

(2) what funds are available for all non-urban programme areas to bid for, that are uncommitted, from the single regeneration budget excluding the year 1995-96; and how much is available under each of the 20 targeted Government programmes within the single regeneration budget;

(3) what funds are available for all urban programme authorities to bid for, that are uncommitted, from the single regeneration budget, for the year 1995-96; and how much is available under each of the 20 targeted Government programmes within the single regeneration budget.

Mr. Baldry: In 1994-95 the funds available under the single regeneration budget will be taken up in meeting existing commitments from the 20 programmes which habve been brought together to form the budget.

The total budget, on current plans, will be worth some £1·3 billion in 1995-96 and it is expected that about £100 million will be available to support bids from local partnerships. The budget will be available throughout England, and we intend to issue guidance on bidding soon.

On current plans, the budget will again be worth some £1·3 billion in 1966-67. It is too early to say how much will be available for bidding after 1995-96. The availability of resources will depend on the levels of commitments from previous years and the outcome on the annual public expenditure surveys.

I provided further information about the programmes being brought together in the budget in the separate reply I gave to the hon. Member today.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each year since 1981 in cash terms and at current prices the total amount of moneys made available to (a) urban programme authorities, (b) non-urban programme authorities and (c) urban regeneration in (i) urban development corporations, (ii) urban programme, (iii) city grant, or urban regeneration grant or urban development grant, (iv) derelict land grant, (v) city challenge, (vi) housing action trusts, (vii) estate action, (viii) safer cities, (ix) urban crime fund, (x) task forces, (xi) city action teams, (xii) single regeneration budget and (xiii) other programmes available relating to linkage between economic, social and physical regeneration.

Mr. Baldry: The information sought is not available and cannot readily be produced in the form specified. In previous years a number of Government Departments have contributed to urban regeneration through a wide range of programmes under the action for cities initiative. From 1 April 1994, 20 regeneration programmes are being brought together to form a single regeneration budget which will be administered through the unified network of Government offices for the regions.

Some information on expenditure on these programmes in previous years, including the Home Office's safer cities programme, can be found in the relevant departmental annual reports and public expenditure White Papers, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what funds are available from the single regeneration budget for urban programme authorities and for non-urban programme authorities; what different criteria or rules will be adopted for the 57 urban programme areas; and how much is available for either urban programme or non-urban programme authorities and each of the 20 targeted programmes within the single regeneration budget.

Mr. Baldry: As the single regeneration budget is available throughout England, and proposals for funding will be locally driven, the existing list of 57 urban priority areas will not be used to direct budget resources and is being discontinued. In assessing proposals which aim mainly at relieving deprivation, the Government offices for the regions will take account of detailed information about local conditions based on the 1991 index of local conditions, to be published soon, and other relevant data.

I provided further information about the programmes being brought together in the budget in the separate reply I gave the hon. Member today.

Home Ownership

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the percentage of home ownership in 1979 and what it is now; and how many more home owners there are now in the United Kingdom than there were in 1979.

Sir George Young: The available figures of the proportion of dwellings which are owner-occupied is shown in the table below:

Percentage

	England	United Kingdom
December 1979	56·6	54·7
September 1993	67·4	[1]66·3

[1]December 1992.

The number of owner-occupier households in England was estimated at 9,170,000 households in 1977-78 and 13,460,000 in 1993. These figures are derived from the national dwelling and housing survey of 1977-78 and the labour force survey 1993 respectively, and are subject to sampling error. Comparable figures for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are not readily available to this Department.

Exhaust Emissions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has for improving the accuracy of measuring fine particulate matter and benzene arising from vehicle exhaust emissions.

Mr. Atkins: The improvement of the accuracy of measurements of particulate and benzene in vehicle exhausts depends on the continuing development of measuring equipment. Contractors making these measurements for my Department will be expected to use the most up-to-date and accurate techniques practicable.

Caravan Sites

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish (a) a list of those local authorities in England and Wales that have a designation order under the Caravan Sites Act 1968 and (b) the names of authorities which have made an application, and where a decision is pending, his decision.

Mr. Baldry: I have arranged for an up-to-date list of English local authorities designated under the Caravan Sites Act 1968 to be placed today in the Library of the House. Nine formal applications for designation are at present before my right hon. Friend. Of these, he has decided to designate the area of Wychavon district council in Hereford and Worcester. He is not yet in a position to announce decisions on the remaining applications.

For information about designation in Wales I refer my hon. Friend to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Rented Accommodation

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the change in households in the private rented sector; and what percentage of households have been in private rented accommodation in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: Estimated numbers and percentages of households in private rented accommodation in England are as follows:

	number	percentages
1989	1,610,000	8·6
1990	1,690,000	8·9
1991	1,760,000	9·3
1992	1,790,000	9·2
1993	1,950,000	9·9

These figures are from labour force surveys and are subject to sampling error. They nevertheless provide a good indication of the trend over this period in privately renting households.

Enterprise Zones

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce the EC decision on the proposals for enterprise zones in East Durham, East Midlands and the Dearne Valley; and when he expects to designate the new zones.

Sir George Young: I am pleased to announce that the EC has accepted, in full, our proposals for the three new enterprise zones. Once arrangements are in place to ensure that EC restrictions on state aids to industry are enforced on the new zones, I expect to issue a letter of invitation to local authorities to submit draft schemes. The subsequent United Kingdom procedures usually take about six months and designations are therefore expected in autumn this year.

Isle of Wight Landslip

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide financial assistance to South Wight borough council under the Bellwin scheme towards its costs of dealing with the landslips which occurred between December 1993 and February 1994.

Mr. Baldry: Yes. My right hon. Friend is satisfied that these incidents were indeed exceptional and that a scheme of assistance should be established under section 155 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Grant will be paid to South Wight borough council to cover 85 per cent. of eligible costs which it has incurred above a threshold in dealing with the emergency.

Flooding, West Sussex

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide financial assistance under the Bellwin scheme to assist local authorities in west Sussex with the costs of dealing with the flooding which occurred in January.

Mr. Baldry: Yes. My right hon. Friend is satisfied that financial relief under the Bellwin scheme would be justified in this case. A scheme of assistance will therefore be established under section 155 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. The Department will pay grant to those authorities in west Sussex which have incurred an undue financial burden as a result of flooding which took place between December 1993 and January 1994. Grant will cover 85 per cent. of eligible costs which are above a threshold.

Perclorethylene

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the legal provisions governing the use of perclorethylene in proximity of food retail businesses.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 22 March 1994]: There are no specific legal provisions, but controls can be exercised under part III of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Homelessness

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households were accepted as homeless in each local authority area in 1979-80; and what are the latest full-year figures.

Sir George Young [holding answer 28 March 1994]: I have today placed in the Library a table giving for each local authority in England the numbers of households which they reported as having accepted responsibility in the years 1979 to 1993 to secure permanent accommodation, under the homelessness provisions of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 and the 1985 Housing Act.

Rural Communities

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much funding in each of the last five years and for the next financial year has been allocated by the Rural Development Commission to the voluntary sector for assisting rural communities; and if he will list those organisations and how much each received.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 29 March 1994]: The table shows the financial support which the Rural Development Commission has given in this period to the voluntary sector either through support for voluntary organisations themselves or through projects run by the voluntary sector. These include national organisations such as Help the Aged, Good Practice in Mental Health, National Youth Agency, Rural Housing Trust. In addition, many grants are made to voluntary and community organisations as part of rural development programmes in the commission's priority areas. Detailed information on the sums and organisations involved could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

[1] The majority of grants under this head are for projects to the voluntary sector.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what policies the Rural Development Commission has for the voluntary sector to be a vehicle for assisting rural communities.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 29 March 1994]: The Rural Development Commission regards voluntary activity and community self-help as an important means of tackling economic and social problems in rural areas, especially those relating to services, such as transport or village shops, and to the disadvantage experienced by particular groups of people, for example, the elderly, which is heightened by their living in a rural area. Nationally, the commission seeks to strengthen the rural work of the voluntary sector by supporting the National Council for Voluntary Organisations and Action with Communities in Rural England in their roles as national umbrella organisations as well as working in partnership with national voluntary organisations such as Help the Aged or the Rural Housing Trust on specific projects or issues. Countrywide, it supports both the work of rural community councils which provide support to voluntary organisations in each county as well as a wide range of local projects put forward by voluntary and community groups principally as part of rural development programmes in the commission's priority areas.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what procedures are used by board members and officials of the Rural Development Commission to inform themselves of the needs of rural areas nationally and locally.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 29 March 1994]: The Rural Development Commission uses a range of means to inform itself about the needs of rural areas nationally and locally. It draws on published research and data from a wide variety of sources and where necessary commissions its own research or surveys to fill gaps in knowledge or data. It also liaises with a broad range of organisations involved in economic and social development, including local authorities, training and enterprise councils, rural community councils, ACRE and the National Council for Voluntary Organisations. In its priority areas the commission works in partnership with the rural development programme committees, which assess the economic and social needs of the areas concerned and develop a programme of action to tackle the problems identified. All these partnerships provide a valuable source of information on the needs of rural areas.

The commission also funds some demonstration projects designed to improve information on rural needs and issues, and test out solutions to rural problems.

WALES

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the 20 independent schools which currently have the highest proportions of their school rolls made up by pupils covered by the assisted places scheme; and if he will give the percentage of pupils covered by the assisted places scheme and the size of the school rolls.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Eight schools participate in the assisted places scheme in Wales. The information requested is set out in the table.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what plans he has to reduce environmental protection measures as overseen by his Department in the Principality;

(2) what assessment he has made of the opportunities to deregulate environmental protection measures in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office is fully committed to the deregulation initiative. Proposed changes to the Clean Air Act 1993 and Control of Pollution Act 1974—to be implemented using powers contained in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Bill—will take effect in Wales as well as England.

The Government are also currently considering responses to the second round of consultation concerning "Amendments to the Prescribed Processes and Substances Regulations"—a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Many of its proposals are intended to minimise the regulatory burden on industry without compromising necessary environmental standards.

Council Tax Appeals

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for (a) each district value listing office area and (b) each district council area (i) the total numbers of appeals received against banding for the council tax, (ii) the number of appeals which have been dealt with and completed and (ii) as a percentage of (i).

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The position on 28 February 1994 was as follows:

Lumpy Skin Disease

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of lumpy skin disease occurred in each year since 1985.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None.

Health Promotion Authority for Wales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of his reply to Mr. David Griffiths, board member of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales, and Mr. Griffith's letter to him of 29

January 1994 in relation to improving financial controls and management procedures in the authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Arrangements have been made for a copy of my letter to be placed in the Library of the House. Mr. Griffiths marked his letter as "Private and Confidential". The release of this letter is a matter for him.

Rawnsley Psychiatric Clinic

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the south Glamorgan health authority concerning the proposed closure of the Rawnsley psychiatric clinic at the University hospital of Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwoood: None.

Departmental Buildings (Cleaning)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the cleaning contract for he Welsh Office Crown buildings, Cathays park.

Mr. Redwood: My Department's offices at Cathays park are currently cleaned by Mitie Cleaning (South West) Ltd. under a two-year contract, which runs until 31 December 1994.

Hip and Knee Joint Replacement

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the South Glamorgan and Mid Glamorgan health authorities in relation to the non-completion by the former of the latter's contract for hip and knee joint replacements; what is the value of the refund required by the latter from the former for non-completion of the contract; in what form the refund will be made; and what guidelines he has issued to cover refund transactions between Welsh health authorities.

Mr. Redwood: This matter has been resolved by the Mid and South Glamorgan health authorities. I am advised that at 1 April 1994 there will be no outstanding financial issues. Guidance on the resolution of contract disputes was issued on 1991.

EMPLOYMENT

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what factors account for the fall in employment in manufacturing industry in the United Kingdom since 1990; and how much of the increase over the same period in output per person employed is a reflection of the faster rate of contraction in labour intensive industries and occupations.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Employment fell due to a number of factors including the cyclical downturn in the economy. Productivity growth has been strong across manufacturing, whatever the compositional changes.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total cost of official entertaining in his Department in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The total cost of official entertaining in the Department in 1992-93 was £48,702; in 1993-94 it was £33,666. Figures for 1990-91 and 1991-92 are stored off-line on magnetic tape and cannot be recalled until all current end-of-year accounts for the Department have been processed. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the figures can be obtained.

Working Hours

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 11 March, Official Report, column 433, concerning rewards for productivity, whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the estimated number of hours worked in the whole economy and in manufacturing each year since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Estimates from the labour force survey—LFS—of the total number of hours worked are available since 1984 and are shown in the following table:

Total hours worked by employees and self-employed

Great Britain Not seasonally adjusted

Millions

Quarter	Total hours worked in manufacturing	Total hours in whole economy
Spring 1984	227	845
Spring 1985	231	863
Spring 1986	232	870
Spring 1987	223	882
Spring 1988	237	925
Spring 1989	234	951
Spring 1990	234	959
Spring 1991	222	939
Spring 1992	190	816
Spring 1993	189	815
Autumn 1993	188	829

Source: Labour Force Survey.

Note:

Methodological improvements to the LFS introduced in 1992 mean that estimates of hours worked from 1992 onwards are of better quality than figures for earlier years.

Strikes

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were (a) the number of strikes and (b) the number of working days lost through strikes in the latest year for which figures were last lower.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: It is provisionally estimated that there were 211 strikes in 1993, the lowest in any calendar year since records began in 1891.

The number of working days lost is provisionally estimated at 600,000, the lowest since records began in 1891, apart from 1992 where 500,000 days were lost.

Vane Tempest Colliery

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received from the Coalfield Communities Campaign on Vane Tempest colliery, the work force and employment prospects; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am not aware of any representations being made specific to Vane Tempest colliery.

Outdoor Education Centres

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 16 March, Official Report, column 719, what information is collected by his Department about outdoor education centres.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Health and Safety Executive has collected information about standards of health and safety appropriate to the activities that are undertaken at outdoor education centres and about the locations of centres. The information has been gathered with the help of organisations such as the Sports Council, tourist boards and national governing bodies, and the HSE has drawn on local knowledge in the area which are participating in the proposed special programme of inspections.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 28 March 1994, Official Report, columns 524-25.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many deaths were reported to the Health and Safety Executive in each region in each year since 1983 in (a) agriculture, forestry and fisheries, (b) energy and water supply, (c) manufacturing, (d) construction and (e) the service sector; and how many of these were deaths of (i) employees, (ii) self-employed and (iii) members of the public.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Figures for the financial years 1986-87 to 1992-93 are provided in the tables which have been placed in the Library. Fatal injuries for the years 1983 to 1985 were assigned to an earlier industrial classification and aggregation on a regional basis into the sectors specified is not possible except at disproportionate cost.

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many major injuries were reported to the HSE in each region in each year since 1983 in (a) agriculture, forestry and fisheries, (b) energy and water supply, (c) manufacturing, (d) construction and (e) the service sectors; and how many of these were injuries of (i) employees, (ii) the self-employed and (iii) members of the public.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Figures for the financial years 1986-87 to 1992-93 are provided in the tables which have been placed in the Library. Due to changes in reporting legislation, major injuries reported for the years 1983 to 1985 are not directly comparable with those for later years. In addition, the 1983 and 1984 injuries were assigned to an earlier industrial classification and aggregation on a regional basis into the sectors specified is not possible except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many minor injuries involving three or more days off work were reported to the Health and Safety Executive in each region in each year since 1983 in (a) agriculture, forestry and fisheries, (b) energy and water supply, (c) manufacturing, (d) construction and (e) the service sector; and how many of these were injuries of (i) employees and (ii) the self-employed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Figures for the financial years 1986-87 to 1992-93 are provided in the tables which have been placed in the Library. There was no requirement to notify the Health and Safety Executive of injuries causing incapacity for normal work for more than three days during the years 1983 to 1985.

EDUCATION

Local Government Legislation

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the Acts of Parliament and consolidation Acts that affect local government which have been introduced by his Department since 1990.

Mr. Boswell: The following Acts affect local education authorities:

School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Act 1991—1991, chapter 49
Further and Higher Education Act 1992—1992, chapter 13
Education (Schools) Act 1992—1992, chapter 38
Education Act 1993—1993, chapter 35.

Advertising Campaigns

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 14 February, Official Report, columns 587-88, what was the budgeted and actual cost of each advertising campaign listed.

Mr. Robin Squire: The costs are as follows:

	£ Budgeted Cost	£ Actual Cost
The 1993 school testing campaign	450,000	449,000
Charters for Further and Higher Education campaign	500,000	486,000
GM schools advertising campaign	200,000	207,000

	£ Budgeted Cost	£ Estimated Cost[1]
The 1994 school testing campaign	500,000	500,000

[1]This campaign is still running.

Teachers

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time school teachers there were in the state sector in each local education authority area in the three most recent years available; and how many in each category were newly appointed.

Mr. Robin Squire: The table following shows the number of full-time qualified teachers and the full-time equivalent of part-time qualified teachers in the maintained nursery, primary and secondary sector, including self-governing schools, in each local education authority in England at January of 1991, 1992 and 1993. It is not possible to identify which of these teachers were newly appointed.

Separate information on the numbers of newly qualified teachers taking up their first full-time teaching posts by local authority in 1993 will be placed in the Library when it becomes available, although this is not expected to be before spring 1995.

Assisted Places

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the 20 independent schools which currently have the highest proportions of their school rolls made up by pupils covered by the assisted places scheme; and if he will give the percentage of pupils covered by the assisted places scheme and the size of the school rolls.

Mr. Forth: Information for the 1992-93 academic year, the latest for which complete data are available, is given in the following table:

Assisted places scheme 1992-93 academic year

Further and Higher Education

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of school leavers went on to further or higher education in 1979; and what is the percentage now.

Mr. Boswell: The percentage of school leavers in England intending to go on to further or higher education in 1978-79 was 21 per cent. The percentage for 1991-92, the latest academic year for which the information is available, is 52 per cent.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many students were in (a) higher and (b) further education in 1979; and how many there are in each sector currently.

Mr. Boswell: The number of students on higher and further education courses in England in 1979 and 1992, the latest year for which statistics were available, are shown in the following table:

The number of students as of 1 November of the appropriate year on higher and further education courses in England

Academic year	Number of HE[1] students (thousands)	Number of FE[2] students (thousands)
1979-80	585	1,439
1992-93	1,070	1,761

[1] The HE figures do not include students of the Open University.
[2] The FE student numbers do not include students on further education courses in LEA maintained adult education centres or run by the Workers' Educational Association. Figures for 1979 and 1992 do not exist on a comparable basis for such students. Nor do they include students in sixth form colleges. From 1 April 1993 sixth form colleges transferred to the new FE sector. In 1992-93 there were 94,000 students in sixth form colleges in England.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 28 March, Official Report, column 517, if he will list the courses and private institutions of higher education listed under the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations.

Mr. Boswell: No list is maintained by the Department of the courses in private institutions that are subject to automatic designation by class under the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations. The following courses at private institutions have been designated individually by my right hon. Friend under regulations 10(1)(b)(iii) and 10(1)(e)(ii) of the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations:

Methodist Church

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what recent representations he has had from the Methodist Church about its reservations in regard to the Education Bill [Lords]; what reply he is sending; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend received a letter last week from the Methodist Church about the role of higher education in initial teacher training. I am sending the hon. Member a copy of my reply.

Colleges (Legal Disputes)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if the costs of legal action taken by the National Employers Organisation on behalf of a college in dispute with the National Association of Teachers of Further and Higher Education are paid by the employers' national body or wholly or partly by the college.

Mr. Boswell: This is a matter for the parties involved, not for my right hon. Friend.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many neighbourhood watch schemes were initiated in each year since 1989.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The year-on-year increases in the number of neighbourhood watch schemes in England and Wales in the years since 1989 have been 11,000 in 1990, 8,000 in 1991, 15,000 in 1992 and 15,000 in 1993.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many neighbourhood watch schemes there are in operation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: At the end of December 1993 there were estimated to be over 130,000 neighbourhood watch schemes in England and Wales covering over 5 million households. These schemes are an excellent way in which the public can assist the police in the fight against crime.

Immigration Controls

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions have been given to immigration officials when dealing with travellers from other European economic area countries who refuse to submit to examination under powers granted by the Immigration Acts, citing instead a right to enter without being checked under the provision of article 7A of the European Community treaty.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Immigration officers are instructed to admit freely passengers who satisfy them that they are nationals of European economic area countries.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people, by nationality, were refused leave to enter and removed at United Kingdom airports in 1993 whose travel was wholly internal to the European Community;

(2) how many people whose journey was internal to the European Community were refused entry and returned abroad by immigration officials at United Kingdom airports during the course of 1993.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information requested is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people, by nationality, were refused leave to enter and removed at United Kingdom channel ports in 1993 whose travel was wholly internal to the European Community.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The following table shows the numbers and nationalities of passengers refused entry and removed at the ports of Dover, Folkestone, Newhaven, Portsmouth and Ramsgate in 1993.

Dog Attacks

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information is available from his Department's recent questionnaire sent to police authorities about the number of dog attacks for each of the last five years in each police authority area.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Statistics on dog attacks are not routinely collected by all police forces. Recent inquiries of a number of forces by the Home Office, however, have revealed the following information:

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received on the review of the operation of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Brent, South (Mr. Boateng) on 17 March, column 763, which gave information about the representations received about the reform of the criminal injuries compensation scheme. The new tariff scheme comes into force on 1 April.

Prisoner Escapes

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have escaped from each United Kingdom prison and in total since the introduction of "fresh start".

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given. Escapes from prisons in Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Gerry Steinberg, dated 3 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners who have escaped from within each prison in the United Kingdom since the introduction of Fresh Start.

Fresh Start was introduced into prisons in England and Wales from 3 April 1987 as a rolling programme. Central recording of escapes did not start until 20 June 1988. For these reasons the information requested cannot be provided centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The attached table lists the number of prisoners who have escaped from prisons in England and Wales from 20 June 1988 to 24 March 1994.

There were during this period 30 establishments, not included in the table below, from which no prisoner escaped. The figures exclude escapes from escorts.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners from (a) Durham, (b) Frankland and (c) Low Newton prisons have escaped while on hospital visits in each year since 1979.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Gerry Steinberg, dated 31 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners from Durham, Frankland and Low Newton prisons who have escaped whilst on hospital visits in each year since 1979.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost of official entertaining in his Department in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. Howard: The cost of official entertaining in the years from 1 April 1990 is included in the running cost expenditure for my Department which is published each year in the annual report; figures for 1993-94 are not yet available. The entertainment budget is used for a variety of functions including receptions. Separate figures are not kept for individual functions.

Prison Accommodation

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about capacity limits for prison accommodation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Win Griffiths, dated 31 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about capacity limits for prison accommodation.

All accommodation used for inmates is certified to meet the requirements of section 14 of The Prison Act 1952 and of Rule 23 of the Prison Rules 1964. An officer of the Secretary of State is required, inter alia, to certify that each unit of accommodation is adequate for health in respect of its size, lighting, heating, ventilation and fittings, and that prisoners are able to communicate at any time with a prison officer. This duty is undertaken by the Prison Service's 15 Area Managers for establishments in their own areas.

Each unit of accommodation (cell, double cell, cubicle or room) is assessed for the number of prisoners that can be accommodated in conditions satisfactory for both health and supervision. This number is the certified normal accommodation (CNA) of the unit and represents its uncrowded capacity. The CNA of an establishment is the sum of the CNA figures for all units of accommodation which are not set apart for special purposes. This number represents the uncrowded capacity of the establishment.

Each establishment also has an operational capacity, which is determined by the Area Manager. This takes account of any authorised overcrowding, staffing and other operational constraints. In many establishments CNA and operational capacity are the same. In the majority of local prisons, remand centres and some older training prisons, a certain degree of overcrowding has been authorised, so that operational capacity can be higher than CNA. In some circumstances, where specialist use is being made of accommodation, operational capacity can be lower than CNA.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities or (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Howard: On 28 March 1994, 249 staff in grades 1 to 7, including their departmental specialist equivalents, were women, representing some 17 per cent. of staff in those grades. Within the grades: nine—23 per cent. of staff at grade 3; two—13 per cent.—at grade 4; 28—19 per cent.—at grade 5; 31—9 per cent.—at grade 6; and 179—20 per cent.—at grade 7 were women. There are no women in grades 1 and 2.

On the most recent figures derived from ethnic origins surveys carried out by the Department, in grades 1 to 7 and their equivalents, 142 staff in grades 1 to 7 and their equivalent are classified as being of ethnic minority origin, representing 12 per cent. of the total—16, or 12 per cent. at grade 5; 43 or 14 per cent., at grade 6; and 83, 12 per cent., at grade 7.

As at November 1993 the latest date for which figures are available, 302 members of staff in the Home Office were known to be disabled, including a number who were not registered as such. This represented 0·6 per cent. of all staff. At grades 1-7 and their equivalents there were four registered and three unregistered disabled members of staff, representing 0·5 per cent. of all staff in those grades.

Asylum Seekers and Refugees

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the total numbers of (a) asylum seekers and refugees, (b) children of asylum seekers and refugees, (c) unaccompanied children admitted as asylum seekers or refugees and (d) children admitted for family reunion reasons, admitted to the United Kingdom in each year since 1990-91, including estimates up to 1993-94.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information for the period 1 January 1990 to 28 February 1994 on the number of principal asylum seekers, the number of cases granted asylum, the available information on the estimated number of dependants associated with these two groups, and unaccompanied child applicants is given in the table.

Information for the period 1 January 1990—30 June 1993 on the total number of children accepted for settlement is published in table 6.3 of the Home Office Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 1992", Cm 2368, and in table 3 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin Issue 33/93 "Control of Immigration: Statistics—First and Second Quarters of 1993". Information for the second half of 1993 will be published around the end of April. Information for the first part of 1994 is not yet available. Copies of both publications are available in the Library. These figures include children accepted in line with one or both parents being accepted for settlement at the same time, and acceptances of children where both parents were already settled in the United Kingdom.

Obscene Publications Branch

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions have taken place with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis about the proposed closure of the obscene publications branch; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Metropolitan police headquarters functions and specialist units, such as the obscene publications branch, fall within the scope of the commissioner's restructuring exercise, which aims to make the best possible use of resources and to place functions where they are most appropriate. No proposals about the future of the branch have yet been made.

Central European Time

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 December, Official Report, column 285, (1) whether his Department will re-examine the British crime surveys of 1988 and 1992 to determine what impact an increase in evening daylight would have on the incidence of crime; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what assessment he had made of recent research on the link between daylight and crime; and what conclusions he has drawn.

Mr. Maclean: The Home Office research and planning unit has re-examined the results from the 1988 and 1992 British crime surveys from the point of view of determining how an increase in evening daylight would affect the incidence of crime. These results are summarised in "Time for Change", October 1993, a publication by the Policy Studies Institute. This concludes that "darkness facilitates many criminal acts". Our own assessment however is that, although more crimes are committed when it is dark, definite conclusions are difficult to draw as regards the effect of darkness on overall levels of crime. Increasing evening daylight may for example have different effects for different crimes.

This assessment does not differ from earlier analyses done on the basis of the 1988 data alone, which formed the basis of the discussion in the 1989 Green Paper, paragraphs 46 to 48.

Police

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the ratio of police officers per head of the local population for each of the police forces in England and Wales.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Ratios of population per police officer for forces in England and Wales as at 31 December 1993 are given in the table.

Prison Assaults

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many assaults by prisoners on other inmates and on prison officers took place in each of the last 10 years; what assessment he has made of the extent to which these assaults are influenced by drug and alcohol intoxication; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Frank Field, dated 31 March 1994:

Assaults in prisons

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent question about the numbers of assaults by prisoners on other inmates and on prison officers during the last ten years.

The available information is for the number of assaults proved at adjudication hearings and these are published each year in 'Statistics of Offences against Prison Discipline and Punishments England and Wales'. For convenience, the figures are on the attached table.

I regret that no information is available centrally on the influence, if any, of drug and alcohol intoxication on these assaults.

Assaults[1] on staff, prisoners and others in Prison Service establishments 1984 to 1993

Campsfield House

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those establishments to which detainees, formerly detained at Campsfield House detention centre, have been sent; how many of those detainees are currently refusing to eat; how regularly such detainees are seen by a doctor; how many detainees have been moved more than once, to date, after leaving Campsfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Since 18 February detainees at Campsfield house have been transferred to the following establishments:

Harmondsworth Detention Centre
Queens Building, Heathrow
Stockton Hall Hospital
HM Prison Birmingham
HM Prison Blakenhurst
HM Prison Bullingdon
HM Prison Holloway

One detainee only, in Birmingham prison, continues to refuse meals.

All detainees have daily access to a doctor. Those who claim to have refused meals for four days or more are closely monitored by a doctor at least once a day.

Information on the number of detainees moved more than once, after leaving Campsfield, is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Data Protection (Universities)

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek to amend the data protection legislation to enable universities to provide a list of students resident in their accommodation to the electoral registration officer.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Personal data are exempt from the non-disclosure provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984 in any case in which the disclosure is required by or under any enactment. Electoral registration officers have a power under the Representation of the People Regulations 1986 to require any owner of premises within the area for which they act to provide information which they need to compile the register of electors. They are therefore entitled to ask for the names of eligible students living in universities accommodation.

William Harper

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to investigate the background to the gaoling of William Harper in 1988 for the falsification of an insurance certificate to cover the sale of anti-tank missiles to Iran.

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no representations about this case, but he is ready to consider in the light of any such representations which might be made whether there are grounds for exercising his power to refer a case to the Court of Appeal under section 17 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 or whether any other action might be appropriate.

Asylum Seekers

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the total number of applicants for political asylum in 1993; and how many of them were refused permission to stay in this country;

(2) how many people are currently seeking political asylum.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information for 1993 on the number of applications for asylum, and on decisions made, is given in the table. At the end of February 1994 the estimated number of applications for asylum outstanding was 47,100.

Decisions[1] on applications[1] received for asylum in the United Kingdom, excluding dependants, 1993

	Number of principal applicants
Asylum applications[2]	22,370
Decisions[2,3]	23,400
Recognised as a refugee and granted asylum[4]	1,590
Not recognised as a refugee but granted exceptional leave to remain[5]	11,125
Refused asylum and ELR— after full consideration	4,705
Refused under para 180F[6]	5,240
Refused on safe third country grounds[7]	745

[1] Provisional figures rounded to the nearest 5.
[2] Figures exclude information on applications made overseas.
[3] Decisions do not necessarily relate to applications made in 1993.
[4] Excluding South East Asian refugees.
[5] Usually granted for a year in the first instance, subject then to further review.
[6] For failure to provide evidence to support the asylum claim within a reasonable period, including failure to respond to invitation to interview to establish identity (para. 101 prior to 26 July 1993).
[7] Refused on the grounds that the applicant had arrived from a safe third country.

Special Constables

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates are available of the hours worked by special constables in each constabulary in each of the last five years.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This information is not centrally available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates he has of the hours worked each week and each month by a typical special constable in each constabulary in 1985, 1990 and 1993.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This information is not centrally available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Executed Prisoners

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many exhumations to allow reburial of executed prisoners have taken place since the abolition of capital punishment.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This information is not centrally available.

Capital Convictions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people reprieved from a capital conviction are now at large in the community on licence; and what is the rate of recall of such people.

Mr. Maclean: I regret that we do not have the information which would enable us to reply to the hon. Gentleman's question.

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council held on 23 March.

Mr. Howard: The meeting on 23 March was the second Justice and Home Affairs Council held under the provisions of the Treaty on European Union. The main points dealt with were as follows.

The European Commission gave a presentation on its communication on immigration and asylum policies. The Council agreed to consider how best to take forward this communication, and will discuss it again at its informal meeting in May.

The council noted progress on the draft European information system convention. It called for further work on the convention, in particular on the question of what provisions it should include on police and judicial co-operation, with a view to agreement being reached at the June Council.

The Council noted progress on the Europol convention and urged member states to work towards meeting the previously agreed deadline of October 1994. It remitted to a future Council a final decision on senior appointments to the Europol drugs unit.

The Council decided to ask the Telecommunications Council to ensure that developments in telecommunications took account of the need for legally authorised interception of telecommunications.

It approved a report on operational co-operation in combating terrorism.

It discussed a report on progress in simplifying and improving co-operation in the field of extradition.

The Council heard a presentation from the United Kingdom on its proposal for a legally binding joint action under title VI of the treaty on European Union to combat fraud against the Community budget, and expressed the hope that an interim report on fraud, to include consideration of the United Kingdom initiative, would be ready for discussion at the June Council.

Gas Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on proposals for gas weapons for use by the police; what research has been done in this area and in respect of which chemicals; what controls exist on the use of existing gas weapons; and what plans he has to change them.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Association of Chief Police Officers is considering the possible use of products containing the incapacitating inflammatory agent, oleo-resin capsicum. My right hon. and learned Friend will consider this matter carefully, taking full account of extensive technical information provided by the Home Office police scientific development branch and advice from other Government departments, before any decisions are reached.

The only chemical agent which police forces are currently permitted to use is CS irritant. The considerable research which has been undertaken into this agent was evaluated by the 1969-1971 inquiry into the medical and toxicological aspects of CS, reported in cmnds. 4173 and 4775. Police forces are permitted to use CS in extreme public order incidents where the chief officer of police judges such action to be necessary because of risk of loss of life or serious injury or widespread destruction of property; or against armed besieged criminals or violently insane persons where a senior officer judges that not to use it would endanger lives. There are no current proposals to change arrangements relating to CS.

Drugs-related Offences (Nigerians)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Nigerians are currently in prison in Britain for drugs-related offences; how many are men and how many are women; and what percentage of Nigerian women make up of the total female prison population in Britain.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director-General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Tony Worthington, dated 31 March 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking how many Nigerians are currently in prison in Britain for drugs related offences; how many are men and how many are women; and what percentage of Nigerian women make up the total female prison population in Britain.

The latest available provisional information is for 31 December 1993. On that date 103 Nigerians (of whom 63 were male and 40 were female) were recorded centrally as being held in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales under sentence for a drugs offence which was the principal offence. On the same date 71 or 4·5 per cent. of the total female prison population in England and Wales were Nigerian women. Within the total prison population the type of offence was not recorded for about 6 per cent. of sentenced prisoners.

Harold Martinez

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the application for asylum by Harold Martinez, a Colombian national.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Mr. Martinez's application was refused and his appeal against this decision was dismissed by both the special adjudicator and the Immigration Appeals Tribunal. In its determination of 4 March this year, the tribunal found that Mr. Martinez did not qualify for asylum as a refugee under the terms of the 1951 United Nations convention on the status of refugees, and that it would not therefore be a breach of that convention to return him to Colombia. However, the tribunal made an extra-statutory recommendation that Mr. Martinez be allowed to remain in the United Kingdom exceptionally. Although such recommendations are not binding on the Secretary of State, the tribunal's comments are being considered and a decision will be made shortly.

Illegal Drugs

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he makes of the effectiveness of his strategy to control illegal drugs; and if he will make a statement on that strategy.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 30 March 1994]: The Government's strategic framework for tackling drug misuse involves simultaneous action on the following fronts.

Educating our children on the dangers of drug misuse is a vital element. The national curriculum requires schools to teach aspects of health education, including aspects of drug misuse, and the National Curriculum Council has issued detailed guidance on health education to help schools plan comprehensive programmes for all pupils aged five to 16.

The Government are committed to ensuring that, both through the national curriculum and otherwise, schools will continue to equip young people with the knowledge, skills and attitudes that they need to promote their immediate and long-term good health.

Education is being backed up by anti-drugs publicity. Since 1985 the Department of Health has spent increasing amounts on national drug prevention, information and public education campaigns. Some £5 million is being spent in 1993-94 and independent evaluation has shown that the campaigns have succeeded in raising awareness of the problem.

There have also been innovative developments in the drugs prevention field. The drugs prevention initiative was launched in 1989 as a partnership between Government and the community to promote the prevention of drug misuse. Teams are now operating in 20 locations to mobilise local communities to stop young people and others at risk from drug taking and help them realise the harmful consequences. Many successful schemes are in place—the initiative has been involved in the funding of over 900 projects.

All this project work is being evaluated—some by independent researchers—and the impact of the initiative as a whole is being assessed to determine the effectiveness of its approach and to encourage the widespread adoption of good practice.

The collective experience of the work of the 20 teams in their local community is being pulled together. This will provide valuable information about the kinds of approaches which can be effective in drugs prevention, and the factors which influence their effectiveness, on which future action can be based.

Effective treatment and rehabilitation facilities for drug misusers are in place with £31 million allocated for drugs services in England and Wales in 1993-94.

In addition to all these measures for reducing the demand for drugs considerable effort is also being put in to reducing the supply through effective enforcement action. Police and customs continue to work hard to reduce the supply of drugs into the country with notable successes —recent seizures include 260 kg of cocaine in December and a consignment of 100 kg of cannabis in the London area.

We have made tough penalties available to the courts for use against drug traffickers—including up to life imprisonment for dealing in drugs such as heroin and cocaine.

United Kingdom laws for getting at the profits of drugs smugglers are among the toughest in the world. Legislation introduced in 1986 enables the courts to deprive drug traffickers of their profits and makes laundering of drugs money a criminal offence. Legislation has been strengthened, most recently in the Criminal Justice Act 1993. By the end of 1992 it is estimated that the courts had ordered the confiscation of drug trafficking proceeds totalling some £42·5 million.

All this comes together in a comprehensive anti-drugs strategy involving 10 Government Departments spending over £500 million a year. We have recognised the need, however, to review our strategy to ensure that the policies we are pursuing are correctly identified and are co-ordinated effectively. To this end, the establishment of the central drugs co-ordination unit was announced last December. One of the unit's main tasks is to work closely with Government Departments to ensure that drugs policies are planned, developed and implemented within a clear strategic framework. The unit's immediate task is to review our strategy on drugs and make recommendations for its improvement.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Brian Charrington Case

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General if he has been invited to make submissions to the Thames Valley police officers investigating the conduct of the Brian Charrington case by Cleveland police force.

The Attorney-General: In the event of my being asked to assist such an investigation I would of course do so, but it is not my practice to comment on the operational aspects of a police investigation.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General how many Proton cars were purchased by the Law Officers' Departments in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

The Attorney-General: None.

Local Government Legislation

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the Acts of Parliament and Consolidation Acts that affect local government which have been introduced by his Department since 1990.

The Attorney-General: No Acts of Parliament, including consolidation Acts, affecting local government have been introduced by my Department since 1990.

Consultants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General whether he will provide a table showing the contracts currently being worked on for his Department by Coopers and Lybrand, Ernst and Young, Price Waterhouse, KPMG Peat Marwick, Grant Thornton, Robson Rhodes, Levy Gee, BDO Binder Hamlyn, Hacker Young, Pannell Kerr Forster and Stoy Hayward.

The Attorney-General: In respect of the Departments for which I have responsibility, the legal secretariat to the Law Officers and the headquarters office of the Crown Prosecution Service have no contracts with the named firms. CPS areas have devolved budgets and may occasionally engage firms of accountants, but the details of any contracts are not held centrally. The following table lists contracts entered into by the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Serious Fraud Office.

Department	Consultant	Task/case
Treasury Solicitor's	BDO Binder Hamlyn	Design, development and installation of new accounting system
Serious Fraud Office	Cooper and Lybrand	BCCI
		Letap Pharmaceuticals Ltd.
	Ernst and Young	Brent Walker
	Price Waterhouse	Blackspur plc
	KPMG Peat Marwick	Polly Peck
		Maxwell
	Grant Thornton	Extra Special Vehicles

Photocopies (Charges)

Mr. Bates: To ask the Attorney-General what is the current practice of prosecuting authorities in relation to charging for the provision of photocopies of unused material.

The Attorney-General: Different practices have developed among the prosecuting authorities as to the extent to which charges are levied, if at all, in respect of the supply of unused material in compliance with requests made by defence solicitors under paragraph 5 of the "Guidelines on Disclosure of Unused Material" issued by my predecessor in December 1981. Following recent developments in the case law relating to the nature and extent of the obligations on the prosecution to make disclosure, the position has been reviewed with the benefit of advice of Treasury Counsel. Counsel has advised that, where the prosecution is under a duty to provide copies of unused material as an integral part of its duty of disclosure, no charge can be made for such copies. That advice has been accepted and no further charges will therefore be levied by the prosecuting authorities; this advice is also being drawn to the attention of those police forces which levy charges.

Prosecuting authorities will reimburse all charges which have been levied which can be substantiated if the costs involved have not already been the subject of reimbursement by either the legal aid fund or central funds. Announcements are to be made in professional journals inviting individuals and their legal advisers to register claims for reimbursement. The prosecuting authorities themselves are seeking to identify cases where a charge in excess of £100 was paid and will, in such cases, contact the solicitor concerned directly if no claim has already been submitted. The prosecuting authorities will make prompt repayment as soon as the claim is properly substantiated.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Attorney-General what was the total cost of official entertaining in the Law Officers' Departments in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at the Departments' expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

The Solicitor-General: The total cost of official entertainment in the departments for which I am responsible in each year since 1990-91 is set out in the table below. Those figures are included in the running costs expenditure for each department and are published in the annual report. The entertainment budget is used for a variety of functions including receptions. Separate figures are not kept for individual functions.

TREASURY

PAYE and National Insurance

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the amounts of PAYE and national insurance written off in each year since 1975 at current values and the cash figures for 1993 in the form of his answer of 3 November, Official Report, column 260.

Mr. Dorrell: The amounts of PAYE and national insurance written off between 1975 and 1992 at current values are set out in the following table. The figure for the amount written off for 1993 is not yet available.

Year	PAYE amount in £ thousands at current values	Class I and IA NIC amount in £ thousands at current levels
1975	n/a	n/a
1976	n/a	n/a
1977	n/a	n/a

1988	177,057	21,527
1989	156,970	19,322
1990	126,886	20,425
1991	146,188	23,393
1992	393,039	33,584

Note: Separate figures for PAYE and National Insurance for the years 1975-1979 are no longer available in the form requested.

Tax is written off when it cannot be collected—for example, because the taxpayer is insolvent. Similarly, it is on occasion necessary to remit tax which it would be unconscionable to collect—for example, because payment would cause gross hardship.

Inland Revenue Prosecution

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of prosecutions by the Inland Revenue in the financial years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93 by nature of offence, the number of convictions, the number of custodial or other sentences and the financial penalities levied.

Mr. Dorrell: Numbers of prosecutions and convictions, categorised by nature of offence, are given in the annual report of the board of Inland Revenue for 1992-93—appendix 1, table 6. Sentencing details are not recorded on the same basis. Financial penalties, chargeable under tax law, are not levied in respect of offences where convictions are secured.

Public Sector Debt

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give figures for (a) total United Kingdom public sector debt, (b) United Kingdom total public sector debt per head of population, (c) total United Kingdom public sector debt less that attributed to local authorities, (d) the current annual cost of servicing the debt in (c) and (e) the current annual cost per head of population of servicing the debt in (c).

Mr. Nelson: The following table gives the information.

	£ billion
Gross public sector debt (end-March 1993)
Per head of population (£4,300)	249·6
Gross debt of central government and public corporations (end-March 1993)	243·1
Annual cost of servicing gross debt of central government and public corporations (1992-93)	17·4
Per head of population (£300)

Capital Transfer Tax

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the value of revenue from capital transfer taxes as a proportion of gross domestic product in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) each other OECD country for the latest year for which information is available.

Mr. Dorrell: United Kingdom capital transfer tax was replaced by inheritance tax for transfers on or after 18 March 1986. The table gives OECD data for all OECD countries for estate, inheritance and gift taxes, which broadly covers inheritance taxes, expressed as a proportion of GDP. The latest year for which complete information is available is 1991.

VAT

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total yield from VAT in 1978-79; and what is the total estimated yield for 1994-95.

Sir John Cope: Published figures show £4·8 billion and £43·1 billion respectively.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that mainland European flower growers who sell direct to British florist outlets pay the appropriate levels of value added tax;

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that British flower growers do not face unfair competition from growers on the mainland of Europe who sell in British outlets and evade payment of value added tax.

Sir John Cope: Supplies of flowers made by businesses from another member state are subject to VAT under the usual conditions, either in this country or in the country of origin if the total is below the threshold, depending on the circumstances, and the normal controls apply.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate what the nation's tax burden as a percentage of gross domestic product will be in 1998-99; and what this figure was in 1978-79.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 23 February, Official Report, Column. 274.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much he estimates will be raised by the Treasury in (a) 1994-95, (b) 1995-96 and (c) 1996-97 from the freezing of personal income tax allowances.

Mr. Dorrell: The information was given in table 4.1 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1994-95" published on 30 November 1993.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people will be affected by his decision, announced in the last Budget, to reduce the married couple's income tax allowance to 15 per cent. in 1994-95.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East (Mr. Brown) on 14 December 1993, Official Report, columns 579-80.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what would be the reduction in tax payable resulting from full indexation of the additional personal allowance applied at the standard or higher rate for (a) a lower-rate taxpayer, (b) a basic-rate taxpayer and (c) a higher-rate taxpayer in (i) 1994-95 and (ii) 1995-96; and what would be the gross revenue cost of these measures;

(2) what would be the reduction in tax payable resulting from full indexation of the widow's bereavement allowance applied at the standard or higher rate of relief for (a) a lower-rate taxpayer, (b) a basic-rate taxpayer and (c) a higher-rate taxpayer in (i) 1994-95 and (ii) 1995-96; and what would be the gross revenue cost of these measures.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 24 March 1994]: The table shows the typical gain for each type of taxpayer if the 1993-94 levels of the allowances had been indexed and they remained available at the taxpayer's marginal rate.

Difference in tax between 1993-94 indexed regime and proposed regimes in 1994-95 and 1995-96

	£ per year
	Additional personal allowance	Widow's bereavement allowance
1994-95
Lower rate taxpayer	+8	+8
Basic rate taxpayer	+96	+96
Higher rate taxpayer	+360	+360
1995-96
Lower rate taxpayer	+106	+106
Basic rate taxpayer	+197	+197
Higher rate taxpayer	+470	+470

Revenue cost in a full year of 1993-94 indexed regime compared with proposed regimes

	£ million
	1994-95	1995-96
Additional personal allowance	60	130
Widow's bereavement allowance	10	20

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what would be the reduction in tax payable resulting from full indexation of relief on the married couple's allowance at the standard or higher rate for those aged over 65 years to pensioner couples paying tax at (a) the lower rate, (b) the basic rate and (c) the higher rate if they are (i) 65 to 74 years and (ii) 75 years and over; and what would be the gross revenue cost of these measures;

(2) what would be the reduction in tax payable resulting from full indexation of relief on the married couple's allowance at standard and higher rate for taxpayers aged over 65 years at (a) the basic rate and (b) the higher rate if they are (i) 65 to 74 years and (ii) 75 years and over; and what would be the gross revenue costs of these changes.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 24 March 1994]: The table shows the typical gain or loss for taxpayers in each age group if the 1993-94 levels of the allowances had been indexed and they remained available at the taxpayer's marginal rate. The gain or loss depends on the marginal tax rate of the spouse receiving the allowance, so the effect for a couple will be the same regardless of the tax liability of the spouse without the allowance.

Difference in tax between 1993-94 indexed regime and proposed regime for 1994-95

	Lower rate taxpayer £ per year	Basic rate taxpayer £ per year	Higher rate taxpayer £ per year
Married couple's allowance for those aged 65 to 74	−30	+96	+473
Married couple's allowance for those aged 75 or over	−30	+98	+481

The Exchequer effect would be broadly revenue neutral for the full year 1994-95.

Governor of the Bank of England

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the views expressed by the Governor of the Bank of England at meetings of EEC central bankers on fiscal, monetary and exchange rate policy represent the views of Her Majesty's Government; and to what extent they are recognised as such by other central bankers and their Governments.

Mr. Nelson: In accordance with article 8 of the statute of the European Monetary Institute, the Governor, representing the Bank of England at meetings of the EMI council, acts according to his own responsibilities. Fiscal, monetary and exchange rate policy in the United Kingdom are decided by Ministers. The extent, if any, to which other central banks and their Governments recognise the views of the Governor as representing those of the United Kingdom Government is a matter for them.

Capital Losses

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the reasons underlying the indexation of capital losses for capital gains tax purposes and the Government's purposes in abolishing it.

Mr. Dorrell: Indexation of losses has given rise to widespread tax avoidance, including the creation of artificial schemes which have created substantial allowable losses when no economic loss has been incurred. Unchecked, this abuse would have led to the loss of some £3 billion a year by the end of the decade. The current Finance Bill contains provisions which restrict indexation relief for capital losses.

Tax Yield

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the tax yield from denying tax relief to pension scheme surpluses.

Mr. Dorrell: The amount of tax liable on refunds of surplus funds to employers is provisionally estimated to be £70 million in 1993-94.

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total number of people in receipt of occupational pensions and the average value of these pensions by decile group together with the average value of tax liability of each decile.

Mr. Dorrell: Latest available estimates using the 1991-92 survey of personal incomes are given in the table. The information is based on administrative records and excludes some individuals whose income is below the tax threshold.

Decile group of people in receipt of an occupational pension ranged by amount of occupational pension	Number of people in each decile (thousands)	Average amount of occupational pension £	Average income tax liability[1] £
Bottom 10 per cent.	530	270	20

Top 10 per cent.	530	13,600	3,270
Total	5,300	3,650	660

[1] The figures are the tax liability on occupational pensions assuming that they represent the top slice of taxable income.

Tax Increases

Ms Jowell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to compensate typical families, with two children and one spouse working on average male earnings, following the increases in income tax and national insurance which come into effect in April.

Mr. Dorrell: Average earnings have increased by over 40 per cent. since 1978-79. This is worth £83 a week in 1993-94 prices.

Income Tax

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the rules for the introduction of the current year basis of assessment for income tax.

Mr. Dorrell: The Inland Revenue has today published, in a press release, details of the rules that the Government intend to introduce in the next Finance Bill concerning the anti-avoidance provisions for the transition from the preceding year basis to the current year basis.

The transitional rules are set out in schedule 19 to the 1994 Finance Bill. They apply to businesses that commence before 6 April 1994 and to other sources from which income first arises before that date. Broadly, for the year 1996-97 they allow a catching-up process by averaging the profits for the two years ending in that year. Income in that period is therefore effectively taxed, in most cases, at half of the normal marginal rate for that year, and business profits arising in the period from the latest accounting date in 1996-97 to 5 April 1997 ultimately drop out of account altogether.

The purpose of the transitional rules is broadly to ensure that there is no double taxation of business profits and other income, presently taxed on the preceding year basis under schedule D, which the change to the current year basis of assessment might otherwise cause. But, because of the way that the rules work, and the certainty that profits or income arising in a particular period will be taxed at a reduced rate, and in some cases will drop out of account altogether, it is necessary to counteract the effect of artificially moving profits or income into these periods. The Government's intention is to deter such avoidance.

The proposals also deal with the treatment of other income, including interest, assessed on the preceding year basis, and with the treatment of interest paid on borrowings to finance trades, professions and businesses carried on in partnership.

The proposed legislation will have effect in respect of all periods which affect the amount of income assessed in 1996-97. For businesses taxed under cases I or II of schedule D this could commence as early as 7 April 1994.

The legislation will also affect the period before 6 April 1997 which is taxed in 1997-98. The new rules do not affect limited companies.

The Inland Revenue has consulted on the proposals and will publish draft legislation later this year.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, further to his answer of 18 February to the hon. Member for Neath (Mr. Hain), Official Report, column 1032, if he will give estimates for each year from 1978-79 of the number of individuals paying tax and the size of the work force in each region of the United Kingdom; and if he will give estimates for each year up to and including 1996-97.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 24 March 1994]: Regional estimates are not readily available for all the past years requested. Information based on the survey of personal incomes for 1981-82, 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92 is given in the table. No information is available below the United Kingdom level after 1991-92.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what procedures his Departments have to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment;

(2) what information the Northern Ireland Office holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons.

Sir John Wheeler: Individuals are appointed to public bodies on merit and potential to contribute to the work of the particular body, taking account of the need of each body to have the experience and skills necessary to carry out its functions. The Secretary of State and Ministers consider all relevant factors known to them before making an appointment.

Sheep Annual Premium

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list by county how many applications for payment of sheep annual premium he has received in the current year; and what proportion in each county remained unpaid on 1 March.

Mr. Ancram: The number of applications received under the 1994 sheep annual premium scheme is as follows:

County	Number of Applications
Antrim	2,652
Armagh	1,219
Down	2,659
Fermanagh	608
Londonderry	2,154
Tyrone	2,761

All applications are unpaid. The first advance of premium cannot be paid until authorised by the EC Commission.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland by what date he expects all applications for sheep annual premium in the current year to be paid out.

Mr. Ancram: Payments under the 1994 sheep annual scheme are expected to be completed by June 1995.

The Commission normally authorises two advance payments which are expected to be made in September-October 1994 and December 1994-January 1995.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total cost of official entertaining in his Department in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Sir John Wheeler: The total cost of official entertainment in the years since 1990-91 is included in the running cost expenditure for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments which is published every year in the departmental annual report, a copy of which is held in the Library. The entertainment budget is used for a variety of functions including receptions. Separate figures are not kept for individual functions.

Area Health Boards

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when each of the four area health boards last advertised job vacancies in (a) southern Irish newspapers and (b) Scottish newspapers; and if he will make a statement on their advertising policies.

Sir John Wheeler: All four area health boards advertised in some southern Irish newspapers in March 1994. None of the boards uses Scottish newspapers for recruitment purposes.

Health and personal social services employing authorities apply standard selection and appointments procedures which were developed by the management executive of the Department of Health and Social Services. These procedures place responsibility for advertising job vacancies on individual employing authorities.

Decisions on how best to bring a vacancy to the notice of prospective applicants are based on personal judgment.

Cross-border Co-operation

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funds exist to encourage (a) cross-border co-operation between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland and (b) co-operation between Northern Ireland and Scotland.

Sir John Wheeler: Under the EC structural funds, the Interreg initiative is especially designed to encourage cross-border co-operation and to develop border areas. Northern Ireland submitted a programme jointly with the Republic of Ireland for 1991 to 1993 and it is proposed to submit a follow-on programme. Approximately £60 million has been made available under the joint Interreg programme for Northern Ireland and Ireland for 1991-93. In addition, in preparing new development plans for 1994-99, both the British and Irish Governments have paid close attention to the opportunities for expanding economic collaboration in the context of the next round of assistance from the structural funds.

Since 1990 the Department of Education has made available funding of £2,000 per annum to facilitate short-term teacher exchanges between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland; in addition some £150,000 per annum is made available for the promotion of international networks, mainly European, including schools in the Republic of Ireland and Scotland.

Funding is also available from the Arts Council of Northern Ireland for ad hoc projects where cross-border co-operation would be mutually beneficial.

In addition the Department of Economic Development in collaboration with Republic of Ireland has organised two energy efficiency conferences at a cost of £6,200 and a cross-border trade conference at a cost of £10,000.

Finally, the International Fund for Ireland, which was established jointly by the United Kingdom and Irish Governments in 1986, operates under an independent board with the objectives of

(a) promoting economic and social advance;
(b) encouraging contact, dialogue and reconciliation between nationalists and unionists throughout Ireland.

Geographical Data

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the shortest distance between Belfast and (a) Scotland and (b) the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: From City hall, Belfast to Portpatrick lighthouse in Scotland is 58·2 km and to the middle of Newry river west of Narrow Water castle in the Republic of Ireland is 58·8 km. The accuracy of the measurements is assessed to be to the nearest 200 m.

Security Co-operation

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary met (a) the head of the Southern Irish police and (b) chief constables in Scotland to discuss security co-operation; and if he will make a statement on the level of co-operation between the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the police forces in the Republic of Ireland and Scotland.

Sir John Wheeler: The Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary meets the Commissioner of An Garda Siochana on a regular basis and the level of security co-operation between the two forces is extremely high.

In relation to chief police officers in Great Britain, the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, dependent upon subject matter, liaises personally or through officers of appropriate rank with the requisite expertise. These arrangements have proved satisfactory in maintaining full security co-operation within the United Kingdom.

Business and Industry Promotion

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last promoted Northern Ireland business and industry in (a) Scotland and (b) the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: The Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland assisted 40 local companies to take part in a Europartenariat business-to-business event at the Scottish exhibition and conference centre in Glasgow on 13 and 14 December 1993.

The most recent business promotion event in the Republic of Ireland was a joint IDB—Irish Trade Board sub-contract exhibition aimed at promoting products sourced in Ireland, north and south; this was held on 17 November 1993 in Dublin.

Energy

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met Ministers from (a) Scotland and (b) the Republic of Ireland to discuss co-operation in the provision and distribution of energy; and if he will make a statement about energy co-operation between Northern Ireland and both Scotland and the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: Regular discussions take place with Scottish Ministers on a wide range of issues including energy. Energy matters, particularly electricity, have been discussed with Ministers from the Republic of Ireland from time to time. I continue to support any co-operation in energy matters that may bring benefit to Northern Ireland.

Tourism Promotion

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last promoted the Northern Ireland tourist industry in (a) Scotland and (b) the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: A television advertising campaign promoting Northern Ireland is currently under way in Scotland and the Republic of Ireland. I also attended the opening on 15 March 1994 of the Northern Ireland tourist board's Scottish office in Glasgow.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Northern Ireland tourist board last discussed co-operation with (a) the Scottish tourist board and (b) Bord Failte in the Republic of Ireland; and if he will make a statement on co-operation in the promotion of tourism by the Northern Ireland tourist board with both Scotland and the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: Both the Northern Ireland tourist board and the Scottish tourist board are represented at regular meetings with United Kingdom tourist board counterparts. The last meeting was held on 6 January 1994.

There is frequent contact between the Northern Ireland tourist board and Bord Failte in the Republic of Ireland. The chief executives last met on 8 October 1993.

I fully support the Northern Ireland tourist board in seeking to promote tourism in Northern Ireland through co-operation with other tourist boards.

Culture (Financial Support)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the extent of financial support for (a) Irish culture and (b) Scottish culture in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement about the development of both these cultures in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Ancram: In 1993-94 Government funds have contributed nearly £1·5 million, and EC structural funds £711,000, specifically towards activities promoting the appreciation of, and respect for, the diverse traditions which make up the cultural heritage of Northern Ireland. The complexity of Northern Ireland's cultural heritage makes it difficult to disaggregate this expenditure between those aspects which are of Irish, Scottish or other origin. More generally, education, arts and other departmental expenditure will contribute to the cultural life of Northern Ireland on many levels. Government aims to promote wider understanding and respect for all aspects of Northern Ireland's cultural heritage and to show that differences do not have to lead to division.

Industrial Development

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Industrial Development Board last participated in a joint venture with (a) the Scottish Development Agency and (b) the Southern Irish Development Authority; and if he will make a statement about co-operation by the Industrial Development Board with equivalent organisations in Scotland and the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: Since 1992 the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland and the Irish Trade Board have participated in a series of joint programmes aimed at stimulating cross-border trade. The programmes have included a series of joint exhibitions to promote sub-contracting opportunities for local companies and joint product promotions outside the island of Ireland. The most recent event was a joint sub-contract exhibition organised in Londonderry in March 1994.

No joint ventures have been entered into with the Irish Development Authority or the Scottish Development Agency.

Student Benefits

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to what benefits students who are incapacitated due to accident or ill health and are thereby unable to attend their studies are entitled; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Wheeler: In general, financial support for students is given through the educational programme and not the social security system. However, the following benefits may be available to students during periods of incapacity:

Sickness Benefit may be paid to a student who is incapable of work whilst undergoing a course of study subject to the satisfaction of certain National Insurance contribution conditions.

Invalidity Benefit will become payable where the incapacity continues and sickness benefit has been in payment for 28 weeks.

Disability Living Allowance is a non-contributory benefit which is payable where the "care" and "mobility" requirements and other enabling conditions are met.

Severe Disablement Allowance is a non-contributory benefit available to students (aged 19 or over) who are unable to work for at least 28 weeks because of sickness or disablement. If they first become incapable after their 20th birthday, they must also be assessed as, at least, 80 per cent disabled.

Income Support is available to disabled students who:
—are receiving Disability Living Allowance or Severe Disablement Allowance, or —who have an invalid vehicle, or —who are registered blind, or —who qualify for an Education and Library Board disabled student's allowance because of deafness, or —whose illness continues beyond 28 weeks.

Housing Benefit

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to increase awareness about the housing benefit system and to ensure that eligible tenants are fully appraised; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Wheeler: Poster and leaflets on housing benefit are displayed at all Northern Ireland Housing Executive, Rate Collection Agency and social security offices. In addition, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in conjunction with the Rate Collection Agency has recently launched a Province-wide advertising campaign. The campaign includes three weeks of advertising on television and in the national and local press.

Income Support

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to what extent attending a lecture tour or conference abroad disqualifies an unemployed person from claiming income support.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. Wylie to Mr. Ken Maginnis, dated 30 March 1994:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on the extent to which attending a lecture tour or conference abroad disqualifies an unemployed person from claiming Income Support.

Unemployed people claiming Income Support, who are required to be available for employment, do not qualify for Income Support for periods of absences abroad.

I hope this explains the position to you.

Fishing Industry

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial amounts were approved and have been allocated from European structural funds to the fishing industry in each year from 1 April 1990 to 31 March 1994; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Wheeler: The following amounts have been allocated in each year:

1990-91	88,404
1991-92	1,095,785
1992-93	302,133
1993-94	1,290,996[1]

[1] To 30 March.

Lumpy Skin Disease

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of lumpy skin disease occurred in each year since 1985.

Sir John Wheeler: No instance of lumpy skin disease has ever been recorded in Northern Ireland.

Fishing Industry

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial amounts will be allocated from European structural funds to the fishing industry from 1 April to 31 March 1997; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Wheeler: Two million ecu will be allocated to the fishing industry in each year, which, at the current exchange rate of 1·25 ecu to the pound sterling, equates to £1·6 million per year.

Social Fund

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the Northern Ireland social fund discretionary budget will be for 1994-95.

Mr. Ancram: I am glad to be able to announce that the social fund discretionary budget for 1994-95 will be £29·8 million. This is an increase of £1·3 million over the amount allocated to districts for 1993-94.

Details of the allocations will be placed in the Library together with a note explaining the basis on which they have been made.

Recorded Offences

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide tables giving the total number of recorded offences, the number for each category of offence and the number scheduled for hearing under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts in Northern Ireland in each year since 1983; and how many and what percentage in each case were (a) recorded by police as having been cleared up and (b) recorded as results in a conviction.

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 29 March]: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Table A gives details of the total number of recorded offences, the number for each category of offence, the number cleared and the clearance rate. It is not possible to link directly recorded offences to persons proceeded against in court and subsequent convictions.

Table B gives the total number of persons proceeded against for scheduled offences under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Acts. Classification of offences into scheduled and non-scheduled offences under emergency legislation takes place at the prosecution stage and is therefore not available for recorded offences, where there is no prosecution. The table does not include scheduled offences tried at magistrates courts. These are subject to the approval of the Director of Public Prosecutions and figures could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons;

(2) what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Sproat: In making appointments to the public bodies for which my right hon. Friend is responsible a number of factors are carefully considered. Information about public appointments made is available in "Public Bodies 1993".

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment;

(2) if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment;

(3) if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post.

Mr. Sproat: Information about appointments made to public bodies which are the responsibility of the Secretary of State for National Heritage is available in "Public Bodies 1993". I also refer to the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Walton (Mr. Kilfoyle) on the following dates, Official Report, written answers:

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the total cost of official entertaining in his Department in each year since April 1992; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. Sproat: The total cost of official entertainment in the year from 1 April 1992 is included in the running cost expenditure for my Department which is published every year in the annual report; figures for 1993-94 are not yet available. The entertainment budget is used for a variety of functions including receptions. Separate figures are not kept for individual functions.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many Proton cars have been purchased by his Department in the years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Sproat: My Department has not purchased any Proton cars.

Cross-media Ownership

Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish the full terms of reference for the review of cross-media ownership.

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend announced on 3 January that the review will examine the rules which restrict ownership between newspapers, television companies and radio stations, in the context of fundamental changes taking place in the media industries throughout the world. The review will see whether those rules strike a satisfactory balance. In doing so they will be looking at the need for diversity and choice for audiences, while encouraging United Kingdom interests to play an active part in national and international markets.

Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what studies his Department has made of the differing cross-media ownership regulations within the EU; and what conclusions those studies have reached.

Mr. Sproat: My Department has made no formal studies, but closely follows cross-media ownership issues elsewhere. It is taking part in discussions within the EU on the Commission's Green Paper on "Pluralism and Media Concentration in the Internal Market", a copy of which is available in the Library. This contains detailed information about the regulations which apply in all member states.

Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 4 March to the hon. Member for Wansdyke (Mr. Aspinwall), Official Report, column 924, if he will place the representations made to the cross-media ownership review team in the Library.

Mr. Sproat: I have no plans to do so, as this raises issues of commercial confidentiality. It remains open to the originators to make their representations public if they choose.

Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will complete his review of cross-media ownership by the end of July; and when he will make an announcement on the way forward.

Mr. Sproat: I would like to see this review concluded as rapidly as possible. An interdepartmental group of officials is due to make recommendations to Ministers in the summer. The timing of an announcement will, however, depend on many factors, including the nature of those recommendations and any legislative implications.

Royal Opera House

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what provisions have been made for Government funding for the Royal Opera house if its application to the millennium fund is not successful; and what assessment he has made of the ability in this event of the Royal Opera house to refund the money it has borrowed.

Mr. Sproat: I have made no such provision or assessment. However, borrowings by the Royal Opera House Development Land Trust in connection with the Royal Opera house development are subject to my right hon. Friend's consent. Such borrowings cannot exceed a specified proportion of the value of the marketable assets available to the trust.

Commercial Broadcasting

Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what limits the Independent Television Commission and Radio Authority already impose on the programme content operated by the relevant commercial franchisees.

Mr. Sproat: All licensed programme services have to comply with the programme codes of the Independent Television Commission and the Radio Authority. Copies of the codes have been placed in the Library.

For Channel 3 licence holders and Channel 4, there are other programme requirements, set out in their licenses. National and local radio licence holders have to adhere to promises of performance, which are based on the proposals in the applications for licences.

UNESCO

Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what activities his Department has undertaken or is about to undertake in the context of UNESCO's convention concerning the protection of the world cultural and natural heritage.

Mr. Sproat: My Department has reviewed possible candidates for inclusion in the world heritage list and is currently considering revised criteria published by UNESCO on the nomination of cultural landscapes. My Department is also funding a three-year programme by the International Council on Monuments and Sites United Kingdom to produce monitoring reports for the English world heritage sites and to encourage the production of comprehensive management plans for these sites. Guidance on the world heritage convention was included in draft "Planning Policy Guidance Note 15", which was issued for consultation last year and will be published in final form later this year.

Protected Wrecks

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what practical issues relating to the transfer of responsibility for protected wrecks in English waters remain to be resolved; in what way these differ from those already resolved by Scottish and Welsh Offices in relation to the transfer of their responsibilities to Historic Scotland and CADW respectively; and when he now expects the transfer to English Heritage to proceed.

Mr. Brooke: The issues which remain to be resolved relate to the legal and resource implications of transferring to English Heritage the functions currently undertaken by my Department. Assuming early resolution of these issues, I expect a transfer to take place later this year.

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps his Department has taken to ensure the publication of information derived from the fieldwork undertaken by licensees on protected wreck sites, over and above what is listed in his Department's booklet "Guide to Historic Wreck Sites" designated under the Protection of Wrecks Act 1973.

Mr. Brooke: Licensees are encouraged to publish fieldwork information in appropriate archaeological journals and depost copies of their reports with the Royal Commission on the Historical Monuments of England. Applicants' intentions as regards publication are taken into account by the Advisory Committee on Historic Wreck Sites when assessing applications for licences to carry out investigations of designated sites.

World Heritage Committee

Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage why no United Kingdom representative stood as a candidate for the World Heritage Committee last year.

Mr. Sproat: While the Government fully support the world heritage convention, and have played an active part in nominating sites for inclusion in the world heritage list —there are 10 English world heritage sites—we do not at present consider it necessary to seek election to the World Heritage Committee.

Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many World Heritage Committee meetings have been (a) held and (b) attended by his Department in the past 10 years.

Mr. Sproat: The World Heritage Committee meets annually. My Department, and the Department of the Environment before April 1992, has not attended any of the Committee's meetings in the past five years. The Department of the Environment may have attended earlier meetings, but neither my Department nor the DoE has a record of attendances prior to 1989.

Bletchley Park

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has received concerning Bletchley park and the future of a national intelligence museum.

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage has received a number of letters about the proposal to create a museum at Bletchley park associated with intelligence work once carried out there. The future of the site at Bletchley part in a matter for the Secretary of State for the Environment and British Telecom plc, the joint owners of the site. Both have given their support for establishing a lasting reminder of the work carried out by Bletchley park during the second world war.

National Lottery

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which of the bids for the licence to operate the national lottery received by the Director-General of Oflot undertake to pay off the start-up costs within the first few months.

Mr. Sproat: It is not appropriate for me to comment on any of the details contained in the applications for the licence to operate the national lottery.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what restrictions can be placed on the sale of national lottery tickets by (a) hospital shops where the sale of tickets might detract from the hospital's own charities and (b) landlords on whose premises ticket outlets are sited where the landlord disagrees with such sales.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 March 1994]: Restrictions can be placed on the place of sale of national lottery tickets by regulations under section 12 of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993. The National Lottery Regulations 1994 (SI 1994 No. 189) were laid before Parliament on 9 February and will come into force on 1 April 1994. Sales by (a) and (b) are not prohibited under the regulations.

Longford Hall

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on English Heritage's decision not to attend the public inquiry on the future status of Longford hall, Stretford as a listed building.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 March 1994]: Any decision whether or not to attend a public inquiry is one for English Heritage to take in the light of the circumstances, including whether the case for preservation is likely to be made effectively by other parties. In this case, English Heritage has undertaken to submit a written statement to the inquiry.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what work was defined as in need of urgent attention by English Heritage when their officers visited Longford hall, Stretford on 12 May 1993; what was the value of that work; when the work was completed; and what discussions have taken place since that time between English Heritage and Trafford council.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 March 1994]: English Heritage's report included a schedule of repairs to the whole building totalling £62,500. Some £5,000 of this related to the most urgent works to the original part of the hall, and those works were completed by Trafford metropolitan borough council in January this year. English Heritage has had no discussions with the council since it inspected the works on 21 January, and advised that certain further minor works were necessary. All the works carried out were designed to ensure that there would be no further deterioration pending a decision by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on the future of the hall.

Tourism

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the effects of the electricity at work regulations on the tourism industry.

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 11 March 1994]: In my inquiry, begun last summer, into which regulations were most damaging to the tourism industry, the damage caused by the Electricity at Work Regulations 1989, in the opinion of the tourism industry itself, ranked high. In fact, it was one of the seven most worrying regulatory problems identified by the industry. The core of the problem was perceived to be requirements for every movable piece of electrical equipment—for example, in hotel bedrooms—to be inspected, at three-month, six-month or 12-month intervals, tested by a qualified electrician, at a cost of some £3·50 per item, and for a sticker to be put on the movable electrical items, saying it had passed inspection on the date in question. One hotel chain had spent £350,000 on paying for such inspections in 1992.

I therefore asked the Department of Employment, which has responsibility for the Electricity at Work Regulations to look into the problem. This it did. It is now clear that the relevant requirements of the Electricity at Work Regulations are vastly different from what the tourism industry, through no fault of its own, had understood those requirements to be. The most relevant requirement is simply that electricial equipment used at work must be maintained in a safe condition, so far as is reasonably practicable. There is no requirement whatsoever to have every movable electrical item checked by a qualified electrician every three or six months. There is no requirement for such equipment to have stickers on it giving details of the inspection. There is therefore no requirement for a fee to be paid for every movable piece of electrical equipment so inspected. Much of what is required can be achieved by a simple visual inspection carried out from time to time by a responsible person such as a proprietor. In higher-risk areas such as kitchens or workshops it is likely that there will also be a need for some limited testing. However, the frequency of this would be far less than for a visual examination.

The Health and Safety Executive has recently produced a clearly written booklet, specially designed for accommodation providers, setting out the facts. I am glad to say also that the HSE is currently consulting members of the tourism industry about the Electricity at Work Regulations 1989, as part of a wider review of health and safety at w[illegible] legislation, prompted by the deregulation initiative.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the objects and property accepted in satisfaction of inheritance tax during the financial year ended 31 March; and if, in listing these, he will specify (a) the amount of tax satisfied in each case, (b) whether any offers of objects carried conditions as to destination, (c) the dates in each case of the recommendations received by him from the Museums and Galleries Commission for the acceptance of objects, (d) the total for the financial year of the tax this satisfied and (e) how much of this total was covered in the public accounts by means of resort to the reserve in accordance with Government policy as announced on 26 July 1985, Official Report, column 779.

Mr. Sproat [pursuant to his reply, 29 March 1994, Official Report, c. 622-23]: The information requested is as follows:

Item	Tax satisfied (£)	Conditions or wishes	Date of MGC recommendation
Painting by Agar	7,000·00	Unconditional	9 November 1992
Brogyntyn manuscript	50,505·00	Conditional	11 June 1993

Land at Sheringham	97,560·00	Conditional	n/a
Portrait by Gainsborough	1,114,600·00	Conditional	5 February 1992

The total expenditure for the 1993-94 financial year was £3,114,600. This includes a further payment of £316,605·36 for a painting "Weeping Woman" by Picasso which was accepted in 1986-87. Acceptance of the Gainsborough portrait was made possible by a call on the reserve of £1,114,600, being the total amount from the reserve this financial year.

A press notice has been issued today announcing the most recent acceptances of the Ardizzonne sketchbooks, the paintings by Constable and Lawrence, the land at Sheringham and the additional Picasso payment.

DEFENCE

Appointments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are sent information on, or consulted about, individuals who are, or may be, proposed to the Minister for appointment to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person appointed or the shortlist for the appointment;

(2) if he will list each appointment for which a Minister has to approve the appointment or shortlist for the appointment, showing for each appointment (a) which

Minister exercises the responsibility, (b) the salary, if any, attached to the post, (c) the term of the appointment and (d) the person currently appointed to the post;

(3) if he will list the organisations and individuals who have been asked, since June 1992, to submit names of individuals to be considered for appointments to paid and unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment;

(4) what information his Department holds or obtains relating to individuals who have been appointed, or may be considered for appointment, to paid or unpaid posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment, in particular relating to active involvement in (a) extreme left-wing organisations, (b) extreme right-wing organisations and (c) involvement in any of the political parties represented in the House of Commons;

(5) what procedures his Department has to prevent the possible appointment of individuals with extreme political views to posts for which a Minister has to approve the person or shortlist for the appointment.

Mr. Hanley: The appointments to public bodies for which MOD Ministers are responsible are as follows. Where appointees have already given their agreements to their names being publicised these are shown below. I will write to the hon. Member once all other appointees have indicated whether or not they are content also to give such agreement.

Name of body	Appointment	Names of current board incumbents
The RAF Museum	Chairman and Trustees	Sir Michael Beetham, GCB, CBE, DFC, AFC, FRAeS (Chairman) Sir Thomas N. Risk Mr. Barry Pinson, QC Gp. Capt. Sir Gordon Pirie, CVO, CBE, JP, DL, (Retd.) Dr. Basil Greenhill, CB, CMG, FRHists, FSA Sir John Cuckney Sir Ralph Robins, FENG, FRAeS Sir Colin Marshall Sir Hector Monro, AE, JP, DL, MP Sir Colin Chandler Sir John Blelloch, KCB
Oil and Pipelines Agency	Chairman and Board Members	Geoffrey Richards (Chairman) Christopher Finch
Advisory Council for the RN Engineering College Manadon	Chairman
Anglo/Scottish/Welsh-American Community Relations Committees	Chairman
Defence Scientific Advisory Council and Committees	Chairman
National Employer Liaison Committee	Chairman
Nuclear Powered Warships Safety Committee	Chairman
Nuclear Weapons Safety Committee	Chairman
Meteorological Committees	Chairman and Board Members	Professor R. L. Bell Mr. D. A. Davies Mr. D. Filkin Ms A. Gammidge Professor B. J. Hoskins Dr. H. Hughes Baroness Jay Professor M. H. Pesaran Baroness Platt Mr. C. M. Stuart Sir Peter Swinnerton-Dyer
Independent Board of Visitors for the Corrective Training Centre and RN Detention Quarters	Chairman and Board Members
United Kingdom Polar Medal Assessment Committee	Chairman and Board Members

In general, my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence is responsible for these appointments, but this may be delegated in practice to other Ministers on an ad hoc basis. Remuneration is detailed in "Public Bodies", a copy of which is held in the Library of the House. Appointments are generally for a three-year term.

My Department consults widely in seeking the most appropriate candidates for public appointments. We find the views of current chairmen of the organisations concerned particularly valuable and also consult the lists of willing potential appointees held by the public appointments unit when appropriate.

My Department also takes full account of background and experience when considering individuals for public appointments, and consults as widely as is considered necessary. We seek to appoint the most suitable available candidates in each case.

AIDS

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he is giving to amending the existing Government policy on no compulsory HIV/AIDS testing of service personnel; what factors have led him to maintain the current position; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: My Department has no plans to change the policy of voluntary HIV/AIDS testing of service personnel.

Drug Testing

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects a decision to be made on whether random drug tests will be made compulsory; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: My Department is currently working on plans for the introduction of compulsory random drug tests in the armed forces. There is still detailed work to be carried out and it is therefore too early to say when further announcements will be made.

Service Personnel

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are employed on the (a) Eurofighter 2000, (b) Trident, (c) Rapier, (d) Field Standard C and (e) Warrior projects.

Mr. Aitken: The number of service personnel in the Procurement Executive employed directly in the management of these projects is as follows:

Project	Service personnel
Eurofighter 2000	103
Trident	39
Rapier Field Standard C	3
Warrior	1

It is not possible without disproportionate cost to identify all service personnel involved in supporting these projects throughout the Department.

Hawk Trainer Aircraft

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether an agreement with India for the purchase of the Hawk trainer aircraft has now been finalised; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The Indian air force has a requirement for an advanced jet trainer for which the British Aerospace Hawk is one of the competitors. We are not aware that the Indian Government have yet decided which aircraft to purchase to meet the requirement.

Reserve Forces

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of state for Defence what is the established strength of the Territorial Army, the Royal Naval Reserve including the Royal Marine Reserve and the Royal Air Force Reserve; and what are their actual strengths.

Mr. Hanley: As at 1 January 1994, the established and actual strengths of the volunteer reserve forces were as follows:

	Established	Actual
Royal Naval Reserve[1]	4,700	4,103
Royal Marines Reserve	1,220	1,049
Royal Naval Auxiliary Service[2]	2,199	2,200
Territorial Army[3]	63,950	63,819
Royal Air Force Reserve[4]	2,209	1,768

[1] Excludes University Royal Naval Units.
[2] Due to disband on 31 March 1994.
[3] Includes the Officer Training Corps. Excludes the Home Service Part Time element of the Royal Irish Regiment and Non Regular Permanent Staff.
[4] Excludes the University Air Squadrons.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost, and likely future costs of (a) the Territorial Army, (b) the Royal Naval Reserve, (c) the Royal Marine Reserve, (d) the Royal Auxiliary Air Force and (e) the Territorial and Volunteer Reserve Association.

Mr. Hanley: The full cost of maintaining the reserve forces—including such things as equipment development, fuel, ammunition, accommodation and utilities, food or transport—could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The figures for pay, allowances, earnings-related national insurance contributions and training bounties are as follows:

	1992-93 actual £ million	1993-94 forecast £ million	1994-95 estimate £ million
Territorial Army[1]	134·2	128·0	114·2
Royal Naval Reserve[2]	9·5	8·7	9·0
Royal Marine Reserve	2·4	2·2	2·2
Royal Auxiliary Air Force and RAF Volunteer Reserve	4·6	4·2	4·4
TAVRA[3]	15·8	15·6	15·3

[1] Excludes the Home Service Part Time element of the Royal Irish Regiment, and Non Regular Permanent Staff.
[2] Excludes the Royal Naval Auxiliary Service, which is due to disband on 31 March 1994.
[3] The Territorial Auxiliary Volunteer Reserve Associations (TARVAs) costs include salaries, heating, lighting and consumables, and vehicles.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the command structure, and who is in charge, of the regular reserve.

Mr. Hanley: The services do not have command structures dealing solely with members of the regular reserve forces. In peacetime, all personal documentation is held by the appropriate service personnel authority. On mobilisation, a reservist would become subject to the command structure of the unit to which he was assigned.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of S4State for Defence what Territorial Army units are under two thirds recruited; and what proposals exist to improve their recruitment or disband the units.

Mr. Hanley: The following Territorial Army units are under two thirds recruited:

202 Field Hospital
203 Field Hospital
204 Field Hospital

When the future of the TA is announced later this year, and the prospects for the above units are known, appropriate action will be taken.

Additional funding may be made to units two thirds below strength for national and regional recruiting campaigns. There are no current plans to disband units which are two thirds below strength.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the strength of (a) the Regular Army Reserve, (b) the Royal Naval Reserve and (c) the Royal Auxiliary Air Force Reserve.

Mr. Hanley: On 1 January 1994, the strengths of the regular reserve forces[1] of the Royal Navy, Army and Royal Air Force were as follows:

	Strength
Royal Fleet Reserve	3,476
Army Reserve	44,882
Air Force Reserve[2]	15,560

[1] The regular reserve forces do not include service pensioners with a recall liability, who are governed separately. The Army's long-term reserve is also separate. Neither category is included in the figures given in the answer.

[2] The Royal Air Force Reserve includes ex-regular officers; Royal Fleet Reserve and Regular Army Reserve do not.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of those reservists of the regular reserve receiving a call-out over the past five years have reported to their operational base.

Mr. Hanley: The only time in the past five years that members of the regular reserve have been called out was during the Gulf conflict. On that occasion my Department sent letters to appropriate ex-regulars seeking volunteers for service. Following this, some 770 individuals were taken into service. Additionally, a limited compulsory call-out resulted in a further 133 individuals being taken into service. Only two of those individuals to whom call-out papers were sent failed to respond without an immediately acceptable reason. It is not possible to break down any of these figures between regular reserves and other former regular personnel.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the role of the eight Territorial Army battalions in the Allied Rapid Reaction Corps and their likely deployment times.

Mr. Hanley: The role of the eight Territorial Army battalions in the Allied Command Europe Rapid Reaction Corps is to conduct security tasks in the rear area of the battle zone as required by ARRC headquarters. These will include such tasks as the defending key logistic installations and supply routes. The likely deployment time is 90 days from mobilisation.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the operational role of the Territorial Army battalions other than those in the Allied Rapid Reaction Corps.

Mr. Hanley: The 28 Territorial Army battalions which do not have an operational role in the Allied Command Europe Rapid Reaction Corps have a national defence role. In terms of the three defence roles, this can be considered as:

(a) Defence Role 1. To carry out a wide range of tasks including Military Alliance operations and Military Aid to the Civil Authorities (MACA) in peace, tension and war. To provide the framework for the reconsitution, regeneration and expansion of forces.
(b) Defence Roles 2 and 3. To be prepared to augment or reinforce national, United Nations or Alliance operations.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the conditions of call-up and service of the regular reserves.

Mr. Hanley: The principal conditions of call-out of those former members of the regular services who have a reserve liability as a consequence of their service in the regular forces, including service pensioners who are liable to recall, are laid down in the different authorities according to service and rank as follows:

(i) For former officers of the Royal Navy and Royal Marines, in two Orders in Council made in 1962 and 1982;
(ii) For former officers of the Army, in the Pay Warrant 1964;
(iii) For former officers of the Royal Air Force, in the Reserve Forces Act 1980.
(iv) For former other ranks of all three Services, in the Reserve Forces Act 1980.

These provisions are summarised in the tables below. The first column lists the category of personnel; the second records the authority for the call-out; the third describes the circumstances in which call-out is permitted; and the fourth indicates the maximum duration of service once called out.

The Ministry of Defence is preparing legislation on the reserve forces, which we hope to be able to introduce in the 1994-95 session. This will include measures to simplify the present arrangements for the call-out or recall of former regular service personnel.

		(ii) For service in any part of the world if the Queen orders the call-out of Army Reservists when it appears to Her that national danger is imminent or that a great emergency has arisen	Until no longer required
		(iii) For service in the United Kingdom in defence of the United Kingdom in the event of an actual or apprehended attack	Until no longer required

Former officers of the Royal Air Force

Force	Authority for call-out	Description of call-out	Duration of Service once called-out
1. RAF Reserve of Officers (RAFRO)	RFA 80, s.10(1) RFA 80, s.10(4)	If it appears to Her Majesty that national danger is imminent or a great emergency has arisen	Until no longer required
	RFA 80, s.11(1)	When warlike operations are in preparation or in progress	Until no longer required

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information is held about the location, availability and suitability for military service of the regular reserve.

Mr. Hanley: Information on the location, availability and suitability for military service of the regular reserves is held centrally by each service on computer. The information is regularly updated and includes details of home address, contact number, current employment, service history, medical history and specialist qualifications.

Yugoslavia

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed forces personnel are currently deployed (a) offshore and (b) on shore in the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Hanley: There are currently some 3,000 British armed forces personnel deployed offshore and some 3,300 onshore in the former Yugoslavia. The first figure includes some 600 RAF personnel, based in Italy, in support of operations in theatre.

Indonesia (Military Advisers)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military advisers are currently stationed in Indonesia; and how many serving officers are attached to the British embassy there.

Mr. Hanley: The United Kingdom has no military advisers in Indonesia. A colonel is attached to the British Embassy in Jakarta as defence attaché, and has one warrant officer in support.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the director of the Atomic Weapons Establishment sought permission to present evidence to the Atomic Weapons Establishment community inquiry held by Reading borough council on Aldermaston on 23 and 24 March; and if he will arrange for a copy of the Atomic Weapons Establishment evidence to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Aitken: Hunting-BRAE, the contractor operating the AWE Aldermaston site on behalf of the Ministry of Defence, was invited to take part in the community inquiry held by Reading borough council on 23 and 24 March 1994; MOD agreed that the company should participate.

I shall arrange for a copy of the Hunting-BRAE submission to the inquiry to be placed in the Library shortly.

Trident

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reply he has made to the representations on the safety of Trident by Scottish CND; and if he will commission an evaluation of them.

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend has been sent copies of CND's document dated February 1994 entitled "The Safety of Trident". The document contains no new information of real significance, but includes many speculative assumptions and presents a misleading picture of the safety of the United Kingdom Trident programme.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration his Department has given to reducing the number of crews planned for the Trident submarines.

Mr. Hanley: Consideration is being given to the consequences of establishing a crewing level for the Trident force below the two crews per boat allocated to the Polaris force. No final decisions have yet been taken.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the differences between the Polaris and Trident systems in terms of their operational nature.

Mr. Hanley: It has been the policy of successive Governments not to comment on the operational or technical capabilities of our nuclear weapons.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what additional contribution to the United Kingdom's deterrent posture air-delivered bombs provide over and above that provided by Trident ballistic missiles.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the sub-strategic warhead intended for the Trident submarines is the same as its planned strategic warhead.

Mr. Aitken: It is not in the interest of national security to disclose details of the configuration of nuclear weapons.

Eurofighter 2000

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made regarding Eurofighter 2000.

Mr. Aitken: The first Eurofighter 2000 development aircraft, DA1, made a successful first flight from the Deutsche Aerospace flight test centre in Manching, Germany, on 27 March 1994. The flight of approximately 40 minutes duration incorporated system handling checks; and the sophisticated quadruplex digital fly-by-wire control system, necessary for this unstable configured aircraft, performed exactly as expected. This achievement represents a significant milestone in the development programme.

The second development aircraft, DA2, is expected to fly very soon at British Aerospace, Warton.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the costs of the Eurofighter 2000 are within budget.

Mr. Aitken: I can confirm that there is sufficient provision within the Ministry of Defence's forward programme for the currently estimated cost of EF2000.

Missile Systems

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the latest position is regarding Trident, Rapier, Field Standard C and the Warrior.

Mr. Aitken: The Trident programme continues to progress to time and within budget, with the first submarine due to enter service around the turn of the year. The development of Rapier Field Standard C is substantially complete and deliveries of production equipments are under way. Deliveries of Warrior vehicles are due to be completed by the end of the year.

Joint Projects, Europe

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what new joint defence projects are being developed with the United Kingdom's allies in Europe.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1993" table 12. This lists collaborative projects in which the United Kingdom is involved with our allies. This list will be updated in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1994", which will be published shortly.

Residential Properties

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current average weekly rent for his Department's residential properties, how many of them are empty; how many empty properties are awaiting sale; and what is the average period for which those empty properties awaiting sale have lain empty.

Mr. Hanley: Married quarter charges vary according to the type and grade of the property and level of furnishing, while rent for Ministry of Defence civilian houses depends on the size of the property and the terms of occupation. The current overall average weekly rent for my Department's residential properties could only be provided at disproportionate cost. However, I can give the following information on the various married quarter charges which are effective from 1 April 1994:

MQ Type		Daily Rates £ Grade 1	2	3	4
I	(Officers)	8·83	8·02	5·61	3·54
II		7·97	7·24	5·07	3·23
III		6·99	6·37	4·48	2·87
IV		6·14	5·59	4·07	2·59
V		5·38	4·92	3·53	2·33
D	(Other Ranks)	4·28	3·92	2·86	1·85
C		3·95	3·60	2·63	1·72
B		3·63	3·32	2·42	1·60
A		2·78	2·54	1·89	1·29

These figures are for fully furnished quarters and therefore represent the highest level of charges. Quarters are also avaialble on an unfurnished or part furnished basis.

As at 31 December 1993 there were 10,108 vacant married quarters and 151 vacant MOD civilian houses. Of the married quarters, 2,450 were uninhabitable because they were undergoing or awaiting major works, 1,466 were held against future deployments, 1,973 were already allocated to service families who were due to move in shortly and the remainder were available for allocation or under consideration for disposal. In addition, 1,468 vacant married quarters and 25 vacant civilian houses were in the process of being sold. The calculation of the average time for which those empty properties awaiting sale have lain empty could only be carried out at disproportionate cost due to the frequency of service moves and the number of individual records involved.

War Museums

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ex-service men are employed in each war museum.

Mr. Hanley: Because of the large number of military museums, many of which independently manage and recruit their own staff, the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The number of curatorial officers employed directly by my Department in military museums is 30, nine of whom are ex-service men.

Field Marshall Sir Richard Vincent

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the NATO post being taken up by Field Marshal Sir Richard Vincent was last held by a British officer; what is the cost of the accommodation in Belgium purchased for his use while holding this post; what is the scale of the accommodation and what is its intended use; what alternative accommodation was considered; and what is the normal period of occupancy of this post.

Mr. Hanley: Prior to Field Marshal Sir Richard Vincent the last British officer to hold the post of CMC NATO was Admiral of the Fleet Sir Peter Hill-Norton from 1974 to 1977. The fully furnished house for Field Marshal Vincent was purchased for BFr 120,000,000—approximately £2,200,000 at the then rate of exchange. It was not available for leasing unless accompanied by an obligation to purchase at a later date. There is no fixed scale of accommodation for this post which is considered to be an ambassadorial equivalent. The house was selected against the requirement to meet the high profile representational and social duties associated with the post and the security necessary for the most senior NATO and British officer in Brussels. In the process of finding suitable accommodation, 200 houses, either for rent or purchase, were identified and considered, of which 80 were inspected. An investment appraisal conducted at the time demonstrated that purchase of this property represented best value for money. The normal period of occupancy of the post is three years after which the property will be sold.

Kentigern House

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much it will cost to decant all the staff from Kentigern house, Glasgow, while refurbishment takes place in order to accommodate the Army Personnel Centre in 1996.

Mr. Hanley: The cost of decanting staff out of Kentigern house will depend on the cost of the alternative accommodation, the options for which are under construction.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. Aitken: Information is available readily only from 1991 onwards. The following purchases of Proton cars have been made:

1991—Quantity three at an approximate cost of £20,000.
1992—Quantity five at an approximate cost of £40,000.
1993—Quantity five at an approximate cost of £35,000.
1994—None to date.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of official entertaining in his Department in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. Hanley: The total cost of official entertainment for the years in question is included within the running cost expenditure for my Department which is published every year in the departmental report; figures for 1993-94 are not yet available. The entertainment budget is used for a variety of functions including receptions. Separate figures are not kept for individual functions.

Asbestos

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what regulations pertain to the employment of 16-year-old naval ratings on removing asbestos from the boilers of ships; and when they were introduced.

Mr. Hanley: The Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1969 referred specifically to young persons under the age of 18 and stated that they should not be employed in work connected with asbestos. These were revised in 1987. In the revision, young persons were no longer treated as a special case but the provision of specialist training was required and the use of specialist, licensed contractors recommended. It is my Department's practice to use such contractors, and the Asbestos (Licensing) Regulations 1983 apply.

Defence Staff

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 February, Official Report, column 517, if he will place in the Library a list of the further service attaché and dedicated support staff posts cut since February; what plans he has to make further reductions in the Attaché Corps; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: A table showing the number, location, service and rank of service attachés, defence advisers and support staff cut since 1 February 1994 is being placed in the Library of the House. The size and shape of the Attaché Corps is kept under review by my Department and further reductions will be made should it be necessary to do so.

Truck Cargo Vehicles

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the mechanical problems with, and alterations made to, the truck cargo heavy duty mark 2 vehicles over the last two years;

(2) how many unscheduled stops there have been involving truck cargo heavy duty mark 2 vehicles over the last two years; and if he will provide a breakdown of the circumstances which resulted in these unscheduled stops.

Mr. Hanley: Since they entered service and up to 30 March 1994, there were 20 occasions on which the truck cargo heavy duty mark 2 vehicles were obliged to make unscheduled stops to deal with technical problems. This resulted in some delays in the completion of a few journeys, the circumstances of which are described in the table. Modifications have been fitted, or will be fitted shortly, to rectify a small number of recurring faults on the vehicles. We are confident that the work in hand will improve in-service reliability.

Nuclear Warheads (Transportation)

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has to investigate the possibility of transport nuclear warheads currently transported by road convoys by (a) sea and (b) other forms of transport.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 14 December 1993, Official Report, column 633, to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan).

Air Training Corps

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been (a) the total spending on the Air Training Corps and (b) spending on the Air Training Corps as a percentage of the overall defence budget in each of the last five years, at constant prices.

Mr. Hanley: Total expenditure by my Department on the Air Training Corps is available only for the last three financial years. The figures, at financial year 1993-94 prices, are as follows:

Financial year	£ million
1991-92	29·2
1992-93	30·0
1993-94	29·1

As a percentage of the overall defence budget this represents the following percentages:

Financial year	Per cent.
1991-92	0·117
1992-93	0·123
1993-94	0·124

Local Government Legislation

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the Acts of Parliament and consolidation Acts that affect local government which have been introduced by his Department since 1990.

Mr. Aitken: Since 1990 my Department has sponsored the following Acts, none of which have a direct effect on local government:

Atomic Weapons Establishment Act 1991
Armed Forces Act 1991
Army Act 1992
Representation of the People Act 1993

Swan Hunter

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has regarding the relationship of the French company, Constructions Mechaniques de Normandie bidding for Swan Hunter, and the Triacorp International Company and the financial property of the latter's owners and action taken in respect of them by the Bank of France; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: As a company new to United Kingdom defence contracting, the owners of CMN have been asked to provide my Department with details of the proposed company structure, lines of finance, company background and other information on their financial and other status in respect of their prospective bid for Swan Hunter Shipbuilders Ltd., in administrative receivership. I await their response.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the terms of the assurances his Department has been asked to give in the context of Constructions Mecaniques de Normandie's prospective bid for Swan Hunter.

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the terms of all the assurances his Department has given in the context of Constructions Mecaniques de Normandie's prospective bid for Swan Hunter.

Mr. Aitken: In respect of the owners of CMN's constructive bid for Swan Hunter Shipbuilders Ltd., in administrative receivership, I have been asked for assurances and have given the following response:

We have no objection, in principle, to foreign ownership of Swan Hunter and that, in the event that CMN should purchase Swan Hunters, we would require CMN to guarantee that all MOD designated build, outfit and refit work would have to be carried out in the United Kingdom; that we would expect CMN to form a properly constituted and adequately managed United Kingdom subsidiary to operate the business; that this company should be adequately funded and provided with acceptable parental company or bank guarantees of performance to match the level of work bid for and that the company would need to satisfy our national security procedures and MOD quality assurance requirements and provide information on their financial status.

Subject to the above, the new company would be eligible to bid on equal terms with other United Kingdom companies for future MOD warshipbuilding and refit work but that MOD could only place orders with Swan Hunter if the company is on a sound financial footing and is able to offer acceptable terms and conditions and guarantees of performance. MOD orders will only be placed on the basis of competition and that they therefore need to make competitive, fully compliant bids if they are to win orders.

We are prepared, in principle, to novate the Type 23 frigate contract subject to our company ownership conditions being satisfied and the agreement of satisfactory contractual terms and conditions.

We will continue to support Swan Hunter's efforts to win export orders for warships of United Kingdom origin.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made as to whether Constructions Mecaniques de Normandie can meet each of the conditions required of companies seeking to be allowed to compete for his Department's contracts.

Mr. Aitken: The prospective purchasers of Swan Hunter Shipbuilders Ltd., in administrative receivership, have been asked to provide the information which we would normally seek from a company wishing to contract with my Department for the first time. I await their response.

RAF Benson

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost to his Department, including value added tax, of refurbishing McKee house at RAF Benson.

Mr. Hanley: The total cost, including value added tax, of refurbishing and extending McKee house at RAF Benson was £265,739.

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the costs incurred by his Department during the refurbishment of McKee house at RAF Benson, including value added tax, were allocated to (a) the construction of an extension, (b) soft furnishings, (c) light fittings, (d) alterations to bathrooms and (e) alterations to the kitchen.

Mr. Hanley: The proportion of costs, including value added tax, incurred during the refurbishment of McKee house at RAF Benson for each criteria is as follows:

	£	per cent.
Construction of extension	66,593	25·6
Soft Furnishings	21,519	8·1
Light Fittings	2,536	1·0
Alterations to Bathrooms and Kitchens (including rewiring, replacement of Central heating and new boilers)	150,414	56·6
The remaining expenditure was as follows:
Contractor Fees	20,959	7·9
External Works	3,718	1·4

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the size of the original budget approved by his Department for the refurbishment of McKee house at RAF Benson.

Mr. Hanley: As there was no existing official service residence at RAF Benson, it was necessary to convert and extend married quarters for the purpose. There was no specific budget for this work but the original estimate of costs in March 1993, including value added tax and fees, was £117,800. The project was financed from the property management allocation for RAF Benson, which included funds to cover the additional property management costs, including the refurbishment of McKee house, incurred as a result of the move of Headquarters 1 Group RAF to RAF Benson.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report the conditions which industrial companies must satisfy before they are allowed to compete for his Department's contracts.

Mr. Aitken: Officials in my Department would aim to invite tenders only from companies considered competent to carry out the resulting contract. The criteria that they would use would vary depending on the nature and value of the work to be performed but would usually include the need for a proper quality management system—for example BS5750—and, for larger-value contracts, some check on the company's financial standing.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what period his Department requires between the closing date for the submission of tenders for his Department's contracts and the notification to all competing contractors of the outcome of the competition.

Mr. Aitken: There is no standard period: it is dependent on the circumstances of individual procurements.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department takes to establish that, in cases where a non-United Kingdom-owned company is bidding for his Department's contracts, national security is adequately protected.

Mr. Aitken: A foreign-owned company based in the United Kingdom which is interested in bidding for an MOD clasified contract will be subject to specific security checks prior to the release of any classified information. It will also be required to comply with or implement such additional security procedures as may be required by my Department. This ensures that the classified information is protected from access by foreign nationals.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances his Department will place a contract on a basis other than for its normal value-for-money criteria.

Mr. Aitken: My Department places virtually all its contracts in accordance with our assessment of value for money in the broad sense. Possible exceptions to this would include the need to meet an urgent operational requirement and national security considerations.

Trident

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration his Department has given to maintaining the fourth Trident submarine in a state of extended readiness; and what would be the likely cost implications.

Mr. Aitken: The Government remain committed to operating a four-boat Trident force. Estimates of the cost implications of placing a boat at extended readiness are therefore not available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what strategic rationale exists, during peacetime, to maintain more than (i) one Trident submarine at sea at any one time or (ii) two Trident submarines at sea at any one time.

Mr. Hanley: It has been the policy of successive Governments to maintain at least one ballistic missile submarine on deterrent patrol at all times while not commenting on actual numbers at sea.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department will retain the capability to deploy more than its currently planned number of warheads on Trident should future circumstances require it.

Mr. Aitken: Our announcement of a revised ceiling on the maximum number of warheads to be deployed on our Trident submarines does not affect the technical capabilities of the system.

Sir Bedivere

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to be able to announce the outcome of the competition to carry out the ship life extension programme for the landing ship Sir Bedivere.

Mr. Aitken: I hope to be able to make an announcement during the summer.

Polaris

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the decommissioning of HMS Revenge involved the removal of Polaris missiles or nuclear warheads from operational service;

(2) what work his Department has undertaken to dismantle Polaris missiles and warheads that have been withdrawn from operational service.

Mr. Aitken: No Polaris missiles or nuclear warheads have yet been withdrawn from operational service, although work on the disposal of surplus components has commenced. Preparatory work on the withdrawal of missiles and warheads is progressing.

WE177 Warheads

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department expects to complete the dismantlement of those WE177 warheads that have been withdrawn from operational service; what is the cost incurred to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The dismantlement of those WE177 warheads that have been withdrawn from operational service is due to be completed by the end of next year. It is not our practice to disclose costs of nuclear warhead programmes.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the continuing strategic rationale for maintaining the WE177 alongside the Trident submarines until 2007.

Mr. Aitken: Trident will have the capacity to contribute to the sub-strategic role on entering service, but we judge that in current circumstances WE177 will continue to make a worthwhile contribution to our overall deterrent posture for a number of years.

Nuclear Warheads

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the transfer of the United Kingdom's sub-strategic nuclear capability from air-delivered bombs to ballistic missiles will allow a reduction in the overall number of nuclear warheads deployed operationally by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Aitken: It has been the policy of successive Governments not to comment on the number of nuclear warheads deployed by the United Kingdom.

Defence Accounts Agency

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has begun his review of the Defence Accounts Agency.

Mr. Aitken: A review of the agency status of the Defence Accounts Agency—DAA is now under way. As a "next steps" agency the performance of DAA will be elevated and DAA activities will be subjected to the normal "prior options" tests set out in the 1993 "next steps review, Cm 2430.

Comments and contributions from those with an interest in DAA and its work would be welcome and should be sent by 3 June 1994 to Mr. Pat Fitzgibbon, DAA Review Project, Ministry of Defence, Northumberland House, Northumberland Avenue, London WC2N 5BP.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 473, if he will make a statement on the leasing of the Tornado F3 aircraft to Italy.

Mr. Aitken: I am pleased to inform the House that the Government have signed a memorandum of understanding with Italy providing for the lease of 24 RAF Tornado F3 air defence aircraft to the Italian air force for a period of up to 10 years. These aircraft will enable the Italian air force to supplement its existing air defence assets with two squadrons of this highly capable air defence aircraft in the period pending the planned introduction into service of Eurofighter 2000. At the same time, it will enhance the collective security of the Atlantic Alliance by ensuring that these aircraft, for which there is currently no United Kingdom requirement, continue to be used operationally. The memorandum of understanding also represents a vivid demonstration of the extent of our bilateral defence relationships with Italy.

RAF Training Group

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about defence agency status for the Royal Air Force training group.

Mr. Hanley: The Royal Air Force Training Group is to be established as a defence agency of the Ministry of Defence on 1 April 1994. The training group is at present part of Royal Air Force Support Command but will become an integral part of Royal Air Force Personnel and Training Command with effect from 1 April 1994. It comprises a headquarters element at Royal Air Force Innsworth and various flying and ground training stations throughout the country. Together they employ some 6,000 service men and 2,500 civilians.

The primary role of the training group is to provide trained service men and civilians to meet the requirements of the Royal Air Force in peace, crisis and war.

As the first chief executive, Air Vice-Marshal C. C. C. Colville will be offered new opportunities to build on the current organisation's professional expertise and high performance standards. Through a more commercial approach, the chief executive will actively seek to improve the efficiency and value for money of his organisation and thereby fulfil the agency's aim of providing its customers with an efficient service which offers the best value for money possible.

The chief executive has been set the following targets for financial year 1994-95:

Key Target 1: By 31 March 1995 to evaluate quality control mechanisms across all areas of training, including systems of measurement and targeting, and make recommendations for implementation during Financial Year 1995-96.

Key Target 2: By 31 March 1995 to have achieved the planned Training Group elements of the rationalisation programme and to have identified, and set in hand plans to meet the Training Group capacity requirements called for in 2nd Order Assumptions.
Key Target 3: By 31 March 1995 to deliver a 2·5 per cent. reduction in Training Group running costs by delivering the Financial Year 1994-95 programme of efficiency measures.
Key Target 4: By 31 March 1995 to undertake, the initial work required, for each measure, to market test £45,000,000 of business by 31 March 1996, as the Training Group's planned contribution to the Defence Market Testing Initiative.
Key Target 5: By 31 March 1995 to identify and value the Training Group's fixed assets base and introduce an interim asset recording system as a first step towards an asset management system.
Key Target 6: By 31 March 1995 to install, develop and test the Training Group Financial and Management Accounting System at 2 pilot sites: Headquarters Training Group and Royal Air Force Finningley.
Key Target 7: By 31 March 1995 to implement an interim accounting system at all Training Group units to produce Agency Accounts for mock audit by the National Audit Office at the end of Financial Year 1994-95.

I have arranged for copies of the agency's framework document to be placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Properties

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the number and location of (a) dwellings and (b) vacant dwellings owned by his Department in each county council area in England and Wales, and in each regional council area in Scotland;

(2) what is the number and location of (a) dwellings and (b) vacant dwellings owned by his Department in (i) Manchester, (ii) Liverpool, (iii) Leeds, (iv) Newcastle upon Tyne, (v) Southampton, (vi) Glasgow, (vii) Edinburgh and (viii) Bristol.

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 22 March]: Statistics are not maintained in a form which enables properties in particular cities or county council areas to be readily identified. I can, however, give the information requested on the numbers of dwellings and vacant dwellings owned by my Department in each county of England and Wales and regional council area in Scotland as at 31 December 1993. This is as follows:

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

APEC Forum

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what decisions were taken at the meeting of the Asia Pacific Economic Co-operation Forum in Honolulu on 18 March that will affect United Kingdom trade with the APEC Forum nations.

Mr. Heseltine: The meeting in Honolulu was a gathering, for the first time, of Finance Ministers from the 17 APEC member countries. Neither the United Kingdom nor the EU has observer status. We understand that discussions focused on closer economic integration in the Asia-Pacific region but that no specific decisions were taken.

Regional Preferential Assistance

Ms Armstrong: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the amounts of regional preferential assistance of each type invested in each region in each year since 1978-79 in cash and constant prices.

Mr. Sainsbury: Details of regional preferential assistance from 1978-79 to 1991-92 at current prices and at 1991-92 prices can be found in my reply to the hon. Member for Streatham (Mr. Hill), Official Report, 21 October 1992, columns 325-28.

A regional breakdown of regional preferential assistance at cash and constant prices for 1992-93 is given in the table below together with revised figures for Scotland and Great Britain for 1989-90 and 1991-92.

More detailed analysis of regional preferential assistance could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total cost of official entertaining in his Department in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. Heseltine: The total cost of official entertainment in the years from 1 April 1990 is included in the running cost expenditure for my Department which is published every year in the annual report; figures for 1993-94 are not yet available. The entertainment budget is used for a variety of functions including receptions. To list the receptions held in each year at my Department's expense and to provide an accurate costing for each one would entail disproportionate cost.

Thurnton Spoil Heap

Mr. Cummings: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when work will commence on the reclamation of the Thurnton spoil heap; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I assume that the hon. Gentleman is referring to the spoil heaps at Murton colliery. This is a matter for British Coal.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities or (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. Eggar: The figures for the Department, including its executive agencies, as at 4 January 1994 are:

Grade Level	(a) Women Number	(a) Women Per cent. staff	(b)[1] Ethnic Minorities Number respondents	(b)[1] Ethnic Minorities Per cent. staff	(c)[2] Registered Disabled Number	(c)[2] Registered Disabled Per cent. staff

All Staff excluding industrials and casuals	5,548	43·9	1,195	9·4	117	0·9

[1]Ethnic minority figures are based on 90·5 per cent. positive response rate to the ethnic origin survey.
[2]The Department also employs a number of disabled staff who are not registered.

Rover

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the current ability of Rover to design and produce a car, including engine and gearbox, with no outside help and the effect on this ability of its transfer to German ownership.

Mr. Sainsbury: Rover is now profitably designing and producing cars. The Government expect that this will continue, with a very high proportion of the value being added in the United Kingdom. The extent to which Rover draws on outside help to achieve this is a commercial matter for the company. But BMW has confirmed that Rover will retain and strengthen its own design and engineering facilities. The acquisition by BMW enhances rather than impairs Rover's technical capability.

Consultants

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what access to financial records is afforded to consultants appointed by his Department to evaluate the financial soundness of companies chosen to fulfil contracts, pursuant to aid and trade financial support (a) before the final award of the contract, (b) during the fulfilment of the contract and (c) on completion of the contract.

Mr. Heseltine: If the DTI has concerns about the financial standing of an applicant for aid and trade provision support a check is carried out on the company's financial capability to undertake the project. This check would normally be carried out by DTI accountants when the application is still being considered, although a check could in principle be undertaken at any stage in the life of a contract if concerns arose.

Most ATP projects involve export credit support. ECGD carries out separate checks into the financial standing of companies.

Japan and United States (Inward Investment)

Sir John Stanley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of total (a) Japanese and (b) United States inward investment in the European Community has come to the United Kingdom in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sainsbury: Inward investment capital flows in any one year can be erratic because of the varying treatment of profits and dividends.

In addition, much investment is financed in the country in which it takes place. The tables below show the annual capital flow for each year and also the book value of the assets, the stock of investment, which gives a more reliable indication of the amount of actual investment. Stock increases will not always match annual flows for the reason given above.

The figures are those issued by the investing country.

	1988	1989	1990	1991	1992

Offshore Oil and Gas Licensing

Mr. Brazier: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he has any plans for a further round of offshore oil and gas licensing on the United Kingdom continental shelf.

Mr. Eggar: I am currently considering this matter and will make an announcement in due course.

Ferrous Scrap Imports

Mr. Brazier: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on state aids available to Turkish companies for the import of ferrous scrap from the European Union.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Government recognise the problems caused by high scrap prices and have been closely monitoring developments in consultation with the United Kingdom steel and foundry industries. Through this we became aware of concerns regarding the existence of subsidies available in Turkey for the import of scrap from the EC and elsewhere. The matter was discussed between the European Commission and EU member states and a mandate was agreed whereby the Commission would raise the issue in bilateral contacts with Turkey. As a result, an undertaking has been secured from the Turkish Government to eliminate state aids, in the form of transport subsidies, for the import of ferrous scrap from the European Union. These aids currently stand at $15 for every tonne of this material imported from the Community.

The Turkish authorities will phase out the subsidy in three stages, commencing with a cut of one third as from 1 April 1994. A further reduction of one third will follow on 1 June leading up to final abolition on 1 October this year. We look forward to seeing formal written confirmation of this undertaking and will continue to watch developments closely.

The Government welcome these steps as significant progress towards eliminating those practices which interfere with the proper operation of market forces in determining the level of world scrap prices.

Energy Policy

Mr. Brazier: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will now publish his strategy on new and renewable energy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I have today published a report outlining the future strategy for new and renewable energy in the United Kingdom, and placed a copy in the Libraries of both Houses. The report, energy paper 62, entitled "New and Renewable Energy; Future Prospects in the UK", is in response to the findings of the renewable energy advisory group, which were published in December 1992.

Government policy is to stimulate the development of new and renewable energy sources wherever they have prospects of being economically attractive and environmentally acceptable in order to contribute to:

—diverse, secure and sustainable energy supplies;
—reduction in the emission of pollutants;
—encouragement of internationally competitive industries.

In doing this, it will take account of what influences business competitiveness; and it will work towards 1,500 MW declared net capacity of new electricity generating capacity from renewable sources for the United Kingdom by 2000.

Energy paper 62 sets out a market enablement strategy where, following assessment and technical development, the promising electricity generating technologies are included in an initial protected market via the non-fossil fuel obligation, NFFO, and the Scottish renewables obligation, SRO, to help them become competitive and establish an industry. Those which become viable can then compete equitably within the open market for electricity supply. That initial market under NFFO arrangements is crucial to the development of some of the key technologies, and NFFO is becoming the prime mechanism for support of those technologies. However, a purpose of NFFO is to stimulate a commercial market for renewable technologies, and it is anticipated that the resultant investment by industry could rise to £3 billion within the time frame being considered.

An outline of the 10-year forward research, development, demonstration and dissemination programme is also presented. This work will assess and develop technologies, remove inappropriate market barriers, ensure the market is fully informed and encourage internationally competive industries to develop.

Funding for RDD and D, as provided by Government, industry and other sources is significant both in its size and in enabling technologies to enter the market. Resources will be concentrated on key technologies with good prospects of commercial application in the coming decades —such as solar, energy from coppice and waste, wind and fuel cells. Existing work on passive solar design will be completed over the next few years and DTI involvement then reduced as the technology matures. The Government's geothermal research and development and tidal programmes will be closed when current commitments end. The existing work on wave energy will be completed, but no further commitments undertaken, as this technology has limited potential to contribute commercially to energy supplies in the next few decades. The emphasis on technology transfer will be maintained, in line with the White Paper on Science, Engineering and Technology. The programme will also be closely integrated with complementary work supported by the European Community. The programme budget for new and renewable energy for financial year 1994-95 is £19·78 million.

Also published today is "An Assessment of Renewable Energy for the UK". This report, ETSU-R-82, which has been prepared by the energy technology support unit, provides a technical basis for the future strategy and summarises information gathered by the Government's programme since its inception. Copies of this report have also been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

New Product Development

Mr. Brazier: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support is available for small and medium-sized firms to develop new products.

Mr. McLoughlin: I am pleased to announce that the successful support for products under research programme, which was due to close at the end of March 1994, has been extended for a further 12 months. A budget of £10 million is available for the financial year 1994-95.

SPUR provides help to small and medium-sized companies for the development of new products or processes that can demonstrate a significant technological advance. The scheme provides a fixed grant of 30 per cent. of eligible costs where the need for Government support is established, up to a maximum of £150,000.

In my address to the House on 26 May last year covering my Department's re-focused innovation policy I proposed to limit SPUR to companies with up to 250 employees in order to concentrate on the smaller firms which have the greatest difficulty in raising research and development capital. This will come into effect in the new extension to SPUR.

Yorkshire Rider (Takeover)

Mr. Madden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has received advice from the Director General of Fair Trading recommending the proposed takeover of the Yorkshire Rider bus company by Badgerline be referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The proposed acquisition by Badgerline of Yorkshire Rider is being considered by the Director General of Fair Trading. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade may, in due course, need to take a decision on whether to refer the acquisition to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, taking account of advice from the Director General.

Patent Office

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what primary legislation is required for the privatisation of the Patent Office; and which Government Department is preparing it.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 30 March 1994]: No decision has yet been taken on the future of the Patent Office. In the event that a decision was taken to privatise primary legislation would be required for which my Department has a lead responsibility.

Ferranti International

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made by the administrative receivers to Ferranti International toward the choice of a preferred bidder; when he expects the choice to be announced; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 28 March 1994]: The administrative receivers to Ferranti International announced yesterday that they had reached an agreement in principle with the General Electric Company plc for the acquisition of Ferranti's defence, simulation and training businesses. Separate negotiations covering the remaining businesses are continuing with other interested parties.

Self-financing Regulatory Authorities

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many self-financing regulatory authorities his Department has set up since 1979; what was the annual running cost of each of the self-financing regulatory authorities in each of the last three years; what is the current staffing establishment; and what it was last year and two years ago.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 16 March 1994]: One: the Securities and Investments Board Ltd., a private-sector body, had regulatory functions transferred to it under the provisions of the Financial Services Act 1986 and in consequence is a self-financing regulatory body. Responsibility for this legislation passed to the Treasury in 1992. The SIB makes an annual report to the Treasury, which places a copy of it in the Library of the House.

Newspaper Publishing plc

Mr. Benn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what inquiries his Department conducted into the financial position of Newspaper Publishing plc, owner of

The Independent and The Independent on Sunday; what representations were received during the consultation phase, and from whom, which led him to conclude that the newspapers were not economic as going concerns; and if he will place in the Library copies of the documentation considered;

(2) what inquiries his Department conducted into the financial position of Newspaper Publishing plc, owner of The Independent and The Independent on Sunday; what representations were received during the consultation phase, and from whom; which led him to conclude that, if the papers were to continue, the case was one of urgency; and if he will place in the Library copies of the documentation considered;

(3) if he will list and place in the Library the documentation considered in relation to inquiries made and representations received by him and his Department which led him to conclude that the public interest did not require him to stipulate conditions, including in relation to editorial independence, on his consent to the MGN-led consortium's bid for a controlling interest in Newspaper Publishing plc.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answers 30 March 1994]: In assessing whether The Independent and The Independent on Sunday were not economic as going concerns, the case for urgency, and the public interest issues which were raised by the applications for my consent, I sought views from all interested parties. As part of that process my Department received representations from, held meetings with, or sought information from the following:

Newspaper Publishing plc;
Lloyds Bank plc;
The founders of Newspaper Publishing, Mr. Whittam Smith, Mr. Symonds, Mr. O'Neill;
Espresso International Holding SA;
Promotora de Informaciones SA;
Mirror Group Newspaper plc;
Independent Newspapers plc;
The Department of National Heritage;
The National Union of Journalists;
The National Union of Journalists, Independent Newspapers Chapel;
The International Federation of Journalists;
Newspaper Publishing Employee Council;
The Editorial Council of The Independent and The Independent on Sunday;
United Newspapers;
The Today Newspaper;
Nine advertising companies; and
54 individual, including Members of Parliament.

Representations and information were given to the Department in confidence and I shall not therefore be placing copies of the documentation considered in the Library of the House.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Darling: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many public interest immunity certificates he has signed in each year since 1990.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 15 March 1994]: No central record is held of public interest immunity certificates signed by the DTI.

Since I became President of the Board of Trade, I have signed three PII certificates, two in 1992 and one in 1993.

Clean Technology

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list the 10 countries which rank highest in terms of their share of the world-wide market in clean technologies;

(2) what is his estimate of the United Kingdom's share of the world-wide market for clean technology; and what is the lowest OECD figure for the total value of this market.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answers 30 March 1994]: There is no world-wide agreement on the definition of cleaner technology. Reliable statistics of this type are not therefore available.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Research Reports

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to the answer of 2 March, Official Report, columns 767-68, if he will place in the Library copies of each research report referred to.

Mr. Waldegrave: Copies of the report on attitudes to the 1993 charter mark scheme will be placed in the Library of the House shortly. We are evaluating the pilot charterline service which ends on 31 March. Market research and tracking research will be made available when the evaluation is complete and decisions are announced. I have no plans to publish HMSO's market research report, which is commercially confidential.

Research and Development

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what decisions have been taken by the European Commission recently on the new initiatives under the fourth research and development framework programme; and how these affect the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waldegrave: On 21 March the conciliation committee consisting of members of the Research Council of Ministers and of the European Parliament reached political agreement on a joint text for the fourth framework programme on European Community research and development—FP4. This now awaits formal adoption by both institutions. The European Commission will shortly bring forward the specific programmes of FP4 which implement the framework programme decision and these will be negotiated during the remainder of 1994.

Public Appointments

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish an annual directory of all those appointed to public bodies as listed in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1993", to include the names, addresses, remuneration, period of office and political and pecuniary interests of all those so appointed.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. Information on the 42,606 public appointments listed in "Public Bodies" is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Citizens Charter

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many copies of his "Citizen's Charter Second Report: 1994" have been published; at what cost; to whom it has been distributed; what criteria were used in the choice of persons or organisations to which the report was distributed; and what is the equivalent information in respect of the first report.

Mr. Waldegrave: Some 8,000 copies of the "Citizen's Charter Second Report: 1994" were printed and published by HMSO. The costs of printing and publishing were borne by HMSO which aims to recover these from sales revenue. Some 14,000 copies of the first report were printed and published by HMSO on the same basis.

Some 300 copies of the second report were sent to Ministers and their permanent secretaries, departmental citizens charter liaison staff, agency chief executives, the citizens charter advisory panel and complaints task force, and a variety of others, including the Parliamentary and Local Government Ombudsmen, the secretaries of the local authority associations and the heads of the regulatory bodies. We have not kept records of those to whom the first report was distributed.

Magistrates

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many magistrates have been appointed in the Duchy for each year since 1989; how many expressed a political affiliation; and if he will break down the figure by party.

Mr. Waldegrave: The answer is:

	Number
1989	276
1990	303
1991	330
1992	295
1993	281

To provide details of political affiliation of appointees for the past five years would involve disproportionate cost. However, figures for 1993 are as follows:

	Number
Labour	76
Conservative	120
Liberal/Democrat	46
Not declared/Independent	39

Departmental Staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many, and what percentage of officers in each of grades 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled, respectively.

Mr. David Davis: In respect of the departments and agencies for which my right hon. Friend is responsible, and other areas which fall to the Cabinet Office vote, the information is set out in the tables below.

Ethnic monitoring in the civil service is carried out on a voluntary basis. The figures in table B below relate to those people who have chosen to register as non-white.

The figures at table C relate to registered disabled people. The departments and agencies employ other staff with disabilities who have chosen not to register.

Proton Cars

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many Proton cars were purchased by his Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and at what cost.

Mr. David Davis: None.

Disabled People

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps are currently taken by his Department to encourage and recruit disabled people into the civil service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The civil service is an equal opportunities employer, with recruitment to the service through selection on merit on the basis of fair and open competition. My Department, the Office of Public Service and Science, takes the lead in developing, monitoring and reviewing implementation of this policy throughout the service, but each department and agency is responsible for implementing policy within its own organisation.

A civil service code of practice on employment of people with disabilities has been in use since 1985. This lays down advice and examples of best practice on all aspects of the employment of disabled people from recruitment to retention and career development. In line with steps already taken in respect of women and people of ethnic minority origin, this code of practice is shortly to be upgraded to a programme for action. In addition to general guidance, this will contain action checklists which will enable departments and agencies to address specific areas of disability policy and to draw up their own action plans.

While there is no room for complacency, the civil service position on the employment of registered disabled people—1·5 per cent.—compares well with that of other employers in both the public sector more generally and the private sector—both 0·8 per cent. In common with other employers, the civil service also employs many more disabled people who choose not to register.

I am confident that the upgrading of the code of practice to a programme for action will represent a significant step forward.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each of the past five years.

Mr. David Davis: The cost of contracts let by the Cabinet Office, its agencies, COI and HMSO is not held centrally in the form requested. The full information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The costs of consultancy contracts let by the Cabinet Office and its agencies in 1992-93 and 1993-94 to date are as follows:

1992-93	4,054,273
1993-94	7,472,097

The cost of consultancy contracts awarded by COI and HMSO in 1992-93 and 1993-94 to date are as follows:

COI
1992-93	136,460
[1]1993-94	55,189
HMSO[1]
1992	410,075
1993	1,061,025

Public Bodies

Mr. Meale: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list all non-departmental public bodies set up since the most recent publication of "Public Bodies".

Mr. Waldegrave: "Public Bodies 1993", published in December 1993, lists non-departmental public bodies in existence at 1 April 1993.

The following non-departmental public bodies have been established since then:

Executive bodies
- Birmingham Castle Vale Housing Action Trust
- Commissioner for Protection Against Unlawful Industrial Action
- English Partnerships (Urban Regeneration Agency)
- Investors in People (UK) Ltd.
- Millennium Commission
- School Curriculum and Assessment Authority
- Tower Hamlets Housing Action Trust

Advisory bodies
- Advisory Committee on Coal Research
- Complaints Task Force
- Council for Science and Technology
- Energy Advisory Panel
- Joint Environmental Markets Unit Advisory Committee
- Local Government Staff Commission
- Local Government Reorganisation Staff Advisory Committee (Wales)
- National Board on Crime Prevention
- Technology Foresight Steering Group
- Welsh Economic Council

Tribunals
- Child Support Appeal Tribunals (Northern Ireland)
- Meat Hygiene Appeals Tribunals

Since 1 April 1993, 38 executive bodies and 10 advisory bodies have been abolished or declassified.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Official Entertainment

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total cost of official entertainment in his Department in each year since 1990-91; if he will list the receptions held in each year at his Department's expense; and what was the cost of each reception.

Mr. Goodlad: The following has been spent on official entertainment by the FCO—incorporating both the diplomatic wing and the ODA:

Year	Amount £
1990-91	5,178,849
1991-92	5,700,606
1992-93	6,946,298
[1]1993-94	6,641,945

[1] To date.

This is included in the running cost expenditure for my Department which is published every year in the annual report. The vast majority of this is spent overseas, at numerous official functions of various types. There is no central record of these.

East Timor

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring of human rights the British Government carry out in East Timor; how many political prisoners are currently held in East Timor; and how many people have been killed in East Timor since the start of the Indonesian occupation.

Mr. Goodlad: Her Majesty's embassy staff in Jakarta visit East Timor. So, too, do numerous non-governmental organisations, human rights groups and other western diplomats with whom we keep in close touch. There is no agreed definition of a "political prisoner". Nor is there any reliable source of information about the number of people killed in East Timor.

Luxembourg Compromise

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the application of the Luxembourg compromise to the introduction of a maximum working week.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We have no plans to introduce legislation to implement a maximum working week. The Government secured significant improvements to the working time directive which met Britain's main concerns. It is challenging the legal base on which the directive was adopted. The Government reserve the right to invoke the Luxembourg compromise where it considers that very important national issues are at stake.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the scope of the Luxembourg compromise following ratification of the Maastricht treaty.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Luxembourg compromise was not affected by the Maastricht treaty.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to reply to the letters dated 13 December 1993, 24 January 1994 and 24 February 1994 sent to him by the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Lin Qi Qun, wife of Mr. Chiu Hung Ing of 1 Princess parade, Manchester.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has not received the hon. Member's letters of the dates quoted. If he will re-send them, he will reply as soon as possible.

Peacekeeping

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the international peacekeeping operations carried out under United Nations or other international auspices in which British forces have taken part since May 1979.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: United Kingdom forces have taken part in the following peacekeeping operations:

UN Advance Mission in Cambodia.
UN Transitional Authority in Cambodia
UN Transitional Assistance Group—Namibia
UN Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara
UN Iraq/Kuwait Observer Mission
UN Force in Cyprus
UN Protection Force—former Yugoslavia
Multinational Peacekeeping Force in Lebanon
Military Observer Force in Sinai
Operation Safe Haven—Iraq

European Union Council

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a statement on the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The information is as follows:

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incapacity Benefit

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the likely level of administrative costs for the planned incapacity benefit as a proportion for all such benefit paid.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates he makes of the proportion of recipients of incapacity benefit who are likely to be receiving occupational pension payments (a) between the 29th and 52nd week of incapacity and (b) after the 52nd week; and what is its basis for these estimates.

Mr. Scott: The information is not available.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security at what intervals new claimants for incapacity benefit who pass the test of incapacity for work after 28 weeks will be re-tested.

Mr. Scott: Claimants who are terminally ill or in receipt of the highest rate care component of disability living allowance or suffering from one of the prescribed severe incapacitating disabilities will not be retested. In other cases, the adjudication officer will decide on the intervals between reviews of the case, based on advice from a doctor from the Benefits Agency medical service. The intervals will depend on the type of medical condition involved and the particular circumstances of each case.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of those who are expected to fail to satisfy the test for incapacity benefit are protected tenants for the purposes of regulation 11 of the Housing Benefit (General) Regulations 1987; and whether he will consider extending transitional protection for two years to protected tenants on the date when the Act comes into force.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not available. We have no plans to introduce rules allowing people found capable of work to remain on incapacity benefit.

Chronic Bronchitis and Emphysema

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for chronic bronchitis and emphysema have been examined by special medical boards and by medical appeal tribunal since the scheme was introduced; and in how many and what percentage of cases medical appeal tribunals have upheld the appeal.

Mr. Scott: This information is not available in the format requested. As at 20 March 1994, about 20,000 claims have been considered under the medical criteria by a specially qualified adjudicating medical practitioner. Some 2,960 appeals have been referred to a further adjudicating medical authority and 385 subsequent appeals have been referred to medical appeal tribunals. Of the nine cases where the MAT result is known, three, 33 per cent. have been upheld. The information is based on a 100 per cent. count and is subject to amendment.

Invalidity Benefit

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of people entitled to claim invalidity benefit in each region.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available in the form requested. The available information is in the table:

Invalidity Benefit recipients on 4 April 1992 by Region

Region	Invalidity benefit recipients
Northern England	137,000
Yorkshire and Humberside	137,000
East Midlands	80,000
East Anglia	31,000
South East England—Greater London	109,000
South East England—excluding Greater London	134,000
South Western	78,000
West Midlands	120,000
North Western England	247,000
Scotland	200,000
Wales	159,000
Overseas	8,000
Total—Great Britain	1,439,000

Note: Based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants in Great Britain at 4 April 1992, the latest date information available, rounded to the nearest thousand. Figures may not sum due to rounding.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in receipt of invalidity benefit have occupational pensions; and what is his source of information on this.

Mr. Scott: About 40 per cent. of invalidity benefit recipients were in receipt of occupational pensions in 1990 and 1991.

The information is drawn from the 1990 and 1992 family expenditure surveys and is subject to significant margins of error.

Community Care Grant

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what categories of persons constitute (a) high and (b) medium property for community care grant purposes.

Mr. Scott: The guidance that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State issues on priorities for social fund community care grants is set out in the social fund guide —a copy of which is in the Library. The priority groups included in that list are in no particular order.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have asked the Child Support Agency for a review of their assessments; and how many such applications have been refused.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 30 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of review requests received by the Child Support Agency.

To 31 January 1994, the Agency has received 16,600 requests for second tier reviews. Information is not available on the number of cases where a review has been refused because a client has failed to show adequate grounds for the request.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many section 18 and section 17 reviews of child support officers' decisions had been requested by the end of January 1994; how many of each of these had been resolved by that date; in how many of each of those the decision had been revised; and what is the average number of weeks that the outstanding reviews have been awaiting decisions in each Child Support Agency centre.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 30 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about child support reviews.

Between 5 April 1993 and 1 January 1994, there were 16,600 requests for a second tier review under Section 18 of the Child Support Act 1991, of which 5,800 were cleared. Information on the number of these in which the decision was revised is not currently available.

In the same period, the Agency processed 10,800 section 17 reviews, prompted by changes to either party's circumstances. The assessment was revised in 10,700 cases.

You also asked for the time taken to carry out a review and the length of time that outstanding reviews have been awaiting decisions. Information on clearance times is being collected, but reliable information is not yet available.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the maintenance application forms issued by the end of January, have been issued to (a) non-benefit claimants, (b) family credit claimants, (c) new income support claimants and (d) existing income support claimants; how many existing income support claimants remain to be issued with a maintenance application form; and what is the expected rate at which these cases will be taken-on before April 1996.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 31 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the issuing of maintenance application forms to benefit claimants.

Of the 755,000 maintenance application forms issued to parents with care by the Child Support Agency in the period up to 31 January 1994; 26,100 were issued to non-benefit clients; 279,000 to clients already in receipt of Income Support, 257,400 to clients making new claims for Income Support; and 193,400 to clients making claims for Family Credit.

It is estimated that approximately 380,000 existing cases where income support was in payment prior to 5 April 1993 remained to be taken on at the end of January. It is planned to complete the take on of these cases by April 1996, in line with the original schedule. The actual rate of take on will vary in relation to factors such as the volume of other cases received in the period.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many absent parents whose cases have already been taken on by the Child Support Agency are on income support; of these how many were (a) exempt from the £2·20 deductions made from income support in lieu of child maintenance and (b) subject to the £2·20 deductions; and how many of the maintenance assessments calculated using the child support formula issued by the end of January 1994 were (i) nil assessments, other than those for absent parents on income support or (ii) minimum assessments of £2·20 a week, as opposed to deductions from income support.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 31 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about absent parents claiming income support and the numbers subject to the £2·20 deduction from their benefit as a contribution to child maintenance.

During the period April 1993 to 31 January 1994, there were almost 36,500 cases where the maintenance assessment was zero. The figure includes over 32,000 cases where the absent parent was in receipt of income support. The deduction (currently £2·20) is made from income support unless the absent parent is exempt. Information on the number subject to the statutory deduction is not available. However, it has been estimated that around 50 per cent. of 32,000 are liable to pay £2·20.

You asked how many absent parents other than those on income support were paying the minimum amount of £2·20. This information is not currently available.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many section 6 child support applicants to date have argued that they are at risk of harm or undue distress; in how many of these cases the reasons were accepted by the Child Support Agency; how many parents with care subsequently gave the authorisation or information; how many reduced benefit directions have been issued in the first 11 months of the Child Support Agency's activity; how many of these directions have been appealed against; and how many applicants who have given authorisation have subsequently sought to withdraw it and in how many of these cases the reasons for the withdrawal have been accepted.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 31 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about clients of the Child Support Agency where the requirement to co-operate is an issue.

During the period from 5 April 1993 to 31 January 1994, the requirement to co-operate was considered in 44,600 cases. It is not known in how many cases the parent with care argued that they were at risk of harm or undue distress. However, of the 25,000 cases in which good cause not to co-operate was accepted, risk of harm or undue distress was accepted as the reason in 11,300 cases. There were 11,600 cases where further to the investigation the absent parent was identified.

You asked about reduced benefit directions. In the period up to 31 January, 320 were referred to the Benefits Agency for implementation. No information is available on the number of appeals against the reduction in benefit.

You also asked about cases where having initially agreed to name the absent parent, the parent with care subsequently withdrew authorisation. There is currently no information available on the numbers of cases where this occurs.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update the table of 18 February, Official Report, column 1023, giving clearance times for Child Support Agency applications; and if he will give an indication of the usual time taken between, (a) the issue of the maintenance application form and its return, (b) the return of the maintenance application form and issue of the maintenance inquiry form and (c) issue of the maintenance inquiry form and its return.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 31 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking for an update to the table showing clearance times for the maintenance application process by each Child Support Agency Centre, and a breakdown of the times between the issue and return of the application and enquiry forms.

For the period from 5 April 1993 to 31 January 1994, information is available on the percentage of cases cleared by individual Agency centres within given time bands; under 40 days, between 40 and 100 days, and in over 100 days. This information is tabulated as annex A.

A more detailed break-down in the form you requested is not available.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when information will be available on the numbers of child support accounts with arrears, the numbers of deductions of earnings orders issued by the Child Support Agency, the numbers of liability orders applied for by the agency; and what is the extent of the information on the collection and enforcement service that will be readily available at that stage.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 31 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the availability of information from the Child Support Agency on arrears, deduction from earnings orders and enforcement.

Information on deductions from earnings orders has been obtained by means of a clerical sampling exercise. This shows that to the end of February 1994, the Agency had issued deductions from earnings orders in an estimated 1,400 cases.

The Child Support Computer System is currently being upgraded to provide more information. We anticipate that further data relating to each stage of the collection and enforcement process will be progressively available during the financial year 1994-95 as a result of this upgrading process.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases dealt with by the Child Support Agency the alleged absent parent has disputed paternity; how many of these cases have been resolved without reference to court; how many of these have been referred to court by the agency; how many have been heard by the court; and how many are unresolved to date.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 31 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of cases dealt with by Child Support Agency in which disputed paternity was an issue.

Between 5 April 1993 and 31 January 1994, 2,270 cases were referred for further inquiries to be made because the alleged absent parent had disputed paternity. Of these cases, 457 were resolved without reference to the courts. The Agency referred 22 cases to the courts, 13 being heard. Of these, paternity was established in 2 cases, and not established in 11. At 31 January 1994, 1,800 cases remained to be resolved.

I hope that this reply is helpful.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current target for the amount of child maintenance to be collected by the Child Support Agency in 1993-94.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Adam Ingram, dated 31 March 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the money recovered by the Agency.

The Agency was set a target to recover £530 million in benefit savings in the financial year 1993-94. To 31 January 1994, £250 million had been recorded as recovered. This does not represent the total amount of savings during the period as some will be scored retrospectively.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many maintenance applications had been terminated without a maintenance assessment by the end of January; what efforts are being made to ascertain the reasons for these cleared cases; and on what evidence he based his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 502, that some were due to collusive desertions.

Mr. Burt: Between April 1993 and January 1994, there were 95,400 cases cleared without a maintenance assessment. This includes cases where the parent with care is ineligible for maintenance; where she withdraws her application to benefit before the Child Support Agency has assessed her case; and where it has been accepted that the parent with care has "good cause" for not providing details of the absent parent.

There are many reasons why a parent with care might withdraw an application before a maintenance assessment. These include being reconciled with the absent parent or starting a job. A number of these will have been withdrawn due to collusive desertion, but, by the very nature of these cases, detailed reasons for the withdrawal of applications are not known.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals have been made to child support appeal tribunals by the end of February; in how many of these cases the Child Support Agency has met its target of responding to the independent tribunal service within 18 days; how many of these appeals have been heard to date; and in how many of those the child support officer's decision has been overturned.

Mr. Burt: I am informed that the number of appeals received by the independent tribunal service to the end of 25 February is 1,134. On these appeals, the Child Support Agency has forwarded a total of 361 submissions; 164 within the 18-day target. By 25 March, 165 appeals had been heard, of which 147 had been finally decided. In 56 of the decided appeals the child support officer's decision was overturned.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will outline the compensation available to clients of the Child Support Agency who lose out financially as a result of the agency's operations; and whether compensation is avaialble for those section 6 applicants who were refused a maintenance application form before the change of policy announced on 1 November 1993.

Mr. Burt: The Department of Social Security operates non-statutory special payments arrangements under which compensation may be considered where, as a result of clear and unambiguous departmental error or unreasonable delay, actual financial loss has been suffered. Under section 6 of the Act, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State may require a parent with care to make an application to the Child Support Agency, but is not required to. There is no question of departmental error, and therefore compensation, in cases where he did not choose to exercise this power.

Accommodation Benefit

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will specify the length of time that records of claims for part III accommodation benefit payments, completed application and claim forms are kept (a) in their original form, (b) on microfiche or (c) in any other form in either the DSS Benefits Agency local office concerned, or in a central registry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Rhodri Morgan, dated 30 March 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the length of time that records of Part III benefit payments, completed application and claim forms are retained by the Benefits Agency (BA).

Claim forms from customers in Residential Accommodation (Part III) are treated in the same way as Income Support (IS) claim forms from other customers. Payments to customers in these circumstances are not recorded separately.

The BA policy on the destruction of documents requires all IS cases to be examined at certain times and unnecessary documents to be destroyed. This policy represents an attempt to balance the needs of customers against the administrative expense of keeping all documents indefinitely. Instructions are in place advising staff not to destroy claim forms while active enquiries into the case are ongoing. Clerical records are normally kept for a minimum of 18 months after a claim goes dormant and then destroyed.

Part III benefit payments are recorded in the same way as IS payments. Order book records are held for 3 years and girocheque copy sheets are held centrally for 12 months and then destroyed.

This procedure is relevant to all BA offices including Benefit Centres who have Remote Storage facilities. Details on IS claims are not retained on microfiche.

Child Support

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many former (a) income support claimants and (b) family credit claimants have left benefit as a result of receiving child support maintenance; and what efforts are being made to monitor this issue.

Mr. Burt: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, information will be collected as part of the long-term evaluation of child support policy.

Ministerial Replies

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his further letter of 28 February to the Under-Secretary of State concerning a constituent, reference 6/3644/70.

Mr. Scott: I replied to the hon. Member's letter yesterday.

Social Security Advisory Committee (Advice to Ministers)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what statutory requirement or other obligation is placed upon the Social Security Advisory Committee to advise Ministers of the possible legal implications of proposals referred to it by Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Under section 174 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992, the Social Security Advisory Committee is required to consider any proposals to make regulations referred to it by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and to make a report to him containing recommendations with regard to the subject matter of the proposals as the committee thinks appropriate. Legal advice of proposed regulations is provided by the Department's lawyers.

Lone Parents

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures similar to those in his Department's tax model table, including the various component figures, (1) showing net weekly spending power of a lone parent with a child aged three years where (a) the parent is on income support, (b) the parent takes employment for 15 hours a week at £4 an hour and (c) the parent works from 16 hours a week with gross earnings of (i) £40, (ii) £50, (iii) £60, (iv) £70, (v) £80, (vi) £90, (vii) £100, (viii) £110 and (ix) £120 where travel-to-work costs are £10 a week and child care costs are (1) £25 per week, (2) £40 per week and (3) £60 per week, assuming that the new child care allowance for lone parents is in operation;

(2) showing net weekly spending power of a lone parent with children aged one and three years where the parent works more than 16 hours a week and has gross earnings of (a) £40, (b) £50, (c) £60, (d) £70, (e) £80, (f) £90, (g) £100, (h) £110 and (i) £120, where travel-to-work costs are £10 per week, and where child care costs are (i) £25, (ii) £40 and (iii) £60 per week, assuming the new child care allowance for lone parents is in operation.

Mr. Burt [holding answer 30 March 1994]: The information requested is in the tables. The level of child care costs specified in some of the questions is significantly higher than those typically encountered at the level of earnings specified. Recent research[1] shows that the average weekly child care costs of working lone parents are £24·60 per week.

TRANSPORT

Roads, South Yorkshire

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list for the latest date for which figures are available, the number of vehicles in each different category counted by his Department using the A638 between Bawtry and Doncaster, South Yorkshire, at maximum, minimum and average flows; what was the average speed of vehicles on that road; and what were the comparable figures for (i) five years and (ii) 10 years ago;

(2) if he will list for the latest date for which figures are available, the number of vehicles in each different category counted by his Department using the B6422 between its junction with the A638 and South Elmsall at maximum, minimum and average flows; what was the average speed of vehicles on that road; and what were the comparable figures for (i) five and (ii) 10 years ago;

(3) if he will list for the latest date for which figures are available the number of vehicles in each different category counted by his Department using the A635 between Marr and Hickleton in South Yorkshire at maximum, minimum and average flows; what was the average speed of vehicles on that road; and what were the comparable figures for (i) five and (ii) 10 years ago.

Mr. Key: The information requested is available only from the local authorities concerned.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what major building projects valued at over £1 million are being or have been wholly or partly financed in (a) Doncaster, (b) Barnsley, (c) Rotherham and (d) Wakefield by his Department; and what was the cost of each project to his Department;

(2) if he will list for the latest date for which figures are available, the number of vehicles in each different category counted by his Department using the A1(M) motorway in South Yorkshire at maximum, minimum and average flows; what was the average speed of vehicles on that road; and what were the comparable figures for (i) five and (ii) 10 years ago;

(3) what was the total expenditure in (a) construction, (b) maintenance and (c) improvements in South Yorkshire in each year for the last 10 years, at both current and constant 1992-93 prices; and what is the planned expenditure in the years up to and including 1996-97;

(4) if he will list each scheme in South Yorkshire in his Department's current roads and motorways programme with the total cost in each year since construction commenced up to estimated completion, at both current and constant 1992-93 prices, for (a) junction improvements, (b) other improvements, (c) maintenance and (d) new construction.

Mr. Key: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

British Transport Police

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he received from the British Transport Police Federation, prior to, or during, the progress of the Railways Act 1993 through Parliament relating to the effect of the Act on its powers of pursuit or arrest.

Mr. Freeman: I have met representatives from the British Transport Police Federation on several occasions. The federation also responded to the Department's consultation document "The Future Status of British Transport Police". During the passage of the Bill I received representations from the federation for British Transport police constables to have jurisdiction anywhere, including for matters unconnected with railway services, and anywhere in matters relating to new operators.

British Rail (Redundancies)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff have left British Rail since January 1993 under redundancy or early retirement arrangements; and what has been the total cost of payments made to staff leaving the industry.

Mr. Freeman: Since January 1993, and up to 26 March 1994, 13,114 staff have either left, or are expected to leave British Rail at a cost of approximately £174 million in 1993 and £129 million in 1994. Over the same periods British Rail recruited 7,423 new staff.

Channel Tunel Rail Link

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Blackpool, South (Mr. Hawkins) of 21 March, Official Report, column 2, what is the fastest practical time taken by freight wagons currently crossing the channel by train ferry, inclusive of marshalling at Dover and Calais and the total time now taken by such freight from Manchester or Liverpool to Marseille; and what percentage of that time is likely to be saved, inclusive of marshalling at Frethun and Dollands Moor, by use of the channel tunnel.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

Fastest possible time: Manchester to Avignon

	Present ferry services	Via the channel tunnel
Conventional freight wagons	36 hours	32 hours
Intermodal wagons	4 to 5 days	32 hours

The Dover to Dunkerque trainferry is suitable only for conventional freight. Intermodal freight, which is expected to make up the majority of channel tunnel freight services, currently uses the Harwich to Zeebrugge lo-lo ferry.

The nearest rail terminal to Marseille scheduled to handle channel tunnel freight is Avignon.

Fatal Road Accidents

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fatal accidents occurred during (a) 1991-92 and (b) 1992-93 involving drivers under 20 years of age; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: There were 637 fatal accidents in 1991 involving drivers under 20 years of age, and 519 in 1992. Information for 1993 is not available yet.

Freight Traffic

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of freight traffic was carried by road transport and what proportion by rail transport, over the latest year for which figures are available; what were the proportions 10, 20 and 30 years ago; and what are the proportions in (a) the United States of America, (b) Germany, (c) France and (d) Japan.

Mr. Freeman: In 1992, the most recent year for which statistics are available for Great Britain, the percentage of road and rail freight carried by road was 89 per cent. For other countries, the most recent data available are shown in the following table which also gives the figures for the earlier years requested. Reliable comparisons are not available for years prior to 1970. Freight transport by inland waterway, coastal shipping and pipeline will affect the proportions carried by road and rail—these figures are published in "Transport Statistics Great Britain 1993", tables 8.5 and 9.3, a copy of which is in the Library.

Proportion of freight traffic

Country	1991		1982		1972

M62 Relief Road

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many representations he has received opposing his proposals for the M62 relief road (a) from residents of Bury, South and (b) from residents living outside Bury, South;

(2) how many representations he has received supporting his proposals for the M62 relief road (a) from residents of Bury, South and (b) from residents living outside Bury, South.

Mr. Key: Over 18,000 representations about the proposals have been received. It will be some while yet before we have recorded and analysed all of them. I shall write to my hon. Friend when this work is complete.

Catalytic Converters

Mr. Peter Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department is undertaking into how the effectiveness of catalytic converters can be improved to deal with the problem of cold-start emissions; and what plans he has to encourage the retrofitting of catalytic converters on cars.

Mr. Key: A new EC directive adopted on 25 March 1994—number yet to be advised—is the latest in a series amending directive 70/220/EEC on vehicle emissions, and sets more stringent emission standards for all new cars from 1 January 1997. The Department is already in discussions with the EU on even lower standards for 2000, which will be complemented by an additional low temperature emission test. The engineering solutions necessary to meet these standards are a matter for the vehicle manufacturers. On the encouragement of retrofitting catalysts, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for North Devon (Mr. Harvey), Official Report, column 144. Further measures requiring substantial engineering effort to develop costly retrofit packages for declining numbers of suitable vehicles would not be cost-effective.

British Rail (Pensions)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements he is making for the transfer of pension rights both to and within the proposed new joint industry scheme on the privatisation of British Rail.

Mr. Freeman: In order to facilitate efficient and effective pension arrangements, it is proposed that when BR staff first leave the BR pension scheme or the BR section of the new joint industry scheme, their accrued past service pension rights should be transferred to their new employer's "no less favourable section" of that scheme which will be, in all material respects, identical to the BR section.

In response to concerns that the new pension arrangements will be less secure for staff moving around the railway industry in the future, the Government have agreed that the rules of the new scheme will provide that pensionable service will be treated as continuous even on voluntary transfers between the "no less favourable" sections of participating employers, subject however to certain Inland Revenue restrictions which we cannot override, and to there being no extraordinary circumstances. We have also now agreed that the "indefeasible right" for protected persons—those in service on 5 November 1993—to remain in "no less favourable" sections of the joint industry scheme for so long as their employer remains a part of the railway industry will not be lost where they change jobs voluntarily within the industry. This will provide valuable security for staff moving voluntarily around the industry in the future.

Railtrack

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the letter written by Mrs. Sheena Stark, principal solicitor (Scotland) to Railtrack, dated 4 March, on the subject of Mr. Peter Rayner; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the future position of Mrs. Sheena Stark within Railtrack;

(3) what guidance he has given to Railtrack on dealing with public criticism.

Mr. Freeman: These are matters for the British Railways Board and Railtrack.

East Coast Main Line

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he proposes to announce the additional track charges to the east coast shadow franchise for running diesel-hauled trains north of Edinburgh and between the east coast main line and Hull and Harrogate;

(2) what amount within the track charge to the east coast shadow franchise announced by Railtrack on 15 February is attributable to the cost of running diesel-hauled trains north of Edinburgh and between the east coast main line and Hull and Harrogate.

Mr. Freeman: These are matters for Railtrack.

HEALTH

London Ambulance Service

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were employed by the ambulance service to work in stations in (a) London, (b) south-east London and (c) Lewisham in (i) 1985, (ii) 1990, (iii) 1992 and (iv) 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: The deployment of staff to individual stations is an operational matter for the London ambulance service. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Martin Gorham, chief executive of the LAS, for details.

Immunology

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to ensure that doctors, and GPs in particular, are made aware of the importance of diagnosing antibody disorders from the earliest opportunity and making appropriate referrals to clinical immunologists.

Mr. Sackville: Postgraduate and continuing medical education for both hospital doctors and general practitioners is managed at regional level. Detailed information is therefore not available centrally on the precise educational measures in place to cover early diagnosis of antibodies disorders. However, throughout a doctor's training and education the importance of accurate diagnosis is stressed.

Hospitals

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many redundant NHS hospitals in England have been disposed of in the last 12 months without the benefit of planning permission.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Some £1 billion has been realised from disposals over the last 10 years, which has been reinvested in modern health care provision.

Hartley Hospital, Colne

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the response of the NHS management executive to the concerns expressed by Pendle borough council about the maintenance and security of the Hartley hospital in Colne.

Mr. Sackville: The national health service management executive has not received a letter from the borough of Pendle about the security and maintenance of the Hartley hospital.

The borough of Pendle has confirmed that it wrote directly to the North Western regional health authority director of estates on 15 December 1993, and his reponse of 6 January gave information on the extent of security and maintenance provided at Hartley hospital.

Professions Supplementary to Medicine (Amendment) Bill

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the Professions Supplementary to Medicine (Amendment) Bill; and what is her policy on protecting the title podiatrist.

Mr. Sackville: In considering any alteration of the present position it would be essential to have consensus about the need for change.

Cornwall Healthcare Trust

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 16 March, Official Report, column 723, what response has been given by the National Health Service Management Executive to the request for funds for legal action by the Cornwall Heathcare trust.

Dr. Mawhinney: No response has been given yet.

Specialists

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to implement her chief medical officer's report on the number of specialists.

Dr. Mawhinney: In December 1993, I announced the Government's acceptance of the recommendations in the report of the working group on specialist medical training "Hospital Doctors: Training for the Future", copies of which are available in the Library. The work needed to ensure effective implementation of the report's recommendations is under way.

Mental Health Budget

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the mental health budget for the current financial year; and what percentage of that budget is specifically allocated to dealing with children with mental health problems.

Mr. Bowis: Information is not available in the form requested. Expenditure on hospital and community units on mentally ill people in England in 1991-92, the latest year for which information is available, was £2,085 million. In the same year expenditure on local authority social services for mentally ill people was £179·7 million.

Expenditure on mentally ill children is not available centrally.

NHS Budget

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total national health service budget of each region and each health authority in London in each year since 1991-92.

Mr. Sackville: The information will be placed in the Library.

Nurse Training (Ethnic Minority Applicants)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics she has on the number of ethnic minority applicants applying for basic nurse training and the numbers accepted for that training plus the total number of applicants and the total number accepted.

Mr. Sackville: The Department does not hold this type of data centrally. This information may be available from the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting.

Sterilisation

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many vasectomies were performed in each of the last five years;

(2) how many female sterilisation procedures were carried out in each of the last five years;

(3) if female sterilisation and vasectomy procedures are available in all areas in the country.

Mr. Sackville: Information on the number of national health service procedures performed is shown in the table:

Year	Vasectomies	Female sterilisation procedures
1988-89	25,856	27,384
1989-90	38,507	42,023
1990-91	37,221	40,210
1991-92	35,968	42,596

There is some doubt as to the quality of the data for the year 1988-89 due to this being the first year of operation of the health episode statistics computer system. No figures are available prior to 1988-89. Figures for years 1990-91 and 1991-92—the most recent year for which figures are available—are provisional.

Circulars EL(91)63 and HSG(92)6 reminded the NHS of the need to provide a comprehensive family planning service, including male and female sterilisation.

Copies of the guidance will be placed in the Library.

Charging for Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the guidance and advice issued by her Department to local authorities on charging for services; in each case, what advice is given on taking attendance allowance or the care component of the disability living allowance into account when assessing a person's ability to pay; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: Guidance on charging for residential accommodation in England is contained in local authority circular—LAC(92)19, as amended by LACs(93)14, (94)1, and (94)15.

An advice note on discretionary charges for non-residential adult social services was sent to English local authorities in January 1994.

Copies of the guidance and advice note are available in the Library.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what analysis her Department has made of the administrative and operating cost for local authorities collecting charges for service provision.

Mr. Bowis: None. It depends on the efficiency of the local authority concerned.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statutory provision is made for individuals to appeal against a local authority decision to charge for services; what provision is made for local authorities to publicise the right to an appeal; what consultation local authorities have to carry out before introducing charges; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: Charging arrangements for local authority residential care in England are prescribed in regulations. People who are dissatisfied with the way their charge has been assessed may use the complaints procedure local authorities are required to set up under section 50 of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990. Community care policy guidance issued in 1990 informs local authorities that they are required to publicise their complaints procedures, in accordance with section 7B(4) of the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970 and advises them how this might be done.

Section 17 of the Health and Social Services and Social Security Adjudications Act 1983 gives local authorities a discretionary power to charge adult recipients of non-residential services. If individual service users consider that they cannot afford to pay the charge that has been set, section 17(3) gives them the right to ask the authority for a review of that charge. It is also open to users of non-residential services to use the complaints procedure referred to above.

Local authorities have been advised that when any change to the charging system for non-residential services is under consideration, it is good practice for existing users to be consulted.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice is given to social service departments about charging for services that were provided by the health service free of charge prior to the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 but are now provided by local authority departments.

Mr. Bowis: The National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 did not transfer responsibility for any services from the national health service to local authorities.

Breast Cancer

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what preliminary reports she has received in respect of the areas of research into breast cancer being conducted by the United Kingdom Co-ordinating Committee on Cancer Research; and when she expects the final results.

Mr. Sackville: The United Kingdom Health Departments, along with the Medical Research Council, which receives it grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and the two major cancer research charities—Imperial Cancer Research Fund and Cancer Research Campaign—are currently funding four studies into breast cancer screening costing some £5 million over five years. These are examining:

- The effects of screening women annually from the age of 40;
- The effects of screening more frequently than every three years in women aged 50 and over;
- The effect of taking two, X-ray views of each breast of women screened instead of one view; and
- Alternative methods of treating some of the very small cancers detected on screening.

The trials are being co-ordinated by the United Kingdom Co-ordinating Committee on Cancer Research. The UKCCCR does not produce preliminary reports on the trials.

Each of the studies will reach completion at different times, and it is expected that full results will be made available by the UKCCCR.

Each study has been recruiting patients for some time and we expect results from at least two of the studies within the next two years.

Departmental support, estimated to be some £400,000 in 1994-95, is currently planned until August 1998.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she has taken to ensure good uptake of breast screening invitations among ethnic minority groups.

Mr. Sackville: It is for health authorities to monitor uptake of breast cancer screening among specific groups, and to take action to improve uptake where it is shown to be needed.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether women who are concerned about breast cancer may self-refer to specialised units; and what research her Department has undertaken into the possible benefits of self-referral.

Mr. Sackville: Specialised cancer units receive referrals from general practitioners and from non-specialist units. It is most unlikely that they would accept a woman who refers herself. The Department has not undertaken any research into the possible benefits of self-referral.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many specialised breast cancer units there are, by region.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

It is for local health authorities in consultation with hospitals and trusts to determine the organisation of cancer services to meet the needs of the local population.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department is funding into (a) environmental and (b) social causes of breast cancer.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that the North West, North East and South West Thames and Mersey regions achieve the target for breast cancer screenings.

Mr. Sackville: The breast screening programme is achieving its national average uptake target rate of 70 per cent., including in Mersey and South West Thames regions. To address under-achieving in specific areas, health authorities are encouraged to set local targets for improvement in contracts.

Dementia

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the impact on national health service drug costs of the increasing numbers of people with dementia.

Mr. Bowis: None at present.

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes she proposes in the recommended ambulance response times in the patients charter.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the chairman of those ambulance authorities with the lowest attainment of achieving attendance of ambulances within the response times set by the patients charter; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: There have been no formal meetings to discuss response times, although from time to time I meet ambulance service chairmen to discuss perfomance generally. I am pleased to note that the majority of ambulance services are now meeting the charter standard.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of ambulance authorities are achieving (a) the patients charter standard and (b) the Orcon standard in respect of ambulance response times; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Orcon patients charter standard requires an ambulance to arrive at the scene of an incident within 19 minutes of an emergency call in 95 per cent. of cases in rural areas, and within 14 minutes in urban areas. In 1992-93, 28 of the 34 rural authorities met the former standard and three of the nine urban authorities the latter.

Local Government Legislation

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the Acts of Parliament and Consolidation Acts that affect local government which have been introduced by her Department since 1990.

Mr. Bowis: Since 1990, the Department introduced the following Acts of Parliament that affected Local Government:

—the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.
—the Community Care (Residential Accommodation) Act 1992.

Cancer Specialists

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cancer specialists worked in the national health service, by region, over each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The available information will be placed in the Library. Cancer is treated by doctors in a number of specialties. Consultants in the specialties of medical oncology, radiotherapy, haematology and general surgery all treat cancer patients. However, they are not all involved full time in the treatment of cancer, for example general surgeons and haematologists also work with other patients, while other specialties are also involved in the treatment of cancer.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the independent living fund transitional grant money has been spent in each local authority; how many people have received services under this money; what is the average cost of services to each individual; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: Some £26·8 million was included in this year's special transitional grant to English local authorities as a consequence of changes to independent living fund arrangements. It will rise to £64·1 million next year. Authorities are free to use this money to provide such services as they consider best to meet local needs. They are not required to account for services provided from this money separately from services provided from other resources. The figures for Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much research into the causes and treatment of Alzheimer's disease has been funded by (a) the Government, (b) the private sector and (c) the voluntary sector for each of the last five years.

Mr. Bowis: The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. The table shows the level of research into Alzheimer's disease funded by the MRC between 1988-89 and 1992-93—the latest figures available. The level of research undertaken by the private and voluntary sectors is not available centrally.

MRC expenditure on research into Alzheimer's disease

Year	(£ million)
1988-89	5·0
1989-90	4·0
1990-91	4·5
1991-92	4·7
1992-93	4·9

National Continence Awareness Week

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation her Department is making of the effectiveness of national continence awareness week; and if the event will be repeated in 1995.

Mr. Bowis: National continence week took place from 13-19 March 1994. The campaign generated a substantial amount of media coverage with articles in the national press as well as in women's and general interest magazines. Many radio and television programmes also carried times about the week. Demand for the Department's publicity material exceeded expectations. The posters, leaflets and stickers had to be reprinted three times and nearly 2 million copies have been sent out so far. Calls to the telephone helpline funded by the Department have increased from 15 to around 300 a day. In addition, the Continence Foundation is receiving an average of 200 written requests for information a day.

The Department will continue to monitor the results of the campaign and a decision as to whether to repeat the event in 1995 will be made in the light of this.

Medical Negligence Claims

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS body had (a) the highest and (b) the lowest number of medical negligence claims against it in each year since 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information about the number of claims in each financial year is collected from district health authorities, in respect of their directly managed units collectively, and from national health service trusts as they became operational in 1991, 1992 and 1993. This shows national and regional trends. Because details are not supplied for individual directly managed units, most such units have progressively become trusts, and some district health authorities have merged, meaningful comparisons between NHS bodies are not possible.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the insurance and indemnity arrangements for NHS trusts in relation to medical negligence claims.

Dr. Mawhinney: Claims for clinical negligence against health care professionals employed by national health service trusts, occurring after the operational date of the trust, are met by the trust and recouped through prices. Arrangements exist for NHS trusts to fund the cost of a substantial settlement through a loan from the Department which has to be repaid, with interest, over several years if necessary. The proposed creation of a central fund in England to help NHS trusts is the subject of a consultative document issued earlier this month, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Health Reforms

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, in calculating changes in the numbers of patients treated before and after the health reforms, her Department counts individual patients treated or finished consultant episodes.

Mr. Sackville: Information on in-patient activity has been collected on the basis of finished consultant episodes since 1988-89 following the recommendation of the Körner steering group. This was considered to be the most effective way of measuring workload. There has been no change in the collection of data on activity in out-patients clinics and accident and emergency departments which are based on the number of new attendances and the total number of attendances.

Death Certificates

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total amount paid to general practitioners for signing death certificates, and the number of death certificates signed, in each year since 1990, for each regional health authority area.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953 requires general practitioners to sign death certificates. This duty does not attract a separate fee from the Department of Health.

It is not possible to distinguish between death certificates signed by general practitioners and others, such as hospital doctors and coroners. The deaths recorded for each regional health authority from 1990 to 1992 are shown in the table. Figures for 1993 are not yet available.

	Persons
	1990	1991	1992
Northern RHA	37,480	37,970	37,072
Yorkshire RHA	41,955	42,044	40,481
Trent RHA	51,717	52,827	52,171
East Anglian RHA	22,296	22,700	22,207
North West Thames RHA	32,894	33,076	31,817
North East Thames RHA	38,574	38,997	38,006
South East Thames RHA	42,353	42,589	42,002
South West Thames RHA	32,630	33,108	32,149
Wessex RHA	34,497	34,756	34,195
Oxford RHA	22,323	22,937	22,806
South Western RHA	38,937	39,234	38,610
West Midlands RHA	56,762	56,980	56,092
Mersey RHA	27,906	28,230	27,460
North Western RHA	48,592	48,524	47,588

The figures relate to deaths registered in each calendar year, the time lag between the date of occurrence and the date of registration being usually only a day or two.

Mental Health

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answers of 16 February, Official Report, column 860, and 17 March, Official Report, column 834, whether data collection monitoring mental illness hospitals on the lines of that compiled for the mental health task force is being undertaken to produce figures for 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Bowis: Data are currently being compiled for 1992-93 and should be available later this year. It is too early to start compiling data for 1993-94.

Dental Services

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has made to the university of Liverpool school of dentistry representations regarding the timing of the response to the Bloomfield report and oral health strategy; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton) wrote to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 22 February enclosing a letter from a lecturer at the university of Liverpool school of dentistry. I replied on 19 March.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in (a) England and (b) each regional health authority area took on new NHS patients in each year since 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 24 March 1994]: The information available is shown in the table.

Number of dentists who had additions to their register, by regional health authority area and year, 1991-93
England

Region	Number of dentists who had additions to their register in the year
	1991	1992	1993

Note:
1. Additions to the register include instances of patients registering with a dentist after a break in attendance and instances of reinstatement of registrations that have been cancelled in error.
2. Some dentists have contracts in more than one regional health authority area. These dentists have, where appropriate, been included in the count for each regional health authority area where they are under contract, but only once in the England total.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of dentists in each family health service authority took on new NHS patients for each year since 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 24 March 1994]: The information will be placed in the Library.

Nursing and Midwifery Staff

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish details of the average gross weekly earnings and make-up of pay by type of pay or allowances for each of the clinical grades for nursing and midwifery staff in (a) 1992 and (b) 1993.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Average estimated weekly gross earnings of nursing and midwifery full-time staff in 1992-93 and 1993-94

Drugs Review

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the results of the Committee on Safety of Medicines review of non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs are now available; and what advice to prescribers on the use, brands, or side-effects of such drugs has been given.

Mr. Sackville: The safety of non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs—NSAIDs—remains under review by the Committee on Safety of Medicines. The findings and recommendations of the CSM will be made public, if appropriate, through relevant channels such as the bulletin "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance". Advice to prescribers on the use, brands and side-effects of NSAIDs is given in the product data sheets produced by manufacturers and authorised by the Licensing Authority, and in the British national formulary which the Department of Health sends free to all doctors. Articles from the CSM relating to the safety of NSAIDs have also been published in the bulletin "Current Problems", No. 16, issued in 1986 and in the British Medical Journal in March and May 1986. Copies of the bulletin are available in the Library.

Free Prescriptions

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what grounds medical conditions are added to the list of conditions that entitle long-term sufferers to free prescriptions.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 21 March at column 68.

NHS Expenditure

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the expenditure on the national health service in 1978-79; what it will be in 1994-95; and what percentage increase this represents in real terms.

Mr. Sackville: Government expenditure on the national health service will be a planned £30,669 million in 1994-95 compared with £6,273 million in 1978-79, an increase of 63·9 per cent. in real terms.

Hospital Consultants

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had concerning the self-payment by maximum or part-time hospital consultants of in-service training costs; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: None. The chief medical officer has convened a conference on continuing medical education to be held on 13 June which will consider the question of the funding of the training and education of hospital consultants.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the guidelines limiting the proportion of their NHS income which full-time hospital consultants may earn from private practice apply to hospital consultants employed by trusts.

Dr. Mawhinney: The limits on the earnings from private practice of full-time national health service consultants apply to those whose contracts retain national terms—whether they work in trusts or for health authorities. Trusts have freedom to negotiate new terms of employment with their staff.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's estimate of the average time spent by hospital consultants employed as maximum part-timers on private practice and on national health service patients.

Dr. Mawhinney: No such estimate is made.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of their working hours maximum part-time hospital consultants are required to spend on national health service patients.

Dr. Mawhinney: National health service hospital consultants with maximum part-time contracts under national terms of service are contractually required to devote substantially the whole of their professional time to duties in the NHS. The actual allocation of time with NHS patients is determined as part of the consultant job plan drawn up in agreement with local management.

Patients Charter

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the total annual budget, including all editorial, production and distribution costs, for "The Patient's Charter News", published by the NHS management executive;

(2) what is the total annual budget for the patient's charter unit of the NHS management executive.

Dr. Mawhinney: The 1993-94 production budget for "The Patient's Charter News" was £44,000. This excludes editorial and distribution costs since both were carried out in-house, and it is not possible to isolate these costs.

The patients charter unit is part of a branch of the department concerned with quality and consumer issues in the national health service and which has an overall budget for several units. Since the breakdown of this budget is not unit based, it is not possible to provide an accurate annual figure for the patients charter unit alone.

NHS Executives

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether regional health authorities will adopt the title "NHS Executive" before their geographical names from 1 April.

Mr. Mawhinney: No. Regional health authorities will use the names established by the National Health Service (Regional Health Authorities) Order 1994.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of the new corporate look for the NHS management executive in terms of (a) stationery, (b) publications, (c) signage, (d) livery, (e) logo design and (g) in total.

Dr. Mawhinney: The new corporate identity for the NHS executive is based very closely on the design produced four years ago for the NHS management executive. No further costs have been incurred in logo design. There are no plans for expenditure on livery or new signage on the NHS executive headquarters buildings, but existing signs will be replaced as necessary over time.

Application of the new design to NHS publications does not increase costs. The cost of designing and introducing new stationery which is being phased in as existing stocks are exhausted, will be £50,000. This will be more than offset by the very considerable savings expected from the proposals which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health announced on 21 October 1993 for streamlining central management of the NHS.

Mental Health Act 1983

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will require regional health authorities to review their recruitment of doctors for duties under section 12 of the Mental Health Act 1983 to ensure that the numbers are sufficient to respond promptly to requests for assessment under the Act.

Mr. Bowis: We carried out a survey in 1993 of regional health authorities' arrangements for approving doctors under section 12 of the Act. The results indicated that the Department's guidance was being properly implemented and the numbers of doctors approved were sufficient. The Department is also discussing with the Royal College of Psychiatrists the training given to approved doctors about their responsibilities under the Act.

University College Hospital

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much additional money has been allocated to keep University College hospital open; to whom the money will be made available; and if the expenditure will continue in future years.

Dr. Mawhinney: In 1993-94 University College London Hospitals—UCLH—of which University College hospital is a part, were allocated transitional funding totalling some £10·6 million as part of a management plan for matching their capacity to current and foreseeable demand for services. This funding was made available to UCLH via its host commissioner, Camden and Islington district health authority. The amount of transition funding allocated to UCLH in 1994-95 is yet to be agreed.

Hospitals (Accident and Emergency Departments)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what increase in patient activity at Unversity College hospital accident and emergency department she expects after St. Bartholomew's accident and emergency department shuts; and what increase in bed numbers will occur.

Dr. Mawhinney: Based on studies carried out by the London ambulance service, we estimate that the closure of St. Batholomew's accident and emergency department will lead to a 16 per cent. increase in attendances—around 10,000 per year—at University College London Hospital's accident and emergency department. We anticipate that UCLH will be able to absorb this additional work load within the capacity of its existing facilities.

Staff Guidance

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the consistency between paragraph 1 of the nurses', midwives and health visitors' code for professional conduct and paragraphs 8, 27 and 28 of the national health service management executive "Guidance for Staff on Relations with the Public and the Media"; which document takes precedence; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The national health service management executive's "Guidance for staff on relations with the public and the media", EL(93)51 makes plain—paragraph 2—that it complements the United Kingdom Central Council code of professional conduct.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many letters she has received criticising the NHS management executive document on "Guidance for Staff on Relations with the Public and the Media".

Dr. Mawhinney: We have received five letters which, while supporting the aims of the guidance, have offered particular criticism on points of detail.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will renew the NHSME document on "Guidance for Staff on Relations with the Public and the Media" with particular reference to paragraphs 3, 8, 27 and 28.

Dr. Mawhinney: Sir Duncon Nichol, the then chief executive of the national health service management executive, wrote to all NHS managers on 7 September 1993 to clarify paragraph 27 of the guidance. We have no immediate plans to review the guidance.

Misconduct and Mismanagement

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances publicising misconduct or mismanagement in the NHS is a dismissible offence; and if she will make a statement on the considerations underlying the policy on the subject.

Dr. Mawhinney: Decisions about disciplinary matters are entirely for national health service employers.

The NHS management executive's "Guidance for Staff on Relations with the Public and the Media", EL(93)51, sets out the responsibilities of staff when raising issues of concern about health care matters and indicates how employers may ensure these rights and duties are met. A copy is available in the Library.

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are not admitted within a month of their second cancelled operation.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 28 march 1994]: In the quarter ending 31 December 1993, 150 patients failed to be admitted to hospital within one month of their second cancelled operation. The total number of general and acute elective operations performed in the same period was 1,062,000.

Drugs

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of state for Health what plans she has to expand the list of drugs that cause dependency and to require prescriptions to be written in full by hand.

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

Dangerous drugs are controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. The list of such drugs is kept constantly under review by the Home Office and the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs. The provisions of the Misuse of Drugs Regulations 1985 include a requirement that prescriptions for certain controlled drugs be written in full by hand. This requirement applies to drugs listed in schedules 2 and 3 to the regulations.

The ACMD has made certain recommendations to tighten the controls on temazepam, including a requirement that prescriptions be written in full by hand. These are under consideration.

Sea Pollution

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the progress of the Medical Research Council's study of the effects of sea pollution on health.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have been asked to reply.

The Medical Research Council is not carrying out any studies into the effects of sea pollution on health. It is, however, always willing to consider soundly based scientific proposals in competition with other applications for research funding.

Life Expectancy and Infant Mortality

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the change in (a) life expectancy and (b) infant mortality in the last 10 years in (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) other Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries.

Mr. Sackville [pursuant to his reply, 17 March 1994, c. 826-27]: I regret that the table showing life expectancy and infant mortality rate for the United Kingdom, 1982-1991 in my previous reply was inconsistent with the text. A revised table based on 100,000 livebirths is as follows:

Life expectancy and infant mortality rate for the United Kingdom 1982-1991

	Life Expectancy[1]		Infant Mortality Rate[2]
Year	Males	Females
1982	71·1	77·0	1,098·1

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 240

SESSION 1993–94

21st March, 1994—31st March, 1994

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
